[8671] — Ss. 363, 366 and 376 — Allegation of abduction and rape — No inducement offered to PW 3 who left her parents' home voluntarily and accompanied the respondent to several places — Further, PW 3 denying having had sexual intercourse with respondent — Evidence of PW 3 found unreliable by trial court — Held, on the totality of the matter, the courts below rightly came to the conclusion on broad probabilities of the case that the charges against respondent were not established (Paras 3 and 4). State of H.P. v. Daulat Ram, (2007) 15 SCC 563.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-2002]

[8672] — Ss. 363, 366 and 376 — Appeal against conviction — High Court by a cryptic unreasoned order acquitting respondent-accused for offence punishable under Ss. 363, 366 and 376 IPC — Unsustainability — High Court neither discussing the evidence, nor indicating any basis for departing from conclusions of trial court —

Matter remanded to High Court for fresh disposal — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 374 and 386 (Paras 1, 2, 6 and 8). State of U.P. v. Munshi, (2008) 9 SCC 390: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 778: (2008) 70 AIC 237 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-2008]

[8673] — Ss. 363, 366 and 376 — Respondent-accused along with other co-accused alleged to have kidnapped the prosecutrix, forced her to marry him at knife-point and had sexual intercourse with her — High Court finding that prosecutrix had voluntarily accompanied the accused and was a consenting party to sexual intercourse — Effect — Stand of prosecutrix that she was below 16 years and hence her consent, if any, was inconsequential rejected because documentary and oral evidence belied her claim — Hence, held, judgment of High Court directing acquittal of respondent-accused calls for no interference (Paras 2, 3, 10 and 13). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2008) 10 SCC 104.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-2008]

[8674] — Ss. 363, 366 and 376 — When motive is equally balanced, there being motive for the accused to commit the crime as also motive for the prosecution witnesses to falsely implicate the accused, court should look to the surrounding circumstances to find the truth — Held, the impelling circumstances attending the case taken in conjunction with the testimony of eyewitnesses unerringly showed that accused-appellants had strong motive to commit the crime. Chandra Mohan Tiwari v. State of M.P., (1992) 2 SCC 105: 1992 SCC (Cri) 252: AIR 1992 SC 891: 1992 Cri LJ 1091.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-1992]

[8675] — Ss. 363, 366, 376, 397 and 302 — Rape and murder of minor girl aged 10 years — Conviction based on circumstantial evidence, on facts, upheld — Rape and murder of a minor girl aged 10 years — Offence whether proved from circumstances — Accused allegedly winning confidence of deceased girl prior to the incident — Witnesses deposing that accused seen playing badminton with deceased at 9.00 p.m. on the night of crime — Trial court carefully analysing the evidence of child witness (PW 17) and finding it credible enough for conviction — PW 24 witnessing accused carrying deceased on his cycle at 10.00 p.m. on the night of crime — Parents of deceased returning home at 10.30 p.m. finding deceased missing — Accused a watchman in the apartment in which the deceased stayed (accused living nearby with his family) also found missing on the night of crime — Accused (when found out next morning) making extra-judicial confession of alleged rape and murder — Accused making said confession prior to arrival of police — Dead body, ornaments and school bag of victim and cycle and blood-stained T-shirt of accused were recovered by police at the instance of accused — Effect — On facts, held per curiam, conviction upheld

The Sessions Court found the appellant-accused guilty for offences punishable under Sections 363, 366, 376, 397 and 302 IPC. He was sentenced to 7 years' imprisonment, 10 years' imprisonment, imprisonment for life, 7 years' imprisonment and the death sentence, respectively for the aforesaid offences. The High Court by the impugned order confirmed the death sentence.

The circumstances highlighted by the trial court and the High Court were as follows:

1. The first circumstance was that the deceased was raped and she died a homicidal death.

2. The second circumstance was that the deceased victim who was aged about 10 years was residing with her parents in Flat No. A/2 of Sanudip Apartment located on Rander Road of Surat City.

3. The third circumstance was that the appellant was serving as a watchman since long and he was residing with his family in a room located on the ground floor of Happy Home Apartments situated opposite Sanudip Apartment, Surat.

4. The fourth circumstance was that the appellant-accused had won the confidence of the victim as a result of which the victim had reposed confidence in the appellant.

5. The fifth circumstance which was sought to be proved is that between 8.45 p.m. and 9.00 p.m. on 17-12-1999 the appellant was last seen playing badminton with the deceased in Sanudip Apartment.

6. The sixth circumstance which was sought to be proved is that on 19-12-1999 at about 10.30 p.m. the parents of the victim returned home and found that the deceased was missing.

7. The seventh circumstance which was sought to be relied upon by the prosecution is that between 9.00 p.m. and 9.30 p.m. on 17-12-1999 V (PW 24) had seen the appellant taking the deceased on his cycle near Adajan Patia, Surat.

8. The eighth circumstance was that after PW 24 had disclosed before S (PW 6) and others that he had seen the appellant going on a cycle towards Jakat Naka with the deceased, a search was made and the appellant was found missing.

9. The next circumstance which was sought to be relied upon by the prosecution is that in the morning of December 1999 witness C who was going home had seen the accused sitting at an open place near Bhulka Bhavan School and had approached the appellant and on enquiry being made the appellant had made extra-judicial confession before him at that time.

10. The other circumstance which was sought to be proved by the prosecution is that on arrival of police at Sanudip Apartment after being informed by complainant N the appellant had shown the place of incident where the dead body of the deceased was found lying.

11. The next circumstance was that at the instance of the appellant-accused his cycle and school bag of the deceased were recovered and the school bag was found containing anklets and earrings belonging to the deceased.

12. Human blood was found from T-shirt of the accused and no explanation was offered by the appellant as to how human blood was found on his T-shirt.

The High Court found the circumstances to be credible, cogent and reliable. Both Pasayat and Ganguly, JJ. agreed that the conviction was to be maintained. However, Pasayat, J. confirmed the death sentence while Ganguly, J. opined that life sentence was to be given.

Referring the matter to a larger Bench only on the question of sentence,

Held :

Per Pasayat, J.

The circumstances highlighted by the trial court and analysed in detail by the High Court unerringly point at the accused to be the author of the crime. So far as the last seen aspect is concerned PWs 4, 5, 6, 17 and 24 had categorically stated that the deceased was seen in the company of the accused just before the time of death. So far as the evidence of PW 24 regarding the last seen aspect is concerned, his evidence has to be read along with the evidence of PWs 5 and 6. Additionally, it is clear from the evidence of the witnesses that the first confession (extra-judicial confession) was not made in the presence of the police. Though PW 17 was a child witness nevertheless the trial court has taken care of analysing his evidence after being satisfied that the child was speaking the truth. (Paras 19 and 20)

One of the other important circumstances is that the appellant-accused had shown the place of incident where the dead body of the deceased was found lying. At the instance of the appellant-accused, his cycle and the school bag of the deceased were recovered and the school bag was found containing anklets and earrings belonging to the deceased. Human blood was found on the T-shirt of the accused. The falsity of defence plea has been regarded as an additional link in the chain of circumstances. (Para 26)

Per Ganguly, J.

I agree with Pasayat, J. that the appellant has to be convicted. (Para 120)

Per curiam

Both of the members of this Bench agree that conviction is to be maintained. (Para 121). Rameshbhai Chandubhai Rathod v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 5 SCC 740: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 881.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat[1] and A.K. Ganguly[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2009]

State of U.P. v. Satish, (2005) 3 SCC 114: 2005 SCC (Cri) 642; Ramreddy Rajesh Khanna Reddy v. State of A.P., (2006) 10 SCC 172: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 512; Bodhraj v. State of J&K, (2002) 8 SCC 45: 2003 SCC (Cri) 201; Jaswant Gir v. State of Punjab, (2005) 12 SCC 438: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 579; Kusuma Ankama Rao v. State of A.P., (2008) 13 SCC 257: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 298; Manivel v. State of T.N., (2008) 12 SCC 748: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 924; Joseph v. State of Kerala, (2000) 5 SCC 197: 2000 SCC (Cri) 926; Damodar v. State of Karnataka, (2000) 10 SCC 328: 2000 SCC (Cri) 90, relied on [8676] — Ss. 363, 366 and 376/511 — Victim, a girl of about five years — Alleged to have been called and taken away by appellant P who was known to her, for fulfilling his lust — Evidence of eyewitness PW 5 (grandmother of victim) — Conviction — Propriety — On noticing the absence of victim, PW 5 went out in search of her — On hearing her cries PW 5 rushed to the house of P from where that sound was coming — PW 5 found the victim naked and P lying on top of her while acquitted accused was standing nearby — High Court maintaining conviction of P under Ss. 363 and 366, but setting aside the one under S. 376 r/w S. 511 — Evidence of PW 5, held, reliable — Plea of false implication, not sustainable — Offences under Ss. 363 and 366 made out — Conviction by High Court upheld (Paras 5 and 10). Parkash v. State of Haryana, (2004) 1 SCC 339: 2004 SCC (Cri) 290: AIR 2004 SC 227: 2004 Cri LJ 595.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-2003]

[8677] — Ss. 363, 366-A and 372 r/w S. 511 — When offence proved included in offence charged — Conviction for — Held, a court can convert a case from major offence to minor offence, if a case for conviction under such minor offence is made out and even though he was not charged therewith — In the instant case, though chargesheet was submitted against Appellants 1, 2 (parents of Appellant 3) and also 3 under S. 363 IPC by the police but trial court framed charges only under S. 366-A and S. 372 r/w S. 511 IPC — In appeal filed against acquittal of appellants, High Court convicting them under S. 366-A and S. 372 r/w S. 511 IPC — Ingredients of S. 363 IPC involve an act of kidnapping of any person from the lawful guardianship — S. 366-A IPC also envisages similar act of kidnapping but with the intention of committing sexual intercourse — S. 366-A IPC is a major offence whereas S. 363 IPC is a minor offence — So far as Appellants 1 and 2 are concerned no evidence was led to prove that they had any role in the kidnapping — On the other hand, testimony of prosecutrix showed that it was Appellant 3 who kept the prosecutrix confined at a place away from home for 39 long days knowing that she was a minor — But no reliable or cogent evidence led to prove that prosecutrix was kidnapped by accused persons with the intention of making her have sexual intercourse with them or with any other person, or with the intention of selling her for prostitution — No reason for prosecutrix to falsely implicate Appellant 3 — Held, in such circumstances, Appellant 3 liable to be convicted under S. 363 IPC, while Appellants 1 and 2 acquitted of all charges — Since appellants were charged under S. 366-A they knew they had to defend themselves against allegations of taking away a minor out of lawful guardianship — Appellant 3 could be convicted under S. 363, in absence of any specific charge framed thereunder — Considering the fact that incident had occurred 15 years ago, Appellant 3 sentenced to 3 years' RI — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 216 and 222 (Paras 46 to 60). Sannaia Subba Rao v. State of A.P., (2008) 17 SCC 225.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-2008]

Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: (1955) 2 SCR 1140; Tarkeshwar Sahu v. State of Bihar, (2006) 8 SCC 560: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 556; Lakhjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 173: 1994 SCC (Cri) 235; Shamnsaheb M. Multtani v. State of Karnataka, (2001) 2 SCC 577: 2001 SCC (Cri) 358; State of W.B. v. Laisal Haque, (1989) 3 SCC 166: 1989 SCC (Cri) 513; Kammari Brahmaiah v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1999) 2 SCC 522: 1999 SCC (Cri) 281; Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 5 SCC 334: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1592, relied on [8678] — Ss. 363 and 368 — Kidnapping of minor girl from her school — Considering the special features of the case and the age of the accused (19 years at the time of occurrence), sentence reduced from 5 years to 3 years — Kidnapping of a minor girl (PW 6) from her school — PW 6 as per her own statement was looked after well at the house of the brother of the accused where she was taken by the accused — There was no sexual harassment or assault on her — Further, prosecution abandoning its case that the accused made PW 6 write a letter to her father demanding money — Considering the said facts and the age of the accused (19 years at the time of occurrence), sentence for offences under Ss. 363 and 368 reduced from 5 years to 3 years (Para 8). Sajjan Kapar v. State of Bihar, (2005) 9 SCC 426.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2003]

[8679] — Ss. 363 and 368 — Kidnapping of minor girl (PW 6) from lawful guardianship — Accused going to school of PW 6 and telling her teacher that he had been sent by her father to get her from school since her grandfather was seriously ill — Accused taking the girl to his brother's house in another State — On the way, PW 6 realising that she was not being taken to the hospital but elsewhere — But, she not raising any alarm due to the threat given by the accused — Held, the offence of kidnapping was complete when the accused took the minor girl away from the school — Fact that the accused gave her food on the way or she was well looked after in the house of accused's brother, was of no relevance — Conviction upheld. Sajjan Kapar v. State of Bihar, (2005) 9 SCC 426.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2003]

[8680] — Ss. 363, 368, 506 and 507 r/w S. 34 — Kidnapping for ransom — Having regard to the evidence of the victim as also other PWs and facts and circumstances of the case, High Court concluded that the accused persons were responsible for kidnapping and demanding ransom and trial court had erred in rejecting the cogent and credible evidence of the PWs without considering the same in proper perspective and also erred in finding fault in testimony of some of the PWs who apprehended the accused without taking police assistance in view of threat given by accused that person informing police would be done to death — Held, on facts, High Court analysed the evidence in great detail and arrived at correct conclusions — Conviction upheld (Paras 5 and 9). Shashidhar Purandhar Hegde v. State of Karnataka, (2004) 12 SCC 492: AIR 2004 SC 5075.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-10-2004]

— S. 363-A See also Ss. 361, 363, 363-A, 366-A and 375

See also Ss. 361, 363-A and 375

—S. 364 See also Ss. 34, 302, 364 and 201

See also Ss. 120-B, 34, 109, 364 and 386

See also Ss. 120-B, 364, 302 and 201

See also under Ss. 299 to 304

See also Ss. 302, 364, 342 and 201

See also Ss. 359 to 363

See also Ss. 362, 364 and 302

See also Ss. 363, 364, 365, 386 and 387

See also Ss. 364-A and 364

See also Ss. 376, 364 and 302

See also Ss. 386 and 364

See also* Ss. 299-304 — CULPABLE HOMICIDE AND MURDER, 'C.13. Kidnapping', in Vol. 2

[8681] — S. 364 — Abduction in order to murder — On facts, held, prosecution failed to establish charge against the accused — Acquittal upheld — No law point discussed. State of M.P. v. Amar Singh, AIR 1994 SC 650: 1994 Cri LJ 619.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M.M. Punchhi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-1992] [8682] — S. 364 — Abduction of a person in order that he may be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being murdered — Evidence regarding — Evidence of witnesses showing that the victim, one R who was proceeding in a camel cart, was pulled out of the cart when the cart was passing by the house of one of the accused K, belaboured by the accused persons and dragged inside K's house — One of the accused calling another to bring a lathi to kill R — Medical evidence proving that R was done to homicidal death — Dead body of R later recovered from a nearby place — Held, acts and words imputed to accused when they pulled and belaboured R make it clear that their intention was to so dispose of R as to put him in danger of being murdered — Hence courts below rightly convicted the accused under S. 364 (Paras 8 to 12). Murlidhar v. State of Rajasthan, (2005) 11 SCC 133: AIR 2005 SC 2345: 2005 Cri LJ 2608.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2005]

State of W.B. v. Mir Mohd. Omar, (2000) 8 SCC 382: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1516, explained

Shambu Nath Mehra v. State of Ajmer, 1956 SCR 199: AIR 1956 SC 404: 1956 Cri LJ 794, relied on [8683] — S. 364 — Applicability — Appellants charged under for commission of offence of kidnapping and murder of one S — Held, fact that parties were inimically disposed towards each other is beyond any doubt or dispute — Again, fact that appellants were present at the place of occurrence also stands established — Appellants, not only picked up S, but also bodily lifted him away and when some resistance was put, they had also resorted to firing in air — Indisputably, S was not seen and heard of thereafter for the last 27 years — In terms of S. 108, Evidence Act, law presumes him to be dead — In the event of murder of an abducted person, an inference of murder can safely be drawn in respect whereof, either by direct or presumptive evidence, and it would not be necessary to prove the corpus delicti — Hence, in the facts and circumstances, case under S. 364 IPC made out — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 108 (Paras 14, 15, 17, 21 and 22). Badshah v. State of U.P., (2008) 3 SCC 681: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 712: 2008 Cri LJ 1950: (2008) 3 All LJ 524: (2008) 65 AIC 183 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-2008]

Ramjee Rai v. State of Bihar, (2006) 13 SCC 229: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 626, relied on [8684] — S. 364 — Kidnapping — Child snatched from mother's lap — Conviction of three persons under S. 364 on the basis of testimony of mother of the child, on facts, upheld — There is no merit in the contention that three persons could not have been convicted for kidnapping of a three-year-old child (Para 11). Jhapsa Kabari v. State of Bihar, (2001) 10 SCC 94: AIR 2002 SC 312.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2001]

[8685] — S. 364 — No question of kidnapping can arise if the person allegedly kidnapped was already dead — Conviction set aside. Pedda Narayana v. State of A.P., (1975) 4 SCC 153: 1975 SCC (Cri) 427: AIR 1975 SC 1252: 1975 Cri LJ 1062: (1975) 12 ACC 201: 1975 Cr LR (SC) 335.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-1975]

[8686] — Ss. 364 and 147 — Sentence of 10 years' imprisonment awarded against appellants — Propriety of — S. 364 IPC prescribing two alternative punishments — Trial court not awarding the sentence of life imprisonment, but taking a lenient view awarding the alternative punishment of RI for 10 years — Sentence upheld by High Court — Keeping in view the serious allegations made against the appellants and the present one being a case of murder of 3 persons, held, any interference with the sentence awarded by the courts below was not called for. Shankar Mahto v. State of Bihar, (2002) 6 SCC 431: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1346: AIR 2002 SC 2857.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Shivaraj V. Patil and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-2002]

[8687] — Ss. 364 and 201 — Kidnapping of a 5-year-old boy for ransom — Victim subsequently murdered and thereafter his dead body burnt — Two of the three persons involved in the crime committing suicide — The third one i.e. the appellant, who had worked as a driver in the house of victim, making a disclosure statement as a result of which bones of victim and his burnt clothes etc. were recovered — Medical evidence including DNA test report showing that remnants of body were that of victim — Confession made by appellant before Judicial Magistrate was to the effect that he only kidnapped the boy while the other two killed him — Appellant was seen 5-6 days prior to the incident moving around the house of the victim — Motive for crime was to extort ransom — Considering the above circumstances, the trial court convicted the appellant under Ss. 364-A and 201 IPC and passed death sentence — High Court affirmed the said judgment — Challenge to circumstance of discovery of bones not sustainable — Confession of appellant was recorded after complying with requirements of law and the same was voluntary and truthful in nature — Said confession not retracted during trial — Retraction purported to have been done only during examination of appellant under S. 313 CrPC — In this view, held, appellant was guilty of crime committed — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 164 and 313

Both PW 2 and PW 3 as also PW 10 gave a vivid description as to the mode and manner in which the appellant pointed out the place whereat the dead body of the victim was burnt, the nalla wherefrom the bones were recovered and the spot where some burnt pieces of cardboard and ashes were seen. (Para 21)

The appellant was not in police custody when a request was made to record his confessional statement. He was in judicial custody. He was produced before the Magistrate on 16-8-2000. The Magistrate took the requisite precaution in not recording his statement on that day. The requirements of Section 164 CrPC have, thus, fully been complied with. The appellant was asked to come on the next day. A note of caution as envisaged in law was again administered. His statement was recorded on 17-8-2000. The questions put to the appellant clearly go to show that the Magistrate took all the requisite precautions before recording the said statement. (Paras 29 and 30)

The confession made by the appellant was voluntary in nature and the same was free from undue influence, coercion and threat. There is a ring of truth in the confession of the appellant. (Para 41)

The confession was not retracted during the course of the trial. It was purported to have been done only in his examination under Section 313 CrPC. (Para 32). Anil v. Admn. of Daman & Diu, Daman, (2006) 13 SCC 36: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 72: (2007) 49 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715; Hanumant Govind Nargundkar v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 343: 1952 SCR 1091: 1953 Cri LJ 129; Palvinder Kaur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 354: 1953 SCR 94: 1953 Cri LJ 154; Aher Raja Khima v. State of Saurashtra, AIR 1956 SC 217: 1956 Cri LJ 426; Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66: 1958 SCR 428: 1958 Cri LJ 238; Bharat v. State of U.P., (1971) 3 SCC 950: 1972 SCC (Cri) 198; Bhagwan Singh Rana v. State of Haryana, (1976) 3 SCC 101: 1976 SCC (Cri) 373; relied on [8688] — Ss. 364 & 302 — Abduction and murder — If abduction of deceased by accused is proved and deceased is found murdered soon after the abduction, it is for the accused to satisfy the court as to how else the abducted victim was dealt with by the accused — In absence of any such explanation court may draw a presumption that the abductor was the murderer also — In view of this legal position matter remitted to High Court for fresh consideration — If conviction is to be maintained High Court has to consider how far the said presumption will apply to the situation of this case — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 106 and 114 (Paras 4 and 5). State of M.P. v. Lattora, (2003) 11 SCC 761.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-7-2001]

State of W.B. v. Mir Mohd. Omar, (2000) 8 SCC 382: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1516; Sucha Singh v. State of Punjab, (2001) 4 SCC 375: 2001 SCC (Cri) 717, followed

[8689] — Ss. 364 and 302 — Applicability — Abduction and murder — Failure to discharge burden of proof by the abductors — Inference — Prosecution case that after assaulting the victim accused persons carried away the body — Victim not seen alive since then — No explanation given by the accused as to what they did with the victim thereafter — Accused abductors, who had special knowledge in this regard, having withheld the information, held, an inference can be drawn that they had murdered the victim — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 106

The prosecution case was that a boy was brutally assaulted and when one of the accused-appellants declared that the boy was still alive and he should be killed, a chhura-blow was inflicted on his chest. The appellants then carried away the boy. The boy had since not been seen alive. However, the appellants gave no explanation as to what they did after they took away the boy.

Held :

In the absence of an explanation, and considering the fact that the appellants were suspecting that the boy (victim of the crime) had kidnapped and killed a child of the family of the appellants, it was for the appellants to have explained what they did with the boy after they took him away. When the abductors withheld that information from the court, there is every justification for drawing the inference that they had murdered the boy. Even though Section 106 of the Evidence Act may not be intended to relieve the prosecution of its burden to prove the guilt of the accused beyond reasonable doubt, but the section would apply to cases like the present, where the prosecution has succeeded in proving facts from which a reasonable inference can be drawn regarding death. The appellants by virtue of their special knowledge must offer an explanation which might lead the Court to draw a different inference. (Para 24). Ram Gulam Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2001) 8 SCC 311: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1546: AIR 2001 SC 2842.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-2001]

[8690] — Ss. 364 & 302 — Prosecution case be based on deceased's statement in his dying declarations that the two accused dragged him inside the 'baithak' of one of them and then fired gunshots at him — Statement of the deceased of being forcibly dragged disbelieved and no conviction recorded under S. 364 — Whether conviction under S. 302 based on the same dying declarations proper — Effect of an allegation not being substantiated

The effect of the acquittal of the two accused for the offence under S. 364, IPC is that in arriving at the conclusion whether the accused are guilty of the offence of murder or not, the court should proceed upon the assumption that the prosecution allegation that the accused had forcibly taken the deceased inside the 'baithak' has not been substantiated. The prosecution would have to bring the charge home to the accused independently of that allegation. If, however, the prosecution establishes the charge against the accused independently of the allegation, there would be no legal impediment or infirmity in the conviction of the accused.

The fact that an allegation has not been substantiated does not necessarily go to show that the allegation is false. An allegation may be correct and still it may not be substantiated at the trial. The effect of the acquittal of the accused under S. 364, IPC would only be that for the charge of murder the prosecution cannot rely upon the evidence that the deceased was dragged inside the 'baithak' by the two accused. Godhu v. State of Rajasthan, (1975) 3 SCC 241: 1974 SCC (Cri) 859: AIR 1974 SC 2188: 1974 ACC 361: 1975 MLJ (Cri) 38: 1974 Cri LJ 1500.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: H.R. Khanna, Y.V. Chandrachud and P.K. Goswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-1974]

[8691] — Ss. 364, 302, 201 and 34 — Case of kidnapping and murder — Circumstantial evidence — Conduct of accused — When relevant for determining guilt of accused — Trial court convicting six accused, out of seven, including present appellants (A-1 and A-2) — High Court upholding conviction of appellants, except that conviction modified to that under Ss. 302, 364, 201 and 34 — Sustainability — Held, criminal trial is not an enquiry into conduct of accused for any purpose other than to determine his guilt — Undisputedly, piece of conduct which is not connected with guilt of accused is not relevant — However, unnatural, abnormal or unusual behaviour of accused after the offence may be relevant circumstance against him — Such conduct is inconsistent with his innocence — Therefore, conduct which destroys presumption of innocence can be considered as relevant and material — Herein, presence of accused for a whole day in a specific place and misleading PWs to search for kidnapped son of complainant in other places and not allowing them to search in a specific place, certainly creates a cast iron cloud over innocence of accused persons — The circumstances clearly established the accusations against A-1 but not sufficient to fasten guilt on A-2 (Paras 22 and 24). Joydeep Neogi v. State of W.B., (2009) 15 SCC 83.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

[8692] — Ss. 364, 302 and 201 r/w S. 34 — Murder trial — Benefit of doubt — All accused charged for same offence, but only appellant singled out for conviction — Propriety — Charges under Ss. 364/302/201 r/w S. 34 IPC framed against appellant and other accused — Entire prosecution case, apart from the recovery, based on the evidence of the PWs — Whereas, other accused given benefit of doubt, appellant convicted for offences punishable under Ss. 364/302 and 201 IPC and S. 25 of the Arms Act and sentenced thereunder — Appeal preferred thereagainst dismissed by High Court — Appellant assailing the judgment on the grounds that (1) trial court and High Court failing to consider the fact that recovery of articles at the appellant's behest was not free from doubt, (2) trial court having disbelieved testimony of PW 11 being wholly unreliable, could not have connected appellant with the crime on the basis of statements of PW 10 whose evidence also not free from doubt, (3) the identification of dead body itself doubtful as the colour of the clothes, the basis for identification, as disclosed in the FIR and the evidence of the investigating officer in his inquest report, were different — Glaring inconsistencies and discrepancies in the evidence/testimonies — While other accused acquitted on recoveries of articles, appellant held guilty — Also, while other accused were also last seen with the deceased but only appellant got convicted — Held, in the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, the appellant could not have been convicted for commission of murder, particularly when on the same evidence other persons have been given benefit of doubt — Hence, appellant is entitled for the same benefit — Therefore, impugned judgment of High Court set aside — Arms Act, 1959, S. 25 (Paras 4, 5, 7, 9, 25 and 32 to 34). Hatti Singh v. State of Haryana, (2007) 12 SCC 471: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 246: (2007) 54 AIC 70 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 2726.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-4-2007]

[8693] — Ss. 364, 302 and 323 r/w S. 34 — Abduction and murder — Property dispute between appellants and deceased — Acquittal of co-accused — Conviction of appellants — Propriety — None of the eyewitnesses (including the injured one) supported the prosecution version — Dying declaration on the basis of which conviction passed, held, not reliable — Injuries could not have been caused by weapons recovered at the instance of appellant H — Number of the car used in crime differently described during trial — Same evidence against all accused without any distinct or reasonably distinguishable features — Conviction of appellants, held, liable to be set aside

There was a series of litigations between the two appellants (H and N) and the deceased in respect of some properties. The deceased was going with his advocate (PW 15) when the four accused persons came in a Maruti van and forcibly put the deceased in the car and took him away. Though PW 7 tried to save the deceased, he was assaulted by A-3 (H). PW 15 immediately reported the matter to police. The FIR was registered at about 10.50 a.m. and the investigation was undertaken. Police officials went in search of the deceased who was found in an old house in Village Bharawas. The statement of the deceased was recorded under Section 161 CrPC which was treated subsequently to be the dying declaration. The deceased was brought to doctor V (PW 12) who examined him at 12.00 noon. Thereafter the deceased was taken to Jeypore Hospital but on the way he breathed his last in the afternoon.

During trial, none of the alleged eyewitnesses supported the prosecution version. Therefore, the prosecution relied on the dying declaration purported to have been made by the deceased. The trial court found that the dying declaration was acceptable and, therefore, convicted and sentenced the accused persons on the basis thereof. All the four accused persons preferred appeal before the High Court which came to hold that the dying declaration was not sufficient to hold A-2 and A-4 to be guilty. However, the High Court held that since the appellants had a motive to murder the deceased and the dying declaration was acceptable in relation to them, they were liable to be convicted and sentenced in respect of offences punishable under Sections 364, 302 and 323 read with Section 34 IPC. The appellants challenged the said judgment of the High Court by filing the instant appeal before the Supreme Court.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

There are some circumstances which assume importance in view of the fact that the informant (PW 15) who was advocate of the deceased has departed from the statement supposed to have been given during investigation, and in the first information report. Similar is the position of the witness who is supposed to have received injuries. In the dying declaration, specific roles were attributed to all the accused persons. The High Court found the roles attributed to A-4 to be unacceptable, as he was not found present when the police arrived at the house from where the deceased was supposedly recovered. Similar is the situation so far as appellant H is concerned. In the dying declaration the deceased had said that it was A-2 and appellant N who were trying to kill him. The High Court found that since A-2 would not have benefited from the death, he cannot be convicted. The reasoning is fallacious. A definite role was attributed to A-2 and it was stated that he wanted to kill the deceased. On mere surmise that there was no motive, a different approach was adopted. Further, when the so-called dying declaration was itself not proved, the question of acting on it did not arise. There is no evidence to establish kidnapping and/or murder to attract Section 364 IPC and Section 302 IPC. PW 7 allegedly suffered injuries at the hands of the appellants for which they were convicted in terms of Sections 323/34 IPC. PW 7 himself did not support the prosecution version in this regard. (Paras 8 and 9). Narain Singh v. State of Haryana, 2005 SCC (Cri) 185: AIR 2004 SC 1616: 2004 Cri LJ 1409.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-2-2004]

[8694] — Ss. 364, 302 & 323 r/w 120-B — Reappreciation of evidence — Series of kidnapping of children and their murder — Approver's evidence — Fully corroborated by other evidence — Sessions Judge after meticulously considering each item of evidence, held the accused-appellants guilty — High Court also, on reappreciation of each item of evidence, confirmed the findings of Sessions Judge — On further reappreciation of evidence held, evidence adduced by prosecution proved beyond reasonable doubt guilt of the appellants — Hence conviction confirmed (Paras 25, 27, 29 and 30). Renuka Bai v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 7 SCC 442: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 290: AIR 2006 SC 3056.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-2006]

[8695] — S. 364 and S. 302 r/w S. 34 — Conviction justified — Respondent-accused S, P and R alleged to have visited the house of PW 7 and asked deceased to accompany them — Soon thereafter when PWs 7 and 5 had gone to inspect the fields they saw P and R holding the deceased and grappling with him, while S took out a pistol from his waist and fired at deceased — Testimonies of PWs 4 to 7, who were eyewitnesses corroborating each other and also supported by evidence of PWs 1 to 3 — Submission by defence that PW 7 could not have witnessed the alleged occurrence as he was standing at a distance and there was obstruction by bushes, plants and crops standing in the field rejected — Place of occurrence was a terrace of about 2 ft and hence, it was possible for the informant to witness the occurrence from the place where he was stationed which was not far off — Even otherwise, if a person is well known to the other, then the probability of identification of the said person even from a faraway place is much higher — Further, testimonies of eyewitnesses were corroborated by medical evidence — Delay in filing FIR satisfactorily explained — As far as applicability of S. 34 is concerned, P and R were instrumental in bringing the deceased from his house and were holding the deceased which enabled S to fire at him and which showed their common intention to murder the deceased — Impugned judgment of acquittal passed by High Court set aside — Conviction by trial court restored (Paras 1 to 4, 12 to 14, 16 to 26). Rangnath Sharma v. Satendra Sharma, (2008) 12 SCC 259: (2008) 69 AIC 3 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-2008]

Ram Tahal v. State of U.P., (1972) 1 SCC 136: 1972 SCC (Cri) 80; Ramesh Singh v. State of A.P., (2004) 11 SCC 305; Israr v. State of U.P., (2005) 9 SCC 616: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1260, relied on [8696] — S. 364 and Ss. 302/34 — Abduction and murder — Propriety of conviction — Prosecution itself proceeding on footing that there were eyewitnesses to murder and taking upon itself the burden of proving the same — High Court, though finding the evidence of these witnesses unreliable, applying S. 106 of the Evidence Act and holding that once it was established that the appellants were the abductors and they failed to offer any explanation as to what transpired after abduction, it could be inferred that they had murdered the victim — Hence convicting the appellants under S. 364 and Ss. 302/34 — Held, High Court erred in doing so — S. 106 of the Evidence Act applicable only when the facts are "especially within the knowledge of the accused" and it would be difficult for the prosecution to establish those facts — In the instant case, prosecution did not proceed on such footing and moreover applicability of S. 106 was also never pleaded — Hence while maintaining conviction under S. 364, conviction under Ss. 302/34 set aside — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 106 (Paras 18 to 23). Murlidhar v. State of Rajasthan, (2005) 11 SCC 133: AIR 2005 SC 2345: 2005 Cri LJ 2608.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2005]

State of W.B. v. Mir Mohd. Omar, (2000) 8 SCC 382: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1516, explained

Shambu Nath Mehra v. State of Ajmer, 1956 SCR 199: AIR 1956 SC 404: 1956 Cri LJ 794, relied on

[8697] — Ss. 364, 324, 323, 149 and 148 — Contravention of — Effect — Investigation done by police officer not specifically authorised to do so — If illegal qua the offences not relatable to Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 (SC & ST Act) — Accusation under Ss. 364, 324, 323, 149 and 148 IPC and S. 3(2)(v), SC & ST Act — Held, only investigation qua offence under SC & ST Act is vulnerable and not those relatable to IPC — Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, S. 3(2)(v) — Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Rules, 1995, R. 7 (Para 8). State of Punjab v. Hardial Singh, (2009) 15 SCC 106.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

State of M.P. v. Chunnilal, (2009) 12 SCC 649, applied

[8698] — Ss. 364, 359 and 362 — Ingredients under S. 364 — Held, are: (1) kidnapping by the accused must be proved; (2) it must also be proved that the person was kidnapped in order (a) that he may be murdered, or (b) that he might be disposed of as to be put in danger of being murdered (Para 13). Badshah v. State of U.P., (2008) 3 SCC 681: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 712: 2008 Cri LJ 1950: (2008) 3 All LJ 524: (2008) 65 AIC 183 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-2008]

[8699] — Ss. 364 and 362 — Abduction for murder — Offence if established — Abduction of a person should be shown to have been done with the objective of murdering him — FIR lodged after the incident of abduction, when fact of murder had not come to light, referring to accused as saying that he would finish off the deceased — On facts, held, prosecution succeeded in establishing that the abduction was for committing murder

Abduction takes place when a person is compelled by force (or such person is induced by any deceitful means) to go from any place. The important task for the prosecution to establish the offence under Section 364 IPC is to demonstrate that abduction of a person was for murdering him. Even if the murder did not take place, the offence would be complete if the abduction was completed with the said objective. Conversely, if there was no such objective when the abduction was perpetrated, but later the abductors murdered the victim, Section 364 IPC would not be attracted, though in such a case the court may have to consider whether the offence of culpable homicide (amounting to or not amounting to murder) was committed. (Para 13)

In the FIR lodged by the PW after the abduction, the PW stated that while taking away the deceased the abductors were saying that they would kill the deceased. When the FIR was given PW had no reason to believe that the deceased was not alive. All the broad features of this case eloquently support the version of the witnesses to conclude that the words attributed to the accused were really uttered by them. Thus it must be held that all the accused abducted the deceased in order to murder him. (Paras 12, 13, 15 and 16). State of W.B. v. Mir Mohammad Omar, (2000) 8 SCC 382: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1516: AIR 2000 SC 2988.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-2000]

[8700] — Ss. 364 & 365 — Several offences — Power to pass several sentences in respect of — Appellant prosecuted for kidnapping and murdering two boys aged 10 to 12 years — Trial court finding that there was no evidence to show that victims had been killed by the appellant or that they were kidnapped for obtaining ransom or for murdering them — However, two letters demanding ransom were proved to be written by him, and hence he was convicted under Ss. 364 and 365 IPC by the trial court and sentenced as under: — "Under S. 364 IPC: RI for 10 years — Under S. 364 IPC: RI for 10 years — Under S. 365 IPC: RI for 4 years — Under S. 365 IPC: RI for 4 years — Under S. 120-B IPC: RI for 5 years — Under S. 120-B IPC: RI for 5 years — Under S. 201 IPC: RI for 2 years." — High Court in appeal maintaining the conviction and directing the sentence under S. 364 to run consecutively, while for other offences it was to be concurrent i.e. total period of 20 years' RI imposed — Appellant already in jail for more than 12 years, while the maximum sentence that could be imposed was 14 years — Held, provisos appended to S. 31 clearly mandate that the accused could not have been sentenced to imprisonment for a period longer than fourteen years — Trial court as well as the High Court committed a serious illegality in passing the impugned judgment — Appellant sentenced to the period already undergone — CrPC, 1973, S. 31 and proviso (Paras 2, 3, 6 to 12). Chatar Singh v. State of M.P., (2006) 12 SCC 37: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 370: AIR 2007 SC 319: (2007) 49 AIC 725 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 796.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121; Zulfiwar Ali v. State of U.P., 1986 All LJ 1177: (1986) 3 Crimes 199, relied on

K. Prabhakaran v. P. Jayarajan, (2005) 1 SCC 754: 2005 SCC (Cri) 451, distinguished (partly)

[8701] — Ss. 364, 366-A, 368 and 120-B — Revision — Proper mode of disposal — High Court setting aside acquittal of appellant-accused by allowing revision petition filed by Respondent 1 (informant) without indicating any reasons therefor and neither analysing the evidence recorded — Impugned order set aside and matter remitted to High Court for fresh disposal — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 401, 378 and 386 (Paras 1, 2, and 5 to 8). Sunil v. Rajesh Das, (2008) 13 SCC 246: (2008) 64 AIC 271 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2008]

[8702] — Ss. 364, 386 & 302 — Confession — Not relied upon as basis for conviction for an offence of murder — Accused being tried in addition for offences under Ss. 364 and 386 — Confession can nevertheless be taken into consider- ation as against the confessing accused to lend assurance to conclusion against them insofar as these offences are concerned based on circumstantial evidence

Though it has been considered unsafe to act upon the confession as basis for the conviction in respect of murder, there is no reason why the confession insofar as it relates to the two offences of kidnapping and extortion should not be taken into consideration as against this accused to lend assurance to the conclusion reached against him insofar as these offences are concerned based on circumstantial evidence. Ram Chandra v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 381: 1957 Cri LJ 559.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B. Jagannadhadas, Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-11-1956]

[8703] — Ss. 364, 396 & 120-B — Accomplice — Testimony of — Need for corroboration — Rule for, restated — LP (driver of the car in which the deceased was travelling) along with other accused alleged to have killed the deceased and snatched Rs 1,84,405 from her — Pursuant to confessional statement made by LP amount of Rs 30,695 recovered from him and he also disclosing names of other accomplices — One of the accomplice L (PW 6) turned approver and his statement recorded under S. 306 CrPC — Submission by appellant-accused that there was no eyewitness to the occurrence and simply on the basis of evidence of L they cannot be found guilty — L in his deposition stating the sequence of events leading to murder of the deceased (how the conspiracy was hatched and executed) — He also stating that mouth of the deceased was pressed by LP which prevented her from raising alarm and then he stabbed her on instigation and active participation of co-accused LR — Injury found on body of deceased and abrasions on her cheek and mouth corroborating his version — Moreover, part of looted money recovered from LP's possession — Held, in such circumstances there was complete corroboration of evidence of PW 6 and hence conviction on the basis of his testimony was justified — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 133 and S. 114 Ill. (b) (Paras 4 and 19 to 21). Sitaram Sao v. State of Jharkhand, (2007) 12 SCC 630: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 319: AIR 2008 SC 391.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-11-2007]

K. Hashim v. State of T.N., (2005) 1 SCC 237: 2005 SCC (Cri) 292, relied on

— S. 364 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 302, 364 r/w Ss. 120-B and 34

— S. 364 r/w S. 120-B See also Ss. 302, 364 r/w Ss. 120-B and 34

— S. 364 r/w S. 149 See also Ss. 302 r/w S. 149, S. 364 r/w S. 149, S. 429 r/w S. 149 and S. 436 r/w S. 149

See also Ss. 436 r/w 149, 364 r/w 149 and 302 r/w 149

— Ss. 364/34 See also Ss. 302/34, 364/34 and 201/34

— Ss. 364/149 See also Ss. 302/149 and 364/149

— S. 364-A See also Ss. 120-B, 364-A and 341

See also under Ss. 299 to 304

See also Ss. 302 and 364-A

See also Ss. 302, 364-A, 120-B and 201

See also Ss. 302/149, 364-A, 365 and 148

See also Ss. 365, 364-A, 343/120-B and 346/120-B

[8704] — S. 364-A — Kidnapping for ransom — Applicability of S. 364-A — Necessary proof for, stated — "Demand for ransom" — Communication of — Held, no straitjacket formula can be laid down that the demand for payment has to be made to a person who ultimately pays — Hence, after communicating the intended demand to the kidnapped or abducted person, merely because the demand could not be conveyed to some other person, as the accused is arrested in the meantime, does not take away the offence out of the purview of S. 364-A — Object of kidnapping or abduction has to be seen in such a case

PW 2, a college student, was abducted by the appellant and three others (who were acquitted by the trial court). They asked him his father's phone number and stated that a demand of Rs 4,00,000 would be made for his release. Somehow PW 2 managed to escape and informed the villagers who caught hold of the accused persons and, thereafter, took them to the police station. The courts below found the appellant guilty under Section 364-A IPC. Hence the present appeal.

Before the Supreme Court, it was submitted that no demand had been conveyed to any person for a ransom and, therefore, Section 364-A had no application. Strong reliance was placed on a decision of the Delhi High Court in Netra Pal v. State (NCT of Delhi), 2001 Cri LJ 1669 (Del), to contend that since the ransom demand was not conveyed to the father of PW 2, the intention to demand was not fulfilled.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held:

To attract the provisions of Section 364-A what is required to be proved is: (1) that the accused kidnapped or abducted the person; (2) kept him under detention after such kidnapping and abduction; and (3) that the kidnapping or abduction was for ransom. (Para 12)

In the instant case, the object of abduction was for ransom. This was clearly conveyed to the victim PW 2. He was even conveyed the amount to be paid. It cannot be laid down as a straitjacket formula that the demand for payments has to be made to a person who ultimately pays. After making the demand to the kidnapped or abducted person merely because the demand could not be conveyed to some other person, as the accused is arrested in the meantime, does not take away the offence out of the purview of Section 364-A. It has to be seen in such a case as to what was the object of kidnapping or abduction. (Para 15). Malleshi v. State of Karnataka, (2004) 8 SCC 95: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2115.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-2004]

Netra Pal v. State (NCT of Delhi), 2001 Cri LJ 1669 (Del), distinguished on facts

[8705] — S. 364-A — Kidnapping for ransom — Conviction by courts below — Sustainability — Accused persons including appellant kidnapping PW 2, a nine-year-old child — They demanding a ransom of Rs ten lakhs and threatening to kill PW 2 if said amount not paid — Father of PW 2 meeting the said demand — Accused Y collecting the ransom money and handing over the same to other accused — Thereafter, victim PW 2 was left at his residence by Y — After his release, PW 2 narrating the incident to his father naming the accused and pointing out places where he had been taken — Police conducting raid and apprehending the accused persons and making recovery of ransom money at the instance of the accused persons — Said money bearing initials of father of victim on first and last currency notes of the bundles — Placing reliance on evidence of PWs including the victim and his father, trial court convicting the accused — Analysing the evidence on record in the background of S. 364-A IPC, held, prosecution clearly established commission of the said offence — High Court's judgment affirming the conviction, not liable to be interfered with (Paras 32, 29, 30 and 31). Vinod v. State of Haryana, (2008) 2 SCC 246: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 338: AIR 2008 SC 1142: (2008) 64 AIC 175 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1811: (2008) 105 Cut LT 559.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2008]

[8706] — S. 364-A — Kidnapping for ransom — Demand for ransom — Proof — Exts. P-2 & P-3, letters demanding Rs 1 crore and Rs 75 lakhs respectively which accused had got written proved and his house was at a short distance from that of the victim — Further, pursuant to disclosures made by accused the child was recovered — Accused caught picking up the bag containing money from the place which had been pre-arranged — Held, accused's demand for ransom was thus proved, and therefore, S. 364-A was clearly applicable (Paras 5 and 10 to 13). P. Liaquat Ali Khan v. State of A.P., (2009) 12 SCC 707: AIR 2009 SC 2597: 2009 Cri LJ 3736: (2009) 78 AIC 267 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-4-2009]

[8707] — S. 364-A — Kidnapping for ransom — Factors affecting fairness of trial of accused in such cases — Duty of court while appreciating evidence — Held, kidnapping as understood under S. 364-A is a truly reprehensible crime and when a helpless child is kidnapped for ransom and that too by close relatives, the incident becomes all the more unacceptable — Very gravity of crime and abhorrence which it creates in mind of court are, however, factors which also tend to militate against fair trial of accused in such cases — Court must, therefore, guard against possibility of being influenced in its judgments by sentiment, rather than by objectivity and judicial considerations, while evaluating evidence (Para 15). Lohit Kaushal v. State of Haryana, (2009) 17 SCC 106.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

[8708] — S. 364-A — Kidnapping for ransom — Ingredients — "Ransom" — Meaning — Not only the abductor but the person who acts as go-between to collect the ransom also liable to be convicted under this section

Before Section 364-A is attracted and a person is convicted, the prosecution must prove the following ingredients:

(1) The accused must have kidnapped, abducted or detained any person;

(2) He must have kept such person under custody or detention; and

(3) Kidnapping, abduction or detention must have been for ransom. (Para 57)

The term "ransom" has not been defined in the Code. Stated simply, "ransom" is a sum of money to be demanded to be paid for releasing a captive, prisoner or detenu. Kidnapping for ransom is an offence of unlawfully seizing a person and then confining the person usually in a secret place, while attempting to extort ransom. This grave crime is sometimes made a capital offence. In addition to the abductor a person who acts as a go-between to collect the ransom is generally considered guilty of the crime. (Paras 58, 62 and 60). Suman Sood v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 5 SCC 634: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 637: AIR 2007 SC 2774: 2007 Cri LJ 4080.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2007]

Malleshi v. State of Karnataka, (2004) 8 SCC 95: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2115, relied on Concise Oxford English Dictionary, 2002, p. 1186; Advanced Law Lexicon (3rd Edn., p. 3932, relied on [8709] — S. 364-A — Kidnapping for ransom — Ingredients of offence under, whether made out — A-1, A-2 and A-3 forcibly took away AN (a 4 years old boy), causing grievous hurt to her mother and gave a written threat to the life of the boy if Rs 5 lakhs were not paid — A-5 immediately joined the car in which the boy was being kidnapped and the written threat was in the handwriting of A-4 — Ingredients of offence under S. 364-A requires kidnapping and reasonable apprehension that some person may be done to death or hurt if ransom money is not paid — On facts, held, the offence under S. 364-A was committed — Therefore, conviction of appellants for life imprisonment, held, proper

On 24-9-1997, at about 2.30 in the afternoon, BH went to the police station and gave her statement. On the basis of her statement, an FIR was lodged at 2.40 p.m. that her 4 years old son, AN was kidnapped in front of her house, in her presence, after AN returned from the nursery classes in the school bus at about 1.25 p.m. She claimed that she had seen one white-coloured Maruti van bearing No. DDD 436, standing outside their house in which two other young men were sitting and they forcibly took away her son, who was still in his school uniform, and when she tried to stop them, they gave fist-blows to her and one of them also threatened her with knife and while departing they also threw a note inside the house demanding Rs 5 lakhs as ransom for the return of the child and also threatened that in case police was informed they would kill the child. She claimed that the accused persons tied her hands with cloth and bolted her inside the room. She managed to free herself and after opening the door had informed the police. She stated that occurrence had also been witnessed by her neighbour, RS (PW 2) and she could identify the culprits.

By the impugned order, the Division Bench of the High Court dismissed the appeal filed by the appellants (five accused A-1 to A-5 viz. S, BB, RR, C and T respectively) confirming their conviction by the Sessions Court, for offences under Sections 364-A, 325, 323, 384, 342 and 506 IPC read with Section 120-B IPC.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held:

All the five accused persons have, undoubtedly, committed the offence under Section 364-A IPC and the courts below were right in convicting them for the offence, as also awarding them the life imprisonment for the same. The wording itself suggests that when kidnapping is done with the threat to cause death or hurt to the kidnapped person or gives a reasonable apprehension that some person may be done to death or hurt or compels any Government, any foreign State or international intergovernmental organisation or any person to pay a ransom, the offence is complete. The original note Ext. PD clearly brings out the threat to the life of the child in case the ransom money was not paid. The ransom note was proved to be in the handwriting of C (A-4) and it was not an individual act of C, but as many as three appellants, who were together in whisking away the child from his mother. T (A-5) must be presumed to have the idea, because he immediately and knowingly joined the bandwagon. The accused persons in a daring daylight bid kidnapped a child, right in the presence of his mother and caused hurt to her, which was in the nature of grievous hurt and on the top of it, demanded a ransom of 5 lakhs rupees in writing for the life of the child. Therefore, there would be no other offence, but the one under Section 364-A IPC and the appeal has no merit. (Paras 20 and 19). Shyam Babu v. State of Haryana, (2008) 15 SCC 418: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1023: AIR 2009 SC 577: (2009) 73 AIC 233 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 436 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-11-2008]

[8710] — S. 364-A — Offence under — Award of sentence of life imprisonment and fine of Rs 1000 with default stipulation — Non-interference with — Need leading the legislature to provide for stringent sentence in relation to offence concerned — Consideration of

Considering the alarming rise in kidnapping of young children for ransom, the legislature has in its wisdom provided for stringent sentence. Therefore, the High Court rightly refused to interfere in the matter. The impugned judgment of the High Court does not suffer from any infirmity to warrant interference. (Para 32). Vinod v. State of Haryana, (2008) 2 SCC 246: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 338: AIR 2008 SC 1142: (2008) 64 AIC 175 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1811: (2008) 105 Cut LT 559.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2008]

[8711] — S. 364-A — Trial for — Territorial jurisdiction — Offence under S. 364-A IPC — Territorial jurisdiction in relation to — Determination of — Applicability of S. 181(2) CrPC — Offence under S. 364-A IPC, held, not covered under S. 181(2) CrPC — Distinguishing the said offence from ordinary case of abduction or kidnapping, the three ingredients of offence under S. 364-A IPC stated — Held, the offence under S. 364-A IPC could be tried by the court within whose jurisdiction any of the said ingredients had taken place — Victims abducted at place L in State of U.P. — Demand for ransom made by phone call at the house of victims situated at place N in another State — Victims put to death at place U in State of U.P. — Held, the trial courts at all the three places i.e. L, N and U had jurisdiction to try the offence in question — Since the offence was registered at place N, the trial court at N could try the offence — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 181(2), 178 and 179 & 2(j)

The present matter involved the question as to which court had jurisdiction to try the instant criminal case which was lodged under Section 364-A IPC.

One R, who was resident of the State of Uttaranchal, had gone to the State of U.P. along with a contractor S. Both R and S were abducted at place L in the State of U.P. The accused made phone calls to the family members of R at their house, which was situated at place N in the State of Uttaranchal, and by threatening them demanded ransom money. When the said demand was not met, R and S were murdered. The dead bodies of R and S were recovered at place U in the State of U.P. A first information report in relation to the said case was lodged at the police station concerned in the State of Uttaranchal. An application was filed before the Sessions Court at N that the said court had no jurisdiction to frame the charges as the offence had been committed in another State i.e. State of U.P. The court at N held that merely because the telephone calls relating to demand for ransom were received at N, it would not confer jurisdiction on it to try the case. The said court held that in view of the provisions of Section 181(2) CrPC, the case should be tried in the court located at place U or place L in the State of U.P. Thereafter, the matter was taken up before the High Court. The High Court set aside the above order on the basis of the order passed by the Supreme Court on 24-4-2006. Hence, the present SLP was preferred.

Dismissing the SLP,

Held :

Offence under Section 364-A IPC is not covered under Section 181(2) CrPC. It is not simply abduction or kidnapping. In the case of Section 364-A IPC something more is there. There are three stages in Section 364-A IPC, one is the kidnapping or abduction, second is threat of death coupled with the demand of money and lastly when the demand is not met, then causing death. If the three ingredients are available, that will constitute the offence under Section 364-A IPC. Any of the three ingredients can take place at one place or at different places. (Paras 17 and 9)

As per Section 178 CrPC, in case an offence has been committed in two local areas then it can be tried by any of them. Further, as per Section 179 CrPC, when an act is an offence by reason of anything which has been done and consequence which has ensued in another area, the offence may be inquired into or tried by a court within whose local jurisdiction such thing has been done or such consequence has ensued. (Para 15)

In the present case, all the ingredients of offence under Section 364-A IPC have not taken place at one place. It is a case wherein the offence has taken place at three places i.e. at place N where the threat to the life of the deceased was given and demand of money was raised, at place L from where the deceased were abducted and at place U where they were ultimately put to death. (Para 17)

Therefore, all the three courts i.e. the trial court at N in the State of Uttaranchal and the trial courts at L and U in the State of U.P. will have territorial jurisdiction to try the matter. The trial could be conducted in any of the said courts. (Paras 10 and 17)

The present case was registered at place N and the investigation started in that district. The trial court at N erred in taking view that it had no jurisdiction to try the matter. (Para 17). Vishwanath Gupta v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 11 SCC 633: (2007) 55 AIC 173 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-3-2007]

[8712] — S. 364-A (inserted by Amendment Act 42 of 1993) — Statement of Objects and Reasons — Need for deterrent punishment — Discussed (Paras 63 and 64). Vikram Singh v. State of Punjab, (2010) 3 SCC 56.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-1-2010]

[8713] — Ss. 364-A, 342 and 120-B — Kidnapping for ransom — Conviction reversed — Appellant-accused allegedly kidnapped minor niece of his brother-in-law along with other co-accused — Held, but for three or four stray sentences regarding appellant's involvement, there was virtually nothing brought out regarding his role in High Court's judgment — Only two incriminating circumstances highlighted against appellant — First was disclosure statements of two co-accused, subsequent to their arrest, naming appellant as main conspirator and second was recovery of Maruti car, allegedly used in kidnapping, from appellant — Disclosure statements of two co-accused, held, cannot be read into evidence against appellant, as they have status of being statements made to police while co-accused were in custody — Maruti car recovered from appellant did not figure in kidnapping of child and there is absolutely no evidence to suggest that — Also as per prosecution story, appellant not present when child kidnapped by four co-accused and he was roped in as main conspirator with aid of S. 120-B — No evidence to indicate that such a conspiracy hatched by appellant — Appellant's conviction reversed (Paras 13, 16 to 18, 21 to 24 and 28). Lohit Kaushal v. State of Haryana, (2009) 17 SCC 106.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

[8714] — Ss. 364-A, 342 and 120-B — Kidnapping for ransom — Schools of thought re informing police or not — Conduct of accused — Inference of guilt — When not established — Conduct of appellant-accused in dissuading father of kidnap victim from informing police about kidnapping and his abscondence after arrival of police — Held, these circumstances by themselves cannot be taken against appellant — It needs to be kept in mind that in a case of kidnapping for ransom, there are two very clear schools of thought: (i) that law-enforcement agencies should be informed as soon as possible so that victim can be recovered without loss of time; and (ii) given that police investigations are often tardy and clumsy, police should not be informed, as victim would then be gravely endangered and that best option was to pay up and recover victim — Second option is more preferred one in India — Assuming, therefore, that appellant, as a close relative, advised victim's family to adopt second course, cannot by itself be a circumstance to be taken against him — Again, in backdrop of all other circumstances, appellant's abscondence after arrival of police may raise some suspicion, but cannot by itself constitute sufficient evidence for his conviction — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 114 and 8 (Paras 25 to 27). Lohit Kaushal v. State of Haryana, (2009) 17 SCC 106.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

[8715] — Ss. 364-A and 364 — Conviction under S. 364-A IPC though charge framed only in respect of S. 364 IPC — Sustainability of such conviction — Conviction for offence in respect of which no charge is framed (though framed for similar but higher offence) — Sustainability of — Reiterating the principles of law laid down by Supreme Court in such matter, held, where the offence (pertaining to S. 364-A IPC) in respect of which no charge was framed was a different as well as a higher offence than the one (pertaining to S. 364 IPC) in respect of which charge was framed, the conviction for offence in respect of which no charge was framed could not be sustained as it caused prejudice to the accused — Hence, conviction altered to S. 364 IPC in respect of which charge was framed — Appellant sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for life — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 464, 216, 221 and 215

As regards the cases where the accused is convicted for the offence in respect of which no charge is framed, the propositions of law which can be culled out from the judgments of the Supreme Court are:

(i) The accused should not suffer any prejudice by reason of misjoinder of charges.

(ii) A conviction for lesser offence is permissible.

(iii) It should not result in failure of justice.

(iv) If there is a substantial compliance, misjoinder of charges may not be fatal and such misjoinder must be arising out of mere misjoinder to frame charges. (Para 54)

The ingredients for commission of offence under Section 364 and 364-A IPC are different. Whereas the intention to kidnap a person in order that he may be murdered or may be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being murdered satisfies the requirements of Section 364 IPC, for obtaining a conviction for commission of an offence under Section 364-A thereof it is necessary to prove that not only such kidnapping or abetment has taken place but thereafter the accused threatened to cause death or hurt to such person or by his conduct gives rise to a reasonable apprehension that such person may be put to death or hurt or causes hurt or death to such person in order to compel the Government or any foreign State or international intergovernmental organisation or any other person to do or abstain from doing any act or to pay a ransom. (Para 55)

Thus, it was obligatory on the part of the trial court to frame a charge which would answer the description of the offence envisaged under Section 364-A IPC. It may be true that the kidnapping was done with a view to get ransom but the same should have been put to the appellant while framing a charge. The prejudice to the appellant is apparent as the ingredients of a higher offence had not been put to him while framing any charge. Hence, the appellant could not have been convicted under Section 364-A IPC. The appellant is held to be guilty of commission of an offence under Section 364 IPC. He deserves the highest punishment prescribed therein i.e. the rigorous imprisonment for life. (Paras 58, 55 and 56). Anil v. Admn. of Daman & Diu, Daman, (2006) 13 SCC 36: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 72: (2007) 49 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

K. Prema S. Rao v. Yadla Srinivasa Rao, (2003) 1 SCC 217: 2003 SCC (Cri) 271; Kammari Brahmaiah v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1999) 2 SCC 522: 1999 SCC (Cri) 281; Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 5 SCC 334: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1592; Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121; Harjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 1 SCC 463: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 417, relied on

Kammari Brahmaiah v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1999) 2 SCC 522: 1999 SCC (Cri) 281, distinguished on facts

[8716] — Ss. 364-A and 364 — Distinction between the said two offences indicated

The ingredients for commission of offence under Section 364 and 364-A IPC are different. Whereas the intention to kidnap a person in order that he may be murdered or may be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being murdered satisfies the requirements of Section 364 IPC, for obtaining a conviction for commission of an offence under Section 364-A thereof it is necessary to prove that not only such kidnapping or abetment has taken place but thereafter the accused threatened to cause death or hurt to such person or by his conduct gives rise to a reasonable apprehension that such person may be put to death or hurt or causes hurt or death to such person in order to compel the Government or any foreign State or international intergovernmental organisation or any other person to do or abstain from doing any act or to pay a ransom. (Para 55)

Thus, it was obligatory on the part of the trial court to frame a charge which would answer the description of the offence envisaged under Section 364-A IPC. It may be true that the kidnapping was done with a view to get ransom but the same should have been put to the appellant while framing a charge. The prejudice to the appellant is apparent as the ingredients of a higher offence had not been put to him while framing any charge. Hence, the appellant could not have been convicted under Section 364-A IPC. The appellant is held to be guilty of commission of an offence under Section 364 IPC. He deserves the highest punishment prescribed therein i.e. the rigorous imprisonment for life. (Paras 58, 55 and 56). Anil v. Admn. of Daman & Diu, Daman, (2006) 13 SCC 36: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 72: (2007) 49 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

K. Prema S. Rao v. Yadla Srinivasa Rao, (2003) 1 SCC 217: 2003 SCC (Cri) 271; Kammari Brahmaiah v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1999) 2 SCC 522: 1999 SCC (Cri) 281; Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 5 SCC 334: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1592; Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121; Harjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 1 SCC 463: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 417, relied on

Kammari Brahmaiah v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1999) 2 SCC 522: 1999 SCC (Cri) 281, distinguished on facts

[8717] — S. 364-A r/w S. 120-B — Conviction under — Death sentence — Justification for — Entire planning for the offence committed was masterminded and executed by Umar Sheikh who managed to go out of the net of law — In his case, death sentence might have been appropriate — Six appellants — No distinctive feature indicated to impose two different sentences i.e. death sentence for three and life sentence for three others — No appeal by prosecution for enhancing sentence of accused awarded life imprisonment — Hence, on facts, all the six appellants, held, liable to be sentenced to life imprisonment — Thus, death sentence of the three appellants altered accordingly — Offence under S. 364-A r/w S. 120-B IPC — Death sentence, held on facts, not justified (Para 42). Nazir Khan v. State of Delhi, (2003) 8 SCC 461: 2003 SCC (Cri) 2033: AIR 2003 SC 4427.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-8-2003]

[8718] — S. 364-A r/w S. 472 CrPC, 1973 — Continuing offence of kidnapping — When occurs — Making ransom calls after death of victim — Point in time at which to be reckoned — Continuing offence — Reckoning of date of commission of offence — Making of ransom calls after death of victim of kidnapping — Held, the same was a continuing offence under S. 472 CrPC and offence under S. 364-A IPC did not come to an end on death of victim — Further held, even after death of victim every time a ransom call was made a fresh period of limitation commenced — Accordingly, it would be date on which last ransom call was made and not initial date of abduction, which has to be taken as date of commission of offence — Thus, Juvenile Justice Act no longer applicable to petitioner who had attained age of 18 years by then — Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act, 2000, S. 2(k)

The main object of the kidnapping committed by the accused was to extort money from the parents of the deceased victim by way of ransom even after the death of the victim, as is evident from the subsequent phone calls asking for ransom. The offence under Section 364-A IPC did not come to an end only on account of the death of the victim since ransom calls had been made even though the victim had been killed. If Section 364-A IPC and Section 472 CrPC are to be read together, it has to be held that even after the death of the victim every time a ransom call was made a fresh period of limitation commenced. Accordingly, it would be the date on which the last ransom call was made which has to be taken to be the date of commission of the offence and, accordingly, the Juvenile Justice Act was no longer applicable to the petitioner, who had attained the age of 18 years by then. (Paras 23 and 29). Vikas Chaudhary v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 8 SCC 508: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 936: AIR 2010 SC 3380: (2010) 94 AIC 233 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-2010]

Vimal Chadha v. Vikas Choudhary, (2008) 15 SCC 216: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 790, relied on

[8719] — Ss. 364-A/120-B — Criminal conspiracy for kidnapping for ransom — Ingredients for attracting conviction under — Fact that Accused 1 (A-1) kidnapped a person for getting an arrested person released, proved — Accused 2 (A-2), wife of A-1, remained at the secret place where A-1 had kept the victim, kept watch on the victim and provided him food and medicine — Held, facts not sufficient to connect A-2 with the offence under Ss. 364-A/120-B (though found to be enough to sustain conviction under Ss. 365/120-B)

The trial court held that the prosecution failed to prove charge against A-2 for an offence punishable under Sections 364-A or 364-A read with 120-B IPC "beyond reasonable doubt" inasmuch as no reliable evidence had been placed on record from which it could be said to have been established that A-2 was also a part of "pressurise tactics" or had terrorised the victim or his family members to get the arrested person released in lieu of the victim. The trial court, therefore, held that she was entitled to benefit of doubt.

Held :

In the facts and circumstances in their totality, by recording such finding, the trial court has neither committed an error of fact nor an error of law. A-2 being the wife of A-1, it was natural that she was staying with her husband at the place where the victim was kept. But merely on that ground, it cannot be held that she was in "continued association" and involved as a co-conspirator in criminal conspiracy with A-1 in kidnapping the victim for release of the arrested person. The courts below were right in drawing an inference that she must be presumed to be aware of kidnapping of the victim and in detaining him. She was all throughout present in the said house and was very well aware that the victim had been kidnapped and was kept at a secret place. That, however, does not mean that A-2 was also a part of conspiracy in kidnapping for ransom. No witness has directly or even indirectly deposed about ransom by A-2. (Paras 65 to 67)

But even if it is assumed for the sake of argument that the other view was possible, it is settled law that in case two views are possible and the trial court has acquitted the accused, the High Court would not interfere with such order of acquittal. (Para 68)

On the facts and in the circumstances in its entirety and considering the evidence as a whole, it cannot be said that by acquitting A-2 for offences punishable under Sections 364-A read with 120-B IPC, the trial court had acted illegally or unlawfully. The High Court, therefore, ought not to have set aside the finding of acquittal of accused A-2 for an offence under Sections 364-A read with 120-B IPC. (Para 71). Suman Sood v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 5 SCC 634: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 637: AIR 2007 SC 2774: 2007 Cri LJ 4080.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2007]

Chandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 4 SCC 415: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 325, relied on [8720] — S. 364-A/S. 363 r/w S. 34 — Power of appellate court — Scope — Held, appellate court must not only consider questions of law but also of fact and in doing so must subject evidence to critical scrutiny — It must really apply its mind to facts of case particularly when offence alleged is of serious nature and may attract heavy punishment — In the instant case, High Court delivered a cryptic judgment without making any serious attempt to appreciate evidence on record — Hence, impugned order set aside and matter remitted to High Court for rehearing — CrPC, 1973, S. 386 (Paras 3 to 5). Narendra Bhat v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 17 SCC 785.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2007]

— S. 365 See Ss. 148, 365, 342, 323, 324 and 302/149

See also under Ss. 299 to 304

See also Ss. 302/149, 364-A, 365 and 148

See also Ss. 323/343/355 and 365

See also Ss. 347, 386 and 365

See also Ss. 363, 364, 365, 386 and 387

See also Ss. 364 and 365

See also Ss. 384, 365, 342 and 120-B

[8721] — S. 365 — Abduction of a girl for immoral trafficking — Abductor showing sufficient expertise in the art of abduction, seduction and sale of girls — Sentence of three years' RI, held, cannot be reduced and provisions of Probation of Offenders Act cannot be extended to the accused-appellant in the facts and circumstances of the case. Devki v. State of Haryana, (1979) 3 SCC 760: 1979 SCC (Cri) 861: AIR 1979 SC 1948: 1979 Cri LJ 1309.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, D.A. Desai and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1979]

[8722] — S. 365 — Kidnapping and wrongful confinement — Extremist activity — Fact that the area being surcharged with insurgency, witnesses and corroborative evidence were rarely available, must be kept in mind — PW 1 alleged to have been taken away blindfolded in a car driven by PW 4 to a house where he was assaulted and confined for three nights — PW 4, who was known to PW 1, stating that the car which belonged to his mother had been taken by two unknown youths from his mother by force — That car was brought by the accused-appellant to the place from where PW 1 was kidnapped — Car seized by IO during course of investigation, statement of witnesses recorded under S. 161 CrPC and appellant arrested — Held on facts, conviction of appellant under S. 365 justified

It is quite but natural that in the prevalent situation, obtaining in an area surcharged with insurgency activities, striking terror and fear psychosis in the mind of the people, the investigating officer would definitely find difficulties to collect sufficient corroborative evidence. Witnesses will be reluctant to come to the court to depose or appear before the investigating officer to give statement for fear of reprisals. Rarely, one comes across any corroborative evidence in such type of offence. This would be no ground to throw away the otherwise trustworthy evidence of prosecution witnesses. In this case the statement-in-chief of PW 1 remained unimpeached. There is also no reason to doubt the creditworthy evidence of PW 4, apart from the other circumstances. In the facts and circumstances of the case, coupled with the credible and trustworthy statement of PW 1, the prosecution has established its case. (Para 27). Tarun Bora v. State of Assam, (2002) 7 SCC 39: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1568: AIR 2002 SC 2926.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah, B.P. Singh and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2002]

[8723] — S. 365 — Sentence — Offence of kidnapping and wrongful confinement — No leniency should be shown on human considerations — Kidnapping of a person is violative of his right under Art. 21 — It produces terror in mind of the people and deleterious effect on society — Constitution of India, Art. 21

It is not possible to accept the appellant's plea for leniency on the ground that the appellant has his mother, wife and children to support and if the Court so decides to confirm the conviction serious prejudice would be caused to them. Human consideration is no ground for showing leniency to the perpetrator of a crime against organized civilized society, which is abhorrent to the concept of rule of law. In fact, this prayer has already been considered by the Designated Court and lenient punishment of 5 years' RI has been awarded. The offence of kidnapping in any form impinges upon human rights and right to life enshrined in Article 21 of the Constitution. Such acts not only strike terror in the mind of the people but have deleterious effect on the civilized society and have to be condemned by imposing deterrent punishment. (Para 28). Tarun Bora v. State of Assam, (2002) 7 SCC 39: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1568: AIR 2002 SC 2926.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah, B.P. Singh and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2002]

[8724] — Ss. 365, 364-A, 343/120-B and 346/120-B — Kidnapping for release of an arrested person — Appreciation of evidence — A white Maruti car was seen on previous night — Next morning, victim was pushed into the white Maruti car and taken away — Ownership and possession of the Maruti car by Accused 1 (A-1) proved — Phone call received by victim's wife informing her that her husband had been kidnapped so that an arrested person (said to be a member of Khalistan Liberation Force) could be released through the influence of victim's father who was then Chairman of Joint Parliamentary Committee — Identity of A-1 established — Even if photograph of A-1 shown on TV as also published in newspapers, held, that would not adversely affect prosecution case, if otherwise evidence of PWs is reliable and court is satisfied as to identity of the accused — On facts, conviction of A-1 upheld — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9 (Paras 36 to 43). Suman Sood v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 5 SCC 634: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 637: AIR 2007 SC 2774: 2007 Cri LJ 4080.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2007]

[8725] — Ss. 365, 366 and 368 — Abduction of a woman from her house — Accused 1 and 2 taking her against her wish and under threat up to another station wherefrom accused 3 and 4 taking her similarly under threat to a village and confining her there in a house — No evidence that the woman was abducted to compel her either to marry or submit to sexual intercourse against her wish — Held, accused guilty of offences under Ss. 365 and 368 and not under S. 366 — Accordingly sentence of imprisonment reduced but fine imposed

There was sufficient evidence on record to show that the prosecutrix was abducted from her house when accused Nos. 1 and 2 had taken her against her wish and under threat up to Patna Railway Station and accused Nos. 3 and 4 had thereafter carried her similarly under threat from Patna Railway Station to a village. She was also confined in a house at Ajaipur village till she was recovered by the police after some hours. That will squarely bring the accused within the clutches of Ss. 365 and 368 of IPC. The offences under these two sections are lesser offences compared to offence under S. 366 and, therefore, on the evidence before the court, they are liable to be convicted for the said offences. Faiyaz Ahmed v. State of Bihar, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 186: 1991 SCC (Cri) 543: AIR 1990 SC 2147.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-1990]

[8726] — Ss. 365, 384, 342 r/w S. 120-B and S. 120-B — Abduction and extortion of money — Victim released on payment of ransom of Rs 3 lakhs — Conviction of accused-appellants — Propriety — PW 7 (partner of victim) deposing that he had withdrawn money from bank for the said ransom — PW 4 (a relative of victim) deposing that he had paid Rs 3 lakhs to one motorcyclist (who identified himself with a code which was stated to PW 4 on phone) — Confession of co-accused (which was truthful and voluntary) implicating the appellants in crime — Thus, their complicity in crime proved beyond reasonable doubt — Hence, their conviction was liable to be confirmed (Paras 15 to 17). Abdulvahab Abdul Majid Shaikh v. State of Gujarat, (2007) 9 SCC 293: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 126: AIR 2007 SC 2492.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and G.P. Mathur, J. [Date of decision: 24-4-2007]

[8727] — Ss. 365, 384, 342 r/w S. 120-B and S. 120-B — Abduction and extortion of money — Victim released on payment of ransom of Rs 3 lakhs — Recovery of Rs 50,000 and Rs 1,75,000 from houses of A-6 and A-7 respectively — Acquittal of A-6 and A-7 — Propriety — Held, though recovery of the said amounts stood proved, prosecution could not prove that these amounts were actually the amounts paid by the agents of victim as ransom to the said accused — The accused gave explanation as to possession of the said amounts — Moreover, the confession of co-accused did not involve the said accused in crime — Hence, acquittal of A-6 and A-7 was proper — Appeal filed thereagainst by State liable to be dismissed (Para 18). Abdulvahab Abdul Majid Shaikh v. State of Gujarat, (2007) 9 SCC 293: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 126: AIR 2007 SC 2492.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and G.P. Mathur, J. [Date of decision: 24-4-2007]

— Ss. 365 r/w S. 147 See also Ss. 365 r/w S. 149 and S. 147

[8728] — S. 365 r/w Ss. 149 and 147 — Abduction — Appellant alleged to have abducted the prosecutrix — Existence of intimate relations between them for past several years affecting seriousness of the complaint — Reduction of sentence

Where the prosecutrix was of easy virtue and intimate relationship existed between the accused-appellant and the complainant, not much serious notice can be taken of the allegation of abduction. The complainant was being taken away in a jeep forcibly and this may have happened on more than one occasion. The ends of justice will be satisfied by reducing the sentence to the period of imprisonment already undergone by the appellant. Laiq Singh v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 561: 1970 SCC (Cri) 502: AIR 1970 SC 658: 1970 Cri LJ 741.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M. Hidayatullah, C.J. and A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-1969]

[8729] — Ss. 365/120-B, 343/120-B and 346/120-B — Criminal conspiracy for kidnapping — Sustainability of conviction — Kidnapping of a person by Accused 1 (A-1) and his "companions" proved — Accused 2 (A-2), wife of A-1, was fully aware about the kidnapping and keeping the victim at a secret place — A-2 throughout remaining at that place, keeping watch on the victim and also providing him food and medicine — Held, A-2 was rightly convicted with the aid of S. 120-B (Paras 53 and 66). Suman Sood v. State of

Rajasthan, (2007) 5 SCC 634: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 637: AIR 2007 SC 2774: 2007 Cri LJ 4080.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2007]

State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715, distinguished [8730] — Ss. 365/411, 494 and 506 — Husband putting the wife into an auto-rickshaw with force and taking her to her father's house where he left her — Held, S. 365 is not attracted — No mens rea is involved in such act of kidnapping — Charge under Ss. 365/411 quashed — Offences under Ss. 494 and 506 being compoundable, permission to compound granted. B. Laxmi v. B. Srinivasa Rao, 1997 SCC (Cri) 1218.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-1996]

— Ss. 365/511 r/w S. 147 See also Ss. 365/511 r/w S. 149 and S. 147

[8731] — Ss. 365/511 r/w S. 149 and S. 147 — Attempt to kidnap a girl — Existence of love affair between accused-appellant and the said girl — Conviction — Propriety — Held, the fact that victim had a affair with appellant would not give any right to appellant to forcibly take her away from her lawful guardianship — Prosecution case established — Conviction upheld

Though it is true that there was a love affair between PW 1 (victim) and the appellant, on the date of incident the appellant along with 5 other persons did come in a tempo and tried to kidnap PW 1 at about 10 p.m. and it is because of the intervention of the mother and maternal uncle of the victim along with the neighbours, the appellant and another accused M were apprehended and were produced before the police promptly. The fact that PW 1 had an affair with the appellant would not, in any manner, give any right to the appellant to forcibly take her away from her lawful guardianship. In this background the trial court correctly came to the conclusion that the appellant was guilty of the offences for which he is convicted. (Para 7). Deo Narain Mandal v. State of U.P., (2004) 7 SCC 257: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1921: (2004) 3 KLT 591.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, S.B. Sinha and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-8-2004]

[8732] — Ss. 365/511 r/w S. 149 and S. 147 — Attempt to kidnap girl with whom accused-appellant having love affair — Reduction of sentence by High Court to period already undergone i.e. 40 days without even noticing the said period — Propriety — On facts, held, said sentence was inadequate and disproportionate — Incident in question took place nearly 20 years ago — Victim girl as well as appellant now married and settled in life — After the said incident, no allegation against appellant of any criminal conduct — Considering the said facts including the factum of love affair, Supreme Court directing appellant to undergo six months' RI for offence under Ss. 365/511 r/w S. 149 — That apart, restoring sentence of three months under S. 147 IPC as awarded by trial court and maintaining fine of Rs 4000 and Rs 1000 for offences under Ss. 365/511 r/w S. 149 and S. 147 IPC respectively as awarded by High Court — Further directing that on recovery of fine amount, a sum of Rs 3000 out of the same be paid to victim — Directions also about further rigorous imprisonment on default in payment of fine — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Paras 10 to 13). Deo Narain Mandal v. State of U.P., (2004) 7 SCC 257: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1921: (2004) 3 KLT 591.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, S.B. Sinha and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-8-2004]

— S. 366 See also Ss. 302, 323 and 324 r/w 148, 149, 363, 366 and 376

See also Ss. 302, 376, 366 and 201

See also Ss. 342, 343 and 366

See also Ss. 361 and 366

See also Ss. 365, 366 and 368

See also Ss. 366-A and 366

See also Ss. 375 and 376

See also Ss. 375, 376 and 366

See also Ss. 376, 302, 363 and 366

See also Ss. 376, 366 and 363/109

See also Ss. 376 and 366

See also Ss. 376, 375, 148, 452, 149, 342, 323, 366 and 506

See also Ss. 376 & 375 and 366

See also S. 376 and proviso thereto and Ss. 342, 363 and 366

See also Ss. 376/149, 375, 148, 452, 342, 323, 366 and 506

[8733] — S. 366 — Proof that girl is about 18 years' old — So consent is immaterial for the offence to be made out — But the girl was clearly indulging in sexual acts — Case made out for treating it as a technical offence — Sentence reduced from 6 months to the period already undergone

The main issue is one of reduction of sentence as the girl kidnapped was below 18 years but greatly prone to sexual connections. So her consent was not lacking in the real sense though that will not be a defence when the girl is below 18 years.

That there was justification for reducing sentence to the period already undergone. Brij Lal Sud v. State of Punjab, (1970) 3 SCC 808: 72 Punj LR 999.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M. Hidayatullah, C.J. and A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1970]

[8734] — S. 366 — Abduction — Prosecutrix allegedly kidnapped by the appellants by making her to sit on the carrier of a bicycle — Prosecutrix, a fully grown-up woman, not jumping down from the bicycle or putting up a struggle or raising an alarm to protect herself — Held, in the circumstances of the case, prosecutrix was a willing party and there was no taking out of the guardianship of her mother — Conviction set aside. Shyam v. State of Maharashtra, 1995 SCC (Cri) 851.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1995]

[8735] — S. 366 — Abduction — Prosecutrix lured by two ladies and brought to accused — Accused threatening her with pistol and after taking her to another place committing rape — Held, it cannot be said that the offence of abduction was complete when the prosecutrix was induced by the two ladies to accompany them — Accused did commit offence under S. 366. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793: AIR 1972 SC 2661: (1973) 2 SCR 197: 1973 Cri LJ 179.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1972]

AIR 1961 Bom 282: 1961 (2) Cri LJ 578 (Bom), distinguished [8736] — S. 366 — Abduction and rape of a helpless widow — Circumstantial evidence conclusively proving the guilt of the accused — Defence plea unbelievable — Held on facts, High Court justified in convicting the accused under S. 366 reversing trial court's order of acquittal — Sentence of 10 years' RI also justified considering the heinous crime committed by accused. Arun Kumar v. State of U.P., 1989 Supp (2) SCC 322: 1990 SCC (Cri) 173: AIR 1989 SC 1445: 1989 Cri LJ 1460.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and Kuldip Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-1989]

[8737] — S. 366 — Accused charged for kidnapping a girl for the purposes of illicit intercourse — Kidnapping not proved — Accused not examined under S. 342, CrPC about the evidence relating to abduction — Conviction under S. 366 on the ground of the proof of abduction for the purposes of illicit intercourse not possible

The accused cannot be convicted under S. 366, IPC by reason of his having abducted the girl for the purposes of illicit intercourse, because apart from the fact that, that was not the charge sought to be proved against the appellant, the evidence on the record did not warrant a conclusion that the girl was either compelled by force or induced by any deceitful means to go from her father's place by the appellant nor was any question put to the appellant in the examination under S. 342, CrPC in regard to her compelling or inducing the girl to leave her father's place. Ram Devi v. State of U.P., AIR 1955 SC 574: 1955 Cri LJ 1296, 1297.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.R. Das, N.H. Bhagwati and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-1955]

[8738] — S. 366 — Age of victim and taking out — By various tests and evidences age of victim not clearly established and estimated or indicated variously to be under 18 years, below 20 years, about 16 years and about 18 years — Held, in such situation when age in doubt the question of taking her away from lawful guardianship not made out — Also where such victim willingly went with the accused to see places and moved together for 10-11 days in different towns, the accused could not be held to have taken her out of the keeping of her lawful guardian — Something more like inducement should have been shown. State of Karnataka v. Sureshbabu Puk Raj Porral, (1994) 1 SCC 468: 1994 SCC (Cri) 435: AIR 1994 SC 966: 1994 Cri LJ 1216.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-1993]

[8739] — S. 366 — Applicability — Case of alleged kidnapping of/elopement with a girl T, less than 16 years of age, and her subsequent rape — Defence of appellant-accused P that he got married to T — Photographs relating to so-called marriage produced — However, both appellant-accused convicted under S. 366 IPC by trial court and High Court — Before Supreme Court, three affidavits favouring appellants, filed — One by T, who swore that she had an affair with appellant P and wanted to marry him, but her parents got her married to another person, that she had no grudge or ill will against P, that she did not want any kind of action against appellants and that matter had been patched up — Other two affidavits sworn by different persons, giving a certificate of good character to P, certifying that he was a law-abiding citizen and had committed no offence — Only on basis of these affidavits, appellants praying for acquittal or alternatively some reduction in sentence (of 1 years imposed by High Court) — Tenability — Held, S. 366 IPC is a non-compoundable offence —

Therefore, argument of appellants about acquittal on basis of affidavits, unsustainable — Also, there is genuine doubt about affidavits — Again, under the circumstances, sentence is already on lenient side — Moreover, no contrition on part of accused for their crime — Hence, plea regarding sentence, also rejected — CrPC, 1973, S. 320 (Paras 13 and 14). Parshotam Lal v. State of Punjab, (2010) 1 SCC 65.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2009]

[8740] — S. 366 — Besides proving the fact of abduction, held, it was also necessary to prove that it was for one of the purposes mentioned in the section. Chote Lal v. State of Haryana, (1979) 4 SCC 336: 1979 SCC (Cri) 972: AIR 1979 SC 1494: 1979 Cri LJ 1126.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1979]

[8741] — S. 366 — Kidnapping a woman (girl aged about 12 years in this case) to compel her to illicit intercourse — Conviction for — Intention/knowledge required on the part of accused at the relevant time — Appellant forcibly taking prosecutrix/victim to his gumti — But, before he could ravish her, hearing alarm raised by prosecutrix, the father of prosecutrix and other villagers assembling there and rescuing the prosecutrix — Held, during kidnapping or forcibly taking prosecutrix to his gumti, appellant had intention to commit illicit intercourse or knowledge that it was likely that prosecutrix would be forced to have illicit intercourse — Hence, offence committed squarely covered under S. 366 — Appellant convicted thereunder — Sentenced to imprisonment for 5 years

The essential ingredient of the offence punishable under Section 366 IPC is that when a person has forcibly taken a minor girl with the intention as specified in that section, then the offence is clearly made out. In the instant case, the act of the accused proves that during the kidnapping of the prosecutrix or forcibly taking her to his gumti, the accused had intention or knew it likely that the prosecutrix would be forced to have illicit intercourse. Hence, it is not a mere case of kidnapping for indecent assault but the purpose for which kidnapping was done by the accused has been proved. It is a different matter that the accused failed at the stage of preparation of committing the offence itself. (Paras 30 and 35). Tarkeshwar Sahu v. State of Bihar (Now Jharkhand), (2006) 8 SCC 560: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 556.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

[8742] — S. 366 — Kidnapping, abducting or inducing a girl to compel her to marry — To establish charge under S. 366 there should be acceptable evidence to show that the girl was compelled to marry the accused-appellant against her will and/or was forced to or induced to intercourse against her will — Prosecution, therefore, required to prove that there was some such undue force on the girl either to marry the accused or to have intercourse with him — On facts, held, prosecution failed to prove the same as there was consent on the part of the girl — She had planned her departure from the house in advance and had willingly gone away with the appellant which also indicates that there was no threat or inducement either in regard to her leaving the house or in regard to accompanying the appellant — Hence charge under S. 366 not made out (Paras 5 and 6). Jinish Lal Sah v. State of Bihar, (2003) 1 SCC 605: 2003 SCC (Cri) 395: AIR 2003 SC 2081.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-2002]

2002 Cri LJ 274 (Pat), reversed

[8743] — S. 366 — Kidnapping, abducting or inducing a woman — Conditions for applicability of S. 366 — Mere abduction is not enough to attract the provision — Prosecution must further prove that the abduction was for the purposes mentioned in S. 366 — After abduction of the woman accused-appellant departed and the other accused committed the offence as alleged by the prosecution but that would not make the appellant liable to conviction under S. 366 — On facts held, prosecution failed to prove charge under S. 366 against appellant

According to the prosecution case, the prosecutrix and her husband, the complainant, were labourers. On the night of the occurrence, when the prosecutrix went out of the house to attend call of nature the appellant along with S at point of a knife gave her threats and abducted her against her wishes. The complainant lodged a report next morning at the police station but the same was not registered properly. However, the prosecutrix in her evidence before court deposed that on the day of the incident in the evening the appellant came with S and they told that she had no child and then asked her to show her hand. On her refusal the appellant forcibly caught her hand and S applied some medicine. Thereafter, they again came at 10-11 p.m. and forcibly made her to get up. S forcibly caught her mouth and the appellant pointed a knife towards her and threatened not to raise alarm. S and the appellant then took her on foot upto village G. Thereafter, she accompanied S as the appellant left them there.

S then took the prosecutrix to another place where she was sexually exploited and raped by S. The prosecutrix escaped therefrom and after reaching her maternal uncle's place she narrated the incident on the basis of which a report was lodged to the SP and a case was registered against the accused persons. The trial court convicted the appellant under Sections 366 and 506-B IPC and sentenced him to 2 years' RI with fine of Rs 500 and one years' RI with fine of Rs 500 respectively thereunder. Accused S was convicted under Sections 366 and 376 IPC. The High Court in appeals preferred by the appellant and S, confirmed the order of the trial court. As S did not file any further appeal, the order of conviction and sentence against him attained finality. The appellant preferred the present appeal before the Supreme Court by special leave.

Allowing the appeal and setting aside the order of conviction and sentence against him

Held :

To constitute an offence under Section 366 IPC, it is necessary for the prosecution to prove that the accused induced the complainant woman or compelled by force to go from any place, that such inducement was by deceitful means, that such abduction took place with the intent that the complainant may be seduced to illicit intercourse and/or that the accused knew it to be likely that the complainant may be seduced to illicit intercourse as a result of her abduction. So far as a charge under Section 366 IPC is concerned, mere finding that a woman was abducted is not enough; it must further be proved that the accused abducted the woman with the intent that she may be compelled, or knowing it to be likely that she will be compelled to marry any person or in order that she may be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse or knowing it to be likely that she will be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse. Unless the prosecution proves that the abduction is for the purposes mentioned in Section 366 IPC, the Court cannot hold the accused guilty and punish him under Section 366 IPC. In this case, the prosecutrix nowhere alleged that she was abducted with the intention to commit an offence, that she was compelled to marry the accused or any other person or that the accused knew that she would be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse or that it was likely that she would be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse. (Paras 11 and 12)

The story unfolded from the evidence led by the prosecution appears to be that the accused-appellant along with the other accused in the evening went to the house of the prosecutrix and the other accused applied some medicine on her hand so that she might get pregnant after 10 years of marriage. The accused might have persuaded her to accompany them so that they could administer the medicine to her and she being an illiterate lady believing in the superstitions agreed to accompany them. After the accused-appellant left both of them at village G the other accused had other intentions and committed the offence as alleged by the prosecution. That does not ipso facto prove the fact that from the very beginning the accused-appellant had any intention of inducing the prosecutrix to forcibly marry him or the other accused or she was induced or seduced to illicit intercourse with the accused-appellant or with the other person in whose company he left her at village G the accused-appellant made any advances against the prosecutrix so as to show his intention of committing forcible intercourse with her. (Para 13)

It appears from the evidence of the prosecutrix that the story of the prosecution as alleged in the FIR that the prosecutrix was abducted when she had gone to attend the call of nature has been given a complete go-by by the prosecutrix. Further, it is difficult to believe that the prosecutrix who is a mature lady married for 10 years would be made to walk from her place of residence to the other village and she would not raise any hue and cry apart from the fact that her husband who was sleeping with her had woken up and yet the accused had forcibly taken the prosecutrix away from her house. The husband in the natural course of conduct would have resisted his wife being taken away forcibly. If he had some handicap because of being single, he would have certainly raised alarm and called the other persons. The place from where the prosecutrix was taken away, as referred in the FIR on the one hand and stated in the evidence of the prosecutrix on the other, raises a grave doubt about the happening of the incident as alleged by the prosecution. Delay in lodging the FIR is another factor which creates doubt in the prosecution version. (Paras 8 and 10)

In an overall consideration of the material placed on record by the prosecution, it is not possible to find that the prosecution has proved that the accused-appellant has committed an offence under Section 366 IPC. There is a doubt as to the place of incident and the motive of the accused in taking away the prosecutrix. It is difficult to believe in the story put up by the prosecutrix that she was forced to leave her place of residence under a threat by showing a knife to her. (Para 14). Gabbu v. State of M.P., (2006) 5 SCC 740: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 71: AIR 2006 SC 2461: 2006 Cri LJ 3276.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2006]

[8744] — S. 366 — Kidnapping and sexual exploitation of a girl of 16 years by promising to marry her — Sentence of four years' RI awarded by trial court — Reduction of — Propriety — Under the Act, said offence punishable up to 10 years' RI — High Court holding that accused had already suffered the sentence of imprisonment for a period of 1 month and 3 days, and that he at the time of commission of offence was an uneducated labourer from rural area and was aged 21 years — Thus, it without considering the gravamen of the offence and the ignominy to which the victim had been put to, with misplaced generosity/sympathy unreasonably reducing the sentence to period already undergone — Held, it was a ridiculously low sentence, totally disproportionate to the crime committed — High Court's order set aside — Sentence by trial court, though inadequate, restored (Paras 5, 6 and 8). State of M.P. v. Rameshwar, (2005) 2 SCC 373: 2005 SCC (Cri) 505: AIR 2005 SC 687: 2005 Cri LJ 912.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-1-2005]

[8745] — S. 366 — Kidnapping of a minor girl aged 15 years — Evidence on record conclusively establishing guilt of the accused — Plea that accused being aged 55 years would not have developed fancy for a minor girl rightly rejected by courts below as a fanciful defence set up by the accused — Conviction and sentence of 7 years' R.I. and a fine of Rs 1000 upheld. Ganga Dayal Singh v. State of Bihar, 1995 SCC (Cri) 154: AIR 1994 SC 859: 1994 Cri LJ 951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and S. Mohan, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1992]

[8746] — S. 366 — Kidnapping of a minor girl (PW 2) to compel her to marry — Accused, a regular visitor to the house of brother of PW 2 — Developing intimacy with PW 2 — He taking undue advantage of his friendship and persuading PW 2 to abandon the lawful guardianship with a promise of marriage — Held, accused rightly convicted under S. 366

The appellant was known to the family of PW 2 and was on visiting terms. During such visits he developed intimacy with PW 2. Material on record shows that the appellant promised to marry PW 2 and based on such promise she went away with the appellant. Evidence also, shows that on that day preparation for marriage was already made in the house of the appellant. Thus, on facts it is established that the appellant had taken the minor by enticing her and hence had committed the offence of kidnapping which kidnapping was for the purpose of marrying the said minor. Hence, the courts below were justified in convicting the appellant for an offence punishable under Section 366 IPC. (Paras 5, 9 and 10). Moniram Hazarika v. State of Assam, (2004) 5 SCC 120: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1545: 2004 Cri LJ 2553.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2004]

S. Varadarajan v. State of Madras, AIR 1965 SC 942: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 33, explained and distinguished

Paramjit Singh v. State of H.P., 1987 Cri LJ 1266 (HP); Sachindra Nath Mazumder v. Bistupada Das, 1978 Cri LJ 1494 (Cal), considered [8747] — S. 366 — Offence under, not made out — No evidence to show that the woman was abducted to compel her either to marry against her wish or to submit to sexual intercourse against her wish — Hence conviction under S. 366 not warranted. Faiyaz Ahmed v. State of Bihar, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 186: 1991 SCC (Cri) 543: AIR 1990 SC 2147.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-1990]

[8748] — S. 366 — On facts, conviction of the appellant found improper — Misdirection to the jury — Otherwise evidence not convincing. Mushtak Hussein v. State of Bombay, AIR 1953 SC 282: 1953 SCR 809: 1953 Cri LJ 1127.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.C. Mahajan, Vivian Bose and B. Jagannadhadas, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-1953]

[8749] — S. 366 — Person inducing a minor to leave the guardianship is as guilty as a person who forcibly takes a minor. Bihari v. State of M.P., 1968 SCD 435.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M. Hidayatullah and K.S. Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-11-1967]

[8750] — S. 366 — Prosecution for kidnapping of girl — Circumstances warranting quashment of — The girl in her affidavit admitting her marriage with appellant-accused — Despite notice from Supreme Court the complainant failing to make appearance — Moreover, the counsel for the appellant stating before Supreme Court that a child was born of that marriage — In such circumstances, in the interest of justice, Supreme Court quashing the prosecution — Constitution of India, Art. 136 (Para 3). Fazle Gaffar Khan v. State of W.B., (2000) 10 SCC 10.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-9-1999]

[8751] — S. 366 — Prosecutrix aged below 17 years secretly taken by appellant from lawful guardianship of her parents at night, confined in a room in the neighbourhood and subjected to forcible sexual intercourse — Held, ingredients of

S. 366 made out — Sentence of 9 months' RI imposed by High Court being unduly lenient, no further reduction in the sentence called for. Bhushan Lal v. State of M.P., 1987 Supp SCC 243: 1988 SCC (Cri) 50.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-1987]

[8752] — S. 366 — Sentence — Enhancement of — Interference by appellate court — When justified

A question of a sentence is a matter of discretion and it is well settled that when discretion has been properly exercised along accepted judicial lines, an appellate court should not interfere to the detriment of an accused person except for very strong reasons which must be disclosed on the face of the judgment. Shiv Govind v. State of M.P., (1972) 3 SCC 399: 1972 SCC (Cri) 549: AIR 1972 SC 1823: 1972 Cri LJ 1181: (1972) 3 SCR 835.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Grover and M.H. Beg, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-1972]

[8753] — Ss. 366 and 361 — On facts held, that the prosecutrix left with the accused of her free will and with the consent of her mother — She was betrothed to the accused at the material time and was not taken by the accused to seduce her to illicit intercourse. Lalta Prasad v. State of M.P., (1979) 4 SCC 193: 1979 SCC (Cri) 954: AIR 1979 SC 1276: 1979 Cri LJ 867.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1979]

[8754] — Ss. 366 and 363 — High Court reduced the conviction to one under S. 363 — Supreme Court's finding no offence under S. 363 made out — Taking away and enticing not proved — Appeal allowed. Ram Das v. State of M.P., (1970) 3 SCC 211: 1971 SCC (Cri) 29.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.M. Sikri and K.S. Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-1970]

[8755] — Ss. 366, 366-A and 376 — Importance of question of age in cases under — Divergent statements of the prosecutrix as to her age — Medical evidence showing that prosecutrix was used to sexual intercourse and the rupture of the hymen was old — No independent corroborative evidence as to the fact of abduction — Whether conviction sustainable

The question of age of the prosecutrix in case under Ss. 366, 376, IPC is always of importance. It was particularly so in this case because according to the medical evidence the prosecutrix was found to have been used to sexual intercourse and the rupture of the hymen was old. The High Court having acquitted the appellant for an offence under S. 376, IPC, because the prosecutrix appeared to be a consenting party. It was a fit case in which the trial Court should have examined the question of her age more closely.

On the evidence on record, we are far from satisfied that there is any trustworthy evidence on the record on which the conclusion that the prosecutrix was under 18 years of age in March 1965 can safely be founded.

There should be corroboration of some material particular from some independent source and her bare statement cannot be considered sufficient to sustain the appellant's conviction.

There is no evidence on the record on which the offence under S. 366, IPC, can be sustained against the appellant. Ram Murti v. State of Haryana, (1970) 3 SCC 21: 1970 SCC (Cri) 371: AIR 1970 SC 1029: 1970 Cri LJ 991: 72 Punj LR 1000.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Shelat and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-4-1970]

[8756] — Ss. 366 and 368 — Sentence — Enhancement of sentence by High Court from 2 years' RI to 5 years' RI on ground the crime was result of a widespread criminal activity of kidnapping and abduction and inter-state commerce of unfortunate girls — No interference by Supreme Court. Bishambar Dayal v. State of Punjab, Criminal Appeal No. 14 of 1957.

[Date of decision: 8-5-1958]

[8757] — Ss. 366, 368 and 376 — Sentence — Reduction of, by High Court — Propriety — Sentence of seven years' RI and fine with default stipulation imposed by the Sessions Court, reduced by the High Court to the period already undergone, the fine having been already paid, on only ground that the accused were illiterate labourers from rural area and were registering their attendance in the Registry of the High Court till 11-7-2003 — Held, it has been repeatedly held, while dealing with similar orders, that grounds of this nature are wholly irrelevant for reducing the sentence for the heinous crime for which the respondents had been convicted — Further held, though the order of conviction passed by the Sessions Court had been confirmed by the High Court but it does not appear that there was any consideration on merits by the High Court — Hence, impugned judgment of the High Court set aside and matter remitted to it for decision afresh (Paras 2, 3 and 4). State of M.P. v. Pooran, (2006) 10 SCC 300: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 543.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-7-2005]

[8758] — Ss. 366, 375 & 376 — Age — Determination of — Determination of — Common law principle — Held, a person attains a specified age on the day next before the anniversary of his birthday i.e. on the day preceding that anniversary — Family Law Reform Act, 1969 (English) — General Clauses Act, 1897, Ss. 9 and 10

A person attains a specified age on the day next before the anniversary of his birthday or in other words, on the day preceding that anniversary. However, the common law rule in this regard has been abrogated by the (UK) Family Law Reform Act, 1969. The effect of the change is that, in respect of anniversaries falling after 1-1-1970, the time at which a person attains a particular age expressed in years is the commencement of relevant anniversary of the date of his birth. However India does not have such statute. The age in India therefore has to be determined either according to relevant provision and in its absence, by common law principle. (Paras 13 and 14). Achhaibar Maurya v. State of U.P., (2008) 2 SCC 639: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 519: (2008) 1 KLT 213: (2008) 62 AIC 81 (SC): (2008) 3 SLR 86: (2008) 116 FLR 377.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-2007]

Shurey, Re, Savory v. Shurey, LR (1918) 1 Ch 263; R. v. Scoffin, LR (1930) 1 KB 741; Prabhu Dayal Sesma v. State of Rajasthan, (1986) 4 SCC 59: 1986 SCC (L&S) 731: 1986 SCC (Cri) 411: (1986) 1 ATC 341, relied on

Halsbury's Laws of England, 4th Edn., Reissue, p. 209, relied on [8759] — Ss. 366 and 376 — Identity of accused — Evidence of prosecutrix aged 13 years — Prosecutrix could not have forgotten the face of the accused who had raped her — In absence of defence case of insufficiency of light, her evidence regarding identity of the accused, as corroborated by house servant, even in absence of any T.I. parade, acceptable — Conviction under Ss. 366 and 376 and sentence of 3 years' and 5 years' RI respectively recorded by trial court upheld — But in the circumstances, sentence under both the counts reduced to the period already undergone. State of M.P. v. Sunder Lal, (1992) 2 SCC 578: 1992 SCC (Cri) 393: AIR 1992 SC 1413: 1992 Cri LJ 2519.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-1992]

[8760] — Ss. 366 & 376 — Sole testimony of prosecutrix — Basis for conviction — If corroboration required

The prosecutrix cannot be considered to be an accomplice. As a rule of prudence courts should normally look for some corroboration of her testimony in order to satisfy itself that the prosecutrix is telling the truth, but the view that, as a matter of law, no conviction without corroboration was possible is erroneous. The only rule of law is the rule of prudence, namely, the advisability of corroboration should be present in the mind of the Judge or the Jury, as the case may be. There is no rule of practice that there must, in every case, be corroboration before a conviction can be allowed to stand. As to what type of corroboration may be required when the court is of opinion that it is not safe to dispense with that requirement, it has also been laid down that the type of corroboration required must necessarily vary with the circumstances of each case and also according to the particular circumstances of the offence with which a person is charged. Madho Ram v. State of U.P., (1973) 1 SCC 533: 1973 SCC (Cri) 417: AIR 1973 SC 469: 1973 Cri LJ 673.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A. Alagiriswami, I.D. Dua and C.A. Vaidialingam, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-1972]

[8761] — Ss. 366 and 376 & Ss. 407(1)(c) & (4), 406 and 408 — Transfer of case — Words "will tend to the general convenience of the parties or witnesses, or is expedient for the ends of justice" in S. 407(1)(c) — Scope — Embarrassment likely to be caused to judge(s), counsel, witnesses or parties due to subject-matter of proceedings — If a ground on which case may be transferred — Proceedings concerning commission of offences relating to pornographic material/acts — Trial being assigned to Fast Track Court presided over by a lady Judge, and also being a designated "Mahila Court" — High Court presuming that the Judge, being a woman, and for that reason alone, would be caused embarrassment and transferring case to Court presided over by a male Judge — Appellant being one of the female witnesses/accused, applying for case to be retransferred to original court, claiming that avoidance of embarrassment to her should have been given primacy — Held, embarrassment is a state of mind which is more individual-related than related to the sex of a person — High Court was not justified in presuming embarrassment to the lady judicial officer solely on the ground that she was a woman even when the officer concerned had not expressed any reservation, nor sought for or directed transfer of the case — Moreover, even when given such a choice at an earlier stage by the High Court, the said lady officer had not sought or directed transfer of the case — In any case, counsel for either party cannot claim embarrassment as a ground for transfer of a case — Lawyers accept briefs knowing very well the facts of the case and it is up to them to continue in a case or not — However, following Gurmit Singh case, (1996) 2 SCC 384, if at all there was a question of avoiding embarrassment caused to any of the people concerned, held, the Court ought to have considered the embarrassment that would be caused to witnesses — High Court had erred in not considering the embarrassment that might be caused to female witnesses, like the appellant, more so when their own acts were part of the prosecution evidence — Moreover, the fact that the appellant herself was in the position of an accused in the trial was of no relevance — Hence matter retransferred to original court presided over by lady officer with liberty to make arrangements for viewing of evidence likely to cause the least embarrassment to herself — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 — Constitution of India, Art. 136 — Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 67 — Indecent Representation of Women (Prohibition) Act, 1986, S. 6 — Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act, 1956, Ss. 5 and 6 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 407(1)(c) & (4), 406 and 408 (Paras 11 to 15). Fatima Riswana v. State, (2005) 1 SCC 582: 2005 SCC (Cri) 427: AIR 2005 SC 712: 2005 Cri LJ 900: (2005) 116 DLT 382: (2005) 26 AIC 73 (SC): (2005) 1 KLT 502.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-2005]

[8762] — Ss. 366 and 376/34 and 302/34 — Rape and murder — Testimony of teen aged eye witnesses (12 and 15 years), even after taking necessary precautions and gruelling cross-examination, found to be truthful — Accused-appellant having human nail scratches on his face furnishing circumstantial support against him — Even assuming that the actual acts of rape and murder were performed by his accomplices, held on facts, he cannot escape the criminal liability — Hence his conviction and sentence of RI for 7 years, 10 years and life imprisonment confirmed — But his co-accused entitled to benefit of doubt as evidence against them though created serious suspicion but fell short of establishing the guilt beyond reasonable doubt. Ravikant Bhagoji Dhumal v. State of Maharashtra, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 385: 1991 SCC (Cri) 683.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: L.M. Sharma and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-11-1990]

[8763] — S. 366 r/w S. 354 — Offence of abduction — Essential ingredients — Held, in order to constitute an offence of abduction, a person must be carried off illegally by force or deception — Neither of these two ingredients established in the instant case — Hence, finding that the accused-appellant adopted deceitful means to abduct PW 1 or PW 22, held, could not be sustained — The story of being forcibly taken on a scooter through busy roads with traffic police on duty, unbelievable — Further held, it was doubtful that the appellant asked PW 1 to have sexual intercourse with her in the presence of her eleven-year-old child, and that he allowed her to easily slip out of his hands from the lodge, if that was his intention — Thus, appellant's conviction under S. 366 r/w S. 354 IPC set aside

The prosecution case was that on 5-6-1997 PW 1 and her daughter PW 22 were coming out of a theatre after watching a matinee show. The appellant, who was going on the road on a scooter, having seen them, stopped the scooter and offered to give them a lift on his scooter up to their house. When PW 1 declined to accept his offer, the appellant threatened PW 1 that he would kill her by pointing out a knife at her. It was stated that on account of the fright created by the appellant, PW 1 had to go with him on his scooter along with her daughter PW 22. PW 1 and PW 22 were thereafter taken to a lodge owned by PW 3 located in Buldi area. It was further alleged that on reaching that place the appellant held the hand of PW 1 and started taking her towards a room inside the lodge. The son of PW 3 started closing the door of the room from outside allegedly on the direction of the appellant and on seeing this PW 1 asked the boy not to close the door and at that time her daughter PW 22 was also inside the room. Thereafter, PW 1 forcibly pulled her hand out of the appellant's hold and managed to become free from the clutches of the appellant and went out of the room along with her daughter. PW 1 and her husband went to the police station and lodged a complaint against the appellant. The appellant was tried for offences under Sections 341, 354, 366 and 506 Part II IPC. The trial court held the appellant guilty of the charges levelled against him. In appeal, after analysing the evidence the High Court came to the conclusion that PW 1 came to Buldi area along with the accused on his scooter willingly. But, the High Court held that there was no reason to distrust the further story that the accused took the prosecutrix inside the room of the lodge and made an attempt to close the door. In this regard, the High Court drew an inference that the accused must have brought PW 1 and PW 22 to Buldi area by making some misrepresentation or under some pretext and as PW 1 was knowing the accused, since he was visiting the area of the hutment of PW 1, she must have accompanied the accused on his scooter along with her daughter believing in his representation. Thus, the High Court set aside the conviction and sentence imposed on the appellant under Sections 341 and 506 Part II IPC, but maintained his conviction under Sections 354 and 366 IPC by modifying the sentence to six months for the offence under Section 354 and six years for the offence under Section 366 with a fine of Rs 500.

Setting aside the order passed by the High Court,

Held :

It is not that PW 1 was not knowing that the appellant was not taking them to their house but somewhere else. If PW 1 did not want to go with the appellant, there was hardly any difficulty for her to have declined. If really the appellant intended to have sexual intercourse with her there would have been no chance either for her or her daughter to rescue themselves from the clutches of the appellant while they were being confined in a room of the lodge. Even if PW 1 came to Buldi area along with the appellant on his scooter to go to her home, on noticing that she was being taken elsewhere to a place other than her home, she would have immediately suspected foul play and would have raised an alarm. It cannot be taken that PW 1 is so innocent as to be carried away by the antics of the appellant to simply go with him when she did not intend to go with him. (Para 6)

In order to constitute offence of "abduction" a person must be carried off illegally by force or deception, that is, "to compel a person by force or deceitful means to induce to go from one place to another". In the instant case, neither of these two ingredients are established. (Para 6)

The High Court held that it was by adopting deceitful means that PW 1 was abducted by the appellant. This conclusion of the High Court rests on a pure figment of imagination inasmuch as what misrepresentation or pretext was held out to PW 1 is not spelt out and not established as a fact. The High Court could not have speculated on how PW 1 could have accompanied willingly right up to the lodge and then inferred that she did so only yielding to a pretext or misrepresentation held out to her when in fact no evidence was adduced on this aspect at all. Therefore, the finding that the appellant adopted deceitful means to abduct PW 1 or PW 22 cannot be sustained. (Para 6)

Further, on reaching the lodge, it is difficult to visualise that the appellant had asked PW 1 to have sexual intercourse with her in the presence of her eleven-year-old child, and that he allowed her to easily slip out of his hands from the lodge, if that was his intention. Hence that part of the case also is doubtful. (Para 7). Rajendra v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 7 SCC 721: AIR 2002 SC 3390.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-10-2002]

— Ss. 366/34 See also Ss. 376(2)(g)/34 and 366/34

[8764] — Ss. 366/34 and 376(2)(g) — Kidnapping — Modification of sentence — Considerations — Conviction confirmed under Ss. 366/34 but acquitted under S. 376(2)(g) — Sentenced to imprisonment for four years — Incident of 1983 — Appellant was 17 years of age — Now he is married and having children — Sentence reduced to 2½ years' imprisonment. Vinod Kumar v. State of Delhi, (2010) 13 SCC 774.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-7-2010]

[8765] — Ss. 366/109 — Abduction of a young girl to compel her marriage — Evidence of eyewitnesses establishing that the prosecutrix was made to sit in the car by the accused persons but they were prevented from taking her away by the eyewitnesses — Non-mention of names of some of the accused, who were her collegemates, in FIR not creating any doubt about their presence at the time of commission of the offence — Courts below erred in throwing burden upon the accused to prove that it was a case of elopement — But, in view of clear and credible evidence on record, it cannot affect conviction of the appellants — However, in view of the fact that A-1 and the prosecutrix were close to each other and A-1 wanted to marry her and she having completed 18 years A-1 probably believed that she would go with him and also considering the fact that incident took place in 1991 and that all the accused were college-going boys sentence of two years' RI reduced to one year's RI. Rajesh v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 7 SCC 324: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1623: AIR 1998 SC 2724.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-1998]

— S. 366-A See also Ss. 323, 504, 506, 117, 366-A and 373

See also Ss. 361, 363, 363-A, 366-A and 375

See also Ss. 363, 366-A and 372 r/w S. 511

See also Ss. 364, 366-A, 368 and 120-B

See also Ss. 366, 366-A and 376

See also Ss. 376, 363 and 366-A

See also Ss. 376 Sixthly and 366-A

[8766] — S. 366-A — Ingredients of — Person merely accompanying a woman below 18 years going out to ply her profession of prostitute — Does not commit an offence under

There are three principal ingredients of the offence:

(a) that a minor girl below the age of 18 years is induced by the accused,

(b) that she is induced to go from any place or to do any act, and

(c) that she is so induced with intent that she may be or knowing that it is likely that she will be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse with another person.

A person who merely accompanies a woman going out to ply her profession of a prostitute, even if she has not attained the age of eighteen years does not thereby commit an offence under S. 366-A of the Indian Penal Code. It cannot be said that thereby he induces her to go from any place or to do any act with the intent or knowledge contemplated by the section. Ramesh v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1962 SC 1908: (1963) 3 SCR 396: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 16, 19.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and K.N. Wanchoo and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1962]

[8767] — S. 366-A — Ingredients of offence of — Procuration of minor girl to induce or seduce her to illicit intercourse with another person — Absence of proof of — PW 6, a minor girl, taken from her school to the house of the accused's brother — No evidence at all to establish that she was induced to go to any place with the intent or knowledge that she may be or likely to be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse with another person — On the contrary, evidence showed that PW 6 was well treated at the said house — Medical evidence also not indicating any kind of sexual harassment or any attempt or likelihood in that direction — Thus, ingredients of S. 366-A, held, not proved against the accused — Hence, his conviction thereunder was not sustainable (Para 3). Sajjan Kapar v. State of Bihar, (2005) 9 SCC 426.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2003]

[8768] — S. 366-A — Procuration of minor girl — Age of the girl — Evidence of the girl's father showing that likely age of the girl at the time of the incident was around 19 years — Doctor, finding that her x-ray photograph showed partial epiphyseal fusion of iliac crest opining that she appeared to be 17 years old — Girl stating that she was only about 14 years old — Held, evidence of the girl, when examined in the light of that of her father and of the doctor, was wholly unreliable — Evidence of the doctor was approximate and not conclusive — Prosecution thus failed to establish that the girl was less than 18 years of age on the date of the incident — Hence charge under S. 366-A against the accused-appellant must fail (Para 5). Jinish Lal Sah v. State of Bihar, (2003) 1 SCC 605: 2003 SCC (Cri) 395: AIR 2003 SC 2081.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-2002]

2002 Cri LJ 274 (Pat), reversed

[8769] — S. 366-A — Procuration of minor girl — Ingredients of offence of — Held, it needs to be established that a minor girl under the age of 18 years was induced to come from one place to the other with the intention that such girl may be, forced to have illicit intercourse with another person — In the instant case, evidence on record did not reveal any such intention — That the prosecutrix was subjected and forced to have illicit intercourse came to be stated for the first time only during the trial, which is nothing but embellishment in order to see that the accused persons were subjected to major punishments (Para 39). Sannaia Subba Rao v. State of A.P., (2008) 17 SCC 225.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-2008]

State, Chhattisgarh v. Lekhram, (2006) 5 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 66, considered and relied on

[8770] — S. 366-A or S. 363 — Kidnapping — Conviction under — Need of proper evidence regarding involvement of accused, stressed — Applicability — Prosecutrix giving statement only under S. 164 — Prosecutrix not giving any evidence in court — During alleged crime other accused bringing prosecutrix to appellant's house but nothing on record to show appellant's involvement — Effect — Mere S. 164 CrPC statement of prosecutrix, held, is not enough to convict appellant — S. 164 CrPC statement is not substantive evidence and can be utilised only to corroborate or contradict the witness vis-à-vis statement made in court — CrPC, 1973, S. 164 (Paras 6 to 8)

In appeal, the High Court altered the conviction from one under Section 366-A to Section 363 IPC. One out of the four accused died, one was released on the basis of reduction of sentence to imprisonment already undergone and the appellant and his brother were sentenced to one year's RI. The SLP of appellant's brother was dismissed because he did not surrender to custody.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Statement under Section 164 CrPC is not substantive evidence and can be utilised only to corroborate or contradict the witness vis-à-vis statement made in court. (Para 6)

The conviction of the appellant under Section 363 IPC is set aside because the only material that has been used against the appellant is the statement under Section 164 CrPC. The prosecutrix was not produced as a witness as she had since been married in Nepal and her husband had refused to let her return to India for the evidence. In this light her statement under Section 164 cannot be used against the appellant. (Paras 7 and 6)

Even otherwise the appellant could not be implicated in the offence under Section 363 or 366-A IPC dehors other evidence to show his involvement in the events preceding the kidnapping when as per the Section 164 CrPC statement of the prosecutrix she was brought to appellant's house by other kidnappers. (Para 7). Baij Nath Sah v. State of Bihar, (2010) 6 SCC 736.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2010]

Ram Kishan Singh v. Harmit Kaur, (1972) 3 SCC 280: 1972 SCC (Cri) 493, relied on

[8771] — Ss. 366-A and 366 — Seduction to illicit intercourse — Surrender of body by a prostitute is not 'seduction' — Expression 'seduce' — Meaning of

Seduction to illicit intercourse contemplated by the section does not mean merely straying from the path of virtue by a female for the first time. The verb 'seduce' is used in two senses. It is used in its ordinary and narrow sense as inducing a woman to stray from the path of virtue for the first time; it is also used in the wider sense of inducing a woman to submit to illicit intercourse at any time or on any occasion. It is in the latter sense that the expression has been used in Ss. 366 and 366-A of the Penal Code which sections partially overlap.

A case in which a girl who had strayed from the path of virtue when she was in the custody of her guardian and had with a view to carry on her affair accompanied her seducer or another person may certainly fall within the terms of S. 366 or S. 366-A whichever applies. But where a woman follows the profession of a prostitute, that is, she is accustomed to offer herself promiscuously for money to 'customers', and in following that profession she is encouraged or assisted by someone, no offence under S. 366-A is committed by such person for it cannot be said that the person who assists a girl accustomed to indulge in promiscuous intercourse for money in carrying on her profession acts with intent or knowledge that she will be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse.

Seduction implies surrender of her body by a woman who is otherwise reluctant or unwilling to submit herself to illicit intercourse in consequence of persuasion, flattery, blandishment or importunity, whether such surrender is for the first time or is preceded by similar surrender on earlier occasions. But where a woman offers herself for intercourse for money — not casually but in the course of her profession as a prostitute — there are no scruples nor reluctance to be overcome, and surrender by her is not seduction within the Code. It would then be impossible to hold that a person who instigates another to assist a woman following the profession of a prostitute abets him to do an act with intent that she may or with knowledge that she will be seduced to illicit intercourse. Ramesh v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1962 SC 1908: (1963) 3 SCR 396: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 16, 19.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and K.N. Wanchoo and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1962]

Prafullakumar Basu v. Emperor, ILR 57 Cal 1074: 31 Cri LJ 903: AIR 1930 Cal 209; Emperor v. Laxman Bala, ILR 59 Bom 652: 36 Cri LJ 1509: AIR 1935 Bom 189; Krishna Maharana v. Emperor, ILR 9 Pat 647: 31 Cri LJ 306: AIR 1929 Pat 651; In re Khalandar Saheb, AIR 1955 Andh 59: 1955 Cri LJ 581; Suppiah v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Mad 980: 32 Cri LJ 357; Pessumal v. Emperor, 27 Cri LJ 1292: AIR 1927 Sind 97; Emperor v. Nga Ni Ta, 10 Bur LR 199 and Kartara v. State, ILR 1957 Punj 2003: AIR 1958 Punj 323, approved

Emperor v. Baijnath, ILR 54 756: 33 Cri LJ 669: AIR 1932 All 409; Shaeb Ali v. Emperor, ILR 60 Cal 1457: 35 Cri LJ 307: AIR 1933 Cal 718; Aswini Kumar Roy v. State, AIR 1955 Cal 100: 1955 Cri LJ 347 and Nura v. Emperor, AIR 1934 Lah 227: 35 Cri LJ 1386, overruled

[8772] — Ss. 366-A, 366-B, 372 and 373 — Public interest litigation against forced prostitution of girls, Devdasis and Jogins and for their rehabilitation — In spite of stringent and rehabilitative provisions under various Acts, desired result yet to be achieved — Both Central and State Governments having obligation to safeguard interest and welfare of children and girls, must evaluate various measures and implement them in the right direction — Severe and speedy legal action against erring persons such as pimps, brokers and brothel keepers suggested — Direction for conducting CBI inquiry throughout the country not practicable — However certain directions issued inter alia for setting up a separate Zonal Advisory Committee, for taking steps for providing rehabilitative homes, for delving into Devdasi system and Jogin tradition etc. — Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act, 1956 — Juvenile Justice Act, 1986, Ss. 13 and 15 — Constitution of India, Arts. 23(1), 35(a)(ii), 39(e) & (f) and 32. Vishal Jeet v. Union of India, (1990) 3 SCC 318: 1990 SCC (Cri) 482: AIR 1990 SC 1412: 1990 Cri LJ 1469.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-2-1990]

[8773] — Ss. 366-A, 372, 373 r/w S. 34 — Procurement and selling of a minor for illegal and immoral purposes — Sentence — Proportionality — Sentence of 7 years' imprisonment and fine of Rs 50,000 with default stipulation — Sustainability — Held, no interference with quantum of sentence called for — Such cases call for a deterrent sentence to be imposed on accused — Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act, 1956, S. 5 (Paras 8 to 15). Manjappa v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 9 SCC 334.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Anil R. Dave, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2010]

[8774] — Ss. 366-A, 372, 376, 344 — Quashing of FIR — Allegation against a large number of accused persons of sexual exploitation under threat, coercion, force and allurement — Case registered under Ss. 366-A, 372, 376, 344 IPC and Immoral Traffic Act — High Court not justified in embarking upon an enquiry by sifting evidence and coming to conclusion with regard to the age of the prosecutrix and also recording a finding that no offence of rape had been committed — Uncharitable comments made by the High Court against the prosecutrix deprecated — High Court exceeded its jurisdiction to record a finding that the prosecutrix was a consenting party — Order of the High Court set aside and the investigating agency directed to proceed with the investigation and conclude the same in accordance with law — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 — Constitution of India, Arts. 226, 227 and 136. State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304: AIR 1999 SC 1044: 1999 Cri LJ 1623.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-1999]

State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415, relied on [8775] — Ss. 366-A and 372 r/w S. 511 — Applicability — Matters to be established for conviction under — Acquittal justified — No reliable or cogent evidence led by prosecution to prove that prosecutrix was kidnapped by the accused persons with the intention of making her have sexual intercourse with them or with any other person, or with the intention of selling her for prostitution — Hence, conviction under Ss. 366-A and 372 r/w S. 511, held, unsustainable (Para 44). Sannaia Subba Rao v. State of A.P., (2008) 17 SCC 225.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-2008]

State of Chhattisgarh v. Lekhram, (2006) 5 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 66, considered and relied on

[8776] — Ss. 366-A and 376(2) — Abduction and rape of minor — Appreciation of evidence — Failure to appreciate evidence properly — Effect of, on trial and conviction — In the present case, prosecutrix in her examination-in-chief not recognising the appellant as she had never seen him — Held, trial court and High Court ignored the statement of the victim — Hence, conviction of appellant set aside

Out of the five accused persons tried for alleged commission of rape and abduction in terms of Sections 366-A and 376(2) IPC two absconded and the rest three including the appellant were convicted by the trial court. The trial court imposed a sentence of 10 years for each of the aforesaid offences. The High Court had dismissed the appeal filed by the appellant.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Both the trial court and the High Court ignored the statement of the victim who in court categorically stated that she did not recognise him as she had never seen him. That being so, the conviction so far as the present appellant is concerned cannot be maintained. (Para 6). Jakir v. State of M.P., (2009) 6 SCC 646: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 290: AIR 2009 SC 2437.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

— S. 366-B See also Ss. 366-A, 366-B, 372 and 373

[8777] — S. 367 — Only picking up of the victim by accused proved — But accused's connection with the subsequent assault on the victim not established — Held, conviction under S. 367 not proper. Vinod Chaturvedi v. State of M.P., (1984) 2 SCC 350: 1984 SCC (Cri) 250: AIR 1984 SC 911: 1984 Cri LJ 814.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-1984]

[8778] — Ss. 367, 147 and 325 r/w S. 149 — Abduction and causing grievous hurt — Victim forcibly abducted in a car and taken out of his village by some unidentified persons — Later the victim found lying on the road completely immobilised by the grievous injuries sustained by him — On facts, abduction and place of occurrence established — None except victim identifying the assailants — Victim giving name and description of assailants on the basis of conversation heard by him while being abducted in car — No motive of enmity against the assailants alleged — Held, in circumstances of the case, false implication of appellants ruled out — Wrong assessment of the age of one of the assailants does not falsify the statement of the injured — Whether statement made by the injured to police in hospital should be accepted as FIR or statement under S. 162 CrPC, on facts, not material. Darshan Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 SCC (Cri) 281: 1994 Cri LJ 226.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-1993]

— S. 367 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 302 and S. 367 r/w S. 34

— S. 368 See also Ss. 302, 364, 365, 368, 193, 197, 201, 120-B, 420 and 342

See also Ss. 363 to 366

See also Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368

[8779] — S. 368 — Ingredients of the offence

To constitute an offence under S. 368, it is necessary that the prosecution must establish the following ingredients:

(1) The person in question has been kidnapped.

(2) The accused knew that the said person had been kidnapped.

(3) The accused having such knowledge, wrongfully conceals or confines the person concerned.

So far as the second ingredient is concerned, it is an inference to be drawn by the courts from the various circumstances, e.g. age of the child. Similarly, whether there has been wrongful concealment or confinement under S. 368, is a matter to be considered from the facts and circumstances of a particular case. Saroj Kumari v. State of U.P., (1973) 3 SCC 669: 1973 SCC (Cri) 475: AIR 1973 SC 201: 1973 MLJ (Cri) 272: 1973 Cri LJ 267.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A. Alagiriswami, I.D. Dua and C.A. Vaidialingam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-1972]

[8780] — S. 368 — Kidnapping of new-born child — Appellant found in possession of newly born child — No explanation given regarding his presence — Pretence to conceal and claim the child to be hers when she had not delivered in the recent past — Offence established. Saroj Kumari v. State of U.P., (1973) 3 SCC 669: 1973 SCC (Cri) 475: AIR 1973 SC 201: 1973 MLJ (Cri) 272: 1973 Cri LJ 267.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A. Alagiriswami, I.D. Dua and C.A. Vaidialingam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-1972]

[8781] — S. 368 r/w S. 109 — Accused-appellant's complicity in selling co-accused's wife to a stranger who committing rape on her and murdering her — Prosecution discharging its burden of proof of the offence on the basis of evidence including dying declarations recorded by police officers and Tehsildar Magistrate — Conviction and sentence upheld. Pyare Lal v. State of U.P., (1987) 1 SCC 525: 1987 SCC (Cri) 209: AIR 1987 SC 852: 1987 Cri LJ 769.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-1987]

— S. 369 See also Ss. 302, 364, 369, 376(2)(f), 392 and 449

— S. 370 See also Ss. 88, 92, 370 and 304-A

— S. 372 See also Ss. 366-A, 366-B, 372 and 373

See also Ss. 366-A, 372 and 373 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 366-A, 372, 376 and 344

See also Ss. 377, 373, 372, 323 r/w Ss. 109 and 120-B

— S. 372 r/w S. 511 See also Ss. 363, 366-A and 372 r/w S. 511

See also Ss. 366-A and 372 r/w S. 511

— S. 373 See also Ss. 323, 504, 506, 117, 366-A and 373

See also Ss. 366-A, 366-B, 372 and 373

See also Ss. 366-A, 372, 373 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 377, 373, 372, 323 r/w Ss. 109 and 120-B

[8782] — Ss. 374 and 53 — Applicability — "Unlawfully compels any person to labour against the will" — Exaction of hard work by jail authorities from convicted persons pursuant to punishment of RI imposed by court of competent jurisdiction in accordance with law — Held, S. 374 not attracted

Per Thomas, J.

Section 374 IPC makes imposition of work on an unwilling person an offence. But the jail officer who requires a prisoner sentenced to rigorous imprisonment to do hard labour would be doing so as enjoined by law and mandated by the court and the jail authorities cannot disobey the directions of the court which passed the sentence. No prisoner sentenced to rigorous imprisonment can conceivably complain that the jail authorities committed the offence under Section 374 IPC by compelling him to do work during the term of his imprisonment.

Per Wadhwa, J.

Section 374 IPC prescribes that whoever unlawfully compels any person to labour against the will of that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine or with both. It cannot be said that prison authorities are unlawfully "compelling the prisoners to do the work". (Para 89). State of Gujarat v. Hon'ble High Court of Gujarat, (1998) 7 SCC 392: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1640: AIR 1998 SC 3164.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J.[1] and K.T. Thomas[2] and D.P. Wadhwa[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-1998]

People's Union for Democratic Rights v. Union of India, (1982) 3 SCC 235: 1982 SCC (L&S) 275, followed

SECTIONS 375-376-D — RAPE

Bird's eye view

A. RAPE — BASIC PRINCIPLES 421
   1. Generally — Meaning and Scope 421
   2. Abuse or misuse of rape laws 429
   3. Ingredients of rape 429
   4. Prior sexual history/conduct — Relevance, if any 457
   5. Prosecution of woman for rape 459

B. PARTICULAR KINDS OF RAPE AND WITH OTHER OFFENCES 461

C. TRIAL, SENTENCING AND OTHER ISSUES 568
   1. Treatment of prosecutrix 569
   2. Acquittal justified 571
   3. Appeal 575
   4. Appreciation of Evidence 577
   5. Bail/Suspension of sentence 586
   6. Charge 588
   7. Circumstantial Evidence 590
   8. Conduct of accused, prosecutrix, witnesses, etc. 602
   9. Confession 603
   10. Conviction justified 603
   11. Conviction on sole testimony of prosecutrix 607
   12. Defence 607
   13. Dying declaration 608
   14. Examination 608
   15. FIR 610
   16. Identification 621
   17. Investigation 625
   18. Judge/Presiding Judge/Court — Role of in rape cases 628
   19. Juvenile/Child accused 630
   20. Medical Jurisprudence/Evidence 631
   21. Practice and Procedure 659
   22. Proof 659
   23. Revision 695
   24. Sentence 696
   25. Witnesses 740

SECTIONS 375-376-D — RAPE

Synopsis

A. Rape — Basic Principles 421

1. Generally — Meaning and Scope 421
2. Abuse or misuse of rape laws 429
3. Ingredients of rape 429
    (a) Broadly 430
    (b) "Against her will" and "without her consent" 430
    (c) Presumption against consent under S. 114-A, Evidence Act 448
    (d) Penetration/Intercourse 448
    (e) Ss. 376-A to 376-D 454
    (f) Habituated to Sex 455
4. Prior sexual history/conduct — Relevance, if any 457
5. Prosecution of woman for rape 459

B. PARTICULAR KINDS OF RAPE AND WITH OTHER OFFENCES 461

1. Rape and murder/death 461
2. Rape by person in authority 477
3. Rape of servant 485
4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy 485
5. Rape of pregnant woman 506
6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape 506
7. Abduction/Kidnapping/Trafficking and rape 543
8. Incest and rape 551
9. Attempt to rape 555
10. Rape or outraging modesty/indecent assault/other lesser sexual offences 559
11. Rape of mentally deficient woman 565
12. Other offences and rape 565

C. TRIAL, SENTENCING AND OTHER ISSUES 568

1. Treatment of prosecutrix 569
2. Acquittal justified 571
3. Appeal 575
4. Appreciation of Evidence 577
    (a) Generally 578
    (b) Appellate court's approach 579
    (c) Contradictions, inconsistencies, exaggerations or embellishments 580
    (d) Credibility of prosecutrix/witness 584
    (e) Medical evidence vis-à-vis evidence of prosecutrix 585
    (f) Reappreciation/Reappraisal of evidence 586
5. Bail/Suspension of sentence 586
6. Charge 588
7. Circumstantial Evidence 590
    (a) Generally 590
    (b) Clues and Tell-Tale Signs/Forensics 591
    (c) Acquittal justified 593
    (d) Conviction justified 594
    (e) Injuries on accused 598
    (f) Last seen together 599
    (g) Motive 601
    (h) Recovery of crime articles/incriminating articles/other articles 601
    (i) Recovery of dead body/corpus delicti 602
8. Conduct of accused, prosecutrix, witnesses, etc. 602
9. Confession 603
10. Conviction justified 603
11. Conviction on sole testimony of prosecutrix 607
12. Defence 607
13. Dying declaration 608
14. Examination 608
15. FIR 610
    (a) Generally 610
    (b) Delay in lodging/filing FIR 610
16. Identification 621
17. Investigation 625
    (a) Generally 625
    (b) Defective or illegal or delayed investigation 626
    (c) Tests which can be conducted on accused or prosecutrix 627
18. Judge/Presiding Judge/Court — Role of in rape cases 628

Synopsis (contd.)

19. Juvenile/Child accused 630
20. Medical Jurisprudence/Evidence 631
    - (a) Age of prosecutrix or accused 631
    - (b) DNA test 637
    - (c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof 638
    - (d) Medical/Expert opinion 651
    - (e) Medical examination of prosecutrix 651
    - (f) Medical examination of accused 651
    - (g) Medico-legal report/Doctor 651
    - (h) Time of rape 652
    - (i) Medical evidence of sex/rape 653
21. Practice and Procedure 659
22. Proof 659
    - (a) Generally 659
    - (b) Corroboration 660
    - (c) Laboratory Test 661
    - (d) Recovery of crime/incriminating material/other articles 661
    - (e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act 662
23. Revision 695
24. Sentence 696
    - (a) Generally 696
    - (b) Premature release/Probation 702
    - (c) Compensation to rehabilitation of victim/Suit for damages 702
    - (d) Death Sentence 706
      - (i) Generally 706
      - (ii) Death upheld 706
      - (iii) Commutation to life when warranted 707
    - (e) Fine and Imprisonment in default 710
    - (f) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos 711
      - (i) Generally 711
      - (ii) Adequate and Special reasons 711
        - (1) Generally 711
        - (2) Reasons that may be considered special and adequate 718
      - (iii) Instances 727
    - (g) Principles for sentencing 733
      - (i) Generally 734
      - (ii) Age/Health state of accused/Juvenile 734
      - (iii) Accused marrying prosecutrix 735
      - (iv) Delay/Pendency in proceedings/execution of sentence 735
      - (v) Proportionality 737
      - (vi) Background/station/education of accused 737
      - (vii) Other 738
      - (viii) Sentence reduced 739
      - (ix) Sentence not reduced/enhanced 740
25. Witnesses 740

—S. 375 See also Ss. 90 and 375
See also Ss. 366, 375 and 376
See also Ss. 375 and 376
See also Ss. 376, 375, 148, 452, 149, 342, 323, 366 and 506
See also Ss. 376, 375, 148, 452, 149, 342, 323 and 506
See also Ss. 376/149, 375, 148, 452, 342, 323, 366 and 506

— S. 375(6) See also Ss. 96, 100 Thirdly [96, 97 r/w 100], 375(6) and 325

—S. 376 See also Ss. 96, 100, 302 and 376
See also Ss. 228-A and 376
See also under Ss. 299 to 304
See also Ss. 302, 376, 366 and 201
See also Ss. 354 and 376
See also Ss. 361, 375 and 376
See also Ss. 363, 366, 368 and 376
See also Ss. 363, 366 and 376
See also Ss. 363, 366, 376, 397 and 302
See also Ss. 366, 366-A and 376
See also Ss. 366, 368 and 376
See also Ss. 366, 375 and 376
See also Ss. 366 and 376
See also Ss. 366-A, 372, 376 and 344
See also Ss. 397 r/w Ss. 395 and 396, S. 307 r/w S. 34 and S. 376
See also Ss. 493 and 376

—S. 376 r/w S. 34 See also Ss. 302 and 376 r/w S. 34

— S. 376 r/w S. 511 See also Ss. 377, 363, 376 r/w S. 511

— Ss. 376/34 See also Ss. 366 and 376/34 and 302/34
See also Ss. 375 Thirdly, 376/34 and 342/34

—Ss. 376/511 See also Ss. 302 and 354 and Ss. 376/511
See also Ss. 302 and 376/511
See also Ss. 354 and 376/511
See also Ss. 363, 366 and 376/511

—S. 376(2) See also Ss. 302 and 376(2)
See also Ss. 366-A and 376(2)
See also Ss. 376-B, 376-C, 376-D and 376(2)

—S. 376(2)(a) See also Ss. 107 and 376(2)(a)

— S. 376(2)(b) See also Ss. 376-B and 376(2)(b)

— S. 376(2)(f) See also Ss. 302, 364, 369, 376(2)(f), 392 and 449

See also Ss. 302 and 376(2)(f)

See also Ss. 302, 376(2)(f), 377, 363 and 201

See also Ss. 375 and 376(2)(f) or S. 302 or S. 304 Pt. II

See also Ss. 376 and 376(2)(f)

See also Ss. 376(2) and proviso 376(2)(f)

— S. 376(2)(g) See also Ss. 366/34 and 376(2)(g)

— S. 376-A See also Ss. 375, 376 and 376-A to 376-D

See also Ss. 376 to 376-D

— S. 376-B See also Ss. 375, 376 and 376-A to 376-D

See also Ss. 375 Secondly, 376, 376-B, 376-C, 376-D

See also Ss. 376 to 376-D

— S. 376-C See also Ss. 375, 376 and 376-A to 376-D

See also Ss. 375 Secondly, 376, 376-B, 376-C, 376-D

See also Ss. 376 to 376-D

See also Ss. 376-B, 376-C, 376-D and 376(2)

— S. 376-D See also Ss. 375, 376 and 376-A to 376-D

See also Ss. 375 to 376-D

See also Ss. 375 Secondly, 376, 376-B, 376-C and 376-D

See also Ss. 376-B, 376-C, 376-D and 376(2)

A. RAPE — BASIC PRINCIPLES

Synopsis

1. Generally — Meaning and Scope 421
2. Abuse or misuse of rape laws 429
3. Ingredients of rape 429
   (a) Broadly 430
   (b) "Against her will" and "without her consent" 430
   (c) Presumption against consent under S. 114-A, Evidence Act 448
   (d) Penetration/Intercourse 448
   (e) Ss. 376-A to 376-D 454
   (f) Habituated to Sex 455
4. Prior sexual history/conduct — Relevance, if any457 457
5. Prosecution of woman for rape 459

1. Generally — Meaning and Scope

See also 'A.3.(a) Ingredients of rape — Broadly', below

[8783] — S. 375 — Rape — Meaning and definition of — Petitioner, a social organisation, filing PIL expressing deep concern against non-traditional modes of sexual abuse and violations against children and women which though equally traumatic are treated as lesser offences under Ss. 354 and 377 IPC — Hence the plea for enlarging the scope and meaning of "sexual intercourse" to cover such non-traditional sexual offences — Held, meaning is to be confined in narrow terms to include penile/vaginal penetration only and cannot be enlarged to include penile/anal, penile/oral, finger/vaginal, finger/anal or object/vaginal penetration — Intention of the legislature to be gathered from the language used — Attention to be paid to what is being said and what is not being said — Giving a wider meaning to Section 375 IPC will lead to serious confusion in the minds of prosecuting agencies and courts, which instead of achieving the object of expeditiously bringing a criminal to book may unnecessarily prolong the legal proceedings and would have an adverse impact on society as a whole, and therefore, held, it will not be in the larger interest of the State or the people to alter the definition of "rape" by a process of judicial interpretation — Parliament requested to address the issue

The petitioner under Article 32, sought inter alia, in view of increase of sexual violence against women and especially children, an enlarged definition of rape under Section 375 IPC to include all forms of penetration such as penile/vaginal penetration, penile/oral penetration, penile/anal penetration, finger/vaginal and finger/anal penetration and object/vaginal penetration.

Dismissing the petition on this ground,

Held :

The dictionary meaning of the words "sexual intercourse" is heterosexual intercourse involving penetration of the vagina by the penis. If the hymen is ruptured by inserting a finger, it would not amount to rape. (Paras 16 and 18)

It is well-settled principle that the intention of the legislature is primarily to be gathered from the language used, which means that attention should be paid to what has been said as also to what has not been said. As a consequence a construction which requires for its support addition or substitution of words or which results in rejection of words as meaningless has to be avoided. It is contrary to all rules of construction to read words into an Act unless it is absolutely necessary to do so. Similarly it is wrong and dangerous to proceed by substituting some other words for words of the statute. It is equally well settled that a statute enacting an offence or imposing a penalty is to be strictly construed. The fact that an enactment is a penal provision is in itself a reason for hesitating before ascribing to phrases used in it a meaning broader than that they would ordinarily bear. (Para 19)

Moreover, the entire legal fraternity of India, lawyers or judges, have the definition as contained in Section 375 IPC ingrained in their mind and the cases are decided on the said basis. The first and foremost requirement in criminal law is that it should be absolutely certain and clear. An exercise to alter the definition of rape, as contained in Section 375 IPC, by a process of judicial interpretation, and that too when there is no ambiguity in the provisions of the enactment, is bound to result in a good deal of chaos and confusion, cause delays and will not be in the interest of the society at large. (Paras 22 and 26)

Nevertheless, the suggestions made by the petitioners will advance the cause of justice and are in the larger interest of society. The cases of child abuse and rape are increasing at an alarming speed and appropriate legislation in this regard is, therefore, urgently required. It is hoped that Parliament will give serious attention to the points highlighted by the petitioner and make appropriate legislation with all the promptness which it deserves. (Para 35). Sakshi v. Union of India, (2004) 5 SCC 518: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1645: AIR 2004 SC 3566: (2004) 98 Cut LT 491: (2004) 112 DLT 457.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu, C.J. and G.P. Mathur, J. [Date of decision: 26-5-2004]

[8784] — S. 375 — "Rape" — Meaning of, explained — Legislative intent to curb the offence of rape with an iron hand, taken note of

The offence of rape in its simplest term is "the ravishment of a woman, without her consent, by force, fear or fraud", or as "the carnal knowledge of a woman by force against her will". "Rape" or "raptus" is when a man hath carnal knowledge of a woman by force and against her will; or as expressed more fully, "rape is the carnal knowledge of any woman, above the age of particular years, against her will; or of a woman child, under that age, with or against her will". The essential words in an indictment for rape are rapuit and carnaliter cognovit; but carnaliter cognovit, nor any other circumlocution without the word rapuit, are not sufficient in a legal sense to express rape. In the crime of rape, "carnal knowledge" means the penetration to any the slightest degree of the organ alleged to have been carnally known by the male organ of generation. It is violation with violence of the private person of a woman — an outrage by all means. By the very nature of the offence it is an obnoxious act of the highest order. (Para 10)

"Rape" is defined in Section 375. Sections 375 and 376 have been substantially changed by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1983, and several new sections were introduced by the new Act i.e. Sections 376-A, 376-B, 376-C and 376-D. The fact that sweeping changes were introduced reflects the legislative intent to curb with an iron hand, the offence of rape which affects the dignity of a woman. When a woman is ravished, what is inflicted is not merely physical injury but a deep sense of some deathless shame. (Paras 10 and 11). Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551: AIR 2003 SC 4684.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2003]

Co. Litt. 123-B; 1 Hon. 6, 1a, 9 Edw. 4, 26 a (Hale PC 628), relied on

Stephen's Criminal Law, 9th Edn., p. 262; Encyclopaedia of Crime and Justice, Vol. 4, p. 1356; Halsbury's Statutes of England and Wales, 4th Edn., Vol. 12, referred to [8785] — Ss. 375 and 376 — In appeal against conviction, High Court directing acquittal of respondent-accused observing that "law is well settled that it is not possible for a single man to commit sexual intercourse with a healthy adult female in full possession of her senses against her will" — Unsustainability — Held, there is not even a single decision which says so — Further, basis of presumptuous conclusion that PW 1 (victim) was an able-bodied tribal lady capable of taking care of herself not fathomable — Moreover, two contradictory irreconcilable stands of defence that no such incident had taken place and the other that the act was consensual should not have found favour with the High Court — Besides, observation of High Court that except PWs 1 and 2, there were no other eyewitnesses, and therefore, the prosecution version was not acceptable was not only contrary to law laid down by Supreme Court but also showed scant regard to law declared by Supreme Court — Held, in such circumstances ordinarily order of trial court would be restored but in the instant case matter remitted to High Court to hear the appeal afresh as the respondent-accused had not appeared before the Court in spite of notice — High Court while disposing of the matter to keep correct legal principles in view — Grave concern expressed and practice of naming rape victim in judgment strongly deprecated, which indicated judicial indiscipline (Paras 3, 8 and 10). State of Orissa v. Sukru Gouda, (2009) 2 SCC 118: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 676: AIR 2009 SC 1019: (2009) 107 Cut LT 1: 2009 Cri LJ 831: (2009) 75 AIC 262 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2008]

[8786] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Effect of on psyche, privacy and personality of victim, discussed — Effect of on victim, in context of Indian culture, considered — Duty of court while appreciating evidence of victim, outlined

Rapist not only violates the victim's privacy and personal integrity, but inevitably causes serious psychological as well as physical harm in the process. Rape is not merely assault-it is often destructive of the whole personality of the victim. The murderer destroys the physical body of his victim. Rapist degrades the very soul of the helpless female. (Para 1)

In the context of Indian culture, a woman-victim of sexual aggression-would rather suffer silently than to falsely implicate somebody. Any statement of rape is an extremely humiliating experience for a woman and until she is a victim of sex crime, she would not blame anyone but the real culprit. While appreciating the evidence of the prosecutrix, the courts must always keep in mind that no self-respecting woman would put her honour at stake by falsely alleging commission of rape on her and therefore, ordinarily a look for corroboration of her testimony is unnecessary and uncalled for. But for high improbability in the prosecution case, the conviction in the case of sex crime may be based on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix. It has been rightly said that corroborative evidence is not an imperative component of judicial credence in every case of rape nor the absence of injuries on the private parts of the victim can be construed as evidence of consent. (Para 19). Rajinder v. State of H.P., (2009) 16 SCC 69: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 156: AIR 2009 SC 3022: 2009 Cri LJ 4133: (2009) 80 AIC 165 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Radhu v. State of M.P., (2007) 12 SCC 57: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 207; State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898, followed

[8787] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Right to privacy — Basis, scope and extent — Privacy as an aspect of personal liberty — Mental privacy and physical privacy — Held, while physical privacy may be curtailed to some extent in reasonable exercise of police powers under CrPC, there is no corresponding provision for intruding upon a person's mental privacy — A female who alleges to be victim of sexual offence cannot be subjected to polygraph test to ascertain whether she is making truthful allegation — Extracting testimonial responses by means of narcoanalysis, polygraph and BEAP tests, held, intrude upon a person's mental privacy and are therefore impermissible in law — Protection of mental privacy is available to accused as well as to victim of an offence — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 24 to 27 and 114-A — CrPC, 1973, S. 164-A — Laboratory Procedure Manual for Polygraph Examination, Para 3.4(v) — European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, 1950, Art. 8 — Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984 (UK), S. 64(1-A)

Medical test for ascertaining mental condition of a person is most likely to be in the nature of a psychiatric evaluation which usually includes testimonial responses. Subjecting a person to the impugned techniques (narco-analysis, lie-detector and BEAP tests) in an involuntary manner violates prescribed boundaries of privacy. Forcible interference with a person's mental processes is not provided for under any statute and it most certainly comes into conflict with right against self-incrimination. However, this determination does not account for circumstances where a person could be subjected to any of the impugned tests but not exposed to criminal charges and the possibility of conviction. In such cases, he/she could still face adverse consequences such as custodial abuse, surveillance, undue harassment and social stigma among others. In order to address such circumstances, it is important to examine some other dimensions of Article 21. (Paras 204 and 226)

There is possibility that victims of offences could be forcibly subjected to any of these techniques during the course of investigation. There is provision in Laboratory Procedure Manual for polygraph tests which contemplates the same for ascertaining the testimony of victims of sexual offences. Irrespective of the need to expedite investigations in such cases, no person who is a victim of an offence can be compelled to undergo any of the tests in question. Such a forcible administration would be an unjustified intrusion into mental privacy and could lead to further stigma for the victim. (Para 254). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2010]

M.P. Sharma v. Satish Chandra, AIR 1954 SC 300: 1954 Cri LJ 865: 1954 SCR 1077; Kharak Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 1295: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 329; Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, (1978) 1 SCC 248; Gobind v. State of M.P., (1975) 2 SCC 148: 1975 SCC (Cri) 468; R. Rajagopal v. State of T.N., (1994) 6 SCC 632; People's Union for Civil Liberties v. Union of India, (1997) 1 SCC 301; 'X' v. Hospital 'Z', (2003) 1 SCC 500; Attorney General's Reference (No. 3 of 1999), (2001) 2 AC 91: (2001) 2 WLR 56: (2001) 1 All ER 577 (HL), relied on

M. Vijaya v. Singareni Collieries Co. Ltd., AIR 2001 AP 502; R.(S) v. Chief Constable of the South Yorkshire Police, (2002) 1 WLR 3223: (2003) 1 All ER 148 (CA), approved

'X' v. Hospital 'Z', (1998) 8 SCC 296, held, partly overruled

94 Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology 243-293 (2004), relied on

[8788] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Sexual abuse of children — PIL filed contending that interpretation of these and other sections by the courts not in tune with current state of affairs in society — At Supreme Court's suggestion a note about the precise issues involved submitted for consideration by Law Commission of India — Held, issues are important and in view of growing menace of sexual abuse of children Law Commission requested to examine within 3 months: (a) issues submitted by petitioners, and (b) the feasibility of making recommendations for amendment of Penal Code or of dealing with the problem in any other manner — Constitution of India, Art. 32 (Para 6). Sakshi v. Union of India, (1999) 6 SCC 591: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1159.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and Sujata V. Manohar and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-8-1999]

[8789] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Sexual abuse of children — PIL regarding interpretation of these and other provisions by courts — Issues requiring consideration, formulation of — Observing that issues involved were important, Supreme Court issuing directions to counsel representing parties to formulate issues which may require consideration and determination by Supreme Court (Para 3). Sakshi v. Union of India, (2001) 10 SCC 732.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and B.N. Kirpal and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-2000]

[Ed.: See also (1999) 6 SCC 591]

[8790] — Ss. 375, 376 and 376-A to 376-D — Legislative intent in changes introduced in Ss. 375 and 376 and introduction of Ss. 376-A to 376-D by Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1983, restated (Para 21). Mohan Anna Chavan v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 7 SCC 561: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 193.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-5-2008]

State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559, relied on [8791] — Ss. 375, 376, 376-A, 376-B, 376-C and 376-D — "Rape" — Consequences and egregiousness of — Held, by the very nature of the offence it is an obnoxious act of the highest order — The physical scar may heal up, but the mental scar will always remain — When a woman is ravished, what is inflicted is not merely physical injury but a deep sense of deathless shame — Constitution of India, Art. 21 (Paras 7 and 8). State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559: AIR 2005 SC 682: 2005 Cri LJ 913.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2005]

[8792] — Ss. 375, 376 and 376-A to 376-D — Rape — Meaning, consequences and egregiousness of, restated (Para 21). Mohan Anna Chavan v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 7 SCC 561: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 193.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-5-2008]

State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559, relied on

Stephen's Criminal Law, 9th Edn., p. 262; Encyclop'dia of Crime and Justice, Vol. 4, p. 1356; Halsbury's Statutes of England and Wales, 4th Edn., Vol. 12, cited [8793] — Ss. 375, 376, 376-A, 376-B, 376-C and 376-D — "Rape" — Meaning of — Held, rape is the carnal knowledge of any woman, above the age of particular year, against her will; or of a woman child, under that age, with or against her will — In the crime of rape "carnal knowledge" means the penetration to any the slightest degree — Emission is unnecessary (Para 7). State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559: AIR 2005 SC 682: 2005 Cri LJ 913.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2005]

[8794] — Ss. 375 to 376-D — "Rape" — Meaning of, explained — Legislative intent to curb the said offence with an iron hand, taken note of

"Rape" is defined in Section 375 IPC. The offence of rape in its simplest term is "the ravishment of a woman, without her consent, by force, fear or fraud", or as "the carnal knowledge of a woman by force against her will". "Rape or raptus" is when a man hath carnal knowledge of a woman by force and against her will; or, as expressed more fully, "rape is the carnal knowledge of any woman, above the age of particular years, against her will; or of a woman child, under that age, with or against her will". The essential words in an indictment for rape are rapuit and carnaliter cognovit; but carnaliter cognovit, nor any other circumlocution without the word rapuit, are not sufficient in a legal sense to express rape. In the crime of rape, "carnal knowledge" means the penetration to any the slightest degree of the organ alleged to have been carnally known by the male organ of generation. It is violation, with violence, of the private person of a woman — an outrage by all means. By the very nature of the offence it is an obnoxious act of a high order. (Para 6)

Sections 375 and 376 IPC have been substantially changed by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1983, and several new sections were introduced by the Amending Act i.e. 376-A, 376-B, 376-C and 376-D. The fast sweeping changes introduced reflect the legislative intent to curb with an iron hand, the offence of rape which affects the dignity of a woman. (Para 6). Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266: AIR 2004 SC 1497: 2004 Cri LJ 1399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2004]

[Ed.: See also Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551, in this regard.]

[8795] — Ss. 375 to 376-D — Rape — Meaning of, explained — Legislative intent to curb the said offence with an iron hand, taken note of (Para 7). State of M.P. v. Babbu Barkare, (2005) 5 SCC 413: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1335: AIR 2005 SC 2846: 2005 Cri LJ 3117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2005]

Co. Litt. 123-b; 1 Hon. 6, 1a, 9 Edw. 4, 26 a (Hale PC 628), relied on

[8796] — Ss. 375 and 377 — Grounds of dissolution under S. 10, Divorce Act, 1869 — Held, not discriminatory against husband — As regards the ground of adultery and exchange of profession of Christianity, available to wife, she is in a more disadvantageous position — Ground of rape rightly made available to wife alone since the word 'rape' used in S. 10 has to be assigned the same meaning as defined in S. 375 of Penal Code i.e. forcible sexual intercourse by man with a woman and not vice versa — Though sodomy and bestiality can be committed by wife also, conferring those grounds to wife alone cannot be said to be discriminatory having regard to the weaker position of Indian women — Besides it is also open to the parties to marry under Special Marriage Act, but once having married under Divorce Act one cannot allege its disadvantages — Hence S. 10 not violative of Art. 14 — Divorce Act, 1869, S. 10

There is no substance in the challenge by the petitioner-husband to the vires of the provisions of S. 10 as being discriminatory against the husband and, therefore, violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution.

As far as the ground of adultery is concerned, it is the husband who is in a favourable position as against the wife, since it is not enough for the wife to prove adultery simpliciter on the part of her husband. To that extent, undoubtedly, it is the wife who is discriminated against.

For the ground of exchange of profession of Christianity by husband, the wife has also to prove that the husband has married another woman. Since, however, the husband can seek dissolution of the marriage only on the ground of adultery, the husband is not at a disadvantage as against his wife because a mere marriage with another man whether after exchanging the profession of religion or not, would give a ground to the husband to seek dissolution of marriage. Thus even as far as this ground is concerned, it is the wife who is at a disadvantage.

The only other grounds unavailable to the husband are of rape, sodomy or bestiality. Although the modern usage of the word 'rape' extends also to the forcible sexual intercourse by a woman with a man, the dictionary meaning of the said word as well as the offence of rape as defined in the Indian Penal Code speak only of forcible sexual intercourse by a man with a woman. Therefore, the latter meaning of the said word has to be accepted while construing the provisions of the Act which is one of the vintage enactments on our statute book. Hence, it cannot be said that there is any discrimination between husband and wife because the ground of rape is not available to the husband for dissolving the marriage.

However, a woman can also be guilty of sodomy. So will be the position in the case of the offence of bestiality. The discrimination, therefore, can be alleged by the husband only on the basis that these two grounds, viz., sodomy and bestiality, are not available to him for claiming dissolution of his marriage whereas the same are available to the wife for the purpose. But taking into consideration the muscularly weaker physique of the woman, her general vulnerable physical and social condition and her defensive and non-aggressive nature and role particularly in this country, the legislature can hardly be faulted if the said two grounds are made available to the wife and not to the husband for seeking dissolution of the marriage. For the same reasons, it can hardly be said that on that account the provisions of S. 10 of the Act are discriminatory as against the husband.

Moreover, the individuals not willing to submit to the Indian Divorce Act or any other personal law are not obliged to marry exclusively under that law. They have the freedom to marry under the Special Marriage Act, 1954. Having, however, married under the Divorce Act and accepted its discipline, they cannot be heard to complain of its rigours, if any. Anil Kumar Mahsi v. Union of India, (1994) 5 SCC 704: (1994) 2 KLT 399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-1994]

[8797] — S. 376 — Rape — Considering serious effects of, held, is a crime against basic human rights — Is violative of victim's fundamental right under Art. 21 — So courts should deal with cases of sexual crime against women sternly and severely — Constitution of India — Art. 21

Sexual violence apart from being a dehumanising act is an unlawful intrusion on the right of privacy and sanctity of a female. It is a serious blow to her supreme honour and offends her self-esteem and dignity — it degrades and humiliates the victim and where the victim is a helpless innocent child or a minor, it leaves behind a traumatic experience. A rapist not only causes physical injuries but more indelibly leaves a scar on the most cherished possession of a woman i.e. her dignity, honour, reputation and not the least her chastity. Rape is not only a crime against the person of a woman, it is a crime against the entire society. It destroys the entire psychology of a woman and pushes her into deep emotional crisis. It is a crime against basic human rights, and is also violative of the victim's most cherished of the fundamental rights, namely, the right to life contained in Article 21. The courts are, therefore, expected to deal with cases of sexual crime against women with utmost sensitivity. Such cases need to be dealt with sternly and severely. A socially sensitised Judge is a better statutory armour in cases of crime against women than long clauses of penal provisions, containing complex exceptions and provisos. In the present case, the accused who was a teacher gratified his animated passions and sexual pleasures by having carnal knowledge of his student, a girl of tender age. Such offenders are a menace to civilised society. (Paras 3 and 1). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

[8798] — S. 376 — Rape — Considering serious effects of, held, is a crime against basic human rights — Is violative of victim's fundamental right under Art. 21 — So courts should deal with cases of sexual offence sternly and severely — Constitution of India, Art. 21

Sexual violence apart from being a dehumanizing act is an unlawful intrusion on the right of privacy and sanctity of a female. It is a serious blow to her supreme honour and offends her self-esteem and dignity — it degrades and humiliates the victim and where the victim is a helpless innocent child or a minor, it leaves behind a traumatic experience. A rapist not only causes physical injuries but more indelibly leaves a scar on the most cherished possession of a woman i.e. her dignity, honour, reputation and not the least her chastity. Rape is not only a crime against the person of a woman, it is a crime against the entire society. It destroys the entire psychology of a woman and pushes her into deep emotional crisis. It is a crime against basic human rights, and is also violative of the victim's most cherished of fundamental rights, namely, the right to life contained in Article 21. The courts are, therefore, expected to deal with cases of sexual crime against women with utmost sensitivity. Such cases need to be dealt with sternly and severely. A socially sensitized judge is a better statutory armour in cases of crime against women than long clauses of penal provisions, containing complex exceptions and provisos. (Para 1). State of Punjab v. Ramdev Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 421: 2004 SCC (Cri) 307: AIR 2004 SC 1290.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2003]

Bodhisattwa Gautam v. Subhra Chakraborty, (1996) 1 SCC 490: 1996 SCC (Cri) 133, relied on

[8799] — S. 376 — Rape — It is a crime against the entire society — Plight of the rape victims in the present legal system despite making the rule of corroboration of prosecutrix not always necessary and introduction of S. 114-A in Evidence Act highlighted and reform suggested

Rape is thus not only a crime against the person of a woman (victim), it is a crime against the entire society. It destroys the entire psychology of a woman and pushes her into deep emotional crisis. It is only by her sheer will-power that she rehabilitates herself in the society which, on coming to know of the rape, looks down upon her in derision and contempt. Rape is, therefore, the most hated crime. It is a crime against basic human rights and is also violative of the victim's most cherished of the fundamental rights, namely, the Right to Life contained in Article 21. "Right to Life" does not merely mean animal existence but means something more, namely, the right to live with human dignity. Right to Life would, therefore, include all those aspects of life which go to make a life meaningful, complete and worth living. Bodhisattwa Gautam v. Subhra Chakraborty, (1996) 1 SCC 490: 1996 SCC (Cri) 133: AIR 1996 SC 922: (1996) 1 AndhLT (Cri) 252.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-1995]

Francis Coralie Mullin v. Administrator, Union Territory of Delhi, (1981) 1 SCC 608: 1981 SCC (Cri) 212; State of Maharashtra v. Chandrabhan Tale, (1983) 3 SCC 387: 1983 SCC (Cri) 667: 1983 SCC (L&S) 391; Olga Tellis v. Bombay Municipal Corpn., (1985) 3 SCC 545; Delhi Transport Corpn. v. DTC Mazdoor Congress, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 600: 1991 SCC (L&S) 1213, relied on

[8800] — S. 376 — Rape — Meaning of, explained — Legislative intent to curb the offence of rape with an iron hand, taken note of

The offence of rape in its simplest term is "the ravishment of a woman, without her consent, by force, fear or fraud", or as "the carnal knowledge of a woman by force against her will". "Rape or raptus" is when a man hath carnal knowledge of a woman by force and against her will; or, as expressed more fully, "rape is the carnal knowledge of any woman, above the age of particular years, against her will; or of a woman child, under that age, with or against her will". The essential words in an indictment for rape are rapuit and carnaliter cognovit; but carnaliter cognovit, nor any other circumlocution without the word rapuit, are not sufficient in a legal sense to express rape. In the crime of rape, "carnal knowledge" means the penetration to any the slightest degree of the male organ of generation. It is violation, with violence, of the private person of a woman, an outrage by all means. By the very nature of the offence it is an obnoxious act of the highest order. (Para 8)

"Rape" is defined in Section 375 IPC. Sections 375 and 376 IPC have been substantially changed by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1983, and several new sections were introduced by the new Act i.e. Sections 376-A, 376-B, 376-C and 376-D. The fast sweeping changes introduced reflect the legislative intent to curb with iron hand, the offence of rape which affects the dignity of a woman. (Para 9). Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 1267: 2006 Cri LJ 1679: (2006) 1 KLT 1006.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2006]

Co. Litt. 123 b; 1 Hen. 6, 1a, 9 Edw. 4, 26 a (Hale P.C. 628), relied on

[8801] — S. 376 — Rape — Nature of crime — Considering serious effects and consequences of, held, is a crime against basic human rights — Is violative of victim's fundamental right under Art. 21 — So court should deal with cases of sexual crime against women sternly and severely — Constitution of India, Art. 21

Sexual violence apart from being a dehumanising act is an unlawful intrusion on the right of privacy and sanctity of a female. It is a serious blow to her supreme honour and offends her self-esteem and dignity-it degrades and humiliates the victim and where the victim is a helpless innocent child or a minor, it leaves behind a traumatic experience. A rapist not only causes physical injuries but more indelibly leaves a scar on the most cherished possession of a woman i.e. her dignity, honour, reputation and not the least her chastity. Rape is not only a crime against the person of a woman, it is a crime against the entire society. It destroys the entire psychology of a woman and pushes her into deep emotional crisis. It is a crime against basic human rights, and is also violative of the victim's most cherished fundamental right, namely, the right to life contained in Article 21 of the Constitution. The courts are, therefore, expected to deal with cases of sexual crime against women with utmost sensitivity. Such cases need to be dealt with sternly and severely. A socially sensitised judge is a better statutory armour in cases of crime against women than long clauses of penal provisions, containing complex exceptions and provisos. (Para 6). Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 1267: 2006 Cri LJ 1679: (2006) 1 KLT 1006.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2006]

[8802] — S. 376 — Right to "life" under Art. 21 — Includes right to live with human dignity — Rape violates this right of women — Right to life is recognised as a basic human right — It has to be read in consonance with Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 1948, Preamble and Arts. 1, 2, 3, 5, 7, 9, Declaration on the Elimination of Violence Against Women, Arts. 1, 2, 3 as also Declaration and Covenants of Civil and Political Rights and Covenants of Economic, Social and Cultural Rights to which India is a party having ratified them — However, this right has to be subject to such restrictions as may be imposed in the interest of the nation and security of the State — Primacy of interest of the nation and security of the State will have to be read into the Universal Declaration as also Art. 21 — Constitution of India, Arts. 21 and 51

Our Constitution guarantees all the basic and fundamental human rights set out in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 1948, to its citizens and other persons. The chapter dealing with the fundamental rights is contained in Part III of the Constitution. The purpose of Part III is to safeguard the basic human rights from the vicissitudes of political controversy and to place them beyond the reach of the political parties who, by virtue of their majority, may come to form the Government at the Centre or in the State. (Para 27)

The fundamental rights are available to all the "citizens" of the country but a few of them are also available to "persons". The word "LIFE" has also been used prominently in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 1948. The fundamental rights under the Constitution are almost in consonance with the rights contained in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights as also the Declaration and the Covenants of Civil and Political Rights and the Covenants of Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, to which India is a party having ratified them. That being so, since "LIFE" is also recognised as a basic human right in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 1948, it has to have the same meaning and interpretation as has been placed on that word by the Supreme Court in its various decisions relating to Article 21 of the Constitution. The meaning of the word "life" cannot be narrowed down. According to the tenor of the language used in Article 21, it will be available not only to every citizen of this country, but also to a "person" who may not be a citizen of the country. On this principle, even those who are not citizens of this country and come here merely as tourists or in any other capacity will be entitled to the protection of their lives in accordance with the constitutional provisions. They also have a right to "life" in this country. Thus, they also have the right to live, so long as they are here, with human dignity. Just as the State is under an obligation to protect the life of every citizen in this country, so also the State is under an obligation to protect the life of the persons who are not citizens. (Paras 28, 32 and 34)

However, the rights guaranteed under Part III of the Constitution are not absolute in terms. They are subject to reasonable restrictions and, therefore, in case of a non-citizen also, those rights will be available subject to such restrictions as may be imposed in the interest of the security of the State or other important considerations. Interest of the nation and security of the State is supreme. Since 1948 when the Universal Declaration was adopted till this day, there have been many changes — political, social and economic while terrorism has disturbed the global scenario. Primacy of the interest of the nation and the security of the State will have to be read into the Universal Declaration as also in every article dealing with fundamental rights, including Article 21. (Para 35). Rly. Board v. Chandrima Das, (2000) 2 SCC 465: AIR 2000 SC 988: 2000 Cri LJ 1473.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2000]

Bodhisattwa Gautam v. Subhra Chakraborty, (1996) 1 SCC 490: 1996 SCC (Cri) 133, relied on

[8803] — Ss. 376, 375, 376-A, 376-B, 376-C and 376-D — Changes introduced in Ss. 375 and 376 and introduction of Ss. 376-A to 376-D by Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1983 — Legislative intention evinced thereby — Held, said amendment which introduced sweeping changes reflects legislative intent to curb with an iron hand, the offence of rape which affects the dignity of woman — Constitution of India, Art. 21

The offence of rape occurs in Chapter 16 IPC. It is an offence affecting the human body. In that chapter, there is a separate heading for "Sexual offences", which encompasses Sections 375, 376, 376-A, 376-B, 376-C and 376-D. "Rape" is defined in Section 375. Sections 375 and 376 have been substantially changed by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1983, and several new sections were introduced by the new Act i.e. Sections 376-A, 376-B, 376-C and 376-D. The fact that sweeping changes were introduced reflects the legislative intent to curb with an iron hand, the offence of rape which affects the dignity of a woman. The offence of rape in its simplest term is "the ravishment of a woman, without her consent, by force, fear or fraud", or as "the carnal knowledge of a woman by force against her will". "Rape" or "raptus" is when a man hath carnal knowledge of a woman by force and against her will; or as expressed more fully, "rape is the carnal knowledge of any woman, above the age of particular years, against her will; or of a woman child, under that age, with or against her will". The essential words in an indictment for rape are rapuit and carnaliter cognovit; but carnaliter cognovit, nor any other circumlocution without the word rapuit, are not sufficient in a legal sense to express rape. In the crime of rape, "carnal knowledge" means the penetration to any the slightest degree of the organ alleged to have been carnally known by the male organ of generation — even slight penetration is sufficient and emission is unnecessary. It is violation with violence of the private person of a woman — an outrage by all means. By the very nature of the offence it is an obnoxious act of the highest order. The physical scar may heal up, but the mental scar will always remain. When a woman is ravished, what is inflicted is not merely physical injury but a deep sense of some deathless shame. (Paras 7 and 8). State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559: AIR 2005 SC 682: 2005 Cri LJ 913.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2005]

Followed in Mohan Anna Chavan v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 7 SCC 561

[8804] — Ss. 376 to 376-D — Sexual offences — Name of the victim — Held, should not be indicated in the judgments of the courts (Para 4). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

State of Karnataka v. Puttaraja, (2004) 1 SCC 475: 2004 SCC (Cri) 300: (2003) 8 Supreme 364, relied on [8805] — Ss. 376 to 376-D — Sexual offences — Name of the victim — Held, should not be indicated in the judgments of the courts (Para 3). State of Punjab v. Ramdev Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 421: 2004 SCC (Cri) 307: AIR 2004 SC 1290.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2003]

State of Karnataka v. Puttaraja, (2004) 1 SCC 475, relied on [8806] — Ss. 376 to 376-D — Sexual offences — Name of the victim — Indication of — Held, should not be indicated in the judgments of the courts

Section 228-A IPC makes disclosure of the identity of the victim of certain offences punishable. Printing or publishing the name or any matter which may make known the identity of any person against whom an offence under Sections 376, 376-A, 376-B, 376-C or 376-D is alleged or found to have been committed can be punished. True it is, the restriction does not relate to printing or publication of judgment by the High Court or the Supreme Court. But keeping in view the social object of preventing social victimisation or ostracism of the victim of a sexual offence for which Section 228-A has been enacted, it would be appropriate that in the judgments, be it of the Supreme Court, the High Court or lower court, the name of the victim should not be indicated. (Para 7). Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 1267: 2006 Cri LJ 1679: (2006) 1 KLT 1006.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2006]

State of Karnataka v. Puttaraja, (2004) 1 SCC 475: 2004 SCC (Cri) 300, relied on [8807] — Ss. 376 to 376-D — Sexual offences — Name of the victim, held, should not be indicated in the judgments (Para 2). Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551: AIR 2003 SC 4684.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2003]

2. Abuse or misuse of rape laws

[8808] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Caution against false cases — Law summarised — Held, a finding of guilt in a case of rape, can be based on the uncorroborated evidence of the prosecutrix and her testimony should not be rejected on the basis of minor discrepancies and contradictions — Further held, absence of injuries on the private parts of the victim will not by itself falsify the case of rape, nor can be construed as evidence of consent, nor the opinion of a doctor that there was no evidence of any sexual intercourse or rape sufficient to disbelieve the victim — However, courts should, at the same time, bear in mind that false charges of rape are not uncommon, and there are some rare instances where a parent has persuaded a gullible or obedient daughter to make a false charge of a rape either to take revenge or extort money or to get rid of financial liability — Whether there was rape or not would depend ultimately on the facts and circumstances of each case. Radhu v. State of M.P., (2007) 12 SCC 57: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 207: 2007 Cri LJ 4704.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2007]

3. Ingredients of rape

Synopsis

(a) Broadly 430
(b) "Against her will" and "without her consent" 430
(c) Presumption against consent under S. 114-A, Evidence Act 448
(d) Penetration/Intercourse 448
(e) Ss. 376-A to 376-D 454
(f) Habituated to Sex 455

(a) Broadly

See also 'A.1. Generally — Meaning and Scope, above', and

'A.4. Prior sexual history/conduct — Relevance, if any', below

[8809] — S. 376 — Casting stigma on the character of a victim of rape deprecated — Trial judge not justified in characterising a rape victim as a girl of loose character — Court must use self-restraint while recording such finding even if the girl is found to be habituated to sexual intercourse — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 155(4). State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

[8810] — S. 376 — Character of reputation of the victim of rape — Not relevant for conviction and sentence under S. 376 — Hence cannot serve as mitigating or extenuating circumstances for imposing sub-minimum sentence under proviso to S. 376(2) — Word 'conduct' of the prosecutrix used in the judgment under review was in lexicographical sense and not in the context of her character — No error apparent on the face of the record of the earlier judgment. State of Haryana v. Prem Chand, (1990) 1 SCC 249: 1990 SCC (Cri) 93: AIR 1990 SC 538: 1990 Cri LJ 454.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-1989]

Prem Chand v. State of Haryana, 1989 Supp (1) SCC 286: 1989 SCC (Cri) 418, affirmed

(b) "Against her will" and "without her consent"

See also 'C.20.(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof', below

[8811] — Ss. 375 and 90 — Rape — "Consent" — What is — Consent implies exercise of a free and untrammelled right to forbid or withhold — It is always a voluntary and conscious acceptance of what is proposed to be done — An act of helplessness in the face of inevitable compulsions is not consent in law — Actual use of force not always necessary — A threat of use of force is sufficient — Prosecutrix has deposed that sickle in her hand had fallen down out of fear — She had given teeth bites and broken buttons of shirt of appellant in order to rescue herself from his clutches — She raised a hue and cry — Her brother who was at some distance, came to the spot — She stood test of cross-examination with reasonable certainty — Held, there was no consent on her part — Appellant's plea of consent was rightly rejected (Paras 30 to 36)

It can be held that a woman has given consent only if she has freely agreed to submit herself, while in free and unconstrained possession of her physical and moral power to act in a manner she wanted. Consent implies the exercise of a free and untrammelled right to forbid or withhold what is being consented to, it always is a voluntary and conscious acceptance of what is proposed to be done by another and concurred in by the former. An act of helplessness in the face of inevitable compulsions is not consent in law. More so, it is not necessary that there should be actual use of force. A threat of use of force is sufficient. (Para 30)

The concept of "consent" in the context of Section 375 IPC has to be understood differently, keeping in mind the provision of Section 90 IPC, according to which a consent given under fear/coercion or misconception/mistake of fact is not a consent at all. Scheme of Section 90 IPC is couched in negative terminology. Consent is different from submission. (Para 31). Satpal Singh v. State of Haryana, (2010) 8 SCC 714: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1081: (2010) 93 AIC 50 (SC): 2010 Cri LJ 4283.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2010]

Uday v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 4 SCC 46: 2003 SCC (Cri) 775; Deelip Singh v. State of Bihar, (2005) 1 SCC 88: 2005 SCC (Cri) 253; Yedla Srinivasa Rao v. State of A.P., (2006) 11 SCC 615: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 557; State of H.P. v. Mange Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331, relied on [8812] — Ss. 375 and 90 — Word "consent" in context of S. 375 — Concept of, discussed (Paras 16 to 21). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

Holman v. R., 1970 WAR 2; State of H.P. v. Mango Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331; Uday v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 4 SCC 46: 2003 SCC (Cri) 775, relied on

Jowitt's Dictionary of English Law (2nd Edn.), Vol. 1 (1977), p. 422; Stroud's Judicial Dictionary (4th Edn.), Vol. 1 (1971), p. 555; Words and Phrases, Permanent Edition (Vol. 8A), pp. 205-06, relied on

[8813] — Ss. 375 & 90 and 376 — Rape — "Consent" — Voluntary consent or consent under misconception of fact — Determination of — Consent given by the prosecutrix to sexual intercourse with accused-appellant, with whom she was deeply in love, on a promise that he would marry her on a later date — Prosecutrix continuing to meet accused and often having sexual intercourse and becoming pregnant — Complaint lodged on failure of appellant to marry her — In such case, held, the consent cannot be said to be given under a misconception of fact — A false promise is not a fact within the meaning of the Penal Code — For deter-

mining whether consent given by the prosecutrix was voluntary or under a misconception of fact, held, there is no straitjacket formula and each case has to be decided considering the evidence and surrounding circumstances of that case — Where (i) the prosecutrix (aged 19 years on the date of occurrence) had sufficient intelligence to understand the significance and moral quality of the act she was consenting to, (ii) she was conscious of the fact that her marriage with the appellant was difficult on account of caste considerations, (iii) it was difficult to impute to the appellant knowledge that the prosecutrix had consented in consequence of a misconception of fact arising from his promise, and (iv) there was no evidence to prove conclusively that the appellant never intended to marry the prosecutrix, held, appellant's conviction and sentence under S. 376 IPC was liable to be set aside — Question as to whether in a case of rape the misconception of fact must be confined to the circumstances falling under S. 375 fourthly and fifthly, or whether consent given under misconception of fact contemplated by S. 90 has a wider application so as to include circumstances not enumerated in S. 375, held, not necessary to be considered herein

There is no straitjacket formula for determining whether consent given by the prosecutrix to sexual intercourse is voluntary, or whether it is given under a misconception of fact. The tests laid down by the courts provide at best guidance to the judicial mind while considering a question of consent, but the court must, in each case, consider the evidence before it and the surrounding circumstances, before reaching a conclusion, because each case has its own peculiar facts which may have a bearing on the question whether the consent was voluntary, or was given under a misconception of fact. The court must also weigh the evidence keeping in view the fact that the burden is on the prosecution to prove each and every ingredient of the offence, absence of consent being one of them. (Para 21)

The consensus of judicial opinion is in favour of the view that consent given by the prosecutrix to sexual intercourse with a person with whom she is deeply in love on a promise that he would marry her on a later date, cannot be said to be given under a misconception of fact. A false promise is not a fact within the meaning of the Code. In the instant case, the prosecutrix was a grown-up girl studying in a college. She was deeply in love with the appellant. She was, however, aware of the fact that since they belonged to different castes, marriage was not possible. In any event the proposal for their marriage was bound to be seriously opposed by their family members. She admits having told so to the appellant when he proposed to her the first time. She had sufficient intelligence to understand the significance and moral quality of the act she was consenting to. That is why she kept it a secret as long as she could. Despite this, she did not resist the overtures of the appellant, and in fact succumbed to them. She thus freely exercised a choice between resistance and assent. The circumstances show that she freely, voluntarily and consciously consented to having sexual intercourse with the appellant, and her consent was not in consequence of any misconception of fact. (Paras 21 and 23)

Further, there is no evidence to prove conclusively that the appellant never intended to marry her. Perhaps he wanted to, but was not able to gather enough courage to disclose his intention to his family members for fear of strong opposition from them. Even the prosecutrix stated that she had full faith in him. It appears that the matter got complicated on account of the prosecutrix becoming pregnant. Therefore, on account of the resultant pressure of the prosecutrix and her brother the appellant distanced himself from her. (Para 24)

That apart, in a case of this nature two conditions must be fulfilled for the application of Section 90 IPC. Firstly, it must be shown that the consent was given under a misconception of fact. Secondly, it must be proved that the person who obtained the consent knew, or had reason to believe that the consent was given in consequence of such misconception. But in the instant case, there is doubt that the promise to marry induced the prosecutrix to consent to having sexual intercourse with the appellant because the prosecutrix knew that her marriage with the appellant was difficult on account of caste considerations. Further, there is no evidence to prove that the appellant knew, or had reason to believe, that the prosecutrix had consented to having sexual intercourse with him only as a consequence of her belief, based on his promise, that they will get married in due course. (Para 25)

The prosecutrix and the appellant were deeply in love. They met often, and it does appear that the prosecutrix permitted him liberties which, if at all, are permitted only to a person with whom one is in deep love. It is also not without significance that the prosecutrix stealthily went out with the appellant to a lonely place at 12 o'clock in the night. It usually happens in such cases, when two young persons are madly in love, that they promise to each other several times that come what may, they will get married. As stated by the prosecutrix the appellant also made such a promise on more than one occasion. In such circumstances the promise loses all significance, particularly when they are overcome with emotions and passion and find themselves in situations and circumstances where they, in a weak moment, succumb to the temptation of having sexual relationship. This is what appears to have happened in this case as well, and the prosecutrix willingly consented to having sexual intercourse with the appellant with whom she was deeply in love, not because he promised to marry her, but because she also desired it. (Para 25)

3.(b) "Against her will" and "without her consent" (contd.)

In view of the above findings, it is not necessary to consider the question as to whether in a case of rape the misconception of fact must be confined to the circumstances falling under Section 375 fourthly and fifthly, or whether consent given under a misconception of fact contemplated by Section 90 has a wider application so as to include circumstances not enumerated in Section 375 IPC. (Para 26). Uday v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 4 SCC 46: 2003 SCC (Cri) 775: AIR 2003 SC 1639: 2003 Cri LJ 1539.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-2003]

Words and Phrases, Permanent Edition, Vol. 8A, at p. 205; Stroud's Judicial Dictionary (5th Edn.), p. 510, referred to

Holman v. R., 1970 WAR 2; R. v. Olugboja, (1981) 3 WLR 585: (1981) 3 All ER 443: 1982 QB 320 (CA); R. v. Clarence, (1888) 22 QBD 23: (1886-90) All ER Rep 133: 58 LJMC 10; People v. Perry, 26 Cal App 143; State of H.P. v. Mango Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331, relied on

Rao Harnarain Singh Sheoji Singh v. State, AIR 1958 Punj 123: 1958 Cri LJ 563: 59 Punj LR 519; Vijayan Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1989) 2 Ker LJ 234; Anthony, In re, AIR 1960 Mad 308: 1960 Cri LJ 927; Arjan Ram Naurata Ram v. State, AIR 1960 Punj 303: 1960 Cri LJ 849; Gopi Shanker v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1967 Raj 159: 1967 Cri LJ 922; Bhimrao Harnooji Wanjari v. State of Maharashtra, 1975 Mah LJ 660; Jayanti Rani Panda v. State of W.B., 1984 Cri LJ 1535: (1983) 2 CHN 290 (Cal); Hari Majhi v. State, 1990 Cri LJ 650 (Cal); Abhoy Pradhan v. State of W.B., 1999 Cri LJ 3534: (1999) 3 Crimes 359 (Cal); State of Karnataka v. Anthonidas, ILR 2000 Kar 266; Nilambar Goudo v. State, 1982 Cri LJ NOC 172 (Ori); Mir Wali Mohd. v. State of Bihar, 1990 BBCJ 530, approved

Saleha Khatoon v. State of Bihar, 1989 Cri LJ 202: 1988 BLJR 678 (Pat), explained and distinguished

Jowitt's Dictionary of English Law, IInd Edn., Vol. 1, cited

[8814] — Ss. 375 & 376 — Rape — Consent of prosecutrix — What amounts to — Submission of body under fear of terror does not amount to consent — Whether there was resistance by the prosecutrix, held, depends upon relevant circumstances — Absence of marks of violence on the body of prosecutrix as well as accused not of much significance when accused was examined three days after the incident — On facts and in the circumstances, held, prosecutrix had resisted the onslaught of the accused and there was no consent on her part

The verdict of not guilty had been entered by the Sessions Judge mainly based on two grounds that the prosecutrix was aged above sixteen years and if at all there was any sexual act, it must have been with her consent. Both these findings are erroneous and incorrect. (Para 11)

Even if it is assumed that the prosecutrix was above 16 years, the reasons attributed by the Sessions Judge to prove that she had given consent to the sexual act are not true. The accused was examined on 20-4-1993. As the incident occurred on 17-4-1993, even if there were any marks of violence on the body of the accused, the same would have been obliterated and were not so prominent so as to be noticed by the Medical Officer who examined him. Therefore, the absence of nail marks or minor injuries on the body of the accused is of not much significance. From the oral evidence of the prosecutrix it is proved that the accused caught her from behind and he lifted her and pushed her down and despite her attempt to cover herself with the salwar, the accused pulled it down. She also stated that the accused gagged her mouth when she attempted to cry aloud. The subsequent conduct of the prosecutrix also shows that she was very much resistant to the sexual onslaught on her. She came to her father immediately and told the entire incident as to how she was ravished by the accused. The evidence as a whole indicates that there was resistance by the prosecutrix and there was no voluntary participation by her in the sexual act. Submission of the body under the fear of terror cannot be construed as a consented sexual act. Consent for the purpose of Section 375 requires voluntary participation not only after the exercise of intelligence based on the knowledge of the significance and moral quality of the act but after having fully exercised the choice between resistance and assent. Whether there was consent or not, is to be ascertained only on a careful study of all relevant circumstances. From the evidence on record, it cannot be said that the prosecutrix had given consent and thereafter she turned round and acted against the interest of the accused. There is clear credible evidence that she resisted the onslaught and made all possible efforts to prevent the accused from committing rape on her. (Para 13). State of H.P. v. Mango Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331: AIR 2000 SC 2798.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2000]

[8815] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Conviction under — Sustainability — On facts, there was absolutely no evidence to suggest that sexual intercourse was committed by the appellant-accused without consent of victim or against her will — Injuries present on person of victim did not indicate any attempt to rape or the commission of rape — Also, no attempt was made to have the appellant medically examined to ascertain his capacity to perform sexual intercourse — Therefore, held, appellant's conviction under S. 376 cannot be sustained

Considering the question of conviction under Section 376 IPC, it is found from the medical evidence and from the chemical examiner's reports that the vaginal swab and clothes taken from the dead body did indicate the presence of semen. There is however absolutely no evidence to suggest (even assuming that the intercourse had been committed by the appellant) that he had done so without consent of M or against her will. Some suspicions of rape could perhaps have been raised had some tell-tale injuries been detected on person of M but it is found that the two injuries other than the gunshot wounds i.e. Injury 3 being on the left pinna and Injury 4 an abrasion near the right eye do not indicate any attempt to rape or the commission of rape. It is also significant that the investigators had made no attempt whatsoever to have the appellant medically examined to ascertain his capacity to perform sexual intercourse. The State counsel relying on the statement of PW 14, the inspector, has however submitted that the examination had not been possible as the appellant had received a very serious gunshot injury and was hanging between life and death. The submission of the counsel that an examination could not have been carried out immediately is agreed to, but there is no justification in the omission of the prosecution to have him examined after he had recovered his health and been discharged from hospital. Even assuming for a moment that sexual intercourse between the two had indeed taken place it cannot be said from the evidence that it was without the consent or against the wishes of M. Therefore, appellant's conviction under Section 376 IPC cannot be sustained. (Para 9). Ujjagar Singh v. State of Punjab, (2007) 13 SCC 90: 2008 Cri LJ 808.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-2007]

[8816] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix — Alleged relationship between prosecutrix and accused — Reliability of testimony of prosecutrix in case of — High Court holding that on evidence showing that there were relations between accused and prosecutrix, it was very difficult to rely upon testimony of prosecutrix and therefor acquitting accused — Unsustainability — Held, the High Court's approach is improper — Trial court has held that alleged relationship between prosecutrix and accused was of no consequence, particularly having regard to manner in which entire incident took place — Matter remanded for fresh consideration to High Court (Paras 3 and 4). State of Rajasthan v. Bhanwar Singh, (2006) 6 SCC 9: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 9.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2006]

[8817] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape of a minor — Appreciation of medical evidence — No semen detected on person or clothes of prosecutrix, but hymen found absent — Injuries detected on her private parts despite passage of a long time — Inference of partial/incomplete penetration — Offence of rape if made out — Effect of discrepancies in evidence of prosecutrix — Appellant alleged to have gagged mouth of prosecutrix aged about 11 years, and sexually assaulted her — On hearing her aunt's (PW 5) voice, accused fleeing away — No semen detected on any of the exhibits sent to chemical examiner — However, hymen found absent — Prosecutrix medically examined after a long time — Despite long passage of time (about 80 hours) injuries found on her private parts — Though the doctor failing to state specifically anything as regards actual intercourse, she testifying that there had been attempt to commit rape — PW 5 had detected the accused committing the offence, and he had fled away on hearing her voice — Thus, the act was incomplete — Evidence of PW 5 was found reliable by courts below — Hence, held, conclusion of High Court that absence of hymen clearly indicated that there was penetration, or that penetration may have been partial with no emission of semen, calls for no interference — Medical evidence in such cases needs to be appreciated in context of ocular evidence and other circumstances surrounding thereto — Discrepancies in evidence of prosecutrix also inconsequential, because she was a minor — Besides, there was time gap between occurrence and examination of witnesses — Hence, lapse of some memory on part of child witness possible — Delay in lodging FIR was also a natural phenomenon in rape cases — Conviction of appellant under S. 376, sustainable — CrPC, 1973, S. 154 (Paras 10, 14, 17 to 21). Satyapal v. State of Haryana, (2009) 6 SCC 635: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 108: AIR 2009 SC 2190: (2009) 77 AIC 66 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-2009]

3.(b) "Against her will" and "without her consent" (contd.)

Satyapal v. State of Haryana, 2007 Cri LJ 2095 (P&H), affirmed

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, 23rd Edn., at pp. 897 and 928, relied on

[8818] — Ss. 375, 376 and 366 — Rape — Consent — Absence of injuries — Inference — Appreciation of evidence — Victim suffering from throat pain — Appellant-accused, by misrepresenting victim to take her to doctor, instead took her to different places — After it grew dark, appellant took her to a lonely place and committed forcible sexual intercourse with her — Appellant contending that act committed with consent of victim — Tenability — Held, categorical, clear and unequivocal deposition of victim that appellant-accused committed forcible sexual intercourse with her — Circumstances pointed out by accused neither individually nor collectively leading to any plausible inference that sexual intercourse by him was done with victim's tacit consent — Circumstances pointed out by accused neither sufficient nor justify discarding of evidence of victim — Nothing on record creating any doubt/disbelief or suspicion about evidence of victim — Her allegation in cross-examination that accused had threatened her with a dagger not mentioned in FIR or in S. 161 CrPC statement does not render her evidence unreliable — Moreover, in such circumstances, victim not expected to put any resistance lest to endanger her life — Therefore, absence of injuries on person of victim does not lead to an inference that she consented for sexual intercourse with accused — Hence, no interference with the conviction called for

It admits of no doubt that the accused had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix on the date and place of occurrence. The core area of debate is whether such act was committed with the consent of the prosecutrix or not. (Para 9)

The prosecutrix in her deposition has been categorical, clear and unequivocal that the accused committed forcible sexual intercourse with her. It is true that in her cross-examination she stated that the accused had threatened her with a dagger before Jablu when she refused to go with him and this aspect was neither stated in her statement under Section 161 CrPC nor in the FIR but does this contradiction make her evidence unreliable. (Para 10)

The circumstances which have been pointed out by the accused neither individually nor collectively lead to any plausible inference that the sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix by the accused was done with her tacit consent and the circumstances pointed out are neither sufficient nor do they justify discarding the evidence of the prosecutrix. There is nothing on record that creates any doubt/disbelief or a suspicion about the evidence of the prosecutrix. In a case, such as this, where the prosecutrix was misrepresented by the accused that he would show her to his cousin (a doctor) as she was suffering from some throat pain and she accompanied him but the accused took her to other places and when it became dark, took her to a lonely place and committed sexual intercourse, the prosecutrix was not expected to put any resistance lest her life would have been in danger. In the facts and circumstances, the absence of injuries on the person of the prosecutrix does not lead to an inference that she consented for sexual intercourse with the accused. The young girl became victim of lust of the accused who was more than double her age and yielded to sexual intercourse against her will. (Paras 11 and 20)

The judgment of the High Court affirming the judgment of the trial court convicting the accused under Sections 366 and 376 IPC does not suffer from any legal flaw. The sentence awarded to the appellant does not call for any interference. The appeal having no merit must fail. (Para 21). Rajinder v. State of H.P., (2009) 16 SCC 69: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 156: AIR 2009 SC 3022: 2009 Cri LJ 4133: (2009) 80 AIC 165 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898, followed

Pratap Misra v. State of Orissa, (1977) 3 SCC 41: 1977 SCC (Cri) 447; Sadashiv Ramrao Hadbe v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 10 SCC 92: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 161; Narayan v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 6 SCC 465: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 198; Radhu v. State of M.P., (2007) 12 SCC 57: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 207, distinguished

[8819] — Ss. 375 & 376 and 417 — Rape — Consent — Inference regarding — Prosecutrix admitting absence of a major injury — Effect — Promise of marriage to secure consent before rape — Offence of cheating if made out — Corroboration of testimony of prosecutrix — Offence committed on three/four different occasions — First forcibly, when prosecutrix declined to marry appellant-accused — Later, on appellant promising to marry prosecutrix — Report by prosecutrix to family members and police only after appellant refused to marry her — On refusal by police to lodge FIR, prosecutrix filing petition under S. 154(3) CrPC — Appellant convicted by trial court under Ss. 376 and 417 IPC — Held, no inference of consent of prosecutrix can be drawn —

Consistent version of prosecutrix against accused was acceptable — Evidence of prosecution witnesses had also remained unchallenged — There was no suggestion as to any love affair between the two — Also no reason to falsely implicate appellant — Considering that medical examination of prosecutrix was held six months after the incident and medical officer had confirmed the sexual intercourse, absence of a major injury, held, lost its significance — Appellant's conviction upheld under S. 376 — However, further held, promise of marriage on which prosecutrix had succumbed, did not amount to cheating by itself — Conviction under S. 417, quashed (Paras 12 to 14, 22, 23 and 26)

The evidence about the cheating is of slipshod nature and not believable. It is also self-effacing. After all, the first act of the sexual intercourse was without the consent and the accused had thereby committed rape. However, the version that he gave a marriage promise would really go against the prosecution whereby it would mean that the subsequent acts were done with the consent of the girl on account of the promise of marriage. But this can not be the approach. If the promise of marriage was given and the girl had succumbed on that account, this by itself may not amount to cheating. Besides this, the girl has very specifically stated that even subsequently she was ravished against her wishes. Therefore, the theory of promise of marriage and the consent for sexual intercourse will wither away. The accused is therefore acquitted of the offence under Section 417 IPC. (Para 26). Zindar Ali Sheikh v. State of W.B., (2009) 3 SCC 761: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 737: AIR 2009 SC 1467: 2009 Cri LJ 1324: (2009) 2 CHN 19 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 941 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2009]

[8820] — S. 375 Firstly — Rape — "Against her will" — Meaning — Evidence of prosecutrix not reliable — Held on facts, sexual intercourse against her will not made out

The expression "against the will" seems to connote that the offending act was done despite resistance and opposition of the woman. In this case the prosecutrix deposed that the first sexual intercourse took place against her will, though she became a consenting party later on in view of the accused's promise to marry her. But if the rape was committed by the accused much against her will, she would not have volunteered to submit to his wish subsequent to the alleged first incident of rape. She admitted that the accused used to talk to her for hours together and that was within the knowledge of her parents and brother. This statement also casts an element of doubt on her version that she was subjected to sexual intercourse in spite of her resistance. Above all, the version given by her in the court is at variance with the version set out in the FIR. She categorically stated in the first information report that she "surrendered before him" in view of his repeated promises to marry. In short, her version about the first incident of rape bristles with improbabilities, improvements and exaggerations. It is a different matter that she became a consenting party under the impact of his promise to marry her. But so far as the first clause of Section 375 is concerned, it is not safe to lend credence to the version of the prosecutrix that she was subjected to rape against her will in the first instance even before the appellant held out the promise to marry. (Paras 12 and 13). Deelip Singh v. State of Bihar, (2005) 1 SCC 88: 2005 SCC (Cri) 253: AIR 2005 SC 203: (2005) 2 Mah LJ 147.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-2004]

[8821] — S. 375 Firstly & Secondly — Rape — Expressions "against her will" and "without her consent" in S. 375 Firstly and Secondly, respectively — Meaning of — Held, expressions "against her will" and "without her consent" may overlap sometimes, but said two expressions have different connotation and dimension — Expression "against her will" would ordinarily mean that intercourse was done by a man with a woman despite her resistance and opposition — Whereas, expression "without her consent" would comprehend an act of reason accompanied by deliberation (Para 15). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

Holman v. R., 1970 WAR 2; State of H.P. v. Mango Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331; Uday v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 4 SCC 46: 2003 SCC (Cri) 775, relied on

Jowitt's Dictionary of English Law (2nd Edn.), Vol. 1 (1977), p. 422; Stroud's Judicial Dictionary (4th Edn.), Vol. 1 (1971), p. 555; Words and Phrases, Permanent Edition (Vol. 8A), pp. 205-06, relied on

[8822] — Ss. 375 Secondly and 90 — Rape — "Without her consent" — Meaning — Consent as explained under S. 90 relevant — "Consent" compared with "will" and "submission" — Consent given by a woman believing the man's promise to marry her would fall within the expression "without her consent" only if it is established that from the very inception the man never really intended to marry her and the promise was a mere hoax —

3.(b) "Against her will" and "without her consent" (contd.)

Nature of consent — Questions relevant for determining — Burden on prosecution to prove absence of consent from attendant circumstances — Evidence should be scanned carefully — Past, contemporaneous and subsequent conduct are relevant — On facts, held, prosecutrix had taken a conscious decision to participate in the sexual act only on being impressed by the accused's promise to marry her — But accused's promise was not false from its inception with the intention to seduce her to sexual act — Hence cl. secondly of S. 375 not established — Instead, accused committed breach of promise for which he would be liable for damages under civil law

A girl lodged a complaint on 29-11-1988 to the police stating that she and the accused-appellant were neighbours. They fell in love with each other and one day in February 1988, the accused forcibly raped her and later consoled her saying that he would marry her, that she succumbed to the entreaties of the accused to have sexual relations with him, on account of the promise made by him to marry her and therefore continued to have sex on several occasions. After she became pregnant, she revealed the matter to her parents. Even thereafter the intimacy continued to the knowledge of the parents and other relations who were under the impression that the accused would marry the girl but the accused avoided marrying her and his father took him out of the village to thwart the bid to marry. The efforts made by the father of the girl to establish the marital tie failed and therefore she was constrained to file the complaint after waiting for some time. The victim girl was sent for medical examination. The medical officer of the hospital gave the opinion, on the basis of his own examination and the examination of the dental surgeon and the x-rays taken by the radiologist that her age was between 16 and 17 years. The trial court accepted the prosecution case in this regard and found that the girl was aged less than 16 years at the relevant point of time. The High Court affirmed this finding. The trial court also recorded an alternative finding that she was forcibly raped on the first occasion and after that incident the accused went on making false promises to marry her. It was therefore held that either there was no consent or the consent was involuntary. Thus, according to the trial court, it was a case of having sexual intercourse against the will of the victim girl or without her consent. If so, irrespective of the age of the girl, the offence is deemed to be committed. As regards this latter aspect the High Court did not enter into any discussion. Accordingly, the appellant was convicted under Section 376 IPC. The trial court sentenced him to 10 years' RI but the High Court modified the sentence to 7 years' RI.

Allowing the accused's appeal,

Held :

The question is: What is the meaning and content of the expression "without her consent" in Section 375 secondly IPC? Whether the consent given by a woman believing the man's promise to marry her is a consent which excludes the offence of rape? (Para 15)

Though will and consent often interlace and an act done against the will of a person can be said to be an act done without consent, the Indian Penal Code categorises these two expressions under separate heads in order to be as comprehensive as possible. Further, it is not easy to find a dividing line between submission and consent except in the situation contemplated by clause fifthly of Section 375 IPC. Yet, the evidence has to be carefully scanned. The ultimate conclusion depends on the facts of each case. (Paras 15, 14, 33 and 16)

Section 90 cannot, however, be construed as an exhaustive definition of consent for the purposes of the Indian Penal Code. The normal connotation and concept of "consent" is not intended to be excluded. Various decisions of the High Court and of the Supreme Court have not merely gone by the language of Section 90, but travelled a wider field, guided by the etymology of the word "consent". (Para 20)

The decision of the Madras High Court in N. Jaladu case, ILR (1913) 36 Mad 453 is an authority for the proposition that a misrepresentation as regards the intention of the person seeking consent i.e. the accused, could give rise to the misconception of fact. Applying that principle to a case arising under Section 375 IPC, consent given pursuant to a false representation that the accused intends to marry, could be regarded as consent given under misconception of fact. But a promise to marry without anything more will not give rise to "misconception of fact" within the meaning of Section 90 IPC. A representation deliberately made by the accused with a view to elicit the assent of the victim without having the intention or inclination to marry her, will vitiate the consent. If on the facts it is established that at the very inception of the making of promise the accused did not really entertain the intention of marrying her and the promise to marry held out by him was a mere hoax, the consent ostensibly given by the victim will be of no avail to the accused to exculpate him from the ambit of Section 375 clause secondly IPC. (Paras 26 and 28)

As regards the factual aspect of the present case related to consent questions pertinent are: Is it a case of passive submission in the face of psychological pressure exerted or allurements made by the accused or was it a conscious decision on the part of the prosecutrix knowing fully the nature and consequences of the act she was asked to indulge in? Whether the tacit consent given by the prosecutrix was the result of a misconception created in her mind as to the intention of the accused to marry her? These are the questions which have to be answered on an analysis of the evidence. The last question raises the allied question, whether the promise to marry, if made by the accused, was false to his knowledge and belief from the very inception and it was never intended to be acted upon by him. The burden is on the prosecution to prove that there was absence of consent. Of course, the position is different if the case is covered by Section 114-A of the Evidence Act. Consent or absence of it could be gathered from the attendant circumstances. The previous or contemporaneous acts or the subsequent conduct can be legitimate guides. Whether on the basis of the evidence adduced by the prosecution, it is reasonably possible to infer the lack of consent on the part of the prosecutrix is the ultimate point to be decided. (Paras 30 and 31)

In the present case, apart from the evidence of the prosecutrix, there is no other evidence which could throw light on the point in issue. First of all, there was no forcible sexual indulgence in this case. It is clear from the evidence of the prosecutrix that the predominant reason which weighed with her in agreeing for sexual intimacy with the accused was the hope generated in her of the prospect of marriage with the accused. That she came to the decision to have a sexual affair only after being convinced that the accused would marry her, is quite clear from her evidence which is in tune with her earliest version in the first information report. There is nothing in her evidence to demonstrate that without any scope for deliberation, she succumbed to the psychological pressure exerted or allurements made by the accused in a weak moment. Nor does her evidence indicate that she was incapable of understanding the nature and implications of the act which she consented to. On the other hand, the scrutiny of evidence of the prosecutrix gives a contra-indication. She was fully aware of the moral quality of the act and the inherent risk involved and that she considered the pros and cons of the act. The prospect of the marriage proposal not materialising had also entered her mind. Thus, her own evidence reveals that she took a conscious decision after active application of mind to the things that were happening. (Paras 33 and 34)

The remaining question is whether on the basis of the evidence on record, it is reasonably possible to hold that the accused with the fraudulent intention of inducing her to sexual intercourse, made a false promise to marry. The accused did hold out the promise to marry her and that was the predominant reason for the victim girl to agree to the sexual intimacy with him. The prosecutrix was also too keen to marry him as she said so specifically. But there is no evidence which gives rise to an inference beyond reasonable doubt that the accused had no intention to marry her at all from the inception and that the promise he made was false to his knowledge. No circumstances emerging from the prosecution evidence establish this fact. On the other hand, the statement of the prosecutrix that "later on" the accused became ready to marry her but his father and others took him away from the village would indicate that the accused might have been prompted by a genuine intention to marry which did not materialise on account of the pressure exerted by his family elders. It seems to be a case of breach of promise to marry rather than a case of false promise to marry for which the accused is prima facie accountable for damages under civil law. Therefore, conviction and sentence under Section 376 IPC against the accused-appellant is liable to be set aside. (Paras 35 to 38). Deelip Singh v. State of Bihar, (2005) 1 SCC 88: 2005 SCC (Cri) 253: AIR 2005 SC 203: (2005) 2 Mah LJ 147.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-2004]

N. Jaladu, Re, ILR (1913) 36 Mad 453: 15 Cri LJ 24; Parshottam Mahadev v. State, AIR 1963 Bom 74: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 573; Jayanti Rani Panda v. State of W.B., 1984 Cri LJ 1535: (1983) 2 CHN 290 (Cal); approved

Uday v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 4 SCC 46: 2003 SCC (Cri) 775, relied on [8823] — Ss. 375 Secondly & 90 and 376 — Rape — "Consent" — Value of, when obtained under misconception playing a fraud — Consent of a girl of tender age (about 16 years) obtained by accused by making a false promise to marry her which he never intended to fulfil — Invoking S. 90 IPC, held, such fraudulent consent cannot be said to be a consent so as to condone the offence of accused — Said consent was of no consequence — Act in question fell in second category as enumerated in S. 375 (sexual intercourse without consent of victim) — Hence, conviction and sentence of accused under S. 376, held, was justified — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114-A

3.(b) "Against her will" and "without her consent" (contd.)

The prosecutrix after the death of her father was living with her elder sister. During the daytime the prosecutrix used to remain alone. The accused used to come to her sister's house in between 11 a.m. and 12 noon daily. He had been asking the prosecutrix for sexual intercourse with him. The prosecutrix refused to participate in the said act but the accused kept on persisting and persuading her. The prosecutrix resisted for about three months. But one day the accused came to her sister's house at about 12 noon and closed the doors and committed sexual intercourse with her forcibly, without her consent and against her will. When the prosecutrix asked the accused as to why he spoiled her life he gave assurance that he would marry her and asked her not to cry. On the basis of the assurance given by the accused this process of sexual intercourse continued. This state of affairs was not disclosed by the prosecutrix to her sister. When she became pregnant she informed about the pregnancy to the accused. The accused got certain tablets for abortion but they did not work. When the prosecutrix was in the third month of pregnancy, she again insisted for the marriage but the accused answered that his parents were not agreeing. Thereafter, the prosecutrix informed about the said situation to her sister and brother-in-law who asked the accused to marry her. The accused informed that he would not marry the prosecutrix. The said issue was raised before the Panchayat of elders. The accused and his father both attended the Panchayat and the accused admitted his guilt. He asked for two days' time for marrying the prosecutrix and the Panchayat accordingly granted time. But after the Panchayat meeting the accused absconded from the village and when he did not fulfil his promise which was made before the Panchayat, an FIR was lodged against him.

The trial court acquitted the accused, but the High Court convicted him under Sections 376 and 417 IPC. Hence, the present appeals.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

A consent obtained by misconception while playing a fraud is not a consent. (Para 10)

In the instant case, the intention of the accused right from the beginning was not bona fide and the poor girl submitted to the lust of the accused, completely being misled by the accused who held out the promise for marriage. This kind of consent taken by the accused with clear intention not to fulfil the promise and persuading the girl to believe that he is going to marry her and obtaining her consent for the sexual intercourse under total misconception, cannot be treated to be a consent. Such fraudulent consent cannot be said to be a consent so as to condone the offence of the accused. (Paras 10 and 17)

If it is a fully grown-up girl who gave the consent then it would have been a different case but a girl whose age is very tender was giving a consent after persuasion of three months on the promise that the accused will marry her which he never intended to fulfil right from the beginning which is apparent from the conduct of the accused, Section 90 can be invoked. The consent of the victim in this case is of no consequence and falls in the second category as enumerated in Section 375 — "without her consent". (Para 10)

Therefore, the conviction and sentence awarded to the appellant is correct and no case is made out for interference. (Para 17). Yedla Srinivasa Rao v. State of A.P., (2006) 11 SCC 615.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

Jayanti Rani Panda v. State of W.B., 1984 Cri LJ 1535 (Cal); Deelip Singh v. State of Bihar, (2005) 1 SCC 88: 2005 SCC (Cri) 253; Uday v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 4 SCC 46: 2003 SCC (Cri) 775, distinguished on facts

Emperor v. Soma, (1917) 18 Cri LJ 18: 36 IC 850; R. v. Williams, (1850) 4 Cox CC 220 (CCR); R. v. Flattery, (1877) 2 QBD 410: 46 LJMC 130: 36 LT 32 (CCR); R. v. Williams, (1923) 1 KB 340: 1922 All ER Rep 433 (CCA), relied on [8824] — Ss. 375 Secondly and 376 — Consent — Held, prosecutrix having married the accused, her consent can well be presumed even for sexual acts prior to the marriage. State of A.P. v. P. Narasimha, (1994) 4 SCC 453: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1180.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.M. Sahai and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1994]

[8825] — Ss. 375 Secondly and 376 — Rape — Consent of prosecutrix — Inference from her conduct — Prosecutrix keeping quiet for six days and telling about the incident to her mother when she allegedly got pain in her private parts — Story of her getting pain in her private parts found to be unreliable in view of medical evidence — Accused a bachelor and an attractive catch for girls to be bonded in matrimony — Circumstances showing that meeting between the prosecutrix and the accused was arranged with their consent — After the sexual act the prosecutrix going to the dance performance rather than go to her parents and inform them of the crime — Held, in the circumstances of the case, testimony of the prosecutrix not reliable — Accused entitled to the benefit of doubt

— However, fine of Rs 4000 imposed by the High Court if not paid need not be paid — But if fine paid and is lying in the court it be directed to be paid to the prosecutrix as a presumptive gift of the appellant to her — In case it stands paid, the prosecutrix is allowed to retain it and the State can appropriate Rs 1000 as costs of the prosecution (Paras 5 to 7). Jagannivasan v. State of Kerala, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 204: 1995 SCC (Cri) 826: 1995 Cri LJ 3229.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-3-1995]

[8826] — S. 375 Thirdly — Rape by a policeman in police station — Onus on the prosecution to establish ingredients of the offence — Passive consent or submission out of fear by the prosecutrix — Circumstantial evidence regarding — Held, offence not established — Charge against companion policeman under S. 354 for fondling the private parts of the prosecutrix also fails

The onus is always on the prosecution to prove affirmatively each ingredient of the offence it seeks to establish and such onus never shifts. It was, therefore, incumbent on it to make out that all the ingredients of S. 375 were present in the case. For the proposition that the requisite consent was lacking in the present case reliance on behalf of the State can be placed only on clause Thirdly so that it would have to be shown that the girl had been put in fear of death or hurt and that that was the reason for her consent. In the absence of such a finding, the alleged fear would not vitiate the consent. Further, for circumstantial evidence to be used in order to prove an ingredient of an offence, it has to be such that it leads to no reasonable inference other than that of guilt. The fear which clause Thirdly of S. 375 speaks of is negatived by the circumstance that the girl is said to have been taken away by the accused policeman right from amongst her near and dear ones at a point of time when they were all leaving the police station together and were crossing the entrance gate. The circumstantial evidence available, therefore, is not only capable of being construed in a way different from that adopted by the High Court but actually derogates in no uncertain measure from the inference drawn by it.

Moreover, no marks of injury were found on the person of the girl after the incident and their absence goes a long way to indicate that the alleged intercourse was a peaceful affair, and that the story of a stiff resistance having been put up by the girl is all false. It is further clear that the averments on the part of the girl that she had been shouting loudly for help are untrue.

Thus the sexual intercourse in question is not proved to amount to rape and no offence is brought home to the appellant.

As regards another policeman who was alleged to have fondled the private parts of the girl, the girl's version could not be believed in view of the shifting positions taken by her in this regard. Further the circumstance that this policeman was present at the time of occurrence is not inculpatory and is capable of more explanations than one. Tukaram v. State of Maharashtra, (1979) 2 SCC 143: 1979 SCC (Cri) 381: AIR 1979 SC 185: 1978 Cri LJ 1864: (1979) 16 ACC 7.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Jaswant Singh, P.S. Kailasam and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1978]

See comments at (1974) 4 SCC (Jour) 17

[8827] — Ss. 375 Thirdly, 376/34 & 342/34 — Rape — Consent — Duress — Rape of rustic woman by police constable and his accomplice — Involuntary surrender of victim obtained by threat to use force, instead of actual use of force, given by police constable in uniform to the effect that she and her husband would be put in police remand and subjected to third degree treatment — Victim not shown to be a prostitute — In the circumstances non-resistance of victim to the rape would not show her consent to the act — Accuseds' total denial of the charge without indicating any animus or motive of the PWs to falsely implicate them also corroborating the prosecution case — In the circumstances held, offence of rape established on the basis of evidence of the victim, her husband and another police constable on whose suggestion FIR had been lodged

In connection with the Ganapati festival in the village concerned, an idol of Ganapati was installed in the courtyard of respondent 2, a businessman. Respondent 1, a police constable was deputed to the village for bandobast duty at the time of Ganapati festival. PW 1, the victim and PW 2 her husband, were poor rustic village labourers. In the middle of night of the occurrence, PW 2 was called by respondent 1 through respondent 2 and he was beaten by respondent 1 on the allegation that he wanted to desecrate and destroy the idol of Ganapati. The respondents asked the PWs to accompany them to the house of respondent 2 where PW 1 was asked to sign on certain papers under a threat that her husband would be placed in police custody in case of her denial to sign the papers. The two respondents then committed rape on her one by one. The respondents thereafter threatened the PWs not to report the matter to police. Being afraid the PWs went back and spent the rest of the night. Next morning PW 2 met another police constable and on his suggestion PW 2 lodged an FIR at the police station. The respondents denied the offence altogether claiming that they had been falsely implicated. The trial court convicted the respondents under S. 376 r/w S. 34 as well as under S. 342 r/w S. 34 IPC and sentenced them to 3 years' RI on the first count and two months' RI on the second count. A Single Judge of High Court, while agreeing with the trial court that the PWs had been taken to the house of respondent 2 where both the respondents had sexual intercourse with PW 1, however, concluded that in view of absence of marks of violence on the body of PW1, no force was used on her and thus she had voluntarily gone to the house of respondent 2 and was a willing partner to the act of sexual intercourse. The only question is whether the said intercourse had taken place with the consent of PW 1. Allowing the appeal,

3.(b) "Against her will" and "without her consent" (contd.)

Held :

The Single Judge of the High Court has thoroughly erred in appreciation of the evidence of PWs 1 and 2. For the offence of rape, it is not necessary that there should be actual use of force. A threat of use of force is sufficient in view of clause thirdly of S. 375.

The police constable was in uniform and on bandobast duty. By show of his authority, he coerced PWs 1 and 2 into total abject surrender. To these poor rustic helpless villagers, the police constable represents absolute authority. They had no option but to submit to his will. It is, therefore, not a case of PW 1 being a willing party to sexual intercourse. It is a case where she had surrendered herself involuntarily, under duress and threat held out by the first accused. She was deprived of her will by show of authority and by the beating administered to her husband accompanied by threat of putting him in police remand, where, as the common belief of rustic villagers goes, they would be subjected to 'third degree methods'. Not only that, after the act they were threatened not to report to the police. This explains their silence for a few hours. It is not suggested that PW 1 agreed to the said intercourse either out of love or for money. It is also not suggested that PW 1 was a prostitute. Both the accused had entered into an unholy plan and adopted a stratagem to fulfil their illegal desires. In all the circumstances of this case, the minor contradictions between her oral testimony and the report are of little consequence.

The respondents-accused denied the charge totally. Their only plea was that they have been falsely implicated. It is not even stated as to who implicated them and why. It is also not suggested that PWs 1 and 2 had any animus or motive against the accused or that they were being used by someone else to implicate the respondents falsely. In the circumstances, the mere allegation of false implication has no significance. This also is a minor corroborating aspect.

Though the offence had taken place in the year 1978 and the accused were acquitted by the High Court as far back as August 1981 and the reversal of the acquittal at this stage would be after a lapse of 10 years, but having regard to the nature of the offence and the circumstances in which it was perpetrated, the respondents deserve no mercy. They should suffer for their deed.

The appeal is, accordingly, allowed. The High Court judgment is set aside and that of trial court restored. The respondents shall undergo the sentence awarded by the trial court. State of Maharashtra v. Prakash, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 653: 1993 SCC (Cri) 411: AIR 1992 SC 1275.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1992]

[8828] — S. 375 Thirdly & Sixthly — Rape — Consent — Consent for having sexual intercourse obtained by accused from the victim girls by deceitful means in some cases and under threat of dire consequences in some other cases and therefore, held, their acts fell under cl. thirdly, while some of the victims being aged below 16 years, their consent was immaterial in view of cl. sixthly — Moreover, accused had dominion or control over the victims — Held, charge of rape against the accused made out

It is in the evidence of the prosecutrix that consent of many of the prosecutrix had been obtained by deceitful means that if they had sex with A-1 they would be cured of asthma or that if they had sex with A-1 it is service to God or some of the girls have been raped under threat of dire consequences. A-1 had dominion/control over the Ashram girls and most of them are orphans and no alternative place to go. Therefore the case clearly falls within the thirdly clause of Section 375 IPC. Furthermore, if the consent is obtained by deceitful means or under threat of death or hurt, it is no consent at all and it is without her consent. Therefore, the charge of rape levelled against A-1 falls within the definition of Section 375 IPC. This apart, under the sixthly clause the consent is immaterial when the prosecutrix is under 16 years of age. Some of the prosecutrix were below 16 years of age when they were raped by A-1. In view of the facts and circumstances of the case, A-1 was rightly charged and convicted under Section 376(2)(c) IPC. (Para 40). Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2005 SC 2132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2005]

[8829] — S. 375 Fourthly & S. 376 — Applicability — Appellant-accused marrying complainant during subsistence of his first marriage and cohabiting with her for about four years — Submission that complainant knew about his marital status and hence clause "Fourthly" to S. 375 would have no application — Tenability — Held, even though the complainant claimed to have married the accused, which fact is established from several documents, that does not improve the situation so far as the appellant-accused is concerned — His subsequent marriage had no sanctity in law and was void ab initio — Hence, conviction of appellant under clause "Fourthly" of S. 375 sustainable — Delay in lodging complaint was inconsequential — However, taking into consideration peculiar facts of the case that the complainant had knowledge about his previous marriage, and had yet surrendered to him for sexual intercourse, held, reduction of custodial sentence from 7 years as imposed by trial court to 3 years by High Court and enhancement of compensation to Rs 1,00,000 from Rs 10,000 with a direction that in case the compensation amount was not paid, the reduction in sentence would not be given effect to, calls for no interference (Paras 4 and 11 to 17). Bhupinder Singh v. UT, Chandigarh, (2008) 8 SCC 531: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 553: 2008 Cri LJ 3546.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-2008]

[Ed.: An interesting question arises whether on these facts the appellant could have been charged under Sections 493 and 494 IPC, and if so why not.]

[8830] — S. 375 Fifthly — Conviction under, upheld in view of testimony of prosecutrix which stood corroborated by that of her father as well as of the doctor who had examined her — That after the occurrence the prosecutrix had been living in the house of the accused and had given birth to a child, if established, could be taken into account in fixing quantum of punishment — But in the absence of any evidence in that regard, sentence of five years' RI upheld. Bishnudayal v. State of Bihar, 1980 Supp SCC 358: 1981 SCC (Cri) 283: AIR 1981 SC 39: 1980 Cri LJ 1297.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-1980]

[8831] — S. 376 — Conduct of prosecutrix — Relevance — Resistance — Absence of — Inference — Held, would merely suggest want of violent resistance on part of prosecutrix and not consensus — Prosecutrix was forcibly caught, threatened at knife-point and thereafter gang raped — Non-resistance because of fear in such circumstances not unnatural (Paras 25, 26 and 46). Vijay v. State of M.P., (2010) 8 SCC 191: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2010]

Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793; Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185, followed

[8832] — S. 376 — Consent — Inference of — Absence of any marks of violence on the body of accused on examination after three days of the incident, held, not conclusive — The same, if any, would have been obliterated and not noticeable to the Medical Officer who examined him (Para 13). State of H.P. v. Mango Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331: AIR 2000 SC 2798.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2000]

[8833] — S. 376 — Conviction and sentence — On facts held, prosecutrix being not a girl of easy virtue could not have voluntarily allowed the accused to sexually assault her when she ultimately married the other accused within 10-15 days of her elopement — Her silence about non-reporting to the witnesses must be taken to be either because of fear of reprisal or to protect her image — Conviction upheld — Offence being of 1982, prior to prescription of minimum sentence, the sentence reduced to that already undergone. State of A.P. v. P. Narasimha, (1994) 4 SCC 453: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1180.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.M. Sahai and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1994]

[8834] — S. 376 — Evidence of rape victim — If a person in authority such as a police officer is accused of rape, evidence of the prosecutrix should be judged in the backdrop of the particular fact situation in which she was placed — Absence of resistance by prosecutrix to be viewed in the context of the sense of awe attached to the authority and her helplessness — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114-A

The infrastructure of our criminal investigation system recognises and protects the right of a woman to decent and dignified treatment at the hands of the investigating agency. This is evident from the proviso to sub-section (2) of S. 47, sub-section (2) of S. 53 and proviso to S. 160 of the Code. If a police officer misuses his authority and power while dealing with a young helpless girl aged about 19 or 20 years, her conduct and behaviour must be judged in the backdrop of the situation in which she was placed. The purpose and setting, the person and his position, the misuse or abuse of office and the despair of the victim which led to her surrender are all relevant factors which must be present in the mind of the court while evaluating the conduct evidence of the prosecutrix. A person in authority, such as a police officer, carries with him the awe of office which is bound to condition the behaviour of his victim. The court must not be oblivious of the emotional turmoil and the psychological injury that a prosecutrix suffers on being molested or raped. A woman who is subjected to sex violence would always be slow and hesitant about disclosing her plight. The court must, therefore, evaluate her evidence in the above background.

3.(b) "Against her will" and "without her consent" (contd.)

In this case though the version of the prosecutrix is that she had tried to resist the accused respondent that the respondent being a strong man was able to overpower her and take her by force. Besides, he was a man in authority in police uniform. The prosecutrix was alone and helpless. In the circumstances the resistance would be considerably dampened. State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210: AIR 1990 SC 658: 1990 Cri LJ 889.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1990]

[8835] — S. 376 — Rape — Absence of consent — Inference of — Injury on right side of the posterior labia minora indicating forcible sexual intercourse — Letter written by the deceased to the accused cautioning him not to have a leering attitude towards her — Extra-judicial confession of the accused that he took the girl by force and kept her on the cot — Sexual intercourse followed by the act of throttling is strongly suggestive of a vehement resistance offered by the victim — Held, the circumstances are sufficient to reach the irresistible inference that the deceased was ravished by the accused despite her resistance. State of A.P. v. Gangula Satya Murthy, (1997) 1 SCC 272: 1997 SCC (Cri) 325: AIR 1997 SC 1588: 1997 Cri LJ 774.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1996]

[8836] — S. 376 — Rape — Consent — Despite sufficient opportunity the prosecutrix neither running away nor taking the help of the neighbours — Absence of injuries on the person of the prosecutrix including her private parts — Her entire conduct showing that she was a consenting party — Absence of allegation that she was put in physical restraint in the house — Held, in the circumstances, conviction of the appellant for rape cannot be sustained. Kuldeep K. Mahato v. State of Bihar, (1998) 6 SCC 420: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1460: AIR 1998 SC 2694.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-1998]

[8837] — S. 376 — Rape — Consent — Presumption of — Merely because prosecutrix was aged above 16 years, held, she cannot be held to be a consenting party — No evidence to show consent was produced — Acquittal not sustainable — Matter remitted (Para 3). State of U.P. v. Manoj Kumar Pandey, (2009) 1 SCC 72: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 244: AIR 2009 SC 711: (2009) 1 ECrN 862 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2008]

[8838] — S. 376 — Rape — Medical evidence — Absence of spermatozoa on vaginal smear — Does not falsify the version of the prosecutrix — Penetration does not necessarily lead to the discovery of spermatozoa — Its absence may be due to various other factors such as faulty taking of smear, its preservation, quality of semen, etc. — On facts, it was not elicited from the prosecutrix of any if the two persons had reached orgasm emitting semen in her private parts

With regard to the vaginal smear examination the doctor stated that no spermatozoa was seen on it, and the absence of sperms has been viewed against the version of the prosecutrix. It was never elicited from the prosecutrix as to whether the two persons who committed rape on her had reached orgasm emitting semen in her private parts. No presumption can be made that penetration of penis in the private parts of a rape victim must necessarily lead to the discovery of spermatozoa. It is a question of detail and has to be put to test by cross-examination. Otherwise also there may be various other factors which may negative the presence of spermatozoa such as faulty taking of the smear, its preservation, quality of semen etc. The absence of spermatozoa prima facie could not be allowed to tell against the version of the prosecutrix. Narayanamma v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 5 SCC 728: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1573.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1994]

[8839] — S. 376 — Rape — Medical evidence — Proof — Absence of dead or mobile spermatozoa in the vagina or in the cervix of the prosecutrix, held, not a conclusive proof of her not being subjected to forcible sexual intercourse

The High Court erred in holding that the prosecutrix had not been subjected to forcible sexual intercourse or the prosecution had failed to prove the case against Respondent 1 also. The High Court's conclusion that absence of dead or mobile spermatozoa either in the vagina or in the cervix of the prosecutrix rules out the possibility of the prosecutrix having been subjected to sexual intercourse, is not referable to any evidence on record. The presence of spermatozoa, dead or alive, would differ from person to person and its positive presence depends upon various circumstances. Otherwise also the presence or absence of spermatozoa is ascertained for the purposes of corroboration of the statement of the prosecutrix. If the prosecutrix is believed to be a truthful witness in her deposition, no further corroboration may be insisted upon. Corroboration is admittedly only a rule of prudence. (Paras 5 and 6). State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147: AIR 1999 SC 3916: 2000 Cri LJ 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-1999]

State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, followed

[8840] — S. 376 — Rape — Non-rupture of hymen or absence of injury on victim's private parts — Held, does not belie her testimony as she nowhere stated that she bled per vagina and her statement remained virtually unchallenged in cross-examination — To constitute rape penetration, however slight, is sufficient — Prosecutrix subjected to sexual intercourse in a standing posture indicating absence of any injury on her private parts — Opinion of doctor that no rape was committed cannot throw out an otherwise cogent and trustworthy evidence of the prosecutrix — Besides such opinion was based on "no reasons" — On facts, corroboration of testimony of prosecutrix by medical evidence was not essential — In any case, her evidence was amply corroborated by her mother and father whom she immediately informed about the occurrence — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 45 and 8 Ill. (j). Ranjit Hazarika v. State of Assam, (1998) 8 SCC 635: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1725.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-1996]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, followed

[8841] — S. 376 — Rape — Plea of consensual sex raised for the first time under Art. 136, held, not maintainable (Para 23). Utpal Das v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 493.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2010]

[8842] — S. 376 — Rape — Prosecutrix going with accused voluntarily to several places and staying with him in lodges — Evidence regarding her age doubtful and not convincing — Medical evidence showing that she was used to sexual intercourse — Prosecutrix not clearly stating that accused had sexual intercourse with her except stating that he did something which he ought not to have done — Held, in absence of some other evidence to support prosecution case that the accused had sexual intercourse with her offence under S. 376 not made out. State of Karnataka v. Sureshbabu Puk Raj Porral, (1994) 1 SCC 468: 1994 SCC (Cri) 435: AIR 1994 SC 966: 1994 Cri LJ 1216.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-1993]

[8843] — S. 376 — Rape — Whether there was consent — Evidence showing that prosecutrix had planned her departure from her house in advance and had willingly gone away with the accused-appellant — Held, this indicates that there was no threat or inducement either in regard to her leaving the house or in regard to accompanying the appellant — In such a situation, in absence of any other material to show to the contrary, accused- appellant cannot be held to have raped the prosecutrix (Para 6). Jinish Lal Sah v. State of Bihar, (2003) 1 SCC 605: 2003 SCC (Cri) 395: AIR 2003 SC 2081.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-2002]

2002 Cri LJ 274 (Pat), reversed

[8844] — Ss. 376 and 342 — Consent — Whether prosecutrix was a consenting party to the rape — Both prosecutrix and accused found completely naked and having sexual intercourse on a bed — Prosecutrix was not raising any cries — Prosecutrix then aged 20 years — According to medical evidence she was habitual to sexual intercourse, her hymen admitted two fingers easily and there were no injuries on her person, contrary to her statement that she had received injuries on her hand and hip — Held, prosecutrix was a consenting party and accused-respondent had not committed forcible intercourse with her (Para 2). State of Rajasthan v. Shanker, (2000) 9 SCC 161: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1193.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-3-2000]

3.(b) "Against her will" and "without her consent" (contd.)

[8845] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — "Against her will" and "without her consent" — Case of kidnapping and rape — Absence of any alarm being raised by prosecutrix at public places, while being taken to other places — She being under constant threat — Inference of willingness to accompany accused — Not made out — Doubt about truthfulness of her evidence — Not created — Held, submission of respondent-accused (A-1), that no alarm was raised by prosecutrix at bus-stand or other places, where she was taken, created serious doubt about truthfulness of her evidence, rejected, as it overlooks situation in which prosecutrix was placed in — She had been kidnapped by two adult males, one of them (A-1) wielded a firearm and threatened her and she was taken away from her village — In such circumstances, she made sensible decision not to raise an alarm — Any alarm at unknown place might have endangered her life — Absence of alarm by her at public place, cannot lead to an inference that she had willingly accompanied A-1 and A-2 (another accused) — Circumstances made her a submissive victim and that does not mean that she was inclined and willing to have intercourse with A-1 — She had no free act of mind during her stay with A-1, as she was under constant fear (Para 30). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Prakash Singh v. Union of India, (2006) 8 SCC 1: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 417, relied on.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

[8846] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Abduction and rape — Defence of consent — But prosecutrix not raising alarm out of fear — Prosecutrix abducted by the appellants at the point of knife — When she tried to resist or shout she was given a thrashing and threatened to be killed — She categorically stating that she was given a slap on the mouth when she tried to resist — Her statement supported by medical evidence — Prosecutrix made to sit on the bar of the cycle while one of the appellants was driving the cycle and the other was sitting on the back of the cycle — Therefore, it was difficult for the prosecutrix to raise any alarm — Other circumstances mentioned in the judgment of the trial court also consistent with the guilt of the appellants — Held, in the circumstances of the case, the prosecutrix was not a consenting party — Conviction upheld. Harishankar v. State of Maharashtra, (1997) 11 SCC 191: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1065.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Faizan Uddin and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-1997]

[8847] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Rape — Conviction reversed — Appellant-accused alleged to have abducted PW 4 allegedly a minor girl, maidservant of PW 2 & PW 3, and took her to a hotel and raped her — Prosecutrix roaming in the city by rickshaws/buses along with appellant for a long time, going to the hotel without any protest, accompanying the appellant to the room, spending the whole night with him, coming out of the hotel after checking out from the hotel, without raising any hue or cry or informing anybody that appellant had misbehaved with her in any manner — Held, such conduct of prosecutrix makes prosecution case unbelievable — No reason indicated as to why in absence of any allegation of threat or coercion, prosecutrix had not raised any alarm or informed any person on the road — Doctor who examined her, found no injury of any kind on her body or private parts, and opined that she was used to sexual intercourse — Further, there were serious contradictions in her deposition in court and her statement recorded under S. 164 CrPC — Material contradictions were also discernible regarding factual aspect of the incident — No material objects like clothes, blood samples, semen samples seized/taken by the IO — Prosecutrix had alleged that appellant had forcibly torn open her clothes, but no torn clothes recovered by IO — No person examined from the hotel to identify appellant or the prosecutrix — She was registered as wife of the appellant under a fictitious name, and hence her identification by some person from the hotel was necessary — Further, the doctor who examined her had opined that she was aged about 18 years, while the prosecutrix stated that she was only 13 years at the time of alleged incident — Her employer PW 2 stating that she was 13/14 years without indicating any basis therefor — However, her parents or any other family member who could be most reliable and natural witness on point of age not examined — Held, prosecutrix appears used to sexual intercourse and a dissolute woman — She had no objection in mixing up and having free movement with any of her known person, for enjoyment — Thus, she appeared to be a woman of easy virtues — Prosecution failed to prove its case against the appellant beyond reasonable doubt — Hence, impugned judgment of High Court convicting appellant under S. 376 set aside — CrPC, 1973, S. 164

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The trial court and the High Court proceeded with altogether different set of facts. Before the trial court the prosecution case had been that the prosecutrix went to the zoo along with S and on her return from the zoo the appellant had seen both of them together and slapped S who ran away and thereafter the appellant took the prosecutrix on the pretext of taking her to movie and roamed; took her on a rickshaw to the hotel where she was kept and raped. (Para 12)

However, before the High Court the case was been entirely different. It was stated that when the prosecutrix came out from the house of the informant PW 2 A the appellant met her and proposed to take her to a movie and she went along with him. FIR lodged by PW 2 was to the effect that appellant-accused had entered his house and forcibly abducted his maidservant (prosecutrix). Thus, there were material contradictions regarding the factual aspects of the incident itself. (Para 13)

Further no explanation was given as to why the investigating officer did not seize any material objects like clothes, blood samples, etc. from the prosecutrix and the place of occurrence. Prosecutrix had stated that accused had torn open her clothes but no torn clothes were recovered by the IO. (Para 14)

Also no effort was made by IO to take the semen, blood samples, etc. from the appellant which could have given the prosecution an opportunity to obtain medical reports of the appellant as it was necessary to establish the guilt of the appellant. No person was examined from the hotel to identify the appellant or the prosecutrix as the IO has only seized the register of the hotel to establish that Room No. 102 was booked in the name of appellant MA and MB as husband and wife. Admittedly, the name of the prosecutrix was not MB. Therefore, some person from the hotel should have been examined to identify her as well as the appellant. (Para 15)

Furtheremore, discrepancies were discernible in her examination under S. 164 CrPC and deposition in court. No explanation was offered as to why in the absence of any allegation of threat or coercion, the prosecutrix could not have raised the alarm or informed any person on the road, nor as to why an independent witness or an employee of the hotel was not examined and why the parents of the prosecutrix were not examined to find out her age. (Para 16)

The prosecutrix appears to be a lady used to sexual intercourse and a dissolute lady. She had no objection in mixing up and having free movement with any of her known person, for enjoyment. Thus, she appeared to be a woman of easy virtues. The prosecution failed to prove its case against the appellant beyond reasonable doubt. Hence, impugned judgment of the High Court convicting accused under S. 376 set aside. (Paras 17 and 18). Mussauddin Ahmed v. State of Assam, (2009) 14 SCC 541: (2009) 80 AIC 1 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-7-2009]

Gopal Krishnaji Ketkar v. Mohd. Haji Latif, AIR 1968 SC 1413, relied on [8848] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape — Consent — Inference as to — Absence of marks of injuries either on the person of the accused or the person of the prosecutrix, held, does not lead to any inference that the accused has not committed forcible sexual intercourse on the prosecutrix. B.C. Deva v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 12 SCC 122: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 253.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-2007]

[8849] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape of girl of above 16 years age — Whether she was a consenting party — Evidence of the prosecutrix that she was forcibly subjected to sexual intercourse should normally be believed unless there is material leading to an inference of her consent — Absence of marks of external injuries on the person of the prosecutrix by itself not sufficient to draw an inference of consent of the prosecutrix — Having regard to the fact that the prosecutrix was a teenaged girl while accused was an able-bodied youth along with other facts, held, testimony of the prosecutrix that she was subjected to rape was credible

The prosecutrix, a teenaged girl was living in a village with her father, mother and a younger sister. The family resided in a lonely hutment situated in a field. On 1-10-1993 at about 12 noon, the prosecutrix was alone in her hut busy washing clothes at a water pump. NK, the accused-respondent was known to the prosecutrix since before. He came to her and initially asked for water which she provided in a lota. Then the accused asked for a knife on the pretext that it was needed for peeling cucumber. The accused was gaining time to ascertain if the prosecutrix was alone. No sooner the prosecutrix turned her back unmindful of what lay ahead, her hand was caught hold of by the accused and twisted behind her back. The accused pushed her to a bhitian, a secluded place. She was thrown on the ground. The accused put his knee on her chest so as to overpower her. Her shouting was throttled by the accused who placed his palm on her mouth and later covered her mouth by a towel pressed against her lips. She was then raped. Blood oozed out from her private parts. Having finished his act the accused left her alone and took to his heels. The prosecutrix was weeping. She narrated the incident to a woman and to her father in quick succession. The statement of the father of the prosecutrix corroborates her in all material particulars. The victim accompanied by her father wanted to go to the police station and lodge the first information report of the incident but they were prevented from doing so by several village people belonging to the community of the accused who also proposed that the matter be settled within the village by convening a panchayat. However, the report of the incident was lodged on 5-10-1993 at 11.20 a.m. The offence was registered and investigation commenced. According to the doctor, he had found the hymen ruptured in multiple radial tears, the edges of which showed healing at most of the places and mild tenderness. The prosecutrix was not used to sexual intercourse. Pieces of broken bangles were found at the place of the incident and seized. The Forensic Science Laboratory has found (vide report Ex. P-9) presence of human semen on the lehenga seized from the prosecutrix. The trial court found the incident, as alleged, proved. In the opinion of the learned trial Judge the testimony of the prosecutrix inspired confidence. It was corroborated by the medical evidence as also by the testimony of her father. The prosecutrix was held to be 15 years of age on the date of the incident. Though there was delay in lodging the FIR but it was satisfactorily explained. Accordingly, the accused-respondent was found guilty of the offence punishable under Section 376 IPC and sentenced to undergo seven years' rigorous imprisonment with a fine of Rs 2000 and to a further simple imprisonment of one year and nine months in default of payment of fine. The High Court in an appeal preferred by the accused-respondent, held that the prosecutrix was not proved beyond reasonable doubt to be below 16 years of age. In the opinion of the High Court though the factum of the accused-respondent having committed sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix was proved but the absence of injuries on the person of the prosecutrix was a material fact not excluding the possibility of the prosecutrix having been a consenting party. The delay in lodging the FIR was not satisfactorily explained. The delay coupled with the non-examination of the woman to whom the incident was first narrated by the prosecutrix immediately after the occurrence rendered the prosecution case doubtful. Mainly on this reasoning the High Court allowed the appeal and acquitted the accused respondent. The questions arising for consideration before the Supreme Court were: whether the prosecution story, as alleged, inspires confidence of the court on the evidence adduced? Whether the prosecutrix, is a witness worthy of reliance? Whether the testimony of a prosecutrix who has been a victim of rape stands in need of corroboration and, if so, whether such corroboration is available in the facts of the present case? What was the age of the prosecutrix? Whether she was a consenting party to the crime? Whether there was unexplained delay in lodging the FIR? Allowing the appeal,

3.(b) "Against her will" and "without her consent" (contd.)

Held :

For the offence of rape as defined in Section 375 of the Indian Penal Code, the sexual intercourse should have been against the will of the woman or without her consent. Consent is immaterial in certain circumstances covered by clauses thirdly to sixthly, the last one being when the woman is under 16 years of age. If she be of 16 years of age or above, her consent cannot be presumed; an inference as to consent can be drawn if only based on evidence or probabilities of the case. The victim of rape stating on oath that she was forcibly subjected to sexual intercourse or that the act was done without her consent, has to be believed and accepted like any other testimony unless there is material available to draw an inference as to her consent or else the testimony of prosecutrix be such as would be inherently improbable. The absence of visible marks of injuries on the person of the prosecutrix on the date of her medical examination would not necessarily mean that she had not suffered any injuries or that she had offered no resistance at the time of commission of the crime. Absence of injuries on the person of the prosecutrix is not necessarily an evidence of falsity of the allegation or an evidence of consent on the part of the prosecutrix. It will all depend on the facts and circumstances of each case. (Paras 19 and 18)

In the present case, the prosecutrix had just crossed the age of 16 years. The perpetrator of the crime was an able-bodied youth bustling with energy and determined to fulfil his lust armed with a knife in his hand and having succeeded in forcefully removing the victim to a secluded place where there was none around to help the prosecutrix in her defence. The injuries which the prosecutrix suffered or might have suffered in defending herself and offering resistance to the accused were abrasions or bruises which would heal up in the ordinary course of nature within 2 to 3 days of the incident.

The prosecutrix clearly stated that she was subjected to sexual intercourse forcibly by the accused. She was not a consenting party. She offered resistance to the best of her ability but she succumbed and fell victim to the force employed by the accused. (Paras 18 and 19)

The statement of the father of the prosecutrix is admissible in evidence and relevant under Section 157 as her former statement corroborating her testimony as also under Section 8 of the Evidence Act as evidence of her conduct. The testimony of the father of the prosecutrix was trustworthy and unembellished. The prosecutrix and her father had both been subjected to lengthy cross-examination. The trial court found both the witnesses reliable. There is no reason to disbelieve their testimony. A father would not ordinarily subscribe to a false story of sexual assault involving his own daughter and thereby putting at stake the reputation of the family and jeopardizing the married life of the daughter. The testimony of the prosecutrix's father was reliable and lent support to the narration of the incident by the prosecutrix. No reason had been proved, nor even suggested during cross-examination of any of the witnesses why the prosecutrix or any member of her family would falsely implicate the accused roping him in a false charge of rape. It is not possible to draw an inference as to consent against the prosecutrix and to hold that she was a willing party to the sexual assault made by the accused. Upon an evaluation of the evidence available on record it must be held that the prosecutrix is a witness of truth. Her testimony inspires confidence. Other evidence available on record lends assurance to her testimony. The trial court had rightly held that sexual assault amounting to rape was committed on her by the accused-respondent. In spite of her having not been proved to be under 16 years of age the High Court was not justified in holding her to be a consenting party to the sexual assault on her. Therefore, the High Court has committed a clear error of law in interfering with the judgment of the trial court regarding proof of guilt of the accused. (Paras 19 and 20). State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898: AIR 2000 SC 1812: 2000 Cri LJ 2205.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

State of Punjab v. Gurmeet Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 SCR 377: 1952 Cri LJ 547; Sidheswar Ganguly v. State of W.B., AIR 1958 SC 143: 1958 Cri LJ 273; Madho Ram v. State of U.P., (1973) 1 SCC 533: 1973 SCC (Cri) 417; State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598; State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781; Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; Bodhisattwa Gautam v. Subhra Chakraborty, (1996) 1 SCC 490: 1996 SCC (Cri) 133; Sk. Zakir v. State of Bihar, (1983) 4 SCC 10: 1983 SCC (Cri) 76; Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, (1987) 2 SCC 27: 1987 SCC (Cri) 249; Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977, relied on

[8850] — Ss. 376 and 375 Secondly — Rape — Consent of victim to sexual intercourse — Voluntary consent — Question as to — Determination of — Factors to be considered and approach of court — Held, what is voluntary consent and what is not would depend on facts of each case — Factors like the age of the girl, her education, her social status and likewise the social status of the boy has to be considered — Court should closely scrutinise evidence while taking into consideration the said factors — If attending circumstances lead to conclusion that it was not only the accused but the prosecutrix was also equally keen, then in that case the offence is condoned

What is a voluntary consent and what is not a voluntary consent depends on the facts of each case. In order to appreciate the testimony, one has to see the factors like the age of the girl, her education and her status in the society and likewise the social status of the boy. The court of fact while appreciating evidence in such cases should closely scrutinise evidence while taking into consideration the said factors. If the attending circumstances lead to the conclusion that it was not only the accused but the prosecutrix was also equally keen, then in that case the offence is condoned. (Paras 10 and 11). Yedla Srinivasa Rao v. State of A.P., (2006) 11 SCC 615.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

[8851] — Ss. 376 and 375 Fifthly — Prosecutrix below or about 16 years of age — Held, consent immaterial — Absence of violent or stiff resistance and the absence of marks of violence on private parts or elsewhere, held, of no consequence

Where a person on whom rape is committed is under 16 years of age, even consent is immaterial (vide Fifthly of S. 375) and penetration is sufficient to constitute the sexual intercourse necessary to the offence of rape (vide explanation to S. 375). The suggestion that, there being no marks of violence on the private parts or elsewhere on the person of the prosecutrix, there could be no offence of rape on her, is wholly misconceived. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793: AIR 1972 SC 2661: (1973) 2 SCR 197: 1973 Cri LJ 179.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1972]

3.(b) "Against her will" and "without her consent" (contd.)

[8852] — Ss. 376 and 506 — Rape — Consent — Burden of proof in respect of — Rape by teacher of his student — Held, question of consent is really a matter of defence by the accused and it was for him to place materials to show that there was consent — High Court erred in putting burden on the victim to show that there was no consent — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 114-A and 101 & 103 (Para 15). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

[8853] — Ss. 376 and 506 Pt. II — Rape — Consent — Meaning and inference of — Consent and submission — Distinction between — Victim, a girl whose mental faculties were undeveloped cannot legally give consent — Where such a girl was ravished by accused several times, held, such a victim could not be said to have suffered sexual intercourses with consent — For constituting consent there must be exercise of intelligence based on the knowledge of the significance and the moral effect of the act — Consent is different from submission as every consent involves a submission but the converse does not follow — In law, an act of helpless resignation in the face of inevitable compulsion, quiescence, non-resistance or passive giving-in when the faculty is either clouded by fear or vitiated by duress or impaired due to mental retardation or deficiency, held, cannot be considered to be consent — It has to be a conscious and voluntary act — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114-A (Para 6). Tulshidas Kanolkar v. State of Goa, (2003) 8 SCC 590.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-2003]

[8854] — Ss. 376 Sixthly and 366-A — Rape and procuration of minor girl — Consent for sexual intercourse, held, immaterial — Victim, girl aged about 13 years and 9 months going with the appellant-accused of her own free will and having sexual intercourse with him — High Court by the impugned judgment convicting accused under Ss. 376 and 366-A IPC — Held, clause "sixthly" of S. 376 clearly stipulates that sexual intercourse with a woman with her or without her consent when she is under 16 years of age, amounts to rape — In the instant case evidence clearly established that the victim was less than 16 years of age and, therefore, the conviction for offences punishable under S. 376 IPC cannot be faulted — As far as S. 366-A is concerned, since the essential ingredient that the intercourse must be with a person other than the accused has not been established, S. 366-A has no application (Paras 7 to 10). Iqbal v. State of Kerala, (2007) 12 SCC 724: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 381: AIR 2008 SC 288: 2008 Cri LJ 436.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2007]

Followed in State of Punjab v. Rakesh Kumar, (2008) 12 SCC 33

(c) Presumption against consent under S. 114-A, Evidence Act

See also 'B.4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy', and

'C.22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act', below

[8855] — S. 376(2)(g) r/w S. 34 and S. 114-A, Evidence Act, 1872 — Gang rape — Presumption of non-consensual intercourse — Prosecutrix consistently stating that she had never consented to intercourse and that she was forcibly caught, threatened at knife-point and thereafter subjected to gang rape — No dispute regarding place or alleged occurrence — FIR lodged promptly and accused arrested immediately — No evidence of false implication since accused were unknown to prosecutrix — Discrepancies found in her testimony insignificant considering that she was illiterate rustic village girl — Non-resistance because of fear, held, not unnatural — Consent by prosecutrix, even if assumed she was a major, not established — Hence, conviction of appellant under Ss. 376/34 and sentence of 10 years' RI along with fine of Rs 500, held proper — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114-A (Paras 46, 47, 37 and 38). Vijay v. State of M.P., (2010) 8 SCC 191: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2010]

State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; State of U.P. v. Pappu, (2005) 3 SCC 594: 2005 SCC (Cri) 780; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of Orissa v. Thakara Besra, (2002) 9 SCC 86: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1080; State of H.P. v. Raghubir Singh, (1993) 2 SCC 622: 1993 SCC (Cri) 674; Wahid Khan v. State of M.P., (2010) 2 SCC 9: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 1208; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 Cri LJ 547, relied on

(d) Penetration/Intercourse

See also 'C.20.(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof', below

[8856] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Ingredients of rape, reiterated — Held, for satisfying ingredients of rape, it is not necessary that there should be complete penetration (Para 20). Satyapal v. State of Haryana, (2009) 6 SCC 635: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 108: AIR 2009 SC 2190: (2009) 77 AIC 66 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-2009]

Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266, followed [8857] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Intercourse — When takes place — Genital of appellant-accused penetrating genital of prosecutrix and blood oozing from her private parts — Doctor, after examining the prosecutrix finding superficial laceration just at the bottom of labia majora and labia minora, hymen torn, and vaginal orifice admitting one finger with difficulty — Submission by accused that offence under S. 354 or S. 511 made out, and not S. 376 — Held, "intercourse" envisaged under S. 375 means sexual connection — On facts held, act of the accused fell well within the purview of the provision — Hence, accused guilty of commission of actual rape and not of outraging modesty of woman or attempt to rape (Paras 3, 8, 9, 10 and 11). Ramkripal v. State of M.P., (2007) 11 SCC 265: (2007) 54 AIC 131 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 2302.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-3-2007]

Raju Pandurang Mahale v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 4 SCC 371: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1259, relied on [8858] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape of minor — Injuries on prosecutrix — No definite medical opinion as to recent intercourse — Hymen of the prosecutrix remaining intact but there was swelling on her private part which had become red — Doctor unable to give definite opinion as regards whether she was subjected to intercourse in the immediate past — Held, even slight penetration was sufficient to constitute offence of rape and the redness of the hymen would not have been possible but for penetration to some extent (Paras 10, 11 and 12). Guddu v. State of M.P., (2007) 14 SCC 654: (2006) 42 AIC 79 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2006]

Koppula Venkat Rao v. State of A.P., (2004) 3 SCC 602: 2004 SCC (Cri) 840; Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266, relied on

[8859] — S. 375 Expln. — Application — Hymen found intact — Finding of rape despite such finding — Held, even slightest penetration is sufficient to make out offence of rape and depth of penetration is immaterial — Hence, conviction for rape, upheld

Even the slightest penetration is sufficient to make out an offence of rape and depth of penetration is immaterial. It was contended on behalf of the appellant that since hymen of the prosecutrix was found to be intact, it cannot be said that an offence of rape was committed on her by the appellant. This contention cannot be accepted as the offence of rape has been defined in Section 375 IPC. The medical report recorded that the hymen of the prosecutrix was intact, that her private part admitted only the tip of little finger with difficulty and that no intercourse was done with her. (Paras 19 to 22 and 8). Wahid Khan v. State of M.P., (2010) 2 SCC 9.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2009]

[8860] — S. 375 Expln. — Held, discovery of spermatozoa in victim's private part not necessary to establish penetration

Trial court recorded findings that victim's clothes were bloodstained. Chemical examination of the "Salwar" (trouser) which she was wearing showed presence of spermatozoa though it was not detected on her shirt. Spermatozoa was also detected on the underwear of accused.

Held :

Medico-legal examination of prosecutrix clearly reveals that she was subjected to rape. In her statement, she had spoken of "penetration". Discovery of spermatozoa in the private part of the victim is not a must to establish penetration. There are several factors which may negative the presence of spermatozoa. (Para 15). State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980: AIR 2001 SC 2075.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

Narayanamma v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 5 SCC 728: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1573; Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598, relied on

Gian Chand v. State of H.P., (1996) 2 Crimes 213 (HP), reversed

[8861] — S. 375 Expln. — Rape — Ingredients of — Complete penetration not essential — Even partial or slightest penetration with or without emission of semen and rupture of hymen or even an attempt at penetration sufficient

Ingredients which are essential for proving a charge of rape are the accomplishment of the act with force and resistance. To constitute the offence of rape neither S. 375 of IPC nor the Explanation attached thereto require that there should necessarily be complete penetration of the penis into the private part of the victim/prosecutrix. In other words to constitute the offence of rape it is not at all necessary that there should be complete penetration of the male organ with emission of semen and rupture of hymen. Even partial or slightest penetration of the male organ within the labia majora or the vulva or pudenda with or without any emission of semen or even an attempt at penetration into the private part of the victim would be quite enough for the purpose of Ss. 375 and 376 of IPC. That being so it is quite possible to commit legally the offence of rape even without causing any injury to the genitals or leaving any seminal stains. State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585.

3.(d) Penetration/Intercourse (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-1994]

[8862] — S. 375 Expln. — Rape — Penetration — How much necessary to constitute rape — Rape of minor girl (8 years) — Held, even slightest penetration of penis into vagina without rupturing the hymen would constitute rape — Medical officer on examination of the victim after 5 days finding an abrasion on the medial side of labia majora and redness around labia minora with white discharge but hymen intact admitting tip of a little finger — In view of absence of signs of full penetration, medical officer opining that there was an attempt to rape — Held, on the basis of the medical findings alone, it can be safely concluded that there was partial penetration within the labia majora or vulva or pudenda which in the legal sense is sufficient to constitute rape — Besides,extra-judicial confessions of the accused,corroborated by the reliable testimony of the prosecutrix herself as well as of other PWs, also showing commission of rape by the accused — Hence the opinion of attempt to rape given by an inexperienced medical officer (then aged 28 years) not acceptable — Conclusion of High Court that the offence made out was only under S. 354 not reasonable and justifiable having regard to the totality of the evidence — Accused-respondent must be must be convicted under S. 376. Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1992]

Natha v. Emperor, AIR 1923 Lah 536: (1925) 26 Cri LJ 1185: 88 IC 705; Abdul Majid v. Emperor, AIR 1927 Lah 735(2): 28 Cri LJ 241: 100 IC 113; Jantan v. Emperor, AIR 1934 Lah 797: (1934) 36 Punj LR 35; Ghanshyam Misra v. State, AIR 1957 Ori 78: 1957 Cri LJ 469; Das Bernard v. State, 1974 Cri LJ 1098; Anthony, In re, AIR 1960 Mad 308: 1960 Cri LJ 927, approved [8863] — S. 375 Expln. — Word "penetrate" — Dictionary meaning referred to (Para 12). Tarkeshwar Sahu v. State of Bihar (Now Jharkhand), (2006) 8 SCC 560: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 556.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

Concise Oxford Dictionary, referred to

[8864] — S. 376 — Rape — Penetration — Drawing inference in respect of, by examination of smegma — Relevant factors

The examination of smegma loses all importance after twenty-four hours of the performance of the sexual intercourse. In rape cases, if the gland of the male organ is covered by smegma, it negatives the possibility of recent complete penetration. If the accused is not circumcised, the existence of smegma around the corona gland is proof against penetration, since it is rubbed off during the act. The smegma accumulates if no bath is taken within twenty-four hours. (Para 7). Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266: AIR 2004 SC 1497: 2004 Cri LJ 1399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2004]

S.P. Kohli (Dr.) v. High Court of Punjab and Haryana, (1979) 1 SCC 212: 1979 SCC (Cri) 252, relied on

Joseph Lines, IC&K 893, relied on

[8865] — S. 376 — Rape — Proof — Penetration, held, is sine qua non for the said offence — But complete penetration with emission of semen and rupture of hymen, held, not necessary — A slight penetration in vulva with or without violence is sufficient — Depth of penetration, held, is immaterial — Irreconcilable discrepancies found when version of prosecutrix in court compared with the one given during investigation — Evidence of father of prosecutrix (hostile witness) that his wife told him that the prosecutrix was teased by the accused persons — Further, evidence of prosecutrix and doctor did not specifically refer to penetration — Neither rape nor attempt to rape established — Conviction under S. 376(2)(g) set aside — Accused-appellants convicted under S. 354 r/w S. 34 IPC

Penetration is the sine qua non for an offence of rape. In order to constitute penetration, there must be evidence clear and cogent to prove that some part of the virile member of the accused was within the labia of the pudendum of the woman, no matter how little. The depth of penetration is immaterial in an offence punishable under Section 376 IPC. Even a slight penetration in the vulva is sufficient to constitute the offence of rape and rupture of the hymen is not necessary. Vulva penetration with or without violence is as much rape as vaginal penetration. The statute merely requires evidence of penetration, and this may occur with the hymen remaining intact. The actus reus is complete with penetration. Thus, to constitute the offence of rape, it is not necessary that there should be complete penetration of the penis with emission of semen and rupture of hymen. Partial penetration within the labia majora of the vulva or pudendum with or without emission of semen is sufficient to constitute the offence of rape as defined in the law. (Para 7)

Though the prosecutrix's version in court was of rape, when it is compared with the one given during investigation, certain irreconcilable discrepancies are noticed. The evidence of PW 11, the father of the prosecutrix who according to the prosecution made a departure from what he allegedly stated during investigation, is to the effect that his wife PW 9 told him that the prosecutrix was teased by the accused persons. Merely because he was termed as a hostile witness his entire evidence does not get affected. Significantly, the evidence of the prosecutrix and the doctor does not specifically refer to penetration which is sine qua non for the offence of rape. (Para 12)

There is no material to show that the accused were determined to have sexual intercourse in all events. In the aforesaid background, the offence cannot be said to be an attempt to commit rape to attract culpability under Sections 376/511 IPC. But the case is certainly one of indecent assault upon a woman. (Para 13). Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266: AIR 2004 SC 1497: 2004 Cri LJ 1399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2004]

[8866] — Ss. 376 and 342 — Rape of a minor — Appreciation of evidence — Conviction restored — Non-reliance on medical report since time of occurrence not determined — Doctor who examined prosecutrix finding signs of recent sexual act but also accepting suggestion of accused that intercourse could have taken one week prior to her examination — Prosecutrix telling the doctor that accused had also sexually molested her one year prior to the alleged occurrence — Doctor finding hymen absent but categorically stating that prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted one finger only — Medical report, thus, corroborated by prosecutrix that she was earlier also raped by same accused — High Court acquitting the accused holding that when the doctor herself was unclear about the actual date of alleged rape, medical report could not be relied upon — While doing so, High Court ignoring the fact that doctor had also stated that there was possibility of recent intercourse i.e. within a week of her examination — Held, High Court appreciated the evidence erroneously by ignoring cogent and credible evidence of PWs 3, 4 and 5, which was further corroborated by medical evidence — Hence, impugned judgment acquitting accused set aside, and that of trial court convicting him under Ss. 376 & 342 restored

Facts:

On 15-3-2000, when parents of the prosecutrix had gone to visit her maternal uncle, her elder sister PW 4 had gone to the jungle to fetch leaves for goats, the accused is alleged to have taken the prosecutrix (minor) to his home, bolted the door of the room from inside, switched on the TV, gagged, and raped her. Thereafter he gave her Rs 5 and some "shakkar". Prosecutrix narrated the incident to PW 4. Her parents were informed about the occurrence on 16-3-2000 on their return. PW 4 also handed over to PW 5 (mother) currency note of Rs 5 given to her by the prosecutrix.

The trial court convicted the accused under Ss. 376 and 342 and sentenced him to RI for 7 years and fine of Rs 2000, and RI for 1 year respectively. The High Court acquitted the accused in appeal filed thereagainst. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above.

Held :

It was clearly proved and established that prosecutrix was a minor on the date of occurrence. Prosecutrix was examined on 17-3-2000 and she told the doctor that she had been sexually molested by accused about a year back. On examining her the doctor found signs of recent sexual act, as there was small reddened area over the left upper margin of hymen. In the cross-examination, the doctor has categorically stated that the prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted only one finger. The doctor, however, admitted that absence of hymen proves that she had been used to sexual intercourse earlier. (Paras 10 and 11)

The aforesaid medical report of the doctor is corroborated by the statement made by the prosecutrix that she was earlier also raped by the same accused. As against the suggestion of the accused that the sexual intercourse as alleged would have taken place more than one week prior to 17-3-2000, the doctor while accepting the same also stated that there can be a possibility of recent sexual intercourse i.e. within a week from 17-3-2000, which cannot be ruled out because of the redness on the margin of hymen. (Para 12)

The High Court mainly relied upon the opinion of the doctor holding that the doctor herself was unclear about the actual date of the alleged rape, and therefore, the said medical report could not be relied upon. While doing so, the High Court ignored the fact that the doctor had also stated that there can be a possibility of recent sexual intercourse i.e. within a week from 17-3-2000. The alleged rape was in fact committed within a week from 17-3-2000 i.e. on 15-3-2000. The fact that the prosecutrix was subjected to rape on 15-3-2000 is proved and established from the statement of the prosecutrix, medical report and the statement of the doctor (PW 8), who had examined the prosecutrix. The doctor had also stated that hymenal appearance cannot rule out recent coitus. Therefore, it is also proved and established beyond doubt that the prosecutrix was subjected to rape on 15-3-2000. (Para 13)

3.(d) Penetration/Intercourse (contd.)

Further, prosecutrix had categorically stated that it was the accused who had raped her, and her statement was corroborated by PWs 4 and 5. (Para 14)

Submission that there is no other independent witness to support the aforesaid allegation is also baseless. In case of this nature when the prosecutrix, who was a minor girl on the date of incident, has come forward and stated that she was raped by the accused and her testimony could not be shaken in the cross-examination, we have no reason to disbelieve her for no girl would ever lie on a vital issue of this nature. Even her sister and mother also stated as to what was reported by the prosecutrix herself immediately after the alleged occurrence. Besides, there was PW 6 who though turned hostile at one stage of her examination, admitted that PW 5 had come to her house along with her daughter and narrated the incident to her. (Paras 15 and 16)

Submission by the respondent-accused that the prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse since her hymen was absent also liable to be rejected because the prosecutrix has stated that the accused himself had earlier raped her about a year back. It is also disclosed from the medical report that the prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse as the doctor herself stated that the prosecutrix was not used to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted only one finger. She has explained that there was redness over the margin of hymen and on the basis of this redness, the possibility of recent sexual intercourse could not be ruled out. As the testimony of the prosecutrix, her sister and mother has not been shaken in the cross-examination, the statement of the doctor appears to be a plausible and convincing version. (Para 17)

Further submission of accused that evidence of PWs 3 and 4 should not be relied upon because they were child witnesses and tutored by their parents and police, is unacceptable. Testimonies of PWs 3 and 4 as regards the alleged occurrence was firm and convincing. There was no reason as to why a child of her age would falsely implicate the accused. Besides, it is settled position in law that conviction under Section 376 on sole testimony of a rape victim can be maintained if her evidence is found credible and convincing. (Paras 18 and 19)

Evidence of PWs 3 and 4 was found cogent, credible and uninfluenced by any tutoring. The High Court erroneously appreciated the evidence by ignoring credible evidence of two child witnesses statement of their mother, which was further corroborated by medical evidence. Hence, judgment of the High Court set aside and that of the trial court restored. (Paras 22 to 24). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2009) 16 SCC 697.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210; Mohd. Kalam v. State of Bihar, (2008) 7 SCC 257: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 27, followed

Mohd. Kalam v. State of Bihar, (2008) 7 SCC 257: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 27, applied

State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210, considered and relied on [8867] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape — Ingredients — Hymen of victim remaining intact, hence submission that charge of rape under S. 376 as defined in S. 375 not made out — Held on facts, victim was a very young girl of six years of age and it is quite likely that full penetration did not take place as the accused was a grown-up person of over 20 years of age — However, injuries clearly indicate that rape, as defined in S. 375, did take place (Paras 15, 16 and 11). Rajendra Datta Zarekar v. State of Goa, (2007) 14 SCC 560: AIR 2008 SC 572: 2008 Cri LJ 710.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2007]

Santosh Kumar v. State of M.P., (2006) 10 SCC 595: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 28, considered and relied on

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, 21st Edn., at p. 369; Parikh's Textbook of Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, cited

[8868] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape on minor girl (aged 11 or 12 years) — Penetration — Proof of

It was argued that having regard to the girl's age and the fact that her vagina admitted one finger with difficulty, it is not possible to believe that there was penetration.

Held :

In the absence of penetration there would not be absence of hymen with the edges torn and profuse bleeding from the vagina staining the salwar. Merely because the doctor found that the vagina admitted one finger with difficulty, it cannot be inferred that there was no penetration as the muscles must have contracted by then. The accused-appellant, a robust man must have penetrated the vagina. Prithi Chand v. State of H.P., (1989) 1 SCC 432: 1989 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 702: (1989) 1 SCR 123: 1989 Cri LJ 841.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-1989]

[8869] — S. 376 or S. 376 r/w S. 511 — Rape or attempt to rape — Ejaculation without penetration — Held, constitutes an attempt to commit rape and not actual rape — Sine qua non of offence of rape is penetration, and not ejaculation — Accused got on top of victim, but before actual intercourse ejaculated — On facts, held, commission of actual rape not established — Accused liable to be convicted for attempt to commit rape (Paras 12 and 13). Koppula Venkat Rao v. State of A.P., (2004) 3 SCC 602: 2004 SCC (Cri) 840: AIR 2004 SC 1874: 2004 Cri LJ 1804.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2004]

[Ed.: See also (1997) 8 SCC 386 and (1997) 7 SCC 677]

[8870] — Ss. 376/511, 375 Expln., 366 and 354 — Rape — Basic ingredients of — Penetration of male organ into private parts of victim/prosecutrix, held, is necessary to constitute the said offence — Slightest penetration with or without any emission of semen or even an attempt at penetration is sufficient — Rupture of hymen is not necessary — Appellant forcibly taking prosecutrix to his gumti with intention of committing illicit intercourse — But, before he could do anything, hearing alarm raised by prosecutrix, the father of prosecutrix and other villagers assembling there and rescuing the prosecutrix — Held, in absence of any attempt to penetrate, conviction under Ss. 376/511 was wholly illegal and unsustainable — However, ingredients of offences under Ss. 366 and 354 IPC being present, appellant held guilty under the said sections — Punished accordingly

On 18-2-1998, at about 1.30 a.m., when the prosecutrix, aged about 12 years, came out of her house to answer the call of nature, the appellant forcibly took her to his gumti for committing illicit sexual intercourse with her. The said gumti of the appellant was only a few feet away from the house of the prosecutrix. The prosecutrix raised an alarm, and immediately thereafter several persons including the father of the prosecutrix came from the adjoining houses and caught the appellant before he could even make any attempt to ravish the prosecutrix.

The trial court convicted the appellant under Sections 376/511 IPC and sentenced him to seven years' rigorous imprisonment. The appellant preferred an appeal before the High Court, but the same was dismissed. Hence, the present appeal.

Partly allowing the appeal,

Held :

The important ingredient of the offence under Section 375 punishable under Section 376 IPC is penetration which is altogether missing in the instant case. No offence under Section 376 IPC can be made out unless there was penetration to some extent. In the absence of penetration to any extent, it would not bring the offence of the appellant within the four corners of Section 375 of the Penal Code. (Para 10)

Under Section 375 IPC, six categories indicated therein are the basic ingredients of the offence of rape. In view of the Explanation to Section 375, mere penetration of penis in vagina is an offence of rape. Slightest penetration is sufficient for conviction under Section 376 IPC. (Paras 10 and 13)

Therefore, the basic ingredient for proving a charge of rape is the accomplishment of the act with force. The other important ingredient is penetration of the male organ within the labia majora or the vulva or pudenda with or without any emission of semen or even an attempt at penetration into the private part of the victim completely, partially or slightly would be enough for the purpose of Sections 375 and 376 IPC. In order to constitute rape, what Section 375 IPC requires is medical evidence of penetration, and this may occur and the hymen remain intact. In this regard, the position of law in England is the same. There also, where a penetration was proved, but not of such a depth as to injure the hymen, still it was held to be sufficient to constitute the crime of rape. The view has been taken that "proof of the rupture of the hymen is unnecessary". It has been laid down that "it is now unnecessary to prove actual emission of seed; sexual intercourse is deemed complete upon proof of penetration only". (Paras 10, 13, 14 and 21)

In the present case, what to talk about the penetration, there has not been any attempt of penetration to the slightest degree. The appellant had neither undressed himself nor even asked the prosecutrix to undress so there was no question of penetration. In the absence of any attempt to penetrate, the conviction under Sections 376/511 IPC is wholly illegal and unsustainable. (Paras 22 and 58)

3.(e) Ss. 376-A to 376-D

However, the offence committed squarely covers the ingredients of Sections 366 and 354 IPC. (Para 36). Tarkeshwar Sahu v. State of Bihar (Now Jharkhand), (2006) 8 SCC 560: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 556.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585; R. v. Hill, (1781) 1 East PC 439; R. v. M'Rue, (1838) 8 C&P 641: 173 ER 653; R. v. Allen, (1839) 9 C&P 31: 173 ER 727; R. v. Hughes, (1841) 2 Mood 190: 169 ER 75; R. v. Lines, (1844) 1 C&K 393: 174 ER 861; R. v. Marsden, (1891) 2 QB 149; Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266, relied on

State of Kerala v. Kundumkara Govindan, 1969 Cri LJ 818: 1968 Ker LJ 485, approved

Nirmal Kumar v. State of Haryana, 2002 Cri LJ 3352 (P&H), considered

Khalilur Rahman v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Rang 98: 34 Cri LJ 696 (FB); Rajendra v. State of Maharashtra, 1997 SCC (Cri) 840; Niranjan Singh v. State, (1986) 2 Crimes 335 (Del); Vishnu v. State of Maharashtra, 1997 Cri LJ 1724 (Bom); State of Kerala v. Hamsa, (1988) 3 Crimes 161 (Ker); State of Punjab v. Major Singh, AIR 1967 SC 63: 1967 Cri LJ 1; Kanhu Charan Patra v. State of Orissa, 1996 Cri LJ 1151 (Ori); Jai Chand v. State, 1996 Cri LJ 2039 (Del); Raja v. State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cri LJ 1608 (Raj); State of Karnataka v. Khaleel, 2004 Cri LJ (NOC) 10 (Kant); Nuna v. Emperor, 15 IC 309: (1912) 13 Cri LJ 469; Bisheshwar Murmu v. State of Bihar, 2004 Cri LJ 326 (Jhar); Keshab Padhan v. State of Orissa, 1976 Cutt LR (Cri) 236; Ram Mehar v. State of Haryana, 1998 Cri LJ 1999 (P&H); Rameshwar v. State of Haryana, 1984 Cri LJ 786 (P&H); Shoukat v. State of Rajasthan, 2002 Cri LJ 364 (Raj), considered

(e) Ss. 376-A to 376-D

See also 'B.2. Rape by person in authority', below

[8871] — S. 376-B — Sexual intercourse by public servant with a woman in his custody — Ingredients — Accused, a teacher of a government school, having intimacy with a girl student of the school and having sexual intercourse with her outside the school premises — Held, ingredients of S. 376-B not fulfilled, hence accused cannot be convicted thereunder — Even assuming that accused, being a teacher of a govt. school, was a public servant, prosecutrix cannot be said to be in his custody — Moreover, intercourse had not taken place within the school premises — From the mere fact that accused was having a love affair with prosecutrix, it cannot be shown that he had taken advantage of his official position and induced or seduced prosecutrix to have intercourse

The ingredients of Section 376-B are:

(i) the accused must be a public servant;

(ii) he must take advantage of his official position;

(iii) he must induce or seduce any woman;

(iv) such woman must be in his custody in such capacity or she is in the custody of public servant subordinate to him; and (v) he must have sexual intercourse with her which does not amount to the offence of rape. (Para 7)

It may be assumed that the appellant being a teacher of the government school was a public servant. But all the students of the school, only thereby, were not in the custody of the appellant. The expression "custody" implies guardianship. A custody must be a lawful custody. The same may arise within the provisions of the statute or actual custody conferred by reason of an order of a court of law or otherwise. (Para 12)

When these two ingredients are satisfied, the third ingredient, therefore, would be as to whether the public servant has taken advantage of his official position. If a student and a teacher fall in love with each other, the same would not mean that the teacher has taken undue advantage of his official position. Even then, there must be an inducement or seduction by a public servant so far as the woman in his custody is concerned. (Para 14)

Sexual intercourse, therefore, for the purpose of attracting Section 376-B of the Penal Code must take place at a place where the woman was in custody. In this case, the prosecutrix categorically admitted that the same did not take place within the precincts of the school but outside the school. (Para 15)

Thus the ingredients of the offence under Section 376-B of the Penal Code are not satisfied in the instant case. (Para 16). Omkar Prasad Verma v. State of M.P., (2007) 4 SCC 323: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 293: AIR 2007 SC 1381: (2007) 52 AIC 7 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1831.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-3-2007]

[8872] — S. 376-B — "Sexual intercourse" to constitute offence under — Must be had at the place where the woman was in custody

Sexual intercourse, therefore, for the purpose of attracting Section 376-B of the Penal Code must take place at a place where the woman was in custody. In this case, the prosecutrix categorically admitted that the same did not take place within the precincts of the school but outside the school. (Para 15)

Thus the ingredients of the offence under Section 376-B of the Penal Code are not satisfied in the instant case. (Para 16). Omkar Prasad Verma v. State of M.P., (2007) 4 SCC 323: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 293: AIR 2007 SC 1381: (2007) 52 AIC 7 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1831.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-3-2007]

[8873] — Ss. 376-B & 376(2)(b) — "Custody" — Meaning — Implies guardianship — It must be a lawful custody under provisions of a statute or under order of court (Para 12). Omkar Prasad Verma v. State of M.P., (2007) 4 SCC 323: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 293: AIR 2007 SC 1381: (2007) 52 AIC 7 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1831.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-3-2007]

[8874] — Ss. 376-B, 376-C, 376-D and 376(2) — Distinction — While to constitute offence punishable under S. 376(2), consent of prosecutrix would be absent, under Ss. 376-B to 376-D there would be consent but obtained by taking advantage of the peculiar status of the accused mentioned therein — Ss. 376-B to 376-D do not stricto sensu deal with rape as generally understood

Section 376-A to 376-D inserted by Act 43 of 1983 were sought to deal with such cases which are not covered by Section 376. They have thus, been inserted to meet a situation which was otherwise not provided for under Section 376. A new offence against the public servant is created under Sections 376(2)(b), 376-B and 376-C of the Penal Code. Intercourse by a man with his wife during separation and by any member of the management or staff of a hospital with any woman in that hospital would be the offences falling under Sections 376-A and 376-D of the Code. (Para 8)

A distinction must be made out between an offence of rape as contained in Section 375 of the Penal Code which is punishable under Section 376 and an offence of sexual intercourse with a woman in the situations specified in the Sections 376-B, 376-C and 376-D. The distinction is that whereas under Section 376(2), there is no consent at all, under Sections 376-B, 376-C and 376-D, there would be consent on the part of the prosecutrix but such consent has been obtained by taking undue advantage of the position as public servant, superintendent or member of the management. Sections 376-B to 376-D, stricto sensu, therefore, do not deal with rape as is understood in its ordinary parlance. (Para 9). Omkar Prasad Verma v. State of M.P., (2007) 4 SCC 323: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 293: AIR 2007 SC 1381: (2007) 52 AIC 7 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1831.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-3-2007]

(f) Habituated to Sex

See also 'A.4. Prior sexual history/conduct — Relevance, if any, and

'C.20.(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof', below

[8875] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Appreciation of evidence — Absence of hymen — Whether indicative of habitual intercourse — Submission by respondent-accused that prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse since her hymen was absent — Held, prosecutrix had stated that accused had raped her about a year back — Besides, the doctor had also stated that prosecutrix was not habitual to intercourse because her vagina admitted only one finger — Hence, submission rejected (Para 17). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2009) 16 SCC 697.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

[8876] — S. 376 — Rape — Medical evidence — Rape on minor girl aged 14 years — Statement of the doctor that hymen of the prosecutrix was ruptured and admitted two fingers — Held, this cannot be viewed as if the prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse

According to the doctor hymen of the prosecutrix was ruptured, admitted two fingers, bled on touch, was reddish in colour, and was painful and tender. On this basis, the doctor opined that these were signs of rape. The ability of admission of two fingers and the hymen being ruptured was viewed by the High Court as if the prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse. When the doctor had opined that the hymen was ruptured, she did not qualify her statement that it stood ruptured as of old or carried an old tear. With clear objective in view, the doctor must be presumed to have noticed the hymen as freshly ruptured, as otherwise, the doctor would not have described it in that fashion to be bleeding, tender and painful. The factum of admission of two fingers could not be held adverse to the prosecutrix for it would depend upon the size of the fingers inserted. When medical experts try to opine about the medical condition of a woman used to sexual intercourse, it is described as admission of two fingers easily, but here the doctor qualified her statement by saying that it was painful and bleeding on touch. These conditions obviously related to the hymen. The doctor was thus clear in her opinion that rape had been committed on the prosecutrix. Narayanamma v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 5 SCC 728: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1573.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1994]

3.(f) Habituated to Sex (contd.)

[8877] — Ss. 376 and 342 — Rape of a minor — Appreciation of evidence — Conviction restored — Non-reliance on medical report since time of occurrence not determined — Doctor who examined prosecutrix finding signs of recent sexual act but also accepting suggestion of accused that intercourse could have taken one week prior to her examination — Prosecutrix telling the doctor that accused had also sexually molested her one year prior to the alleged occurrence — Doctor finding hymen absent but categorically stating that prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted one finger only — Medical report, thus, corroborated by prosecutrix that she was earlier also raped by same accused — High Court acquitting the accused holding that when the doctor herself was unclear about the actual date of alleged rape, medical report could not be relied upon — While doing so, High Court ignoring the fact that doctor had also stated that there was possibility of recent intercourse i.e. within a week of her examination — Held, High Court appreciated the evidence erroneously by ignoring cogent and credible evidence of PWs 3, 4 and 5, which was further corroborated by medical evidence — Hence, impugned judgment acquitting accused set aside, and that of trial court convicting him under Ss. 376 & 342 restored

Facts:

On 15-3-2000, when parents of the prosecutrix had gone to visit her maternal uncle, her elder sister PW 4 had gone to the jungle to fetch leaves for goats, the accused is alleged to have taken the prosecutrix (minor) to his home, bolted the door of the room from inside, switched on the TV, gagged, and raped her. Thereafter he gave her Rs 5 and some "shakkar". Prosecutrix narrated the incident to PW 4. Her parents were informed about the occurrence on 16-3-2000 on their return. PW 4 also handed over to PW 5 (mother) currency note of Rs 5 given to her by the prosecutrix.

The trial court convicted the accused under Ss. 376 and 342 and sentenced him to RI for 7 years and fine of Rs 2000, and RI for 1 year respectively. The High Court acquitted the accused in appeal filed thereagainst. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above.

Held :

It was clearly proved and established that prosecutrix was a minor on the date of occurrence. Prosecutrix was examined on 17-3-2000 and she told the doctor that she had been sexually molested by accused about a year back. On examining her the doctor found signs of recent sexual act, as there was small reddened area over the left upper margin of hymen. In the cross-examination, the doctor has categorically stated that the prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted only one finger. The doctor, however, admitted that absence of hymen proves that she had been used to sexual intercourse earlier. (Paras 10 and 11)

The aforesaid medical report of the doctor is corroborated by the statement made by the prosecutrix that she was earlier also raped by the same accused. As against the suggestion of the accused that the sexual intercourse as alleged would have taken place more than one week prior to 17-3-2000, the doctor while accepting the same also stated that there can be a possibility of recent sexual intercourse i.e. within a week from 17-3-2000, which cannot be ruled out because of the redness on the margin of hymen. (Para 12)

The High Court mainly relied upon the opinion of the doctor holding that the doctor herself was unclear about the actual date of the alleged rape, and therefore, the said medical report could not be relied upon. While doing so, the High Court ignored the fact that the doctor had also stated that there can be a possibility of recent sexual intercourse i.e. within a week from 17-3-2000. The alleged rape was in fact committed within a week from 17-3-2000 i.e. on 15-3-2000. The fact that the prosecutrix was subjected to rape on 15-3-2000 is proved and established from the statement of the prosecutrix, medical report and the statement of the doctor (PW 8), who had examined the prosecutrix. The doctor had also stated that hymenal appearance cannot rule out recent coitus. Therefore, it is also proved and established beyond doubt that the prosecutrix was subjected to rape on 15-3-2000. (Para 13)

Further, prosecutrix had categorically stated that it was the accused who had raped her, and her statement was corroborated by PWs 4 and 5. (Para 14)

Submission that there is no other independent witness to support the aforesaid allegation is also baseless. In case of this nature when the prosecutrix, who was a minor girl on the date of incident, has come forward and stated that she was raped by the accused and her testimony could not be shaken in the cross-examination, we have no reason to disbelieve her for no girl would ever lie on a vital issue of this nature. Even her sister and mother also stated as to what was reported by the prosecutrix herself immediately after the alleged occurrence. Besides, there was PW 6 who though turned hostile at one stage of her examination, admitted that PW 5 had come to her house along with her daughter and narrated the incident to her. (Paras 15 and 16)

Submission by the respondent-accused that the prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse since her hymen was absent also liable to be rejected because the prosecutrix has stated that the accused himself had earlier raped her about a year back. It is also disclosed from the medical report that the prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse as the doctor herself stated that the prosecutrix was not used to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted only one finger. She has explained that there was redness over the margin of hymen and on the basis of this redness, the possibility of recent sexual intercourse could not be ruled out. As the testimony of the prosecutrix, her sister and mother has not been shaken in the cross-examination, the statement of the doctor appears to be a plausible and convincing version. (Para 17)

Further submission of accused that evidence of PWs 3 and 4 should not be relied upon because they were child witnesses and tutored by their parents and police, is unacceptable. Testimonies of PWs 3 and 4 as regards the alleged occurrence was firm and convincing. There was no reason as to why a child of her age would falsely implicate the accused. Besides, it is settled position in law that conviction under Section 376 on sole testimony of a rape victim can be maintained if her evidence is found credible and convincing. (Paras 18 and 19)

Evidence of PWs 3 and 4 was found cogent, credible and uninfluenced by any tutoring. The High Court erroneously appreciated the evidence by ignoring credible evidence of two child witnesses statement of their mother, which was further corroborated by medical evidence. Hence, judgment of the High Court set aside and that of the trial court restored. (Paras 22 to 24). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2009) 16 SCC 697.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210; Mohd. Kalam v. State of Bihar, (2008) 7 SCC 257: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 27, followed

Mohd. Kalam v. State of Bihar, (2008) 7 SCC 257: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 27, applied

State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210, considered and relied on

4. Prior sexual history/conduct — Relevance, if any

See also 'A.3.(f) Habituated to Sex', above

[8878] — Ss. 375 Secondly, 376, 376-B, 376-C and 376-D — Past promiscuous behaviour of the prosecutrix held is no ground to condone rape — Even such a prosecutrix has a right to refuse to submit herself to sexual intercourse

The trial court not only erroneously disbelieved the prosecutrix, but quite uncharitably and unjustifiably even characterised her as "a girl of loose morals" or "such type of a girl". We express our strong disapproval of the approach of the trial court and its casting a stigma on the character of the prosecutrix. The observations lack sobriety expected of a Judge. Suchlike stigmas have the potential of not only discouraging an even otherwise reluctant victim of sexual assault to bring forth complaint for trial of criminals, thereby making the society suffer by letting the criminal escape even a trial. The courts are expected to use self-restraint while recording such findings which have larger repercussions so far as the future of the victim of the sex crime is concerned and even wider implications on the society as a whole — where the victim of crime is discouraged — the criminal encouraged and in turn crime gets rewarded! Even in cases, unlike the present case, where there is some acceptable material on the record to show that the victim was habituated to sexual intercourse, no such inference like the victim being a girl of "loose moral character" is permissible to be drawn from that circumstance alone. Even if the prosecutrix, in a given case, has been promiscuous in her sexual behaviour earlier, she has a right to refuse to submit herself to sexual intercourse to anyone and everyone because she is not a vulnerable object or prey for being sexually assaulted by anyone and everyone. No stigma, like the one as cast in the present case should be cast against such a witness by the courts, for after all it is the accused and not the victim of sex crime who is on trial in the court. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

[8879] — S. 376 — Even if the prosecutrix was a woman of easy virtue, she could not be raped by the accused for that reason. Ranvir Singh v. State of M.P., (1996) 11 SCC 595.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-1996]

[8880] — S. 376 — Rape — Casting stigma on the character of prosecutrix deprecated — Absence of hymen — Even if it be concluded that the prosecutrix was used to sexual intercourse prior to the rape, she had every right to refuse to submit herself to sexual intercourse against her will

In the instant case the High Court after considering the medical evidence, while dealing with the question of rape opined:

"There is no direct evidence to show that the accused alone had sexual intercourse with her. The deceased was aged 16 years."

Held :

By using the word "alone" the High Court almost cast a stigma on the prosecutrix as if, apart from the appellant, there were other persons also who had sexual intercourse with her. There is no basis at all for such an assumption. There was no warrant for recording such a finding and if we may say so, with respect, the finding is an irresponsible finding. We express our strong disapproval of the approach of the High Court and its casting a stigma on the character of the deceased prosecutrix. Even if the Court formed an opinion, from the absence of hymen, that the victim had had sexual intercourse prior to the time when she was subjected to rape by the appellant, she had every right to refuse to submit herself to sexual intercourse by the appellant, as she certainly was not a vulnerable object or prey for being sexually assaulted by anyone and this position becomes all the more clear from the contents of the letter written by the deceased to the accused deprecating the idea of a married man enjoying another woman by terming it an act of grave sin. State of A.P. v. Gangula Satya Murthy, (1997) 1 SCC 272: 1997 SCC (Cri) 325: AIR 1997 SC 1588: 1997 Cri LJ 774.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1996]

[8881] — S. 376 — Rape — Conviction — Character of the victim — Relevance of — Prosecutrix alleged to be a girl of easy virtue, habituated to sexual intercourse — Even assuming that she was previously accustomed to sexual intercourse, held, that cannot be a ground to absolve the accused from the charge of rape — Further held, consent must be for that particular act/occasion

Even assuming that the victim was previously accustomed to sexual intercourse, that is not a determinative question. On the contrary, the question which was required to be adjudicated was did the accused commit rape on the victim on the occasion complained of. Even if it is hypothetically accepted that the victim had lost her virginity earlier, it did not and cannot in law give licence to any person to rape her. Even if the mother of the prosecutrix has accepted that character of her daughter was not good, that does not dilute the offence. It is the accused who was on trial and not the victim. Even if the victim in a given case has been promiscuous in her sexual behaviour earlier, she has a right to refuse to submit herself to sexual intercourse to anyone and everyone because she is not a vulnerable object or prey for being sexually assaulted by anyone and everyone. In this case the High Court's view that the girl being of loose morals and easy virtue the accused were entitled to acquittal is indefensible. (Paras 11, 10 and 13). State of U.P. v. Pappu, (2005) 3 SCC 594: 2005 SCC (Cri) 780: AIR 2005 SC 1248: 2005 Cri LJ 331.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2004]

[8882] — S. 376 — Rape — Medical evidence — Signs of previous sexual intercourse on victim — Effect — Held, would not affect the testimony of victim adversely — It cannot be a ground to acquit an alleged rapist

The victim's evidence has been discarded by holding that it is at variance with the medical evidence. Mere statement that according to the doctor, the victim's vagina admitted two fingers and she could on earlier occasions have had sexual intercourse five, ten or fifteen times rules out rape by the accused once as alleged, in no way casts doubt on the victim's evidence. Signs of previous sexual intercourse on the victim cannot, by any stretch of imagination, be a ground to acquit an alleged rapist. Even assuming that the victim was previously accustomed to sexual intercourse, that is not a determinative question. On the contrary, the question which was required to be adjudicated was did the accused commit rape on the victim on the occasion complained of. Even if it is hypothetically accepted that the victim had lost her virginity earlier, it did not and cannot in law give licence to any person to rape her. It is the accused who was on trial and not the victim. Even if the victim in a given case has been promiscuous in her sexual behaviour earlier, she has a right to refuse to submit herself to sexual intercourse to anyone and everyone because she is not a vulnerable object or prey for being sexually assaulted by anyone and everyone. (Paras 11 and 13). State of Punjab v. Ramdev Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 421: 2004 SCC (Cri) 307: AIR 2004 SC 1290.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2003]

[8883] — S. 376 — Rape — Past conduct of prosecutrix — Relevance of

Though the past conduct of the prosecutrix is an irrelevant matter, in the instant case, Ms X asserted that she was a virgin till the alleged incident, but the medical evidence supported by her physical features revealed that she was habituated to sex. (Para 19). Sudhansu Sekhar Sahoo v. State of Orissa, (2002) 10 SCC 743: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1484: AIR 2003 SC 2136.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2002]

[8884] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Evidence of prosecutrix of easy virtue — Merely because woman was of easy virtue her evidence cannot be discarded but has to be cautiously appreciated. State of Maharashtra v. Madhukar Narayan Mardikar, (1991) 1 SCC 57: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1991 SC 207: (1991) 1 LLJ 269: (1991) 1 SLJ 164: (1991) 1 SLR 140.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jagannatha Shetty and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-10-1990]

[8885] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Evidence of prosecutrix of easy virtue — Non-supply of documents — Transcripts supplied instead — Enquiry against Police Inspector on charge of visiting alone in uniform the house of a woman for ravishing her and preparing false documents and making entries in Station Diary to cover the misdeed — Overwhelming evidence, both direct and circumstantial, tendered to establish the charges — Even though original note book of police constable and log book of the police jeep which reached the spot on being summoned by the delinquent Inspector were missing, transcript thereof prepared earlier supplied to the delinquent and hence in the circumstances mere non supply of the original documents would not efface the evidence against him — Merely because the woman was of easy virtue her evidence cannot be discarded but has to be cautiously appreciated — Held, High Court erred in embarking upon a reappreciation of evidence as if it were sitting in appeal against decision of departmental authorities — Its reappreciation was also unsustainable on merits — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 118. State of Maharashtra v. Madhukar Narayan Mardikar, (1991) 1 SCC 57: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1991 SC 207: (1991) 1 LLJ 269: (1991) 1 SLJ 164: (1991) 1 SLR 140.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jagannatha Shetty and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-10-1990]

[8886] — S. 376(2) proviso — Sentence — Police officials (appellants) convicted under S. 376 for committing rape on prosecutrix and awarded minimum sentence of 10 years' RI — Paramour of the prosecutrix also convicted on charge of rape — On appeal High Court finding that the prosecution failed to prove age of the prosecutrix as below 18 years and that she was willingly going around with her paramour and was having sex with him of her free will, acquitted the paramour but confirmed the conviction and sentence imposed on the appellants — Having regard to peculiar facts and circumstances of the case and the promiscuous conduct of the prosecutrix, held, proviso to S. 376(2) can be invoked and a sub-minimum sentence of 5 years' RI would meet the ends of justice — Sentence accordingly reduced. Prem Chand v. State of Haryana, 1989 Supp (1) SCC 286: 1989 SCC (Cri) 418: AIR 1989 SC 937: 1989 Cri LJ 1246.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1989]

[Ed.: For review of this case on question of sentence see (1990) 1 SCC 249.]

5. Prosecution of woman for rape

[8887] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Prosecution of a woman for — Held, as per the definition of rape in Ss. 375 and 376, rape can be committed only by a man

A bare reading of Section 375 makes the position clear that rape can be committed only by a man. Priya Patel v. State of M.P., (2006) 6 SCC 263: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 96: AIR 2006 SC 2639: (2006) 130 DLT 696: (2006) 3 KLT 398: (2006) 3 Guj LH 118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-2006]

[8888] — Ss. 375, 376(2)(g) & Expln. 1, 34 and 110 — Gang rape — Prosecution of a woman for — Gang rape and abetment of rape — Distinction — Held, under the definition of rape under Ss. 375 and 376 a woman cannot be prosecuted for gang rape even if she facilitates the act of rape — By virtue of S. 376(2) Expln. 1 a woman cannot be convicted for rape — This is conceptually inconceivable since as per the definition of rape in Ss. 375 and 376, rape can be committed only by a man — Expression "in furtherance of their common intention" in S. 376(2) Expln. 1 relates to the intention to commit rape — A woman cannot be said to have an intention to commit rape — However, question whether appellant-accused, a woman, could be prosecuted for abetment of rape, left open for courts below to decide

A complaint was lodged by the prosecutrix alleging that she was returning by Utkal Express after attending a sports meet. When she reached her destination at Sagar, the accused, Bhanu Pratap Patel (husband of the accused-appellant) met her at the railway station and told her that her father had asked him to pick her up from the railway station. Since the prosecutrix was suffering from fever, she accompanied accused Bhanu Pratap Patel to his house. He committed rape on her. When commission of rape was going on, the wife of the accused, the present appellant reached there. The prosecutrix requested the appellant to save her. Instead of saving her, the appellant slapped her, closed the door of the house and left the place of incident. On the basis of the complaint lodged, investigation was undertaken and charge-sheet was filed. While the accused Bhanu Pratap Patel was charged for offences punishable under Sections 323 and 376 IPC, the appellant was charged for commission of offences punishable under Sections 323 and 376(2)(g) IPC. The revision filed before the High Court questioned the legality of the charge framed so far as the appellant was concerned, relatable to Section 376(2)(g) IPC. It was contended that a woman cannot be charged for commission of the offence of rape. The High Court was of the view that though a woman cannot commit rape, but if a woman facilitates the act of rape, Explanation I to Section 376(2) comes into operation and she can be prosecuted for "gang rape". (Para 4)

Negating the view of the High Court and allowing the appeal in the terms below

Held :

A bare reading of Section 375 makes the position clear that rape can be committed only by a man. The section itself provides as to when a man can be said to have committed rape. Section 376(2) makes certain categories of serious cases of rape as enumerated therein attract more severe punishment. One of them relates to "gang rape". The language of Section 376(2)(g) provides that whoever commits "gang rape" shall be punished, etc. The Explanation only clarifies that when a woman is raped by one or more in a group of persons acting in furtherance of their common intention, each such person shall be deemed to have committed gang rape within Section 376(2). That cannot make a woman guilty of committing rape. This is conceptually inconceivable. By operation of the deeming provision in the Explanation, a person who has not actually committed rape is deemed to have committed rape even if only one of the group in furtherance of the common intention has committed rape. The expression "in furtherance of their common intention" as appearing in the Explanation to Section 376(2) relates to the intention to commit rape. A woman cannot be said to have an intention to commit rape. Therefore, the appellant wife cannot be prosecuted for alleged commission of the offence punishable under Section 376(2)(g). (Para 8)

The residual question is whether the appellant wife can be charged for abetment. This is an aspect which has not been dealt with by the trial court or the High Court. If in law, it is permissible and the facts warrant such a course to be adopted, it is for the court concerned to act in accordance with law. (Para 9). Priya Patel v. State of M.P., (2006) 6 SCC 263: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 96: AIR 2006 SC 2639: (2006) 130 DLT 696: (2006) 3 KLT 398: (2006) 3 Guj LH 118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-2006]

[8889] — Ss. 375 and 377 — Grounds of dissolution under S. 10, Divorce Act, 1869 — Held, not discriminatory against husband — As regards the ground of adultery and exchange of profession of Christianity, available to wife, she is in a more disadvantageous position — Ground of rape rightly made available to wife alone since the word 'rape' used in S. 10 has to be assigned the same meaning as defined in S. 375 of Penal Code i.e. forcible sexual intercourse by man with a woman and not vice versa — Though sodomy and bestiality can be committed by wife also, conferring those grounds to wife alone cannot be said to be discriminatory having regard to the weaker position of Indian women — Besides it is also open to the parties to marry under Special Marriage Act, but once having married under Divorce Act one cannot allege its disadvantages — Hence S. 10 not violative of Art. 14 — Divorce Act, 1869, S. 10

There is no substance in the challenge by the petitioner-husband to the vires of the provisions of S. 10 as being discriminatory against the husband and, therefore, violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution.

As far as the ground of adultery is concerned, it is the husband who is in a favourable position as against the wife, since it is not enough for the wife to prove adultery simpliciter on the part of her husband. To that extent, undoubtedly, it is the wife who is discriminated against.

For the ground of exchange of profession of Christianity by husband, the wife has also to prove that the husband has married another woman.

Since, however, the husband can seek dissolution of the marriage only on the ground of adultery, the husband is not at a disadvantage as against his wife because a mere marriage with another man whether after exchanging the profession of religion or not, would give a ground to the husband to seek dissolution of marriage. Thus even as far as this ground is concerned, it is the wife who is at a disadvantage.

The only other grounds unavailable to the husband are of rape, sodomy or bestiality. Although the modern usage of the word 'rape' extends also to the forcible sexual intercourse by a woman with a man, the dictionary meaning of the said word as well as the offence of rape as defined in the Indian Penal Code speak only of forcible sexual intercourse by a man with a woman. Therefore, the latter meaning of the said word has to be accepted while construing the provisions of the Act which is one of the vintage enactments on our statute book. Hence, it cannot be said that there is any discrimination between husband and wife because the ground of rape is not available to the husband for dissolving the marriage.

However, a woman can also be guilty of sodomy. So will be the position in the case of the offence of bestiality. The discrimination, therefore, can be alleged by the husband only on the basis that these two grounds, viz., sodomy and bestiality, are not available to him for claiming dissolution of his marriage whereas the same are available to the wife for the purpose. But taking into consideration the muscularly weaker physique of the woman, her general vulnerable physical and social condition and her defensive and non-aggressive nature and role particularly in this country, the legislature can hardly be faulted if the said two grounds are made available to the wife and not to the husband for seeking dissolution of the marriage. For the same reasons, it can hardly be said that on that account the provisions of S. 10 of the Act are discriminatory as against the husband.

Moreover, the individuals not willing to submit to the Indian Divorce Act or any other personal law are not obliged to marry exclusively under that law. They have the freedom to marry under the Special Marriage Act, 1954. Having, however, married under the Divorce Act and accepted its discipline, they cannot be heard to complain of its rigours, if any. Anil Kumar Mahsi v. Union of India, (1994) 5 SCC 704: (1994) 2 KLT 399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-1994]

[8890] — S. 376(2)(g) with Expln. 1 thereto — Gang rape — Prosecution of a woman therefor — Held, impermissible — A woman committing rape is conceptually inconceivable — Expression "in furtherance of their common intention" in Expln. 1 to S. 376(2)(g) relates to intention to commit rape — A woman cannot be said to have an intention to commit rape (Paras 5 and 6). State of Rajasthan v. Hemraj, (2009) 12 SCC 403: AIR 2009 SC 2644.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2009]

Priya Patel v. State of M.P., (2006) 6 SCC 263: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 96, followed

B. PARTICULAR KINDS OF RAPE AND WITH OTHER OFFENCES

Synopsis

1. Rape and murder/death 461
2. Rape by person in authority 477
3. Rape of servant 485
4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy 485
5. Rape of pregnant woman 506
6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape 506
7. Abduction/Kidnapping/Trafficking and rape 543
8. Incest and rape 551
9. Attempt to rape 555
10. Rape or outraging modesty/indecent assault/other lesser sexual offences 559
11. Rape of mentally deficient woman 565
12. Other offences and rape 565

1. Rape and murder/death

See also Ss. 299-304 — CULPABLE HOMICIDE AND MURDER, 'C.19. Rape & other sexual offences', in Vol. 2

[8891] — Ss. 375 & 376(2)(f) or S. 302 or S. 304 Pt. II — Death occurring due to brutal manner of rape (of 7/8-year-old child) — Death sentence if warranted — Brutal rape of a young child aged 7/8 years by the appellant aged 31 years leading to her death due to excessive bleeding — Culpability of the appellant in the heinous crime for all practical purposes established — Death sentence imposed by the trial court, confirmed by the High Court on reference — Death of the victim occurring because of excessive bleeding and not because of any specific overt act on the part of the appellant — Thus, intention of the appellant to kill the deceased not proved — Hence held, imposition of death sentence was not proper — Manner in which the deceased was raped may be brutal but it could have been a momentary lapse on the part of the appellant, seeing a lonely girl at a secluded place — No premeditation for commission of the offence proved — Offence, though, may look heinous, but under no circumstances, can it be said to be the rarest of rare cases — However, considering the brutality with which the offence was committed maximum sentence of RI for life imposed (Paras 21, 22 and 10). Amrit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 12 SCC 79: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 397: AIR 2007 SC 132: 2007 Cri LJ 298.

1. Rape and murder/death (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-2006]

[8892] — S. 376 — Rape — Proof — Rape and murder — Injuries absent — Presence of semen and spermatozoa found on examination of vaginal smear — Held on facts, rape not proved — Semen also detected on one of the underskirts found on the body of the victim — Though accused-appellant found to be potent but no stains of blood or semen found on the dhoti of the appellant — No injuries found on the vagina/private parts of the victim

If there had been any forcible sexual intercourse, the victim must have made some strong resistance being a grown-up lady and in the process, some injuries would have been found on the vagina/private parts of the body or some other parts indicative of any such use of force and it would be too much to assume that there would have been no injuries whatsoever on the body, on this account. Though injuries on the body is not always a must or sine qua non to prove a charge of rape, having regard to the case of the prosecution that the victim had been subjected to brutal rape and forced sexual intercourse, this aspect of the matter cannot be completely lost sight of. The deceased was stated to be of about 26 years of age, when she died and she is the sister of the wife of the appellant. It is not as though they were shown earlier to be on inimical terms. Anything possible might have happened and the facts found proved do not irresistibly lead to the only conclusion of the guilt of the appellant in respect of an offence under Section 376 IPC. Consequently, appellant can be given benefit of doubt and acquitted of the offence under Section 376 IPC, and the conviction recorded and sentence imposed by the High Court upon the appellant on this account is set aside. (Para 15). Joseph v. State of Kerala, (2000) 5 SCC 197: 2000 SCC (Cri) 926: AIR 2000 SC 1608: 2000 Cri LJ 2467.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, Doraiswamy Raju and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2000]

[8893] — S. 376 — Rape and murder — Absence of semen or spermatozoa in vaginal swab collected from dead body of the deceased — Held, by itself would not disprove sexual molestation when post-mortem report indicated bruising of tissues on right side of vagina 2 x 1 x ½ cm in reddish blue colour and bruising 1 x ½ x ½ cm over the anterior lip of the cervix — This feature is consistent with the victim offering resistance against forcible intercourse. State of T.N. v. Suresh, (1998) 2 SCC 372: AIR 1998 SC 1044.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-1997]

[8894] — S. 376 — Rape trial — Vaginal swabs and slides — Late deposit in malkhana — Whether on facts weakened prosecution case — Explanation if satisfactory — Post-mortem examination of victim conducted on 25-1-1996 — Samples of vaginal swabs and slides deposited in malkhana after a gap of three days on 29-1-1996 — Post-mortem report handed over by hospital to police on 25-1-1996 itself along with dead body whereas samples handed over on 29-1-1996 — In the intervening period, there were three holidays from 26-1-1996 to 28-1-1996 — Held, delay in deposit of samples satisfactorily accounted for — No adverse inference could be drawn against prosecution due to intervening period of three days between preparation of samples and deposit in malkhana (Para 56). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

[8895] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Child witness — Examination of — Must be nearabout the date and time of the incident — Rape and murder of a girl aged 5 years — Solitary testimony of a child aged 4 years that while returning home along with the deceased after purchasing a balloon, accused took the deceased inside his house saying that her feet were mudstained — Not clear from her statement whether that happened before the date and time of the incident or on the date on which dead body of deceased was found — How and in what manner investigating officer came to know about this child witness so as to record her statement during investigation also remaining a mystery — Child witness examined by trial court about one year after the incident — On asking a few questions by way of preliminary examination, trial Judge finding that the witness could "answer some of the questions" — Even taking her testimony at its face value, no incriminating inference could be drawn against the accused on that basis so as to connect him with the crime — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 8 and 3. Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2001]

[8896] — Ss. 376 & 302 — Conviction — Rape and murder of a 6 year old girl — Sessions Court and High Court concurrently finding the appellant guilty — On reappreciation of evidence, conviction under Ss. 302 and 376 confirmed

According to the prosecution the accused-appellant had taken the deceased girl aged 6 years to a cinema show. When the girl did not return home a report was lodged at the police station and next day her dead body was found lying in the bushes standing across the railway line. It was noticed that the underwear of the deceased was lying near the dead body and that there were bloodstains and tooth-mark on her cheek. The doctor who carried out post-mortem examination noticed that the deceased was in a school uniform and she stated that three doctors who had examined the dead body arrived at the conclusion that rape had been committed and the murder of the deceased was committed by pressing her nose and mouth and obstructing breath of the deceased. It was also noticed that there was a thin mark of a scratch on the upper portion of penis of the accused. According to the witnesses, the deceased was last seen in the company of the appellant. On appreciation of evidence the trial court convicted the appellant under Sections 302 and 376 IPC and sentenced him to death. The High Court confirmed the judgment and order passed by the trial court. The accused preferred the present appeal before the Supreme Court against the conviction and sentence. As regards the sentence it was submitted that the accused on the relevant day was less than 22 years and that even though the act is heinous, considering the fact that no injuries were found on the deceased, it is probable that death might have occurred because of gagging her mouth and nostrils by the accused at the time of incident so that she may not raise a hue and cry. The death, it was submitted, was accidental and an unintentional one. Allowing the appeal partly,

Held:

After going through the entire evidence it cannot be held that the High Court or the Sessions Court committed any error in appreciating the evidence led by the prosecution. Hence, the conviction of the appellant for the offence punishable under Sections 302 and 376 IPC is confirmed. (Para 7). Bantu v. State of M.P., (2001) 9 SCC 615: AIR 2002 SC 70.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-2001]

[8897] — Ss. 376 & 302 — Conviction — Rape and murder of girl aged 11 years — Circumstantial evidence — Accused seen enticing deceased by offering toffee, thereafter both last seen together going out in the evening, they having not returned to house PWs searched for them whole night and in the morning dead body of deceased found — Immediately thereafter FIR lodged — Extrajudicial confession made by accused to PW 3 that he committed rape of the deceased and killed her by causing injury on her head by brick when she stated that she would report at the house about the rape — Bloodstained earth, bloodstained brick with hair stuck to it, shawl, chappals taken into possession by police — Bloodstains found on trousers and shirt and blood and semen stains found on underwear for which no explanation given by accused — At the stage of statement under S. 313 CrPC accused abjured his guilt and denied all the allegations made against him — Held, High Court rightly confirmed the conviction order passed by Sessions Court. Raju v. State of Haryana, (2001) 9 SCC 50: AIR 2001 SC 2043: 2001 Cri LJ 2580.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2001]

[8898] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Death sentence — When not warranted — No rigid standards and norms can be laid down — Rape of child aged 1½ years by appellant aged 30 years — In the process of committing rape, injuries inflicted on liver, apart from other injuries which resulting in death of the child — Held, case does not fall within the rarest of the rare category — Hence death sentence not justified — CrPC, 1973, S. 354(3)

Regarding the question of laying down standards and norms restricting the area of imposition of death penalty, if by "laying down standards", it is meant that "murder" should be categorised beforehand according to the degrees of its culpability and all the aggravating and mitigating circumstances should be exhaustively and rigidly enumerated so as to exclude all free play of discretion, the argument merits rejection. Such standardisation is well-nigh impossible. Firstly, degree of culpability cannot be measured in each case; secondly, criminal cases cannot be categorised, there being infinite, unpredictable and unforeseeable variations; thirdly, on such categorisation, the sentencing process will cease to be judicial; and fourthly, such standardisation or sentencing discretion is a policy-matter belonging to the legislature beyond the court's function. Only broad guidelines consistent with the policy indicated by the legislature in Section 354(3) can be laid down. (Paras 10 and 12)

1. Rape and murder/death (contd.)

In the present case the crime committed is undoubtedly serious and heinous and the conduct of the appellant is reprehensible. It reveals a dirty and perverted mind of a human being who has no control over his carnal desires. But treating the case on the touchstone of the guidelines laid down in Bachan Singh, Machhi Singh and other decisions and balancing the aggravating and mitigating circumstances emerging from the evidence on record, the case cannot be appropriately called one of the rarest of the rare cases. The appellant cannot be said to be such a dangerous person that to spare his life will endanger the community. It cannot be held that the circumstances of the crime are such that there is no alternative but to impose death sentence even after according maximum weightage to the mitigating circumstances in favour of the offender. The case is one in which a humanist approach should be taken in the matter of awarding punishment. Accordingly, the capital sentence imposed against the appellant by the courts below is set aside. Instead the appellant shall suffer rigorous imprisonment for life. (Paras 25 and 26). Mohd. Chaman v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 2 SCC 28: 2001 SCC (Cri) 278: 2001 Cri LJ 725.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2000]

Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580: AIR 1980 SC 898; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681; Nirmal Singh v. State of Haryana, (1999) 3 SCC 670: 1999 SCC (Cri) 472; Anshad v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 4 SCC 381: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1204, relied on [8899] — Ss. 376 & 302 — FIR — Fardbeyan — Delay in recording — Rape and murder — According to prosecution, informant had gone to the police station, narrated the occurrence and after 10-20 minutes' stay there, returned to his village where the officer in charge of the police station recorded his fardbeyan naming appellant as having committed the offence — But while in police station, informant had not disclosed the name of appellant — Held, recording of fardbeyan at the house of informant instead of at police station when he had gone there shows that there was inordinate delay in recording the fardbeyan — This further shows that by the time the informant was at the police station he did not suspect complicity of the appellant with the crime and subsequently, after due deliberations, fardbeyan was given by the informant at his house alleging therein that the appellant had committed the crime — Thus the evidence of this witness makes the prosecution case showing complicity of the appellant with the crime doubtful — CrPC, 1973, S. 154 (Para 7). Kanhai Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2001) 3 SCC 451: 2001 SCC (Cri) 537: AIR 2001 SC 1113: 2001 Cri LJ 1259.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, R.P. Sethi and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-2001]

[8900] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Genuineness of swabs and slides in rape and murder case — Malkhana register — Credibility of entries made therein — Entries relating to vaginal swabs and slides appeared to have been missed initially but subsequently made by incharge of malkhana — There was plausible explanation for omission — Initially, articles mentioned on first page of post-mortem examination report were entered in the register and then it was noticed that some more articles (swabs and slides) were mentioned on third page of report — Malkhana incharge, in his evidence, denying theory of interpolation — Even otherwise, there was evidence on record that swabs and slides were received in malkhana from hospital in a sealed jar and were delivered in the same condition to Centre for Cellular & Molecular Biology (CCMB), Hyderabad, for DNA profiling of accused — No suggestion made during cross-examination of doctors and police officials that seals of jar were tampered with — Held, genuineness of samples could not be doubted in such circumstances

PW 47, Constable Rajinder Singh of CBI, who was the incharge of the malkhana on the day in question deposed that there was no mention that swabs and slides were contained in a glass jar, but the fact that the entries had been interpolated has been emphatically denied by him. These items had been taken by Inspector Shekhawat from the malkhana on 31-1-1996 in a sealed condition and in a glass jar and handed over to CCMB, Hyderabad in an identical condition. PW 49, Dr. Lalji Singh from CCMB deposed on oath that all the aforesaid items along with several others had been received in a sealed condition as his organisation did not accept any item which was without a seal. He further stated that along with samples he had received the sample seals which had been affixed on the bundle of clothes and the bottle carrying vaginal swabs and slides. (Para 58)

The vaginal swabs and slides find mention on the third page of the post-mortem report whereas the other items taken from the dead body are on internal p. 1. This raises the possibility that the Head Constable had, at the initial stage, missed the articles on p. 3 and thereafter rectified the mistake. No adverse inference against the prosecution can be drawn with regard to the retention of the items in the malkhana. No suggestion was put either to the doctors or to DSP Ohri or to Sub-Inspector Shekhawat that the seals of the aforesaid articles had been tampered with. (Para 59). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

[8901] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Motive for commission of crime — Relevance — Held, motive alone cannot form basis for conviction but in the light of other circumstances, motive goes a long way in forging links in chain of evidence — Rape and murder case — Appellant's advances towards deceased, his junior in college, and his subsequent frustration and anger when deceased did not respond positively — Held, amply proved appellant's motive for commission of crime

The motive stands proved beyond any doubt. It appears that as the appellant's overtures had been rebuffed by the deceased, he had resorted to harassing her in a manner which became more and more aggressive and crude as time went by. It is evident that the appellant was well aware of her family background and despite several complaints against him and the provision of a PSO, he had fearlessly and shamelessly pursued her right to the doorsteps of her residence ignoring the fact that she had first lived in the house of Lt. Col. S.K. Dhar, an army officer from the end of 1994 onwards and after January 1996 with her parents, her father too being a very senior officer in a semi-government organisation. (Paras 79 and 81). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

[8902] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Murder and rape — Recovery of underwear stained with blood (Group B) and semen on information given by accused — But the same not produced and exhibited in court — Nothing to show that the same was of the accused — No evidence to show as to what was the blood group of the accused and therefore, possibility of blood on the underwear being of the accused himself not ruled out — Number and extent of spread of stains also not known — Held, recovery of stained underwear was not an incriminating circumstance

In the present case the age of the accused was about 21 years at the time of the incident. On his arrest he was subjected to medical examination and found to be a potent and capable person. Presence of semen stain on underwear, assuming that the underwear belonged to the accused, though there is no evidence adduced in this regard, is not by itself an incriminating piece of evidence connecting the accused with the crime in question. So also the discovery of Group B bloodstain on the underwear cannot be treated as an incriminating piece of evidence against the accused connecting him with the crime because there is no evidence that the underwear belonged to the accused and further the possibility of the underwear being stained with the blood of the person to whom it belonged, or the accused if he was wearing it has not been ruled out. (Para 19). Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2001]

Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 2 SCC 35: 1981 SCC (Cri) 315, relied on [8903] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder — Death sentence — Mitigating circumstances — Considering that (i) the accused was a young man, (ii) he was a student, (iii) there was no record of any previous heinous crime, and (iv) no evidence that he would be a danger to the society if death penalty is not awarded, held, the instant case did not fall in the category of rarest of the rare cases — Sentence of death altered to life imprisonment (Para 10). Amit v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 8 SCC 93: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1959: AIR 2003 SC 3131: 2003 Cri LJ 3873.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-2003]

[8904] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder of a four-year-old girl — Prosecution case based on circumstantial evidence — Circumstances of last seen together, recovery of dead body from the place pointed out by the accused, evidence of test identification parade, injuries found in the male organ of the accused and detection of stains of human blood and semen on underclothes of the accused at the time of his arrest — Held, on facts, circumstances sufficient to convict the accused respondent with the offence of rape and murder of the minor girl. State of Maharashtra v. Suresh, (2000) 1 SCC 471: 2000 SCC (Cri) 263.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-1999]

1. Rape and murder/death (contd.)

Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580, relied on [8905] — Ss. 376 & 302 — Rape and murder of a girl aged 7-8 years — Conviction — Punishment — Conviction of appellants on basis of circumstantial evidence — Sustainability of death sentence — Death sentence imposed by the Sessions Judge confirmed by the High Court — Held, if guilt is proved by circumstantial evidence, ordinarily, death penalty would not be awarded — Moreover, Appellant 1 showed his remorse and repentance and accepted his guilt even in his statement under S. 313 CrPC — Hence, instead of extreme death penalty, punishment of RI for life imposed — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 235(2) and 354(3) (Paras 57 to 65). Bishnu Prasad Sinha v. State of Assam, (2007) 11 SCC 467: AIR 2007 SC 848: (2007) 53 AIC 166 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1145.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2007]

State of Rajasthan v. Kheraj Ram, (2003) 8 SCC 224: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1979; State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559; Sahdeo v. State of U.P., (2004) 10 SCC 682: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1873; Raju v. State of Haryana, (2001) 9 SCC 50: 2002 SCC (Cri) 408; Amrit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 12 SCC 79: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 397; Sk. Ishaque v. State of Bihar, (1995) 3 SCC 392: 1995 SCC (Cri) 534; Ronny v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 3 SCC 625: 1998 SCC (Cri) 859; Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681, relied on

[8906] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder of a girl of five years — Vital link in the chain of circumstances snapped — Held on facts, offence under Ss. 376 and 302 not established

The crucial link in the chain of circumstances in the present case is the presence of the accused-appellant in his house at the time when the dead body of the deceased was discovered. Once that link snaps, the entire case would have to rest on slender titbits here and there.

The discovery of a blood-stain of the deceased's group ('B' Group) measuring 0.5 cms in diameter on the accused-appellant's pant could be a circumstance against the accused only if it is shown that that was not his blood group. Presence of a dried stain of semen on the underpant of accused, aged 30, is also a circumstance too feeble to establish the guilt. Absence of smegma around the accused's corona glandis cannot by itself prove that he had sexual intercourse. The presence of smegma may perhaps exclude the possibility of recent sexual intercourse but its absence will not necessarily establish that the person has had a recent intercourse. A small abrasion over the base of the glans-penis and its bluish discoloration are also inconclusive circumstances. Nor indeed can the bruises on the appellant thigh establish his involvement in the crime.

The circumstances that the total ignorance of the incident pleaded by the accused was false, cannot be said to have itself furnished a link in the chain of causation. Falsity of defence cannot take the place of proof of facts which the prosecution has to establish in order to succeed. A false plea can at best be considered as an additional circumstance, if other circumstances point unfailingly to the guilt of the accused. Moreover, from the facts and circumstances of the case it is clear that the accused was not present in the house at the time when the deceased's dead body was discovered from the accused's house. That makes it impossible that the accused's plea was false. Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 2 SCC 35: 1981 SCC (Cri) 315: AIR 1981 SC 765: 1981 Cri LJ 325: 1981 MLJ (Cri) 320.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and A.P. Sen and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1980]

[8907] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder of a minor girl — Recovery of dead body at the instance of the accused — Circumstance not mentioned in inquest report — No panchnama prepared for the recovery made under S. 27, Evidence Act — No evidence showing that accused was present near the place where dead body was found — Though father of the victim and the investigating officer deposing about the circumstance of the recovery, their testimony contradictory and unacceptable — Held on facts, the circumstance not established. Jaharlal Das v. State of Orissa, (1991) 3 SCC 27: 1991 SCC (Cri) 527: AIR 1991 SC 1388: (1991) 2 Crimes 268: (1991) 72 CLT 298.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-1991]

[8908] — Ss. 376 & 302 — Rape and murder of a minor girl aged 4 years — Three PWs seeing a little girl crying in the company of a man on the day of the incident — Both accused and victim were strangers to the PWs — Reason for the PWs remembering them was that next day when they heard about the murder of a little girl, they recollected seeing the man along with the little girl the previous day — PWs later identifying the accused in test identification parade — Held, recollection about the victim in the company of the accused was natural — Contention that there was inherent incredibility in the evidence of the PWs as normally accused would have taken precaution not to be seen by any other person on the way cannot be accepted

If a criminal court is to view the testimony of the three witnesses as unnatural it would be easy to brush it aside with the stereotyped reasoning that those persons had no cause to remember having seen the man with the girl accompanying him. Such a reasoning overlooks the broad aspect that a human mind, on hearing about any shocking incident, would have the tendency to recollect any previous event which could have had a connection with that incident. If as a matter of fact those witnesses had occasion to see a crying girl of that age on the very day of the gruesome episode as happened in this case, there is nothing improbable in those witnesses remembering the person who was seen in the company of that girl. If they had immediately informed the police that they noticed a similarly-aged girl crying in the company of an utter stranger of that locality that cannot be brushed aside as a doubtful conduct. Either the three witnesses concocted the story falsely or what they said must be true. No reason was suggested for those three witnesses to bother themselves to concoct such a canard. (Para 17)

It is not possible to accept that there is "an inherent incredibility in the evidence" on the premise that a culprit kidnapping a minor girl with a sinister design would normally take the precaution not to be seen by any other person on the way, but in this case the culprit along with the girl had moved from place to place in the town. Such a reasoning as a proposition of human conduct cannot be accepted. The victim would certainly have been abducted by somebody (even assuming that it was not this respondent) and that person had taken the abducted girl from her house up to the place of occurrence (farm). Unless it is suggested that there was another alternative and a safer route for the culprit to take the girl unnoticed by any shopkeeper or even a pedestrian, there is no rationale in the reasoning that there is "inherent incredibility" in the version that the respondent would have taken the girl through this route. (Para 19). State of Maharashtra v. Suresh, (2000) 1 SCC 471: 2000 SCC (Cri) 263.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-1999]

[8909] — Ss. 376 & 302 — Sentence — Rape and murder of 6 year old girl — On facts held, not a "rarest of the rare" case — Hence sentence of death commuted to that of life imprisonment

However, in the present case, there is nothing on record to indicate that the appellant was having any criminal record nor can it be said that he will be a grave danger to the society at large. It is true that his act is heinous and requires to be condemned but at the same time it cannot be said that it is the rarest of the rare case where the accused requires to be eliminated from the society. Hence, there is no justifiable reason to impose the death sentence. Therefore, the sentence is modified by commuting the sentence of death to an imprisonment for life. For the offence punishable under Section 376 IPC, he is sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 10 years. Both the sentences to run concurrently. (Paras 8 and 9). Bantu v. State of M.P., (2001) 9 SCC 615: AIR 2002 SC 70.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-2001]

[8910] — Ss. 376 & 302 — Sentence — Rape and murder of girl aged 11 years — Accused had no intention to commit murder of the deceased — When deceased said that she would disclose about the commission of rape to her house, accused on the spur of the moment without any premeditation caused injury on her head by hurling brick which resulted in her death — Accused having no criminal record nor can he be said to be a grave danger to the society at large — Held, it was not a rarest of the rare cases and hence imposition of death sentence not justified — Instead life imprisonment proper. Raju v. State of Haryana, (2001) 9 SCC 50: AIR 2001 SC 2043: 2001 Cri LJ 2580.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2001]

State of Haryana v. Raju, 2000 Cri LJ 2726 (P&H), partly affirmed

[8911] — Ss. 376, 302 and 201 — Rape and murder — Victim, a girl aged about 10 years — Eyewitness claiming having seen the accused throttling the victim — Evidence as to last seen together — Acquittal by the High Court — Propriety — Victim seen chewing sugarcane at "kolhu" of accused D — Later on seen going with D towards his sugarcane field — Not returning to her home — Complainant B (father of victim) going to the sugarcane field of D for searching the victim there — D not permitting him to do so — Thereafter, B taking "Pardhan" of the village and other persons with him making search there — Dead body of victim found buried in the said field — On such facts, held, conviction by trial court was proper — High Court erred in setting aside the same — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 386 and 374(2) (Paras 7 to 9). State of U.P. v. Devendra Singh, (2004) 10 SCC 616: AIR 2004 SC 3690: 2004 Cri LJ 3118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2004]

1. Rape and murder/death (contd.)

[8912] — Ss. 376 and 302 or 304 Pt. II — Gang rape and murder — Commission of rape by the accused persons established — Nature of the injuries inflicted on the person of the deceased indicating that accused had not intended to cause her death — But according to post-mortem report, injuries showing violent type of sexual intercourse inasmuch as any violent assault even without rape could cause those injuries and the corresponding internal injuries, one of which was sufficient to cause the death — That being so, held, accused must be assumed to be having knowledge that by their action, it was likely that the deceased would have died — Hence accused liable to be convicted under S. 304 Pt. II r/w S. 34 as well as under S. 376

Whoever causes death by doing an act with the intention of causing death or with the intention of causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death or with the knowledge that he is likely, by such act, to cause death, is responsible for the commission of the offence of culpable homicide. Culpable homicide is murder if the act by which the death is caused is done with the intention of causing death and is not covered by any of the exceptions of Section 300 of the Indian Penal Code. In this case, there is no evidence to show that the accused persons proved to have been involved in the occurrence, had intended to cause the offence of murder within the meaning of Section 300 as punishable under Section 302 of the Indian Penal Code. However, on proof of the commission of offence of gang rape found to have been committed in a violent manner, they are assumed to be having the knowledge that by their action, it was likely that the deceased would have died. The aforesaid accused are, therefore, guilty of the offence, punishable under Part II of Section 304 read with Section 34 IPC and are sentenced to 10 years' RI. Their conviction and sentence under Section 376 read with Section 34 recorded by the trial court are also upheld. (Para 24). State of Orissa v. Dibakar Naik, (2002) 5 SCC 323: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1128: AIR 2002 SC 2148: 2002 Cri LJ 2826.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-2002]

[8913] — Ss. 376, 302, 363 & 201 — Child rape — Sentence — Rape and murder of a 3 year old girl — Trial court imposing death sentence but High Court acquitting the accused-respondent — Held, though this case is perilously near the region of "rarest of the rare cases", but as the accused was once acquitted by High Court the extreme penalty need not be imposed, the lesser option being not unquestionably foreclosed — Hence death sentence altered to that of life imprisonment (Para 23). State of Maharashtra v. Bharat Fakira Dhiwar, (2002) 1 SCC 622: 2002 SCC (Cri) 217: AIR 2002 SC 16: 2002 Cri LJ 218: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 7.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-2001]

[8914] — Ss. 376, 302, 363 and 366 — Rape and murder of child by watchman — Death sentence, held, not warranted in this case — Appellant-accused aged about 27 years was watchman of building where deceased was residing — Death sentence imposed by trial court affirmed by High Court — Difference of opinion amongst Judges of Division Bench of Supreme Court as regards award of capital punishment in Rameshbhai (1) case, (2009) 5 SCC 740 — Possibility of rehabilitation and reformation of young offender — Uncertainty due to nature of circumstantial evidence — Hence held, death sentence cannot be maintained — Considering gravity of offence, behaviour of appellant, and fear and concern such incident generate in ordered society, death sentence commuted to life imprisonment directing that life sentence would extend to full life of appellant subject to any remission/commutation at instance of Government for good and sufficient reasons — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 366, 368, 415, 432 and 433 — Constitution of India, Arts. 72 and 161 (Paras 9 to 12). Rameshbhai Chandubhai Rathod (2) v. State of Gujarat, (2011) 2 SCC 764.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: H.S. Bedi, P. Sathasivam and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2011]

Ramraj v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2010) 1 SCC 573: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 842; Mulla v. State of U.P., (2010) 3 SCC 508: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1150; Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681, relied on

Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358, distinguished on facts

Opinion of A.K. Ganguly, J. in Rameshbhai Chandubhai Rathod (1) v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 5 SCC 740: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 881, affirmed

[8915] — Ss. 376, 302 and 404 — Offences of rape, murder and theft committed as an integral part of same transaction — Recovery of stolen property belonging to deceased at the instance of accused within 2 days of the offence — Incriminating circumstances not explained — Presumption regarding the connection of accused with the aforesaid three offences — Tests required to be satisfied for said presumption, stated — Rape and subsequent murder of 11 year old girl — Medical evidence supporting the prosecution case — Ornaments worn by the victim, crime articles and clothes of accused stained with blood and semen recovered at the instance of accused — Accused seen with victim near the place of occurrence just before the incident — Injuries present on the person of accused — Identification of ornaments by victim's parents — Held, the existing chain of unexplained incriminating circumstantial evidence were sufficient for proving the guilt of the accused charged with the said offences — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (a)

Where several offences have taken place as part of one transaction, recent and unexplained possession of property belonging to the deceased by the accused may enable a presumption being raised against him that he is guilty not only of the offence of theft or dacoity but also of other offences forming part of that transaction. While raising such presumption, the time factor between the date of the offence and recovery of stolen property from the possession of the accused would play a significant role. Precaution has to be taken that the presumption may not be so stretched as to permit suspicion taking the place of proof. No hard-and-fast rule can be laid down in this regard. (Paras 12 and 14)

Recovery of stolen property from the possession of the accused enables a presumption as to commission of offence other than theft or dacoity being drawn against the accused so as to hold him a perpetrator of such other offences on the following tests being satisfied: (i) the offence of criminal misappropriation, theft or dacoity relating to the articles recovered from the possession of the accused and such other offences can reasonably be held to have been committed as an integral part of the same transaction; (ii) the time-lag between the date of commission of the offence and the date of recovery of articles from the accused is not so wide as to snap the link between recovery and commission of the offence; (iii) availability of some piece of incriminating evidence or circumstance, other than mere recovery of the articles, connecting the accused with such other offence; (iv) caution on the part of the court to see that suspicion, howsoever strong, does not take the place of proof. In such cases the explanation offered by the accused for his possession of the stolen property assumes significance. (Para 15)

In the present case, a little before the probable time of commission of the crime, the accused was seen near the place of occurrence. The recovery of ornaments worn by the deceased and the blood-stained axe used in the crime was made at the instance of the accused and there is a time-lag of just two days between the offence and the recovery. The clothes of the accused, which were stained with blood and semen, were also recovered on being produced by the accused from his house. The injuries on the person of accused appear to have been caused at or about the time of occurrence. Besides the said facts, the medical evidence has also supported the case of prosecution. (Para 19)

Thus, offences of rape, murder and theft were committed in one transaction and the accused had failed to offer any explanation to the aforesaid incriminating circumstances and therefore they can be used as inculpatory circumstances against him. It is not only the recovery of stolen property but also availability of other strong circumstances which have fastened inescapable connectivity of the accused with the aforesaid offences. (Para 19). Ganesh Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 731: 2002 SCC (Cri) 247: 2002 Cri LJ 967.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-2001]

Baiju v. State of M.P., (1978) 1 SCC 588: 1978 SCC (Cri) 142; Earabhadrappa v. State of Karnataka, (1983) 2 SCC 330: 1983 SCC (Cri) 447: Gulab Chand v. State of M.P., (1995) 3 SCC 574: 1995 SCC (Cri) 552; Mukund v. State of M.P., (1997) 10 SCC 130: 1997 SCC (Cri) 799; A. Devendran v. State of T.N., (1997) 11 SCC 720: 1998 SCC (Cri) 220; State of Maharashtra v. Suresh, (2000) 1 SCC 471: 2000 SCC (Cri) 263; Shivappa v. State of Mysore, (1970) 1 SCC 487: 1970 SCC (Cri) 215, relied on

[8916] — Ss. 376, 302/34 and 201/34 — Guilt based on circumstantial evidence, established — Accused labourers taking pleas that semen stains found in their underwears cannot be used as an incriminating circumstance and that circumstances regarding extra-judicial and judicial confessions and part of circumstance relating to carnal intercourse were not proved — Chemical examination of seized underwears, not in dispute — Accused A-1 to A-4, after raping and murdering a minor girl (six years old), were throwing the deceased in a gunny bag, were seen, caught and handed over to police by PWs 2 to 5 established — Accused not disputing chemical examination showing their underwears stained with human semen and spermatozoa — Nothing on record that PWs 2, 3, 4 and 5 had any enmity with A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 or had any special relations with the police — Medical evidence of doctor PW 1 establishing that the victim was subjected to rape and murder — Pleas regarding inadmissibility of semen stains evidence and not proving of confessions, held, have no merit — Circumstances were sufficiently proved and completed the chain cumulatively and unerringly pointed towards the guilt of the accused

1. Rape and murder/death (contd.)

On 25-9-2003, the six year old prosecutrix, daughter of PW 4 (a migrant labourer from Nepal) left home at about 8.00 a.m. When she did not return for quite some time and the efforts of PW 4 and other prosecution witnesses to find her out failed, PW 4 lodged an FIR in the police station at around 4.00 p.m. At about 1.30 p.m. in the night, when PWs 2, 3 and 5 (other migrant labourers from Nepal) were waiting for the prosecutrix four persons came from the side of the road up to the vacant plot of one Sardarji in that locality and were seen throwing the dead body of the prosecutrix from the gunny bag in that plot. The gunny bag was also thrown over there. PW 2, PW 3, PW 4 and PW 5 raised alarm and caught hold of them (Accused A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4). The dead body and A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 were taken to police station.

PW 4 lodged the written report at about 2.00 a.m. (26-9-2003) and a case under Sections 302/201/34 IPC was registered against A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4. Their formal arrest was made. In the morning of 26-9-2003 at about 6.30 a.m. seizure memo of the dead body was prepared by the IO (PW 11). PW 1 (doctor) conducted post-mortem of dead body at about 1.00 p.m. The accused persons were also sent for medical examination. On the basis of the disclosure statement of A-1 and A-2, two feet long electric wire of yellow colour from the house of one R where the accused were then residing was recovered.

The trial court awarded death sentence to the four appellant accused. The trial court also convicted the accused-appellants for the offences punishable under Sections 376 and 377 IPC and sentenced them to life imprisonment. Each of the appellants was also convicted for the offence punishable under Sections 201/34 IPC and sentenced to undergo seven years' rigorous imprisonment and fine of Rs 2000 and in default of payment of fine, additional imprisonment of six months. Since death sentence was awarded, the trial court made a reference to the High Court for confirmation.

The accused-appellants challenged the judgment of the trial court in separate appeals before the High Court. The death reference and the appeals were heard together. The High Court maintained the conviction of the appellants under Sections 302/34, 376 and 201/34 IPC. The sentence of death awarded under Sections 302/34 IPC to each of the appellants was commuted to that of rigorous imprisonment for life. The sentence awarded by the trial court under Sections 376 and 201/34 IPC was maintained. The High Court, however, acquitted the appellants of charge under Section 377 IPC and their conviction and sentence under this count was set aside. It is from the judgment dated 12-7-2005 that these four criminal appeals by special leave arise.

The High Court discarded the circumstances mentioned at Serial Nos. (vi), (viii) and (x) and the prosecution case of carnal intercourse. Despite that, the High Court was convinced that all other circumstances have been cogently and firmly established. The High Court discarded the following circumstance (1) That A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 made extra-judicial confession of their guilt before PW 1, PW 2, PW 3 and PW 4, (2) That at the instance and on the disclosure statement of A-1 and A-2, a piece of wire was recovered from the house of one R, and (3) That A-2 made a confession of his guilt before the Judicial Magistrate on 7-10-2003.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Where the entire case hinges on circumstantial evidence, great care must be taken in evaluating circumstantial evidence to ensure that the circumstances on which the prosecution relies are wholly consistent with the sole hypothesis of the guilt of the accused. There is no eyewitness account and the case depends wholly upon circumstantial evidence. While evaluating circumstantial evidence, which of course has to be done carefully, the circumstances must be of such a nature as to be capable of supporting the exclusive hypothesis that the accused is guilty of the crime of which he is charged and the circumstances so shown by the prosecution are compatible with no other reasonable hypothesis. (Paras 15, 13 and 17)

There is no merit in the contention that the accused being labourers, not changing their underwears daily, semen stains found in their underwears cannot be used as an incriminating circumstance. That the underwears of the accused were seized on 27-9-2003 when they were in jail and these articles were sent for chemical examination is not in dispute. That the evidence pertaining to chemical examination of underwears shows that those underwears were found stained with human semen and spermatozoa is also not in dispute. Nothing has been brought on record that PW 2, PW 3, PW 4 and PW 5 had any enmity with A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 or had any special relations with the police. That A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 were seen throwing the dead body of the victim in the intervening night of 25-9-2003/26-9-2003 is established. (Paras 31, 27 and 33)

It is true that circumstances regarding extra-judicial and judicial confessions and part of circumstance relating to carnal intercourse were not proved, but the remaining circumstances were sufficiently proved and completed the chain cumulatively and, therefore, there is no escape from the conclusion that within all human probabilities the crime was committed by the accused and none else as the proved circumstances unerringly point towards the guilt of the accused. The medical evidence of (PW 1) establishes that the victim was subjected to rape and murder. The injuries and medical evidence make it highly improbable that four persons raped the minor girl. Firstly, no question or suggestion has been put to PW 1 in this regard. Secondly, and more importantly, semen stains with spermatozoa were found on the underwears of all the four accused. Thirdly, chemical examination of the vaginal smear of the victim has also confirmed presence of human blood, semen and spermatozoa. In view of this evidence, rape of the victim by more than one culprit can be safely held to be established. The medical evidence proves beyond reasonable doubt that the victim died of homicidal death and that she was raped before being murdered. The view taken by the High Court is the only possible view on a proper appraisement of evidence and no other view is possible and it has not committed any error in upholding the conviction of the accused persons for the offences punishable under Sections 302/34, 376 and 201/34 IPC. The sentence awarded to them calls for no interference. (Paras 34, 32 and 43). Pawan v. State of Uttaranchal, (2009) 15 SCC 259: (2009) 2 ECrN 789 (SC): (2009) 3 All LJ 637: 2009 Cri LJ 2257.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha, A.K. Ganguly and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-2009]

Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 2 SCC 35: 1981 SCC (Cri) 315; Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256; Sadashiv Ramrao Hadbe v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 10 SCC 92: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 161, distinguished [8917] — Ss. 376 & 304 Pt. II — Rape and murder — Identification of the accused at night — According to eyewitness, he had seen the occurrence by flashing torchlight — Failure on the part of the investigating agency to seize the torchlight, held, not fatal to the prosecution case (Para 20). State of Orissa v. Dibakar Naik, (2002) 5 SCC 323: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1128: AIR 2002 SC 2148: 2002 Cri LJ 2826.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-2002]

Balo Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1997) 5 SCC 360: 1997 SCC (Cri) 701, relied on

[8918] — Ss. 376, 363 and 302 — Rape and murder of minor — Minor incongruity — Though there is an incongruity in prosecution evidence regarding recovery of body and inquest thereof, held, there is strong evidence to show guilt of appellant — Clothes of deceased recovered with bloodstains and lacerated wound found on private parts with hymen completely ruptured — Doctor opining cause of death as asphyxiation — Clothes worn by appellant at time of incident recovered with bloodstains thereon, underwear recovered also having semen stains — No rational explanation could be given by appellant as to presence of said stains on his clothes — Appellant seen near time of alleged abduction of deceased with a girl child on his shoulder, mistaken to be a niece of the appellant by a witness (PW 7) — Held, even though PW 7 had not identified that the girl was the deceased, it is a serious incriminating circumstance, and appellant being an unmarried man, could not have been found at night with a girl — Circumstance clearly shows that he had kidnapped the child during the night — Moreover, previous conduct of appellant (having been rejected sexual favours by mother of deceased and admonished and scolded therefor by mother, uncle and brother of deceased, earlier in the night) though not strictly admissible in evidence, would prove that appellant was prone to do the crimes alleged — Hence, Sessions Judge and High Court appreciated evidence in correct perspective and found appellant guilty and there were no reasons to disbelieve this finding — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 8

The appellant was staying in one of the rooms of a building owned by the complainant K, a widow having three children. On 11-9-2002 at about 10 p.m., the appellant came to PW 2 K and offered Rs 150 and sought sexual favours. PW 2 got angry and she asked him to go away, but the appellant declined to leave the place. PW 2 told her brother and her son that the appellant had been harassing her. They came and scolded the appellant and he left the place. During the night, PW 2 along with her two minor daughters was sleeping on a cot lying outside the room. At about midnight she felt cold and went inside and at 1.00 o'clock she came back and then she saw that one of her daughters, namely, S was missing. She immediately called her brother and her son who were sleeping in another portion of the same house. They searched for S at nearby places, and as they had suspicion on the appellant, they went in search of him to his house but he was not found there. They made enquiry with PW 7. He stated that he had seen appellant going away with a girl on his shoulder but he thought that the girl must be the daughter of a relative of the appellant. The people in the locality collected and at about 4 o'clock in the morning they saw the appellant coming from a nearby road. PW 2 and others took him to the police station. It seems that he made certain revelations and PW 2 gave the FI statement and on the basis of the FI statement a case was registered and investigation was started.

1. Rape and murder/death (contd.)

The dead body of S was recovered from a pond. The body was found floating on the water and it was identified by relatives. An inquest was held on the dead body and on post-mortem examination it was found that there were a series of injuries on the body of deceased S. The clothes were stained with blood and some mud particles. There was lacerated wound on the private parts of the deceased, and the hymen was completely ruptured. The doctor opined that the victim must have died due to asphyxia.

Commuting the sentence of death to life imprisonment,

Held :

There is incongruity in the prosecution evidence regarding recovery of the body and the inquest of the dead body. PW 19, the investigating officer could not throw much light on this infirmity in the investigation. Therefore no importance is being given to the alleged recovery of dead body at the instance of the appellant. (Para 6)

However, there is strong evidence to show that the appellant committed the offence. According to the prosecution, the appellant was immediately arrested and brought to the police station. His clothes were recovered and sent for chemical examination. Items F, G, H and I are the shirt, banyan, pants and underwear respectively worn by the appellant at the time of incident. The chemical analyst's report shows that on Items F, G and H there were presence of bloodstains and Item I was also having bloodstains mixed with semen. The appellant could not give any rational explanation for the presence of bloodstains on his clothes. (Para 7)

Another circumstance is the evidence of PW 7. He went to bed and at about 1 a.m. he got up to answer the call of nature and came to the bathroom situated outside his house, then he found the appellant moving around and he was having a child on his shoulder. In the FI statement also reference has been made to the statement made by Rambaran. Of course PW 7 had not identified that the girl was deceased S. Nevertheless, it is a serious incriminating circumstance and the appellant being an unmarried man, he could not have been found at night with a girl and this circumstance clearly shows that the appellant had kidnapped the child during night for the purpose of commission of this crime. The dead body of deceased S was found in the early morning of 12-9-2002 and the appellant was arrested immediately and previous conduct also though not strictly admissible in evidence would prove that the appellant was prone to do such crime. The Sessions Judge as well as the High Court appreciated the evidence in the correct perspective had found the appellant guilty and there are no reasons to disbelieve this finding. (Paras 8 and 9). Surendra Pal Shivbalakpal v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 127: 2005 SCC (Cri) 653: AIR 2004 SC 4862: 2004 Cri LJ 4642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2004]

[8919] — Ss. 376, 363 and 302 — Rape and murder of victim — If a "rarest of rare case" — Award of death penalty by trial court — Held, case not "rarest of the rare" — In facts and circumstances of case, death penalty not justified — Commuted to sentence of life imprisonment (Para 8). State of Maharashtra v. Mansingh, (2005) 3 SCC 131: 2005 SCC (Cri) 657.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-2004]

[8920] — Ss. 376, 364 and 302 — Circumstantial evidence — Conviction on the basis of — Sustainability — Appellant-accused alleged to have raped and murdered deceased, aged five years — Accused caught red-handed in completely naked state thrusting a stem/stick of dhanicha in vagina of deceased — Held, for a crime to be proved it is not necessary that the crime must be seen to have been committed and must, in all circumstances be proved by direct ocular evidence by examining before the court those persons who had seen its commission — Offence can be proved by circumstantial evidence also — Principal fact or factum probandum may be proved indirectly by means of certain inferences drawn from factum probans, that is, the evidentiary facts — Circumstantial evidence is not direct to the point in issue but consists of evidence of various other facts which are so closely associated with the fact in issue that taken together they form a chain of circumstances from which the existence of the principal fact can be legally inferred or presumed — In the instant case accused wanted to camouflage the serious crime of rape and so in a planned manner, after committing rape, he mercilessly inserted stem/stick deep inside the fragile vagina of the girl to the extent of 33 cm to cause her death, with a view to masquerade the crime as an accident — It was just by providence that due to timely reach of the witnesses (PWs 2, 3 and others) who were frantically searching the girl that he could be caught in naked condition while inserting a stick into the vagina of the lifeless body of the victim — Hence, conviction of appellant for offences punishable under Ss. 364, 376 & 302 IPC imposed by trial court and as affirmed by High Court, held, sustainable (Paras 3, 17, 18 and 19). Bantu v. State of U.P., (2008) 11 SCC 113.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-2008]

Wills' Circumstantial Evidence' (Chapter VI), cited

[8921] — Ss. 376(2) and 302 — Rape and murder of minor aged less than six years — If a "rarest of rare case" — Held, rape is one of the most depraved acts — Such iniquitous, flagitious act becomes abominable when the victim is a child — The diabolic act reaches the lowest level of humanity when the rape is followed by brutal murder — Hence, Supreme Court has no hesitation in holding that present case falls in the rarest of rare category and death sentence awarded by trial court was appropriate — Guidelines and tests for imposition of death sentence laid down in — Bachan Singh, (1980) 2 SCC 684 and Machhi Singh, (1983) 3 SCC 470, pp. 471-72 and p. 489, para 38 [set out in para 26 in SCC], applied — Death sentence awarded by trial court restored

The victim, who was not six years old lost her life on account of bestial acts of the respondent who allegedly raped her and thereafter murdered her. The victim had gone to school and did not return at the usual time. On the next morning her dead body was found in a sugarcane field around 6.00 a.m. She was found lying in a dead condition and blood was oozing from her private parts and there were marks of pressing on her neck. PW 7, the doctor conducted the post-mortem around 2.00 p.m. on the same day and opined that death had occurred within the preceding 24 hours.

Three persons claimed to have seen the accused nearby the place of occurrence between 1.00 p.m. to 2.00 p.m. on the date of occurrence. Two of them, namely, PW 3 and PW 5 claimed to have seen the deceased being carried on a bicycle by the accused who was taking the bicycle with the deceased sitting on the handle-bar thereof. PW 2 stated that he had seen the accused in perplexed state around 2.00 p.m. near the place from where the dead body of the deceased was found. Investigation was undertaken. During such investigation, there was recovery of the accused's underwear as also the undergarment the deceased was wearing.

Allowing the appeals and restoring the death sentence awarded by the trial court,

Held :

Rape is one of the most depraved acts. The iniquitous, flagitious act becomes abominable when the victim is a child. The diabolic act reaches the lowest level of humanity when the rape is followed by brutal murder. The Supreme Court has no hesitation in holding that the case at hand falls in the rarest of rare category and death sentence awarded by the trial court was appropriate. The acquittal of the respondent-accused is clearly unsustainable and is set aside. Guidelines and tests for imposition of death sentence laid down in Bachan Singh, (1980) 2 SCC 684 and Machhi Singh, (1983) 3 SCC 470, pp. 471-72 and p. 489, para 38 [set out in para 26 in SCC], applied. (Paras 2, 24, 26 and 31). State of U.P. v. Satish, (2005) 3 SCC 114: 2005 SCC (Cri) 642: AIR 2005 SC 1000: 2005 Cri LJ 1428.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-2005]

Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681, applied

(2004) 1 All Cri R 760 (All), reversed

[Ed.: But in a similar situation (or worse, of abduction as well) other Benches of the Supreme Court in Surendra Pal Shivbalakpal v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 127 and State of Maharashtra v. Mansingh, (2005) 3 SCC 131, have felt defferently and awarded life imprisonment instead. On the other hand, earlier decisions of the Supreme Court in Laxman Naik v. State of Orissa, (1994) 3 SCC 381: 1994 SCC (Cri) 656; Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358; Kamta Tiwari v. State of M.P., (1999) 9 SCC 581 have held death sentence appropriate where rape and murder of a minor girl was involved. Besides deterrence, retribution still survives as an object of punishment [Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358 and Jacabo George (Dr.) v. State of Kerala, (1994) 3 SCC 430: 1994 SCC (Cri) 774] and one may consider looking at the situation intimately from the perspective of John Grisham: A Time to Kill.]

[8922] — S. 376(2) and 302 — Sentence — Commutation of death sentence — Accused raping and murdering minor after abducting her in middle of the night, while asleep, from her home (after having had an altercation with her mother, brother and uncle, the mother having refused him sexual favours) and throwing body into a pond — Appellant aged 36 years at time of occurrence, impecunious, a migrant labourer and there being no evidence that he had been involved in any other criminal case previously — Held, it could not be said that he would be a menace to society in future, and no materials had been placed on record

1. Rape and murder/death (contd.)

to draw such a conclusion — This is not a "rarest of rare" case — Death penalty was not warranted — Hence death sentence commuted to life imprisonment

This is not a "rarest of rare case" in which death penalty should be imposed on the appellant. The appellant was aged 36 years at the time of the occurrence and there is no evidence that the appellant had been involved in any other criminal case previously and the appellant was a migrant labourer from U.P. and was living in impecunious circumstances and it cannot be said that he would be a menace to society in future and no materials have been placed on record to draw such a conclusion. The death penalty was not warranted in this case. The conviction of the appellant is confirmed on all the counts, but the sentence of death penalty imposed on him for the offence under Section 302 IPC is commuted to life imprisonment. (Para 13). Surendra Pal Shivbalakpal v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 127: 2005 SCC (Cri) 653: AIR 2004 SC 4862: 2004 Cri LJ 4642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2004]

[Ed.: It is noted in para 9 that the "previous conduct ... would prove that the appellant was prone to do such crime". In this regard see State of U.P. v. Satish, (2005) 3 SCC 114, above.]

[8923] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 302 and 201 r/w S. 34 — Gang rape and murder of child aged 7-8 years — Conviction justified — Sentence to be imposed — Appellants alleged to have lifted the little girl from the waiting room, where she was sleeping along with her parents and younger brother, committed rape and then murdered her — Appellants seen talking in a suspicious manner — No explanation offered by Appellant 2 as regards his stained undergarments/injuries on his face (and which he accepted) — Lock and key of waiting room always in possession of Appellant 1 (chowkidar) — Absence of Appellant 2 from the bus in question, his effort to sleep in another bus leaving his own bus, his absence for about 1 to 1½ hour, and change of his garments during that period, proved — Appellant 1 making voluntary judicial confession wherein the roles played by the appellants were explicitly detailed — Possibility of some other passenger committing the offence ruled out on basis of circumstantial evidence — Held, S. 30 Evidence Act, 1872, can be taken aid of to take into consideration the confessional effect of the statements made by Appellant 1 as against Appellant 2 for arriving at an opinion that by reason thereof involvement of both of them amply stood proved — Judicial confession of Appellant 1, statement of Appellant 2 in his examination under CrPC 1973, S. 313 and other circumstantial evidence, prove the guilt of the appellants beyond reasonable doubt — Death sentence reduced to rigorous life imprisonment

Appellants were charged with and convicted for commission of offences under Sections 376(2)(g), 302 and 201 read with Section 34 of the Penal Code, 1860 for rape and murder of one B (deceased) aged 7-8 years. Deceased along with her parents and younger brother was travelling to Dimapur (State of Nagaland) in a private transport service known as Network Travels from Dharmanagar (Tripura). They reached Guwahati at around 10.30 p.m. on 12-7-2002. There was no connecting bus to Dimapur at that time. Appellant 1 was a night chowkidar of the waiting room of the said Network Travels. He represented that they could stay there for the night and therefore should not have any apprehension in regard to their safety. Their luggage was carried by Appellant 1 to the waiting room. The waiting room had two openings. It was covered by grills. Only the front gate was open, which was kept under lock and key, the key whereof was with Appellant 1. PW 23 (father of the deceased) and the two children slept. However, PW 22 (mother of the deceased) stayed awake. Appellant 1 insisted to her repeatedly that she should go to sleep stating that as the waiting room would be locked, there was nothing for her to worry about. As she had not been sleeping, Appellant 1, allegedly, scolded her to do so. At that time, a bus bearing No. AS 25C 1476 arrived at the said bus-stop. P, Appellant 2 was the "handyman" of the said bus. While the manager, driver and the conductor slept in the said bus, he did not. He was seen talking with Appellant 1.

PW 22 slept for a while and got up when her son cried out. She did not find B and raised hue and cry. They requested Appellant 1 to open the gates of the waiting room. He showed his reluctance at the first instance. He was thereafter told about the missing of the girl. On being so informed, he opined that she might be somewhere else within the room. A search was carried out in the three buses, which were at the bus-stop belonging to the travel agency. Nearabout places as also the railway station were searched. The bathroom situated in the said premises was also searched.

The dead body of B was found in a septic tank on 14-7-2000. FIR was lodged wherein apart from Appellant 1, suspicion was raised about the involvement of driver, PW 26, conductor, PW 25 and the handyman, P Appellant 2 herein of the bus bearing No. AS 25C 1476. The said bus had already left for its destination at about 6.30 in the morning. Even prior thereto, PW 2 was persuaded that the said bus be permitted to leave early for Jorhat, which was declined.

During the course of investigation, Appellant 1 made a confessional statement before the Magistrate under Section 164 CrPC. He gave a vivid description as to how the offence was committed by him and Appellant 2. On basis of circumstantial evidence and judicial confession of Appellant 1, appellants were convicted and sentenced to death by the trial court. Their appeal was dismissed by the High Court. Hence, the present appeal. Bishnu Prasad Sinha v. State of Assam, (2007) 11 SCC 467: AIR 2007 SC 848: (2007) 53 AIC 166 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1145.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2007]

[8924] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 302/34 and 201 — Rape and murder — Sentence — Death sentence justified — Rarest of rare cases — Jail officer sending to his quarter a guard and a prisoner to work in the house and in the garden attached thereto, respectively — 16-year-old daughter of the said officer was at that time alone in the quarter and was preparing for her Class 10th examination — Taking advantage of her loneliness, both the guard and the prisoner committing rape on her, strangulating and then stabbing her, removing her cycle and throwing her dead body in septic tank — In such circumstances sentence of death, held, was the only proper punishment — CrPC, 1973, S. 354(3) (Para 36). Molai v. State of M.P., (1999) 9 SCC 581: AIR 2000 SC 177.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.P. Kurdukar, K.T. Thomas and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-1999]

State of M.P. v. Molai, 1999 Cri LJ 2698 (MP), affirmed

[8925] — S. 376 r/w Ss. 302 and 511 — Rape and murder alleged — Improbable prosecution case — Unreliable dying declaration — Both deceased and accused-appellant found lying in a pool of blood in appellant's room having suffered serious injuries — Deceased found totally naked and underclothes of both the deceased and appellant found in the same room — Appellant and deceased had love affair and deceased had gone to appellant's place alone — Deceased taken to hospital by her brother (PW 5) where she was found dead — Complaint given by PW 5 to police which formed the basis of formal FIR — In the complaint PW 5, after stating that deceased had told him that appellant had tried to rape her and on her refusal he had stripped and stabbed her, adding his own assessment that deceased died due to deep head injuries caused by appellant and that appellant had thereafter tried to kill himself — Last words in the complaint that appellant had also tried to commit suicide by stabbing himself in the stomach appeared to have been inserted later — But on the basis of medical evidence serious nature of injuries found on appellant cannot be said to be self-inflicted — Having regard to facts and circumstances of the case, held, the uncorroborated alleged oral dying declaration was unreliable — Prosecution case of rape and murder of deceased by appellant appears to be improbable — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32

In the absence of explanation as to the serious nature of injuries sustained by the appellant giving rise to serious doubt as to the very genesis of the incident, the last portion of the statement in the complaint of PW 5 (wherein he had said that the deceased died due to deep head injuries caused by the appellant, who also tried to kill himself by stabbing in the stomach) appears to have been inserted after deliberation and consultation. This insertion probabilises the defence version that the appellant and the deceased were in love. The very fact that the deceased was totally naked and the underclothes of both the deceased and the appellant were found in the same room probabilises the theory of intercourse by consent and negatives the story of rape. The story that the appellant tried to kill himself by jumping from the upper floor cannot also be accepted. That apart, in the earliest version given in the report given to the police by PW 5, there is no mention about the appellant jumping from the upper floor. In view of the injuries found on the deceased and the defence taken by the appellant that she died on the spot and in the absence of any other evidence except the statement of PW 5, it is difficult to accept that the deceased was alive or at any rate she was in a position to make the statement to PW 5 as sought to be made out. The theory that the appellant tried to kill himself does not appear to be probable as both PW 4 and PW 5 admitted that the deceased and the appellant knew each other; the deceased voluntarily went to the house of the appellant to say goodbye, since she was going back to her country. In this background it appears improbable that the appellant forcefully tried to rape the deceased. It appears that both the appellant and the deceased may have been in a compromising position and were surprised and attacked by an assailant. Since the injuries found on the appellant could not be said to be self-inflicted, his defence that he sustained injuries at the hands of an unknown person when he tried to save the deceased, appears to be probable. It was enough to show that the defence was probable in the given circumstances. In this case the defence statement is probabilised by the surrounding circumstances and the evidence brought on record. The so-called dying declaration does not appear to be in the words of the deceased. It does not inspire confidence. There was considerable delay in registering the FIR and the explanation given for the delay is not convincing. Further, except the interested statement of PW 5 there is no other evidence to corroborate the dying declaration. Having regard to all these infirmities, improbabilities and contradictions found in the case, it is unsafe to act upon the said dying declaration. (Paras 7 to 9). Ronald Kiprono Ramkat v. State of Haryana, (2001) 6 SCC 423: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1034: AIR 2001 SC 2488.

1. Rape and murder/death (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-2001]

[8926] — Ss. 376/34 & 302/34 — Deceased raped and thrown into well — Where evidence was limited to appellant's giving assistance in dragging the deceased out of her house, the conviction under Ss. 302/34 cannot stand. Naresh Kumar v. State of Maharashtra, (1980) 2 SCC 358: 1980 SCC (Cri) 453: AIR 1980 SC 1168: 1980 Cri LJ 920.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, P.S. Kailasam and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-1980]

[8927] — Ss. 376/34 and 304 Pt. II/34 — Committing rape and causing death of a female child aged 4 years by two respondents — Prosecution case based on circumstantial evidence — Circumstances found established on the basis of evidence of PWs — Post-mortem examination report showing that the child was violently and bestially ravished, molested, raped and sodomised — Child died due to "intracranial damage consequent upon surface force impact to the head" — Trial court convicting the accused under Ss. 364, 376, 377 and 302 r/w S. 34 on the basis of established circumstances and sentencing the first respondent to life imprisonment and the second respondent to death for murder and awarding lesser sentences for the remaining counts — But High Court acquitting both the respondents — Held on facts, though accused-respondents cannot be convicted on charge of murder but they had knowledge that the acts done by them on the child of tender age were likely to cause her death — Hence both of them are liable to be convicted under Ss. 376 and 377 r/w S. 34 and S. 304 Pt. II r/w S. 34 and sentenced to life imprisonment

On the day of occurrence, mother (PW 10) of the victim, a female child aged 4 years, went to factory for work leaving the child in the custody of PW 8 who was residing close by. Accused-Respondent 1 (A-1), who was known to PWs 10 and 8, took the child and her clothes and utensils by about noon during the short time when PW 8 had gone out to fetch milk. When PW 10 came home in the night, she learnt from PW 8 that her daughter had been taken by A-1. So she went to A-1's house at about 9 p.m. There she found her child lying completely nude next to accused-Respondent 2 (A-2) on the second floor of the house, who was then deep in his sleep. Then A-1 who was found in an inebriated condition, hurled a remark that he had despatched the deceased to heaven. It was then she realised that her child was not breathing. PW 10 Sharda then took the child to the hospital. The doctor who initially examined her noted only "multiple bruises all over the body" in the Medico-Legal Certificate (MLC) and pronounced her dead. But the doctor (PW 1) who conducted autopsy on her body gave full details in his post-mortem report about the features noticed by him on the dead body. The corpse was full of abrasions and contusions. The prominent among them were counted by the doctor as 25 in number and he described the situs and dimensions of all of them. Among them, oval fashioned multiple abrasions on the left cheek appeared to him as marks of biting. Both the upper and lower lips of the child were bruised violently. Marks of violent handling of both the thighs, lower abdomen and pubic region were also described by the doctor. The doctor noted that the vaginal orifice was so badly mutilated that one middle finger could be easily admitted into it. Even the tongue was not spared in that violence. The doctor also examined the head injury and opined that the child died "due to intracranial damage consequent upon surface force impact to the head". The Sessions Court accepted this medical report as reliable. It found that the prosecution had established the following circumstances: (1) A-1 had taken the child from the house of PW 8 by about noon on the fateful day; (2) the child was recovered from the house of A-1 and she was then found breathless; (3) the child was lying naked by the side of A-2 who was in deep sleep when PW 10 lifted her up; (4) A-1 who was then in an inebriated condition, blurted out that the child was sent to heaven; (5) the bloodstained knickers of the victim were later recovered from the house of A-2 on the basis of the statement given to the police. The trial court concluded on the strength of those circumstances that both the respondents are liable to be convicted for murder, rape and unnatural offence, while A-1 was additionally liable for kidnapping the child for murder. Accordingly the trial court convicted both the respondents under Sections 364, 376, 377 and 302 r/w Section 34 IPC and sentenced A-2 to death and A-1 to life imprisonment on the charge of murder and awarded lesser sentences for the remaining counts. However, the High Court doubted the correctness of the medical report of PW 1 in view of the entry made in the MLC by the doctor who had first examined her. The High Court also found discrepancy in the evidence of PWs 8, 10 and 12 (a neighbour). The High Court also declined to place any weight on the circumstances relating to recovery of bloodstained knickers of the victim on the ground that the seizure memo was not attested by any independent witness. Thus the High Court declined to believe the police version as true and consequently it acquitted the two accused-respondents. Disposing of the State's appeal,

Thus on consideration of the entire evidence in this case, there is no doubt that the trial court had come to the correct conclusion that the two respondents were the rapists who subjected the child to such savage ravishment. The Division Bench of the High Court has grossly erred in interfering with such a correct conclusion made by the trial court as the reasons adopted by the High Court for such interference are very tenuous. Nonetheless, it is difficult to enter upon a finding that the respondents are equally guilty of murder of the child. The opinion of PW 1 that the child died due to "intracranial damage consequent upon surface force impact to the head" was made with reference to the subdural haematoma which resulted in subarachnoid haemorrhage. Such a consequence happened during the course of the violent ravishment committed by either both or by one of the rapists without possibly having any intention or even knowledge that their action would produce any such injury. Even so, the rapists cannot disclaim knowledge that the acts done by them on a little infant of such a tender age were likely to cause its death. Hence they cannot escape conviction from the offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. In the result the impugned judgment of the High Court is set aside and the conviction passed by the trial court under Sections 376 and 377 read with Section 34 IPC is restored. The trial court awarded the maximum sentence to the respondents under the said counts i.e. imprisonment for life. The fact-situation in this case does not justify any reduction of that sentence. The respondents are also liable to be convicted under Section 304 Part II, read with Section 34 IPC though it is unnecessary to award any sentence thereunder, in view of the sentence of imprisonment for life awarded to the respondents under the other two counts. (Paras 23 and 24). State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi) v. Sunil, (2001) 1 SCC 652: 2001 SCC (Cri) 248: 2001 Cri LJ 504.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-2000]

State v. Ramesh, 1998 Cri LJ 4233 (Del), reversed

[8928] — Ss. 376/511, 302/34 and 201/34 — Prosecution case solely based on circumstantial evidence — Circumstances should form a chain which should point to the guilt of the accused — Evidence should prove particular facts relevant for the purpose of the case — Proved facts should be wholly consistent with the guilt — On facts held, circumstances shown by prosecution were not sufficient to prove the guilt of the accused — Courts below erred in convicting the appellants under Ss. 376/511, 302/34 and 201/34 IPC on the basis of discrepant and fragile evidence. Sudama Pandey v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 679: 2002 SCC (Cri) 239: AIR 2002 SC 293: 2002 Cri LJ 582: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 65.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-2001]

Tanviben Pankajkumar Divetia v. State of Gujarat, (1997) 7 SCC 156: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1004; Sharad Birdhichand Sarda v. State of Maharashtra, (1984) 4 SCC 116: 1984 SCC (Cri) 487, relied on

2. Rape by person in authority

See also 'A.3.(e) Ss. 376-A to 376-D', above

[8929] — S. 375 — Gang rape by police of women participating in public rally — Compensation to — Quantum of — Limits on power of High Court when matter at premature stage — Writ petition by Uttarakhand Sangharsh Samity seeking directions to State authorities in connection with confrontation ensued between the agitators and the administration which resulted in death, injuries and molestation of women — High Court directing the State Govt. to pay huge amounts as compensation to the victims and to make fund allotment (in several crores of rupees) for development of Kumaon and Garhwal regions by way of reparation to the people of those regions — Such directions which resulted in great financial burden on the State at the premature stage and which were made without trial, without consideration of evidence, without having regard to financial capacity, resources of the State and legislative mandates involving State funding, held, were in excess of'

2. Rape by person in authority (contd.)

High Court's jurisdiction under Act. 226 and unwarranted and hence liable to be set aside — Constitution of India, Arts. 226 and 19(1)(a), (b), (c) & (d) and 21

A public rally was organised for protesting against a State Government notification pertaining to reservation in educational institutions based on regionwise domicile and to press the demand for a separate State of Uttarakhand comprising certain hilly regions of the State of U.P. and some other areas. The administration took stern measures to resist the protestors' march towards the national capital as the officials claimed to have received secret information that the proposed rallyists were carrying lethal weapons in violation of the prohibitory orders issued by the Government and might create serious law and order situation. The confrontation which ensued resulted in a lot of bloodshed including loss of many lives, infliction of injuries on persons belonging to both sides, outraging the modesty of women ranging to ravishments. An association styling itself as Uttarakhand Sangharsh Samity moved a writ petition in the High Court for directions to be issued to the authorities to meet the consequences of the said confrontation. A Division Bench of the High Court issued certain interim directions, one of which was to the CBI to enquire into the allegations of 'human rights violations'. CBI took up investigation pursuant to the directions and laid charge-sheet against certain officers for offences under Sections 109 and 120-B read with Sections 341 and 342 of the Indian Penal Code. Sanction of the State Government was obtained for launching prosecution in respect of those offences. Some of the accused who were arrayed in the said charge-sheet filed writ petitions before the High Court in challenge to the validity of the sanction order issued by the State Government for prosecuting them. The Division Bench disposed of the first-mentioned writ petition filed by the Samity issuing several directions. It ordered the Government to pay Rs 10 lakhs each to the dependants of all the persons who died in police firing. Rs 10 lakhs each were given to the victims of molestation, Rs fifty thousand each to 398 persons who were detained by the police. The Division Bench also issued the following directions regarding fund allotment for development of certain regions: "Damages and compensation for constitutional wrongs committed subjecting injuries to the class of people of Kumaon and Garhwal for their only fault that they were securing their civil rights on the guarantee already given by the legislature, as discussed in the judgment. The reparation to the people of Kumaon and Garhwal Divisions shall stand related to their population (5,926,146: Kumaon — 2,943,199, Garhwal — 2,982,947) in the equation of a rupee per month per person for a plan period of five years and this compensation shall be invested amongst the population of Kumaon and Garhwal earmarked specifically for a programme for the upliftment of the women; 50 paise of this reparation shall come from the State of Uttar Pradesh and the other 50 paise from the Union of India. This would be in addition to the normal plan allocation which this area would receive as what the Court is suggesting is damages beyond the normal allocation." Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The High Court was not justified in fixing such a huge sum as compensation at a premature stage. The High Court while imposing such a heavy liability on the State has not made any attempt to discuss the relevant questions which are to be answered for fixing the liability of compensation and for quantification of the amount of compensation. Therefore, the direction for payment of compensation is clearly unsustainable and is liable to be vacated. (Para 12)

The magnitude of the financial burden for complying with the direction regarding fund allotment has been approximately estimated as amounting to several crores of rupees. The money has to come out of the State coffers. This is not a case where the High Court was ordering compensation to one individual or even to a limited number of persons dehors its legal liability enjoined by statutory provisions. Major revenue of the State Government is through taxation. But no taxation is possible without legislative sanction. The Government must have other resources to meet the direction. The High Court did not take into account the financial capacity of the State Government, nor its resources for making up the said amount nor the priorities to be honoured by the State Government nor even the legislative mandates involving State funding, while ordering the Government to incur such a huge expenditure of a recurring nature. Judicial creativity has, no doubt, expanded to newer dimensions in the recent past, but that is no justification for using judicial power for imposing such an unbearable burden on the State which in turn would be compelled to extract money out of the common man's coffers to meet such a massive financial burden. Suffice it to say that the above direction cannot stand judicial scrutiny and it is hereby set aside. (Paras 14 to 17). A.K. Singh v. Uttarakhand Jan Morcha, (1999) 4 SCC 476: 1999 SCC (Cri) 580: AIR 1999 SC 2193.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, D.P. Mohapatra and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-1999]

[8930] — S. 375 Thirdly — Rape by a policeman in police station — Onus on the prosecution to establish ingredients of the offence — Passive consent or submission out of fear by the prosecutrix — Circumstantial evidence regarding — Held, offence not established — Charge against companion policeman under S. 354 for fondling the private parts of the prosecutrix also fails

The onus is always on the prosecution to prove affirmatively each ingredient of the offence it seeks to establish and such onus never shifts. It was, therefore, incumbent on it to make out that all the ingredients of S. 375 were present in the case. For the proposition that the requisite consent was lacking in the present case reliance on behalf of the State can be placed only on clause Thirdly so that it would have to be shown that the girl had been put in fear of death or hurt and that that was the reason for her consent. In the absence of such a finding, the alleged fear would not vitiate the consent. Further, for circumstantial evidence to be used in order to prove an ingredient of an offence, it has to be such that it leads to no reasonable inference other than that of guilt. The fear which clause Thirdly of S. 375 speaks of is negatived by the circumstance that the girl is said to have been taken away by the accused policeman right from amongst her near and dear ones at a point of time when they were all leaving the police station together and were crossing the entrance gate. The circumstantial evidence available, therefore, is not only capable of being construed in a way different from that adopted by the High Court but actually derogates in no uncertain measure from the inference drawn by it.

Moreover, no marks of injury were found on the person of the girl after the incident and their absence goes a long way to indicate that the alleged intercourse was a peaceful affair, and that the story of a stiff resistance having been put up by the girl is all false. It is further clear that the averments on the part of the girl that she had been shouting loudly for help are untrue.

Thus the sexual intercourse in question is not proved to amount to rape and no offence is brought home to the appellant.

As regards another policeman who was alleged to have fondled the private parts of the girl, the girl's version could not be believed in view of the shifting positions taken by her in this regard. Further the circumstance that this policeman was present at the time of occurrence is not inculpatory and is capable of more explanations than one. Tukaram v. State of Maharashtra, (1979) 2 SCC 143: 1979 SCC (Cri) 381: AIR 1979 SC 185: 1978 Cri LJ 1864: (1979) 16 ACC 7.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Jaswant Singh, P.S. Kailasam and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1978]

See comments at (1974) 4 SCC (Jour) 17

[8931] — Ss. 375 Thirdly, 376/34 & 342/34 — Rape — Consent — Duress — Rape of rustic woman by police constable and his accomplice — Involuntary surrender of victim obtained by threat to use force, instead of actual use of force, given by police constable in uniform to the effect that she and her husband would be put in police remand and subjected to third degree treatment — Victim not shown to be a prostitute — In the circumstances non-resistance of victim to the rape would not show her consent to the act — Accuseds' total denial of the charge without indicating any animus or motive of the PWs to falsely implicate them also corroborating the prosecution case — In the circumstances held, offence of rape established on the basis of evidence of the victim, her husband and another police constable on whose suggestion FIR had been lodged

In connection with the Ganapati festival in the village concerned, an idol of Ganapati was installed in the courtyard of respondent 2, a businessman. Respondent 1, a police constable was deputed to the village for bandobast duty at the time of Ganapati festival. PW 1, the victim and PW 2 her husband, were poor rustic village labourers. In the middle of night of the occurrence, PW 2 was called by respondent 1 through respondent 2 and he was beaten by respondent 1 on the allegation that he wanted to desecrate and destroy the idol of Ganapati. The respondents asked the PWs to accompany them to the house of respondent 2 where PW 1 was asked to sign on certain papers under a threat that her husband would be placed in police custody in case of her denial to sign the papers. The two respondents then committed rape on her one by one. The respondents thereafter threatened the PWs not to report the matter to police. Being afraid the PWs went back and spent the rest of the night. Next morning PW 2 met another police constable and on his suggestion PW 2 lodged an FIR at the police station. The respondents denied the offence altogether claiming that they had been falsely implicated. The trial court convicted the respondents under S. 376 r/w S. 34 as well as under S. 342 r/w S. 34 IPC and sentenced them to 3 years' RI on the first count and two months' RI on the second count. A Single Judge of High Court, while agreeing with the trial court that the PWs had been taken to the house of respondent 2 where both the respondents had sexual intercourse with PW 1, however, concluded that in view of absence of marks of violence on the body of PW1, no force was used on her and thus she had voluntarily gone to the house of respondent 2 and was a willing partner to the act of sexual intercourse. The only question is whether the said intercourse had taken place with the consent of PW 1. Allowing the appeal,

2. Rape by person in authority (contd.)

Held :

The Single Judge of the High Court has thoroughly erred in appreciation of the evidence of PWs 1 and 2. For the offence of rape, it is not necessary that there should be actual use of force. A threat of use of force is sufficient in view of clause thirdly of S. 375.

The police constable was in uniform and on bandobast duty. By show of his authority, he coerced PWs 1 and 2 into total abject surrender. To these poor rustic helpless villagers, the police constable represents absolute authority. They had no option but to submit to his will. It is, therefore, not a case of PW 1 being a willing party to sexual intercourse. It is a case where she had surrendered herself involuntarily, under duress and threat held out by the first accused. She was deprived of her will by show of authority and by the beating administered to her husband accompanied by threat of putting him in police remand, where, as the common belief of rustic villagers goes, they would be subjected to 'third degree methods'. Not only that, after the act they were threatened not to report to the police. This explains their silence for a few hours. It is not suggested that PW 1 agreed to the said intercourse either out of love or for money. It is also not suggested that PW 1 was a prostitute. Both the accused had entered into an unholy plan and adopted a stratagem to fulfil their illegal desires. In all the circumstances of this case, the minor contradictions between her oral testimony and the report are of little consequence.

The respondents-accused denied the charge totally. Their only plea was that they have been falsely implicated. It is not even stated as to who implicated them and why. It is also not suggested that PWs 1 and 2 had any animus or motive against the accused or that they were being used by someone else to implicate the respondents falsely. In the circumstances, the mere allegation of false implication has no significance. This also is a minor corroborating aspect.

Though the offence had taken place in the year 1978 and the accused were acquitted by the High Court as far back as August 1981 and the reversal of the acquittal at this stage would be after a lapse of 10 years, but having regard to the nature of the offence and the circumstances in which it was perpetrated, the respondents deserve no mercy. They should suffer for their deed.

The appeal is, accordingly, allowed. The High Court judgment is set aside and that of trial court restored. The respondents shall undergo the sentence awarded by the trial court. State of Maharashtra v. Prakash, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 653: 1993 SCC (Cri) 411: AIR 1992 SC 1275.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1992]

[8932] — S. 375 Thirdly & Sixthly — Rape — Consent — Consent for having sexual intercourse obtained by accused from the victim girls by deceitful means in some cases and under threat of dire consequences in some other cases and therefore, held, their acts fell under cl. thirdly, while some of the victims being aged below 16 years, their consent was immaterial in view of cl. sixthly — Moreover, accused had dominion or control over the victims — Held, charge of rape against the accused made out

It is in the evidence of the prosecutrix that consent of many of the prosecutrix had been obtained by deceitful means that if they had sex with A-1 they would be cured of asthma or that if they had sex with A-1 it is service to God or some of the girls have been raped under threat of dire consequences. A-1 had dominion/control over the Ashram girls and most of them are orphans and no alternative place to go. Therefore the case clearly falls within the thirdly clause of Section 375 IPC. Furthermore, if the consent is obtained by deceitful means or under threat of death or hurt, it is no consent at all and it is without her consent. Therefore, the charge of rape levelled against A-1 falls within the definition of Section 375 IPC. This apart, under the sixthly clause the consent is immaterial when the prosecutrix is under 16 years of age. Some of the prosecutrix were below 16 years of age when they were raped by A-1. In view of the facts and circumstances of the case, A-1 was rightly charged and convicted under Section 376(2)(c) IPC. (Para 40). Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2005 SC 2132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2005]

[8933] — S. 376 — Complaint against a spiritual teacher that he committed rape on 3 girls at different times — High Court erred in discharging the accused merely on ground that the accused was a saintly old man who had thousands/millions of disciples all over India or that there was delay on the part of the victims in disclosing those illegal acts to their parents and police — They were not required to give detailed explanations while making complaint to the police

In the instant case the High Court was much influenced by the submission made on behalf of the defence that the accused is a saintly old man, who has renounced the world, who is engrossed in spiritual activity and who has thousands/millions of disciples all over India and, therefore, he was not likely to indulge in the illegal acts alleged against him. It failed to appreciate that it is not unusual to come across cases where the so-called spiritual heads exploit young girls and women who become their disciples and come under their spell. Moreover, the reasoning of the High Court that it also does not stand to reason that a saintly man who has thousands/millions of disciples all over India would commit sexual intercourse with the pracharak of his cult in the presence of his disciples stands vitiated because of the vice of misreading the statements. The three rape victims have nowhere stated that the accused had sexual intercourse with them in the presence of other disciples. The High Court gave too much importance to the conduct of the three victims and the delay in disclosing those illegal acts to their parents and the police. What the High Court has failed to appreciate is how a victim of such an offence will behave would depend upon the circumstances in which she is placed. It often happens that such victims do not complain against such illegal acts immediately because of factors like fear or shame or uncertainties about the reactions of their parents or husbands in case of married girls or women and the adverse consequences which, they apprehend, would follow because of disclosure of such acts. What the three girls had stated in their statements was not inherently improbable or unnatural. They have disclosed the reasons why they could not immediately complain about those illegal acts for such a long time. What the High Court has failed to appreciate is that while making a complaint to the police or giving their statements they were not required to give detailed explanations. State of Maharashtra v. Priya Sharan Maharaj, (1997) 4 SCC 393: 1997 SCC (Cri) 584: AIR 1997 SC 2041: 1997 Cri LJ 2248.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1997]

[8934] — S. 376 — Evidence of rape victim — If a person in authority such as a police officer is accused of rape, evidence of the prosecutrix should be judged in the backdrop of the particular fact situation in which she was placed — Absence of resistance by prosecutrix to be viewed in the context of the sense of awe attached to the authority and her helplessness — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114-A

The infrastructure of our criminal investigation system recognises and protects the right of a woman to decent and dignified treatment at the hands of the investigating agency. This is evident from the proviso to sub-section (2) of S. 47, sub-section (2) of S. 53 and proviso to S. 160 of the Code. If a police officer misuses his authority and power while dealing with a young helpless girl aged about 19 or 20 years, her conduct and behaviour must be judged in the backdrop of the situation in which she was placed. The purpose and setting, the person and his position, the misuse or abuse of office and the despair of the victim which led to her surrender are all relevant factors which must be present in the mind of the court while evaluating the conduct evidence of the prosecutrix. A person in authority, such as a police officer, carries with him the awe of office which is bound to condition the behaviour of his victim. The court must not be oblivious of the emotional turmoil and the psychological injury that a prosecutrix suffers on being molested or raped. A woman who is subjected to sex violence would always be slow and hesitant about disclosing her plight. The court must, therefore, evaluate her evidence in the above background.

In this case though the version of the prosecutrix is that she had tried to resist the accused respondent that the respondent being a strong man was able to overpower her and take her by force. Besides, he was a man in authority in police uniform. The prosecutrix was alone and helpless. In the circumstances the resistance would be considerably dampened. State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210: AIR 1990 SC 658: 1990 Cri LJ 889.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1990]

[8935] — S. 376 — Offence committed by military personnel

As the appellant was alleged to have committed rape in relation to a person who was not subject to military, naval or air law, under S. 70 normally he could be tried by the ordinary Criminal Court, but inasmuch as he was on active service at the time of the alleged offence, the Court-martial also gets jurisdiction to try the appellant. Therefore, this is a case where both the Court-martial and the ordinary Criminal Court had concurrent jurisdiction to try the appellant. To meet such a situation suitable provisions have been made in Ss. 125 and 126 of the Act and the rules framed under S. 549, CrPC. Joginder Singh v. State of H.P., (1971) 3 SCC 86: 1971 SCC (Cri) 269: AIR 1971 SC 500: 1971 Cri LJ 511.

2. Rape by person in authority (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Shelat and C.A. Vaidialingam, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-1970]

[8936] — S. 376 — Rape — Proof and corroboration of — Appellant doctor alleged to have raped prosecutrix, a patient visiting his clinic — Sessions Court as well as the High Court convicting the appellant relying on the testimony of prosecutrix — Held, though in rape cases conviction on the sole testimony of prosecutrix is sustainable (provided it inspires confidence), but in the instant case version given by the prosecutrix is unsupported by medical evidence and the surrounding circumstances belie the case set up by her — There were many persons in the clinic and it is highly improbable that the appellant would have sexually assaulted her when they were present in the near vicinity — It is also highly improbable that the prosecutrix could not make any noise or get out of the room without being assaulted by the doctor as she was an able-bodied person of 20 years of age with ordinary physique — Absence of injuries on the body improbabilise the prosecution version — Moreover, there was absence of spermatozoa in the vaginal swab of the prosecutrix — Presence of semen on the undergarments of the appellant as also on her petticoat and sari not sufficient by itself to prove the offence though may cause some suspicion on the conduct of the appellant — Further, the doctor who examined the appellant on the same day negatived sexual intercourse on the basis of scientific evidence — No injury found on the body or the private parts of the prosecutrix — Doctor who examined her unable to give any opinion about the alleged sexual intercourse — Held, appellant entitled to benefit of doubt — Conviction and sentence set aside

It is true that in a rape case the accused could be convicted on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix, if it is capable of inspiring confidence in the mind of the court. If the version given by the prosecutrix is unsupported by any medical evidence or the whole surrounding circumstances are highly improbable and belie the case set up by the prosecutrix, the court shall not act on the solitary evidence of the prosecutrix. The courts shall be extremely careful in accepting the sole testimony of the prosecutrix when the entire case is improbable and unlikely to happen. (Para 9)

In the present case there were so many persons in the clinic and it is highly improbable that the appellant would have made a sexual assault on the patient who came for examination when large number of persons were present in the near vicinity. It is also highly improbable that the prosecutrix could not make any noise or get out of the room without being assaulted by the doctor as she was an able-bodied person of 20 years of age with ordinary physique. The absence of injuries on the body improbabilise the prosecution version. (Para 10)

Besides the absence of spermatozoa in the vaginal swab of the prosecutrix casts a serious doubt on the prosecution evidence. (Paras 7 and 13)

Moreover, the appellant also was medically examined on the same day by PW 10 who stated that smegma was present around the corona glandis. He further deposed that his examination negatived sexual intercourse and for collection of smegma around corona glandis a period of 24 hours is required. This scientific evidence also does not support the prosecution. Had there been a vigorous sexual act as alleged by the prosecutrix there could not have been the presence of smegma on his private part. (Para 8)

It is true that the petticoat [Ed.: of the prosecutrix] and the underwear allegedly worn by the appellant had some semen but that by itself is not sufficient to treat that the appellant had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix. That would only cause some suspicion on the conduct of the appellant but not sufficient to prove the case, as alleged by the prosecution. (Para 12)

On a consideration of the entire evidence in this case, there is a serious doubt regarding the sexual intercourse allegedly committed by the appellant on the prosecutrix. The appellant is entitled to the benefit of doubt. (Para 14). Sadashiv Ramrao Hadbe v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 10 SCC 92: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 161.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-2006]

[8937] — S. 376 — Rape of a minor student by the teacher, twice — Prosecutrix divulging about it only when her mother came to know that she was pregnant i.e. after more than 3 months of occurrence — Held, her not informing anyone about the incident in the circumstances cannot detract from her reliability — Moreover, defence put forth by the appellant was too vague to be acceptable — Conviction upheld (Paras 3, 6 and 7). Dildar Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 10 SCC 531: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2006 SC 3084: 2006 Cri LJ 3914.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

[8938] — S. 376 — Rape on a newly married teen-aged girl by a police officer after separating her husband by booking him on false charges — On facts held, offence under S. 376 established — Conviction and sentence of 5 years' RI and fine of Rs 1000 recorded by trial court upheld — High Court's order of acquittal, based on erroneous appreciation of evidence, reversed — No two reasonably possible views present — Interference with High Court's order justified — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 378 and 386

When a person in uniform commits such a serious crime of rape on a young girl in her late teens, there is no room for sympathy or pity. The punishment must in such cases be exemplary. Therefore, the sentence of five years' RI and fine of Rs 1000 and in default six months' RI awarded by the trial court is upheld. State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210: AIR 1990 SC 658: 1990 Cri LJ 889.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1990]

[8939] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Sentence — Accused guilty of abduction and rape — Accused holding responsible positions of Lambardar and Sarpanch in village — Held, sentence of three years' and four years' R.I. and fine justified. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793: AIR 1972 SC 2661: (1973) 2 SCR 197: 1973 Cri LJ 179.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1972]

[8940] — Ss. 376 and 506 — Rape — Consent — Burden of proof in respect of — Rape by teacher of his student — Held, question of consent is really a matter of defence by the accused and it was for him to place materials to show that there was consent — High Court erred in putting burden on the victim to show that there was no consent — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 114-A and 101 & 103 (Para 15). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

[8941] — Ss. 376 and 506 — Rape — False implication — Plea of — Sustainability — Accused was teacher of victim — Stand of accused that he was falsely implicated because the brother of the victim was not successful in the examination and therefore his family had grudge against him, held, unacceptable — The incident involving the accused and mother and brother of the victim took place about a decade back — Not even a remote possibility of the same being the foundation for false implication — That apart, no girl of a tender age and her parents would like to jeopardise her entire future by falsely implicating a person alleging forcible sexual intercourse — Hence contention regarding false implication rejected (Para 22). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

[8942] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Bar on Court Martial's jurisdiction to try the offence of rape, held, not applicable to the offence of attempting to commit rape — Provisions of Sch. I to CrPC in respect of Ss. 511 and 376 IPC could not be invoked to reach a different conclusion as the question of Court Martial's jurisdiction to try an offence has to be adjudged from the provisions of the Army Act itself and not with reference to CrPC — CrPC, 1973, S. 26(a)(ii) & (iii) and Sch. I — Army Act, 1950 — S. 70 (Para 2). Madan Lal v. Union of India, (2002) 10 SCC 185.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-9-1999]

State v. Jaikaran Singh, AIR 1955 NUC 1721 (All), overruled

[8943] — S. 376(2) proviso — Award of less than minimum sentence — Conviction of police officials under S. 376 and minimum sentence of 10 years' RI recorded by trial court and confirmed by High Court — Having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case including conduct of the prosecutrix in not disclosing about the incident of rape for five days to anyone, held, accused entitled to sub-minimum sentence of five years. State of Haryana v. Prem Chand, (1990) 1 SCC 249: 1990 SCC (Cri) 93: AIR 1990 SC 538: 1990 Cri LJ 454.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-1989]

[8944] — S. 376(2) proviso — Sentence — Police officials (appellants) convicted under S. 376 for committing rape on prosecutrix and awarded minimum sentence of 10 years' RI — Paramour of the prosecutrix also convicted on charge of rape — On appeal High Court finding that the prosecution failed to prove age of the prosecutrix as below

2. Rape by person in authority (contd.)

18 years and that she was willingly going around with her paramour and was having sex with him of her free will, acquitted the paramour but confirmed the conviction and sentence imposed on the appellants — Having regard to peculiar facts and circumstances of the case and the promiscuous conduct of the prosecutrix, held, proviso to S. 376(2) can be invoked and a sub-minimum sentence of 5 years' RI would meet the ends of justice — Sentence accordingly reduced. Prem Chand v. State of Haryana, 1989 Supp (1) SCC 286: 1989 SCC (Cri) 418: AIR 1989 SC 937: 1989 Cri LJ 1246.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1989]

[Ed.: For review of this case on question of sentence see (1990) 1 SCC 249.]

[8945] — S. 376(2)(a) — Custodial rape — Appellants, Head Constable and Constable, forcibly taking the prosecutrix and her husband to the police station and confining them in separate rooms — Head Constable committing rape on the prosecutrix and the Constable keeping a watch over the husband — Evidence of the prosecutrix amply corroborated by other evidences on record — No explanation by the appellants as to why they have been falsely implicated in the case — Conviction upheld. Ram Kumar v. State of H.P., 1995 Supp (4) SCC 67: 1996 SCC (Cri) 100: AIR 1995 SC 1965.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-1-1995]

[8946] — S. 376(2)(a) — Rape by Police Official — Version of prosecutrix found to be natural — She correctly identifying the appellant in the identification parade — Bare denial by accused not of any consequence — Evidence of prosecutrix most important — Conviction upheld. Ram Pal v. State of Haryana, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 656: 1995 SCC (Cri) 136.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-1993]

[8947] — S. 376(2)(a) — Rape of a tribal woman while in the police custody — Commission appointed by Supreme Court holding the incident of custodial rape to be true — Undue delay on part of the State Government in concluding the departmental enquiries pending against officers responsible for the incident — Explanation furnished by State Government found to be unsatisfactory — State Government directed to conclude the enquiry within three months and pay a sum of Rs 50,000 as interim compensation to the victim of the rape. P. Rathinam v. State of Gujarat, 1994 SCC (Cri) 1163.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Jeevan Reddy and N. Venkatachala, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1993]

[8948] — Ss. 376(2)(c) & 376/106 — Rape of 13 girls of an Ashram by its founder, A-1, systematically abetted by co-accused of the Ashram — Victims being orphans, entirely dependent upon A-1 for their survival, A-1 had dominion/control over them physically, mentally and spiritually — Held, conviction of A-1 under S. 376(2)(c) and sentence of life imprisonment with fine of Rs 5,10,000 on each count justified — Conviction of co-accused under Ss. 376/106 and sentence of life imprisonment (except in case of A-3 who had been awarded RI for the period already undergone with fine of Rs 10,000) justified

In the present case, most of the victim girls were orphans brought from Sri Lanka. A-1 provided them food, clothing and shelter. They were entirely dependent on A-1 for their survival. Once they were thrown out by A-1 they had no alternative place to stay. A-1 had dominion/control over the prosecutrix physically, mentally and spiritually. In fact, many of them believed that A-1 was God to them. It is in these circumstances there is no reason why the prosecutrix should depose falsely against A-1 who was the source of their survival physically, mentally and spiritually, by providing shelter, food and clothes to them. The testimony of the prosecutrix inspires confidence, on the basis of which alone conviction can be safely sustained. Moreover, in the instant case the statements of the prosecutrix are well corroborated by medical and other contemporaneous documents. It is also well-established principle of law that minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix should not be a ground for throwing out an otherwise reliable prosecution case. (Paras 33 and 34). Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2005 SC 2132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2005]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on

[8949] — Ss. 376/511 — Attempt to commit rape — Incident taking place in a doctor's clinic — Prosecutrix, an illiterate villager coming to the clinic with her father-in-law, M — The accused sent away M to fetch hot water — On his return he found the appellant scantily dressed in his underclothes (kachha and banian) while coaccused (Doctor) standing naked near the prosecutrix who was lying unconscious with half folded salwar — Held, in the circumstances the scanty dress clearly makes the appellant guilty of attempt to commit rape. Nathu

Ram v. State of Haryana, (1994) 1 SCC 491: 1994 SCC (Cri) 88: 1994 Cri LJ 1095: (1994) 1 An LT (Cri) 3: (1994) 31 ACC 25.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and S. Mohan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-1993]

[8950] — S. 376-B — Sexual intercourse by public servant with a woman in his custody — Ingredients — Accused, a teacher of a government school, having intimacy with a girl student of the school and having sexual intercourse with her outside the school premises — Held, ingredients of S. 376-B not fulfilled, hence accused cannot be convicted thereunder — Even assuming that accused, being a teacher of a govt. school, was a public servant, prosecutrix cannot be said to be in his custody — Moreover, intercourse had not taken place within the school premises — From the mere fact that accused was having a love affair with prosecutrix, it cannot be shown that he had taken advantage of his official position and induced or seduced prosecutrix to have intercourse

The ingredients of Section 376-B are:

(i) the accused must be a public servant;

(ii) he must take advantage of his official position;

(iii) he must induce or seduce any woman;

(iv) such woman must be in his custody in such capacity or she is in the custody of public servant subordinate to him; and

(v) he must have sexual intercourse with her which does not amount to the offence of rape. (Para 7)

It may be assumed that the appellant being a teacher of the government school was a public servant. But all the students of the school, only thereby, were not in the custody of the appellant. The expression "custody" implies guardianship. A custody must be a lawful custody. The same may arise within the provisions of the statute or actual custody conferred by reason of an order of a court of law or otherwise. (Para 12)

When these two ingredients are satisfied, the third ingredient, therefore, would be as to whether the public servant has taken advantage of his official position. If a student and a teacher fall in love with each other, the same would not mean that the teacher has taken undue advantage of his official position. Even then, there must be an inducement or seduction by a public servant so far as the woman in his custody is concerned. (Para 14)

Sexual intercourse, therefore, for the purpose of attracting Section 376-B of the Penal Code must take place at a place where the woman was in custody. In this case, the prosecutrix categorically admitted that the same did not take place within the precincts of the school but outside the school. (Para 15)

Thus the ingredients of the offence under Section 376-B of the Penal Code are not satisfied in the instant case. (Para 16). Omkar Prasad Verma v. State of M.P., (2007) 4 SCC 323: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 293: AIR 2007 SC 1381: (2007) 52 AIC 7 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1831.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-3-2007]

3. Rape of servant

[8951] — S. 376 — Rape — Appreciation of evidence — Fallacy in reasoning of High Court about lack of evidence — Rape on maidservant — High Court's finding that there was no evidence that victim was employed in house of accused — Held, not proper where defence itself suggested that the victim was engaged as maidservant (Para 13). State of Punjab v. Ramdev Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 421: 2004 SCC (Cri) 307: AIR 2004 SC 1290.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2003]

4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy

See also 'A.3.(c) Presumption against consent under S. 114-A, Evidence Act', above, and

'C.22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act', and

'C.24.(f) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos', below

[8952] — S. 375 — Gang rape by police of women participating in public rally — Compensation to — Quantum of — Limits on power of High Court when matter at premature stage — Writ petition by Uttarakhand Sangharsh Samity seeking directions to State authorities in connection with confrontation ensued between the agitators and the administration which resulted in death, injuries and molestation of women — High Court directing the State Govt. to pay huge amounts as compensation to the victims and to make fund allotment (in several crores of rupees) for development of Kumaon and Garhwal regions by way of reparation to the people of those regions — Such directions which resulted in great financial burden on the State at the premature stage and which were made without trial, without consideration of evidence, without having regard to financial capacity, resources of the State and legislative mandates involving State funding, held, were in excess of High Court's jurisdiction under Act. 226 and unwarranted and hence liable to be set aside — Constitution of India, Arts. 226 and 19(1)(a), (b), (c) & (d) and 21

4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy (contd.)

A public rally was organised for protesting against a State Government notification pertaining to reservation in educational institutions based on regionwise domicile and to press the demand for a separate State of Uttarakhand comprising certain hilly regions of the State of U.P. and some other areas. The administration took stern measures to resist the protestors' march towards the national capital as the officials claimed to have received secret information that the proposed rallyists were carrying lethal weapons in violation of the prohibitory orders issued by the Government and might create serious law and order situation. The confrontation which ensued resulted in a lot of bloodshed including loss of many lives, infliction of injuries on persons belonging to both sides, outraging the modesty of women ranging to ravishments. An association styling itself as Uttarakhand Sangharsh Samity moved a writ petition in the High Court for directions to be issued to the authorities to meet the consequences of the said confrontation. A Division Bench of the High Court issued certain interim directions, one of which was to the CBI to enquire into the allegations of 'human rights violations'. CBI took up investigation pursuant to the directions and laid charge-sheet against certain officers for offences under Sections 109 and 120-B read with Sections 341 and 342 of the Indian Penal Code. Sanction of the State Government was obtained for launching prosecution in respect of those offences. Some of the accused who were arrayed in the said charge-sheet filed writ petitions before the High Court in challenge to the validity of the sanction order issued by the State Government for prosecuting them. The Division Bench disposed of the first-mentioned writ petition filed by the Samity issuing several directions. It ordered the Government to pay Rs 10 lakhs each to the dependants of all the persons who died in police firing. Rs 10 lakhs each were given to the victims of molestation, Rs fifty thousand each to 398 persons who were detained by the police. The Division Bench also issued the following directions regarding fund allotment for development of certain regions: "Damages and compensation for constitutional wrongs committed subjecting injuries to the class of people of Kumaon and Garhwal for their only fault that they were securing their civil rights on the guarantee already given by the legislature, as discussed in the judgment. The reparation to the people of Kumaon and Garhwal Divisions shall stand related to their population (5,926,146: Kumaon — 2,943,199, Garhwal — 2,982,947) in the equation of a rupee per month per person for a plan period of five years and this compensation shall be invested amongst the population of Kumaon and Garhwal earmarked specifically for a programme for the upliftment of the women; 50 paise of this reparation shall come from the State of Uttar Pradesh and the other 50 paise from the Union of India. This would be in addition to the normal plan allocation which this area would receive as what the Court is suggesting is damages beyond the normal allocation." Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The High Court was not justified in fixing such a huge sum as compensation at a premature stage. The High Court while imposing such a heavy liability on the State has not made any attempt to discuss the relevant questions which are to be answered for fixing the liability of compensation and for quantification of the amount of compensation. Therefore, the direction for payment of compensation is clearly unsustainable and is liable to be vacated. (Para 12)

The magnitude of the financial burden for complying with the direction regarding fund allotment has been approximately estimated as amounting to several crores of rupees. The money has to come out of the State coffers. This is not a case where the High Court was ordering compensation to one individual or even to a limited number of persons dehors its legal liability enjoined by statutory provisions. Major revenue of the State Government is through taxation. But no taxation is possible without legislative sanction. The Government must have other resources to meet the direction. The High Court did not take into account the financial capacity of the State Government, nor its resources for making up the said amount nor the priorities to be honoured by the State Government nor even the legislative mandates involving State funding, while ordering the Government to incur such a huge expenditure of a recurring nature. Judicial creativity has, no doubt, expanded to newer dimensions in the recent past, but that is no justification for using judicial power for imposing such an unbearable burden on the State which in turn would be compelled to extract money out of the common man's coffers to meet such a massive financial burden. Suffice it to say that the above direction cannot stand judicial scrutiny and it is hereby set aside. (Paras 14 to 17) . A.K. Singh v. Uttarakhand Jan Morcha, (1999) 4 SCC 476: 1999 SCC (Cri) 580: AIR 1999 SC 2193.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, D.P. Mohapatra and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-1999]

[8953] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Delay in lodging FIR — When does not affect prosecution case — In instant case of gang rape, delay in lodging FIR stood properly explained — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

When FIR by a Hindu lady is to be lodged with regard to commission of offence like rape, many questions would obviously crop up for consideration before one finally decides to lodge the FIR. It is difficult to appreciate the plight of the victim who has been criminally assaulted in such a manner. Obviously, the victim must have also gone through great turmoil and only after giving it a serious thought, must have decided to lodge the FIR. Precisely this appears to be the reason for little delayed FIR. The delay was found to be properly explained by both the courts below. (Para 13). Sohan Singh v. State of Bihar, (2010) 1 SCC 68.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2009]

[8954] — S. 376 — Conduct of prosecutrix — Relevance — Resistance — Absence of — Inference — Held, would merely suggest want of violent resistance on part of prosecutrix and not consensus — Prosecutrix was forcibly caught, threatened at knife-point and thereafter gang raped — Non-resistance because of fear in such circumstances not unnatural (Paras 25, 26 and 46). Vijay v. State of M.P., (2010) 8 SCC 191: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2010]

Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793; Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185, followed

[8955] — S. 376 — Gang rape — Prosecution case based on uncorroborated solitary testimony of prosecutrix — Testimony of prosecutrix not inspiring confidence — Delay in filing of FIR by 10 days not explained — Medical examination of prosecutrix not brought on record — Held, conviction of accused persons under S. 376 cannot be sustained

The prosecutrix who has married twice and was deserted by her husbands, claimed that while she was proceeding alone in the dark on the night of occurrence through an open field, the sky was overcast and it was drizzling in full swing, she was caught hold of by six persons who one by one committed rape on her. She did not divulge it to anybody for several days and after ten days she informed the police about the incident. Though she was subjected to medical examination but the prosecution did not show the result of the medical examination before the court, nor was it explained as to why the same was not brought in evidence. The version of the prosecutrix was accepted by the trial court and the High Court by assuming that she had no reason to falsely implicate the six persons for rape.

Allowing the accused persons' appeals,

Held :

The argument adopted by the High Court is a fragile one on the fact situation of this case. Though it cannot be laid down as a proposition of law that the uncorroborative testimony of the prosecutrix is not sufficient for entering conviction for an offence under Section 376 IPC, but then the evidence of that solitary witness should inspire confidence in the judicial mind, and be of such a nature that the court must be able to certify that the testimony is wholly reliable. In this case the inordinate delay in lodging the complaint before the police i.e. 10 days, has not even been attempted to be explained. Even when she was examined as a witness in the court, no question was put to her on that long delay. In a case where six indicted persons should be visited with a minimum sentence of 10 years' RI, the court cannot afford to act on the uncorroborated testimony of the prosecutrix unless the said evidence is wholly reliable. Looking at the testimony of the prosecutrix from all the different angles, it is not possible to hold that the testimony is wholly reliable. In such a situation, materials for corroborating the testimony of the prosecutrix could not be obviated. But there is none. Therefore, the conviction and sentence passed on the appellants under Section 376 cannot be confirmed. (Paras 2 and 4). Surjan v. State of M.P., (2002) 10 SCC 214: 2004 SCC (Cri) 471: AIR 2002 SC 476.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-2001]

[8956] — S. 376 — Rape — Conviction on sole testimony of prosecutrix — Effect of S. 114-A, Evidence Act, 1872 — Presumption against allegations of consensual sex in case of alleged rape — Held, whereas Ss. 113-A and 113-B inserted in the Evidence Act by same amendment raise a clear presumption in favour of the prosecution but no similar presumption with respect to rape is visualised as the presumption under S. 114-A is extremely restricted in its applicability — As far as allegations of rape are concerned, the evidence of a prosecutrix must be examined as that of an injured witness whose presence at the spot is probable but it can never be presumed that her statement should, without exception, be taken as the gospel truth — Additionally, her statement can, at best, be adjudged on the principle that ordinarily no injured witness would tell a lie or implicate a person falsely

4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy (contd.)

— On facts, allegations of gang rape made by prosecutrix found not proved and hence, benefit of doubt granted to appellant-accused — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 114-A, 113-A and 113-B (Para 12). Raju v. State of M.P., (2008) 15 SCC 133: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 751: AIR 2009 SC 858: (2009) 74 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2008]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Ranjit Hazarika v. State of Assam, (1998) 8 SCC 635: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1725, considered

[8957] — S. 376 — Rape — Proof — Penetration, held, is sine qua non for the said offence — But complete penetration with emission of semen and rupture of hymen, held, not necessary — A slight penetration in vulva with or without violence is sufficient — Depth of penetration, held, is immaterial — Irreconcilable discrepancies found when version of prosecutrix in court compared with the one given during investigation — Evidence of father of prosecutrix (hostile witness) that his wife told him that the prosecutrix was teased by the accused persons — Further, evidence of prosecutrix and doctor did not specifically refer to penetration — Neither rape nor attempt to rape established — Conviction under S. 376(2)(g) set aside — Accused-appellants convicted under S. 354 r/w S. 34 IPC

Penetration is the sine qua non for an offence of rape. In order to constitute penetration, there must be evidence clear and cogent to prove that some part of the virile member of the accused was within the labia of the pudendum of the woman, no matter how little. The depth of penetration is immaterial in an offence punishable under Section 376 IPC. Even a slight penetration in the vulva is sufficient to constitute the offence of rape and rupture of the hymen is not necessary. Vulva penetration with or without violence is as much rape as vaginal penetration. The statute merely requires evidence of penetration, and this may occur with the hymen remaining intact. The actus reus is complete with penetration. Thus, to constitute the offence of rape, it is not necessary that there should be complete penetration of the penis with emission of semen and rupture of hymen. Partial penetration within the labia majora of the vulva or pudendum with or without emission of semen is sufficient to constitute the offence of rape as defined in the law. (Para 7)

Though the prosecutrix's version in court was of rape, when it is compared with the one given during investigation, certain irreconcilable discrepancies are noticed. The evidence of PW 11, the father of the prosecutrix who according to the prosecution made a departure from what he allegedly stated during investigation, is to the effect that his wife PW 9 told him that the prosecutrix was teased by the accused persons. Merely because he was termed as a hostile witness his entire evidence does not get affected. Significantly, the evidence of the prosecutrix and the doctor does not specifically refer to penetration which is sine qua non for the offence of rape. (Para 12)

There is no material to show that the accused were determined to have sexual intercourse in all events. In the aforesaid background, the offence cannot be said to be an attempt to commit rape to attract culpability under Sections 376/511 IPC. But the case is certainly one of indecent assault upon a woman. (Para 13). Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266: AIR 2004 SC 1497: 2004 Cri LJ 1399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2004]

[8958] — Ss. 376, 147, 323/149, 342, 458 and 366 — Abduction and rape — Conviction justified — Marriage alleged by rapist not proved — Appellants convicted under Ss. 147, 323/149, 342, 458 and 366, while Appellant 1, also additionally convicted under S. 376 — Five accused armed with iron rod and lathis alleged to have abducted the prosecutrix (PW 5) and assaulted PW 2 during the occurrence — It was further alleged that they dressed her in new ornaments and clothes and Appellant 1 raped her on two consecutive nights — Defence of Appellant 1 that since victim was married to him there was no rape as contended, rejected by courts below — No evidence of marriage as claimed brought on record — DW 2 in his cross-examination admitting that Kazi wrote their nikah — But no signature or thumb impression was obtained and Kazi Y who was claimed to have solemnised the nikah was not examined — DW 1 who is claimed to have settled the marriage accepted that same is the procedure for proving the marriage — Thus, factum of marriage not proved — Held, that being so the conviction of Appellant 1 as recorded by trial court and maintained by High Court cannot be faulted — So far as the role played by Appellant 2 is concerned, the same was clearly established by the evidence of injured witnesses PW 2 and PW 4, apart from the evidence of PW 5 (prosecutrix) — Hence, his conviction also sustained — But so far as other appellants were concerned there was no evidence to link them with crime — Hence, their conviction set aside (Paras 8 and 9). Neku Khan v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 11 SCC 86: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1245: AIR 2009 SC 1954: (2009) 1 ECrN 859 (SC): (2009) 75 AIC 132 (SC): (2009) 1 APLJ 41 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-2009]

[8959] — Ss. 376 and 302 or 304 Pt. II — Gang rape and murder — Commission of rape by the accused persons established — Nature of the injuries inflicted on the person of the deceased indicating that accused had not intended to cause her death — But according to post-mortem report, injuries showing violent type of sexual intercourse inasmuch as any violent assault even without rape could cause those injuries and the corresponding internal injuries, one of which was sufficient to cause the death — That being so, held, accused must be assumed to be having knowledge that by their action, it was likely that the deceased would have died — Hence accused liable to be convicted under S. 304 Pt. II r/w S. 34 as well as under S. 376

Whoever causes death by doing an act with the intention of causing death or with the intention of causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death or with the knowledge that he is likely, by such act, to cause death, is responsible for the commission of the offence of culpable homicide. Culpable homicide is murder if the act by which the death is caused is done with the intention of causing death and is not covered by any of the exceptions of Section 300 of the Indian Penal Code. In this case, there is no evidence to show that the accused persons proved to have been involved in the occurrence, had intended to cause the offence of murder within the meaning of Section 300 as punishable under Section 302 of the Indian Penal Code. However, on proof of the commission of offence of gang rape found to have been committed in a violent manner, they are assumed to be having the knowledge that by their action, it was likely that the deceased would have died. The aforesaid accused are, therefore, guilty of the offence, punishable under Part II of Section 304 read with Section 34 IPC and are sentenced to 10 years' RI. Their conviction and sentence under Section 376 read with Section 34 recorded by the trial court are also upheld. (Para 24). State of Orissa v. Dibakar Naik, (2002) 5 SCC 323: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1128: AIR 2002 SC 2148: 2002 Cri LJ 2826.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-2002]

[8960] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Conviction confirmed — Appellant-accused (three in number) alleged to have gagged mouth of prosecutrix, bodily lifted her to house of one of the accused and gang raped her — On failure by police concerned to take necessary action, a written complaint (Ext. DA) was filed before the SSP, who forwarded the same to DSP, DW 2 — Facts establishing diabolical role played by police, in particular DW 2 to sabotage entire prosecution case in order to save accused — On the other hand, testimonies of prosecutrix and PW 4 found credible — Hence held, no interference with impugned judgment convicting appellants called for (Paras 2, 3 and 9 to 14). Jaswant Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 16 SCC 201.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-2009]

[8961] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Prosecutrix alleged to have been forcibly taken away by accused and gang raped — Charge under S. 366 not established — Hence, submission that conviction under S. 376(2)(g) on the same evidence was uncalled for — Tenability — Held, evidence of rape is distinct from the other charge and the matter should be examined in that background — Merely because the accused have been acquitted for the offence punishable under S. 366 IPC is ipso facto no reason to disbelieve the entire prosecution story on this solitary ground — Veracity of the story projected by the prosecution qua allegations of rape would be required to be examined (Paras 6 and 13). Raju v. State of M.P., (2008) 15 SCC 133: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 751: AIR 2009 SC 858: (2009) 74 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2008]

Raja Ram v. State of M.P., (1994) 2 SCC 568: 1994 SCC (Cri) 573; Arokia Thomas v. State of T.N., (2006) 10 SCC 542: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 140; Suresh Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2003) 4 SCC 128: 2003 SCC (Cri) 801, followed

[8962] — Ss. 376 and 376/120-B — Rape and conspiracy to commit rape — Four accused, using affluence and pretensions of friendship luring innocent school/college girls and then forcibly raping and sexually exploiting them — While two of them actually committing the rape and sexual exploitation, the third accused though shown not to have committed rape, making overtures to one of the victims and the fourth accused, a driver ferrying the girls to and from the farmhouse where they were exploited — Accused-appellants found present at the farmhouse and named by several victims as persons involved in the offence — Held, first two accused on the basis of the evidence liable to be convicted under S. 376 — The third and fourth accused, though not rapists, held, liable to be convicted under Ss. 376/120-B since all co-conspirators need not act in an identical manner — Sentence reduced to 10 years' RI from life sentence, for all four accused

4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy (contd.)

The trial court as well as the High Court have carefully considered the evidence on record and have concurrently found the aforesaid appellants guilty of the offence under Section 376 read with Section 120-B IPC. P and I have been found guilty of the offence under Section 376 IPC. So far as A is concerned, he is not as innocent as he pretends to be. In fact, he also made overtures to PW 43 but she was able to extricate herself from the situation. This only shows that A, accused was not a silent spectator or a casual visitor to the farm or to the house of F where these nefarious activities were carried on. So far as M is concerned, it is no doubt true that there is no allegation of his having raped any girl or having misbehaved with any one of them. What, however, is apparent from the evidence on record is that he used to transport the girls to the farmhouse and the house of F from their respective residences or the school. The evidence also discloses that he was responsible for arranging food etc. for them.

It is not necessary that in order to be a co-conspirator, each one of the conspirators should act in an identical manner. What is essential is that they must agree to do or cause to be done an illegal act. Different members of the conspiracy may be assigned different roles with the object of committing the agreed illegal act. The driver was certainly aiding the others to commit the illegal act which was the object of their conspiracy. Having regard to his conduct and the evidence on record it is quite obvious that M was aware of what was happening and the role played by him establishes the fact that he was also a member of the conspiracy in which he was assigned the role of transporting the victims. He was, therefore, clearly guilty of the offence of conspiracy. So far as the other two accused P and I are concerned, there is clear evidence of one of the prosecutrix that she had been raped by these two accused apart from others. Unfortunately, many of the victim girls who appeared as witnesses turned hostile and one can easily appreciate the reason why they did not want to depose against the appellants as that would have exposed them as well, and would have adversely affected their future life. (Paras 29 to 32, 33 and 40). Moijullah v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 2 SCC 90: 2004 SCC (Cri) 512.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-2003]

[8963] — Ss. 376, 457 and 380 — Rape — Alleged to have been committed by five persons — Medical evidence — Proof — No injury found on the body of prosecutrix — No matting of pubic hair with discharge — No injuries, or tenderness on genital areas — Hymen ruptured and old scars present — No fresh scars or tenderness found — Prosecutrix was used to sexual intercourse — Held, the fact that no injury was found on her body only goes to show that she did not put up any resistance — On facts, held, medical evidence did not support the prosecution case

It would appear from the medical evidence on record that no evidence could be found by the medical officer to prove that she had been subjected to sexual assault by five persons. Having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case, particularly in view of the fact that the prosecutrix was habituated to sexual intercourse and was examined six days after the occurrence, the fact that no injury was found on her body only goes to show that she did not put up any resistance. That may be on account of the fact that she was overpowered by five persons and as described by her, they kept her legs and hands pressed. The medical evidence on record, however, does not affirmatively support the case of the prosecution and the prosecution can, therefore, derive no support from the medical evidence on record. (Paras 5, 6 and 17). Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185: AIR 2003 SC 3365.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2003]

[8964] — S. 376(2) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(2)(g), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of nearly one year and eleven months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Sheshrao, (2005) 8 SCC 11(1): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1957 (1): AIR 2005 SC 4417.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2005]

[8965] — S. 376(2) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(2)(g), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of nearly four years and eight months for R-1 and four years and three months for R-2 — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Veerendra Singh, (2005) 8 SCC 11(3): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1957 (3).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2005]

[8966] — S. 376(2) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(2)(g), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of nearly three years and seven months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Rajesh, (2005) 8 SCC 11(2): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1957 (2).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2005]

[Ed.: Many similar appeals were filed in the Supreme Court by the State of M.P. involving the very same manner of reduction of sentence by Justice N.S. Azad of the M.P. High Court. All such appeals came before the present Bench of three Judges. The leading decision is reported above at (2005) 8 SCC 1.

All the remaining appeals [which are being reported below at pp. 11-14] have been disposed of identically except that in certain appeals besides S. 376 IPC the accused had been convicted of other offences as well, and the period of sentence undergone was also different. Since the text of all the judgments in the connected appeals in other respects is identical to the one reproduced below, they are not being reproduced. The slight difference in the conviction and period of sentence already undergone is detailed in each shortnote given separately below the cause title of each appeal. It is worthy of note that the trial court in each case had awarded the minimum mandatory sentence under S. 376(1) or S. 376(2), as the case may be.]

[8967] — S. 376(2)(g) — Conviction confirmed — While victim (PW 3) was returning home along with her sister-in-law (PW 1), both appellant-accused (brothers) committed rape on victim, after forcibly taking her to nearby field — On alarm being raised, victim's husband (PW 2) came there, who was also assaulted by both appellants with pistol butt, causing injuries to him — Thereafter, both accused fled away from place of occurrence — Held, evidence of PWs 1 to 3 clearly establishes that it was appellants who committed rape/assault on victim — Said evidence inspires confidence, more so, when evidence was recorded almost after eight years from date of commission of offence, yet, there is great consistency therein — Hence, no reason to doubt truthfulness of aforesaid evidence — Again, regarding delay in lodging FIR, it cannot be said that there was inordinate or unexplained delay — Also, victim admittedly a married lady, therefore, it was not necessary that some external or internal injuries should have been found on her person — Undoubtedly, doctor who examined the victim, could not give any definite opinion regarding rape, but, it was not case of appellants that they had not committed rape but they had taken a plea of consensual sex with victim, which was not believed by courts below — Moreover, plea by appellants of false implication on ground of enmity between their two families, not sustainable, as it would not lead to such a serious consequence of lodging FIR of commission of gang rape by appellants — Hence, conviction and sentence awarded by courts below, confirmed (Paras 7 and 11 to 15). Sohan Singh v. State of Bihar, (2010) 1 SCC 68.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2009]

[8968] — S. 376(2)(g) — Evidentiary value of FIR — Prosecutrix naming Accused 4 in FIR but neither identifying him in Court nor naming him in her deposition — Held, the allegations, made in FIR are not evidence — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 154 and 164 — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 145 and 9

The prosecutrix, a coolie, was gang raped while on her way back from a movie at about 10.00 p.m. on 20-11-1994. Her brother, P who was slapped, ran for help and when he returned with other villagers, found her sister lying unconscious and naked. FIR was lodged at about 7.00 p.m. on 21-11-1994 after the victim regained her consciousness. The conviction of six accused persons under Section 376(2)(g) IPC was upheld by the High Court.

Allowing the appeal of Accused 4 to 6 and dismissing the appeal of Accused 1 to 3,

Held :

The allegations made in the first information report are not evidence. Naming some of the accused persons in the first information report and not naming them in the course of deposition casts a serious doubt. The prosecutrix might have named four persons, namely, Accused 1 to 4 in the FIR, but, she named only Accused 1 to 3 in her deposition. She neither named nor identified Accused 4 to 6. On what basis, therefore, their guilt is said to have been established is not known. Both, the learned trial Judge as also the High Court, in their judgments did not deal with this aspect of the matter. (Paras 16 and 18). Viswanathan v. State, (2008) 5 SCC 354: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 593: AIR 2008 SC 2222.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2008]

4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy (contd.)

Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185, relied on [8969] — S. 376(2)(g) — FIR — Gang rape by entering into victims' house at night — Victims taking shelter in another's house after the rape and lodging FIR next morning — Delay in lodging FIR, held on facts, satisfactorily explained. Pramod Mahto v. State of Bihar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 672: 1990 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 1475: 1989 Cri LJ 1479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1989]

[8970] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Absence of any injury is an important factor — Where testimony of prosecutrix found to be self-contradictory and also inconsistent with testimony of other PWs as well as with medical evidence, held, accused cannot be convicted on the basis of her version

Where allegation is of rape by many persons and several times but no injury is noticed that certainly is an important factor. It is true that injury is not a sine qua non for deciding whether rape has been committed. But it has to be decided on the factual matrix of each case. If the court finds it difficult to accept the version of a prosecutrix on the face value, it may search for evidence direct or circumstantial. (Paras 12 and 11)

In this case, there was inconsistency in the statement of the prosecutrix as regards the accused who had first committed rape on her; while in her earlier statement she had named one accused, in her cross-examination she named another accused as the person who committed the rape first. She had also deposed differently as to the place of rape. (Para 14)

Further, the prosecutrix stated that she was four months' pregnant at the time of occurrence and there was miscarriage, but the doctor who examined her stated that she was actually on menstruation period. The prosecutrix stated that one of the accused had dragged her by catching her bunch of hair for a considerable distance, but the trial court noticed that if that was so there would have been injuries but she had not stated about this part in the FIR. She had spoken about scratches on her back due to dragging and other parts of the body and that blood had also oozed out. But the medical evidence is clearly to the contrary. The doctor who examined her found no injury on her body. In her cross-examination, she admitted that the accused persons harassed her and tried to kill her and that she was assaulted by her husband. Those are relatable to the injuries which were fresh at the time of second examination by the doctor. In her statement she had deposed that her husband was also dragged by two accused persons and he had also suffered several injuries, but this part also was belied by the medical evidence. The statement of one of the PWs was also contrary to the statement of the prosecutrix's husband. (Paras 15 and 16)

In view of the aforesaid factual position the trial court was justified in directing acquittal and the High Court's judgment upsetting the acquittal is clearly unsustainable. (Para 17). Lalliram v. State of M.P., (2008) 10 SCC 69.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-2008]

Pratap Misra v. State of Orissa, (1977) 3 SCC 41: 1977 SCC (Cri) 447; Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266, relied on [8971] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Appellant-accused acquitted of charge under S. 376(2)(g) IPC by granting them benefit of doubt — Same benefit extended to non-appealing accused (Para 23). Raju v. State of M.P., (2008) 15 SCC 133: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 751: AIR 2009 SC 858: (2009) 74 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2008]

Raja Ram v. State of M.P., (1994) 2 SCC 568: 1994 SCC (Cri) 573; Arokia Thomas v. State of T.N., (2006) 10 SCC 542: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 140; Suresh Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2003) 4 SCC 128: 2003 SCC (Cri) 801, followed [8972] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Appreciation of evidence — Acquittal restored — Delay in lodging FIR after about 60 hrs of incident, not satisfactorily explained — No explanation furnished by prosecution as to why prosecutrix declined to undergo her medical examination at a place about 22 km away from place of incident but insisted on medical examination at a place 55 km away — PW 7 (doctor who examined prosecutrix) found no injury on her genitalia and deposed that there was no evidence to show that she was raped — Prosecutrix had stated that at the time of her medical examination, her vagina was stitched, however, doctor found no stitch on her person — Hence trial court's view of acquittal was a possible one (Paras 9 to 11). Bhaiyamiyan v. State of M.P., (2011) 6 SCC 394.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision : 3-5-2011]

[8973] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Conviction can be founded on evidence of victims

It was contended that the case against the accused-appellants had been foisted due to communal feelings. Rejecting the contentions

Held :

Even if communal feelings had run high, it is inconceivable that an unmarried girl and two married women would go to the extent of staking their reputation and future in order to falsely set up a case of rape on them for the sake of communal interests. Pramod Mahto v. State of Bihar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 672: 1990 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 1475: 1989 Cri LJ 1479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1989]

[8974] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Corroboration of evidence of victim not essential — Uncontroverted testimony of the prosecutrix accepted by courts below — Evidence showing that the victim had protested and struggled while she was subjected to forcible sexual assault by accused persons — Held, this evinces absence of consent on the part of the victim in sexual intercourse, apart from the legal presumption under S. 114-A of Evidence Act — Courts below rightly held that the victim was gang raped by the accused-appellants in the absence of her consent and that the defence case was not substantiated by any cogent evidence — Neither High Court in revision nor Supreme Court in appeal by special leave justified in reappraisal of the evidence in the face of the concurrent findings — Hence conviction under S. 376 and sentence of 3 years' RI upheld — CrPC, 1973, S. 401. Gagan Bihari Samal v. State of Orissa, (1991) 3 SCC 562: 1991 SCC (Cri) 893: (1991) 2 GLH 30: (1991) 72 CLT 322: (1991) 28 ACC 435.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S.C. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-7-1991]

[8975] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Identification of the accused for the first time in court — Non-holding of TI parade, on facts, was not fatal — Non-holding of TI parade — When not fatal — Rape case — Prosecutrix (PW 1) saw the accused-appellants on three occasions almost immediately prior to the commission of offence and also when they committed sexual assault on her — On hearing cries of PW 1, her father and brother came to the spot and saw the appellants running away — Brother identifying them by their description — Appellants, when chased and caught by the father, confessed their guilt but refused to come with him — Later when arrested, appellants shown to PW 1 by IO in order to ensure that correct persons were arrested — That apart, appellants named in FIR — Held, TI parade was not necessary in the instant case — Non-holding of it, on facts, did not vitiate the trial — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9

Non-holding of TI parade would not by itself disprove the prosecution case. To what extent and if at all the same would adversely affect the prosecution case, would depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. (Para 9)

In the facts of this case, holding of TI parade was wholly unnecessary. PW 1 (prosecutrix) disclosed enough materials to show that she had occasion to see the accused persons at least on three occasions almost immediately prior to the commission of offence and also when the accused-appellants forcibly committed sexual assault on her. PW 1 gave sufficient particulars of the persons committing the offence of criminal assault on her. They had been identified by their description by her brother. The appellants were chased and they were caught and allegedly they had made a confession of their guilt. (Paras 10, 5 and 14)

The appellants were arrested on 6-11-1993 (six days after the incident) and according to the investigating officer they were shown to the prosecutrix to ensure that they have arrested the correct persons and in that view of the matter it was impracticable to hold a test identification parade. (Para 7)

That apart, the names of the appellants have been mentioned in the first information report. (Para 14)

Thus, in view of the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case, it is held that non-holding of a test identification parade cannot be said to have vitiated the trial. (Para 7). Dastagir Sab v. State of Karnataka, (2004) 3 SCC 106: 2004 SCC (Cri) 678: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 694: (2004) 3 MPLJ 154.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-2004]

State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147; Malkhansingh v. State of M.P., (2003) 5 SCC 746: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1247; Ashfaq v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2004) 3 SCC 116: (2003) 10 Scale 732, followed

Dana Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2002) 7 SCC 295: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1698, relied on

[8976] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Not possible for medical examination to prove the number of persons who committed the rape — Extent of injuries and medical report can however support the allegation that more than one person was involved

It was contended on behalf of the appellants that as it does not transpire from the medical report as to the number of persons who had committed rape on the prosecutrix, the conviction of the appellants is illegal and should be set aside.

4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy (contd.)

Held :

On medical examination it is not possible to say about the number of persons committing rape on a girl and, accordingly, in her report the doctor has not expressed any opinion in that regard. The evidence of the prosecutrix that all the appellants had committed rape on her is not inconsistent with the medical report. In the circumstances there is justification for the finding of the High Court that the medical examination and the evidence show the involvement of more than one person in the act of rape. Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, (1987) 2 SCC 27: 1987 SCC (Cri) 249: AIR 1987 SC 1080: 1987 Cri LJ 971.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.L. Oza and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-1987]

[8977] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Sentence warranted — Appellants convicted under Ss. 376 & 366 and sentenced to RI for 10 years and fine of Rs 1000, and RI of 5 years and fine of Rs 1000 respectively — Considering gravity of crime, prayer for reduction of sentence rejected (Paras 1 and 16). Jaswant Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 16 SCC 201: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 243: AIR 2010 SC 894: 2010 Cri LJ 41: (2010) 2 ECrN 305 (SC): (2010) 85 AIC 193 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-2009]

[8978] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Underwear handed over by the accused to the investigating officer were found by the chemical examiner to be stained with semen — Underwear produced by some of the accused on the next day of occurrence, while others producing them three days later — Held, it is somewhat difficult to believe that the accused had themselves provided the evidence of having committed rape soon after the incident, and even more surprising, that some of them had done so three days after the incident — Recovery of the stained underwear is a factor which, by itself, cannot support a case of rape against the accused (Para 21). Raju v. State of M.P., (2008) 15 SCC 133: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 751: AIR 2009 SC 858: (2009) 74 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2008]

Raja Ram v. State of M.P., (1994) 2 SCC 568: 1994 SCC (Cri) 573; Arokia Thomas v. State of T.N., (2006) 10 SCC 542: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 140; Suresh Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2003) 4 SCC 128: 2003 SCC (Cri) 801, followed

[8979] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape of married lady — Absence of injuries, held, not consequential when gang rape otherwise established (Para 14). Sohan Singh v. State of Bihar, (2010) 1 SCC 68.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2009]

[8980] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape or rape simpliciter — In view of acquittal of co-accused, held, the instant case was not a case of gang rape, but a case of rape simpliciter — Hence, sentence of accused reduced to prescribed minimum of seven years (Para 2). Rajesh v. State of Goa, (2003) 11 SCC 736.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.N. Kirpal, C.J. and K.G. Balakrishnan and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2002]

[8981] — S. 376(2)(g) — Minor contradictions or inconsistencies immaterial — Confusion regarding P (PW 7), brother of prosecutrix getting her clothes on the directions of investigating officer — Held, is not a matter of great significance to prejudice the accused

There may be some inconsistency with regard to recovery of the clothes or sending the same for chemical examination, but the findings are sufficient to prove the common intention on the part of Accused 1 to 3. The very fact that they came on cycles and dashed with the cycle of P (PW 7), would clearly show that they had a common intention to commit the offence. They not only gathered and obstructed her from proceeding towards her residence with her brother on the bicycle but also deliberately made her and her brother to fall down from the cycle. The prosecutrix was then physically removed to a secluded place and at least three of them took part in committing the offence of rape on her one by one. The evidence of PW 6 to the aforementioned extent is cogent and convincing and has been corroborated by PW 7 who not only is a witness to the events which took place immediately prior to the actual occurrence of rape but also a witness to the scene of occurrence where he found his sister lying naked in an unconscious state. Material objects were found to have semen stains. The accused were also tested as regards proof of potency and the doctors who examined them categorically came to the conclusion that they were not incapable of committing sexual intercourse. (Paras 24 and 23). Viswanathan v. State, (2008) 5 SCC 354: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 593: AIR 2008 SC 2222.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2008]

[8982] — S. 376(2)(g) — Requirement of TI Parade in the absence of other evidence to identify the accused — Accused 4 to 6 had been arrested on the basis of statements by co-accused — Neither TI parade nor any other basis laid for establishing involvement of Accused 4 to 6 — Prosecutrix could identify only Accused 1 to 3 in the court although Accused 4 was named by her in FIR — However, Accused 5 and 6 were not named in FIR also — Conviction of Accused 4 to 6 (without TI parade or any identification in the court) solely on the statements made by co-accused, held, was wrong — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9

In the absence of any test identification parade having been held or they having been identified in court, Accused 4 to 6 cannot be held guilty of commission of the offence. Before the learned trial Judge, the victim did not identify all the accused. She identified Accused 1, 2 and 3. The names of Accused 5 and 6 were not mentioned by her at all. They had been arrested on the basis of the statements made by their co-accused. (Paras 18, 9 and 16). Viswanathan v. State, (2008) 5 SCC 354: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 593: AIR 2008 SC 2222.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2008]

[8983] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 302, 201 and 120-B — FIR — Contents of — Eyewitness' account of incident not incorporated in complaint lodged with police — Whether fatal to prosecution — Held, not fatal since complainant and eyewitness had not talked with each other prior to filing of FIR (Paras 13 to 15). State of Rajasthan v. Hanif Khan, (2009) 3 SCC 549: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 161: AIR 2009 SC 2043: 2009 Cri LJ 1765.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-2009]

[8984] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 302 and 201 r/w S. 34 — Gang rape and murder of child aged 7-8 years — Conviction justified — Sentence to be imposed — Appellants alleged to have lifted the little girl from the waiting room, where she was sleeping along with her parents and younger brother, committed rape and then murdered her — Appellants seen talking in a suspicious manner — No explanation offered by Appellant 2 as regards his stained undergarments/injuries on his face (and which he accepted) — Lock and key of waiting room always in possession of Appellant 1 (chowkidar) — Absence of Appellant 2 from the bus in question, his effort to sleep in another bus leaving his own bus, his absence for about 1 to 1½ hour, and change of his garments during that period, proved — Appellant 1 making voluntary judicial confession wherein the roles played by the appellants were explicitly detailed — Possibility of some other passenger committing the offence ruled out on basis of circumstantial evidence — Held, S. 30 Evidence Act, 1872, can be taken aid of to take into consideration the confessional effect of the statements made by Appellant 1 as against Appellant 2 for arriving at an opinion that by reason thereof involvement of both of them amply stood proved — Judicial confession of Appellant 1, statement of Appellant 2 in his examination under CrPC 1973, S. 313 and other circumstantial evidence, prove the guilt of the appellants beyond reasonable doubt — Death sentence reduced to rigorous life imprisonment

Appellants were charged with and convicted for commission of offences under Sections 376(2)(g), 302 and 201 read with Section 34 of the Penal Code, 1860 for rape and murder of one B (deceased) aged 7-8 years. Deceased along with her parents and younger brother was travelling to Dimapur (State of Nagaland) in a private transport service known as Network Travels from Dharmanagar (Tripura). They reached Guwahati at around 10.30 p.m. on 12-7-2002. There was no connecting bus to Dimapur at that time. Appellant 1 was a night chowkidar of the waiting room of the said Network Travels. He represented that they could stay there for the night and therefore should not have any apprehension in regard to their safety. Their luggage was carried by Appellant 1 to the waiting room. The waiting room had two openings. It was covered by grills. Only the front gate was open, which was kept under lock and key, the key whereof was with Appellant 1. PW 23 (father of the deceased) and the two children slept. However, PW 22 (mother of the deceased) stayed awake. Appellant 1 insisted to her repeatedly that she should go to sleep stating that as the waiting room would be locked, there was nothing for her to worry about. As she had not been sleeping, Appellant 1, allegedly, scolded her to do so. At that time, a bus bearing No. AS 25C 1476 arrived at the said bus-stop. P, Appellant 2 was the "handyman" of the said bus. While the manager, driver and the conductor slept in the said bus, he did not. He was seen talking with Appellant 1.

PW 22 slept for a while and got up when her son cried out. She did not find B and raised hue and cry. They requested Appellant 1 to open the gates of the waiting room. He showed his reluctance at the first instance. He was thereafter told about the missing of the girl. On being so informed, he opined that she might be somewhere else within the room. A search was carried out in the three buses, which were at the bus-stop belonging to the travel agency. Nearabout places as also the railway station were searched. The bathroom situated in the said premises was also searched.

4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy (contd.)

The dead body of B was found in a septic tank on 14-7-2000. FIR was lodged wherein apart from Appellant 1, suspicion was raised about the involvement of driver, PW 26, conductor, PW 25 and the handyman, P Appellant 2 herein of the bus bearing No. AS 25C 1476. The said bus had already left for its destination at about 6.30 in the morning. Even prior thereto, PW 2 was persuaded that the said bus be permitted to leave early for Jorhat, which was declined.

During the course of investigation, Appellant 1 made a confessional statement before the Magistrate under Section 164 CrPC. He gave a vivid description as to how the offence was committed by him and Appellant 2. On basis of circumstantial evidence and judicial confession of Appellant 1, appellants were convicted and sentenced to death by the trial court. Their appeal was dismissed by the High Court. Hence, the present appeal. Bishnu Prasad Sinha v. State of Assam, (2007) 11 SCC 467: AIR 2007 SC 848: (2007) 53 AIC 166 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1145.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2007]

[8985] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 302/34 and 201 — Rape and murder — Sentence — Death sentence justified — Rarest of rare cases — Jail officer sending to his quarter a guard and a prisoner to work in the house and in the garden attached thereto, respectively — 16-year-old daughter of the said officer was at that time alone in the quarter and was preparing for her Class 10th examination — Taking advantage of her loneliness, both the guard and the prisoner committing rape on her, strangulating and then stabbing her, removing her cycle and throwing her dead body in septic tank — In such circumstances sentence of death, held, was the only proper punishment — CrPC, 1973, S. 354(3) (Para 36). Molai v. State of M.P., (1999) 9 SCC 581: AIR 2000 SC 177.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.P. Kurdukar, K.T. Thomas and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-1999]

State of M.P. v. Molai, 1999 Cri LJ 2698 (MP), affirmed

[8986] — Ss. 376(2)(g) and 323 — Identification, necessity of for person unknown to prosecutrix/complainant — Necessity of Test identification parade and exception — Explained — Where the accused (Respondent 2 herein) was neither a person already known to the prosecutrix nor was specifically named in the FIR nor was subjected to test identification, putting him on trial for offence under Ss. 376(2)(g) and 323, held, was improper — Further held, identification of the accused for the first time at the trial is a weak evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 9

The prosecutrix, a 55-year-old widow who was the mother of two grown-up children, was while coming back to her house after attending the marriage of a relation, criminally assaulted and subjected to forcible intercourse by the respondents. The first information report was submitted by her on the next day against the respondents. She was medically examined and her torn salwar was sent for chemical analysis. On medical examination various injuries were found on her person. The doctor was of the opinion that they reflected the signs of a struggle. The trial court convicted the accused persons under Sections 376(2)(g) and 323 IPC and sentenced them to undergo rigorous imprisonment for five years and to pay a fine of Rs 5000 each under Section 376 IPC and six months' rigorous imprisonment under Section 323 with a fine of Rs 500 each. The High Court reversed that decision. It acquitted Respondent 2 on the ground that his identity could not be established by the prosecution at the trial. It further held that the case against Respondent 1 was not proved beyond doubt as the medical evidence and the finding showed that no dead or alive spermatozoa was seen. Another circumstance which weighed with the High Court was that the sealing of the salwar was not properly established. Moreover, before the Supreme Court the respondent attempted to point out some discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix and other witnesses for discrediting the prosecution version. One of such discrepancies was that the prosecutrix had stated the place of occurrence to be 20 feet away from the road while in the FIR the place of occurrence was mentioned as the road. Upholding the acquittal of Respondent 2 but setting aside the acquittal of Respondent 1 and restoring his conviction by the trial court,

Held :

During the investigation of a crime the police agency is required to hold identification parade for the purposes of enabling the witness to identify the person alleged to have committed the offence particularly when such person was not previously known to the witness or the informant. The absence of test identification may not be fatal if the accused is known or sufficiently described in the complaint leaving no doubt in the mind of the court regarding his involvement. Identification parade may also not be necessary in a case where the accused persons are arrested at the spot. The evidence of identifying the accused person at the trial for the first time is, from its very nature, inherently of a weak character. (Para 3)

Admittedly Respondent 2 was not known to the prosecutrix and his name was not specifically mentioned in the FIR. Admittedly no identification parade was held and the prosecutrix saw Respondent 2 only in the court after the day of occurrence. Though the holding of identification proceedings are not substantive evidence, yet they are used for corroboration purposes for believing that the person brought before the court was the real person involved in the commission of the crime. The identification parade even if held, cannot, in all cases, be considered as safe, sole and trustworthy evidence on which the conviction of the accused could be sustained. It is a rule of prudence which is required to be followed in cases where the accused is not known to the witness or the complainant. (Para 3)

The holding of identification parade in the instant case would have been irrelevant, had the name of Respondent 2 been mentioned in the FIR Exhibit P/D. The identity of Respondent 2 was, admittedly, not established during the investigation and it is not clear as to how the said respondent was put on trial along with Respondent 1. Hence, Respondent 2 could not have been put on trial and held guilty. (Para 4) . State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147: AIR 1999 SC 3916: 2000 Cri LJ 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-1999]

[8987] — Ss. 376(2)(g) and 323 — Offence under — Appreciation of evidence — Prosecutrix, a widow aged 55 years and having two grown-up children, alleging that respondents grappled with her and made her lie down on the earth and then committed rape and that in that process she received injuries — Allegation corroborated by medical evidence — At the time of contacting her advocate she was scared and hesitant — Lodging FIR through her advocate on the next day — Salwar of prosecutrix was found to be torn and stained — Forensic Science Laboratory report showing presence of human blood and semen on the salwar — In such circumstances, held, the trial court rightly convicted the accused under Ss. 376(2)(g) and 323 (Para 11). State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147: AIR 1999 SC 3916: 2000 Cri LJ 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-1999]

[8988] — Ss. 376(2)(g) and 366 — Gang rape — Guilt not established — Prosecutrix alleged to have been forcibly taken away by accused while she was going with her mother (PW 8) and gang raped — Charge under S. 366 found not established — No injury found on any part of her body — Doctor opining that prosecutrix was so habituated to sexual intercourse that it was not possible to ascertain as to when she had last been subjected to it — Prosecutrix also admitting that she had once been arrested in a hotel — Held, it is indeed surprising that though as per her allegations all 13 accused had assaulted her one after the other, the doctor did not find even a scratch on her person — Courts below had not accepted the plea raised by the accused as to the adverse character of the prosecutrix as the evidence on this score was not conclusive — But considering the said facts it is probable that the prosecutrix was indeed involved in some kind of improper activity — Further, identification of accused was extremely doubtful since there were discrepancies in the evidence against them — TI parade conducted was also farcical — Besides, where identification of accused itself was doubtful, recovery of stained underwears produced by accused themselves was meaningless — It is somewhat difficult to believe that the accused had themselves provided the evidence of having committed rape soon after the incident, and even more surprising is that some of them had done so three days after the incident — Held, it was difficult to conclusively show the involvement of each of the accused beyond reasonable doubt — Truth and falsehood are so inextricably intertwined, that it is impossible to discern where one ends and the other begins — Benefit of doubt granted to accused and they acquitted

Prosecutrix PW 9, while going along with her mother PW 8 were alleged to have been met by four accused, who called her a prostitute and asked her to go with them to a hotel. When she refused, they put a towel on her face, slapped her several times, and made her sit on a Luna scooter. Thereafter they took her to newly constructed quarters where other accused (thirteen in all) were present and turn by turn they raped her. All the accused were charged under Ss. 366/376 IPC. Trial court acquitted them under S. 366 IPC, but convicted all of them under S. 376(2)(g) and sentenced them to RI for 10 years and fine of Rs 200 with default stipulation. In appeal, High Court by impugned judgment acquitted two accused finding that they had not been identified in TI parade. Conviction of other accused was however maintained with modification in sentence from 10 years' to 8 years' RI and fine from Rs 200 to Rs 5000. Hence, the present appeal.

4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy (contd.)

Submission made by appellants that: (i) since charge under S. 366 was not proved, conviction under S. 376(2)(g) on same set of evidence was uncalled for; (ii) despite her claim of being raped by thirteen persons, no injuries were found on her body which falsified the prosecution story; (iii) she was apparently a girl of easy virtue; hence her testimony deserved careful consideration; (iv) since large number of persons were involved in the offence their identification beyond doubt was a sine qua non for conviction; and (v) TI parade was open to grave suspicion, and hence evidence of identification was also unacceptable.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

In the instant case, though thirteen persons were accused of raping the prosecutrix, but no injuries were found on her person. Doctor also opined that the prosecutrix was so habituated to sexual intercourse that it was not possible to ascertain as to when she had last been subjected to it. PW 8 (mother of prosecutrix) stated that prosecutrix had been married while a child but her gauna had not been performed as her husband had, in the meanwhile, taken a second wife. She also stated that the police had often questioned the prosecutrix as to why she was indulging in prostitution. Prosecutrix herself admitted that she had once been arrested in a case. Though courts below did not accept the plea raised by the accused as to the adverse character of the prosecutrix as the evidence on this score was not conclusive, yet it is probable that the prosecutrix was indeed involved in some kind of improper activity. (Paras 14 and 15)

As far as identification of accused is concerned PW 8 (mother of the prosecutrix) clearly stated in her examination-in-chief that she was not in a position to identify the accused at the time of incident or even in court. Though the prosecutrix, her mother and accused were residents of same area, prosecutrix named only few of them in FIR, and in her examination-in-chief stated that she did not know names of those accused who took her away on the Luna and was not in a position to recognise them. Hence, in the light of the categorical statements of the two main prosecution witnesses, the identification of the accused is extremely doubtful. (Paras 17 to 19)

Further, TI parade held by PW 5 was also farcical. Though thirty-six persons were involved in the TI parade, nine accused were covered with black and brown-coloured blankets. Only inference that can be drawn from this is that distinctive blankets were provided to facilitate identification. Accused had been shown to prosecutrix several times while they were in police custody. Hence, TI parade was meaningless. (Para 20)

Since the identification of accused itself was doubtful, recovery of underwear at their instance becomes meaningless. It is somewhat difficult to believe that the accused had themselves provided the evidence of having committed rape soon after the incident, and even more surprising, that some of them had done so three days after the incident. Besides, recovery of the stained underwear is a factor which, by itself, cannot support a case of rape against the accused. (Para 21)

In such circumstances, involvement of each accused cannot be established beyond reasonable doubt. Truth and falsehood are so inextricably intertwined, that it is impossible to discern where one ends and the other begins. Appellants were entitled to benefit of doubt. (Para 22). Raju v. State of M.P., (2008) 15 SCC 133: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 751: AIR 2009 SC 858: (2009) 74 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2008]

[8989] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 376(2) Expln. 1 and 34 — Gang rape — Offence of, whether made out — No material on record to show common intention — Though the aspect of common intention was elaborately dealt with by trial court while convicting only three persons and acquitting the appellants, the High Court without considering these aspects convicted the appellants — Held, the essence of the liability in terms of S. 376(2) is the existence of common intention — Therefore, conviction by High Court liable to be set aside

In April 1996, eight accused persons forcibly took the prosecutrix to SH's house. While D raped the prosecutrix, the rest of the accused persons were flirting with her. The accused persons, then threatened that they would kill her brothers if she revealed anything. Thereafter, all of them used to rape her in the same house when she went to school. When the parents of the prosecutrix came to know of this and sought advice from V, they were advised not to proceed against the accused who hailed from high families. V also tried to negotiate a marriage of the prosecutrix with D but the parents preferred to lodge an FIR (dated 6-10-1997). V was also implicated. The trial court convicted D, SH and SV and acquitted the rest including the appellants. But the High Court by the impugned order convicted the present appellants.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The essence of the liability in terms of Section 376(2) is the existence of common intention. In animating the accused to do the criminal act in furtherance of such intention, the principles of Section 34 IPC have clear application. In order to bring in the concept of common intention it is to be established that there was simultaneous consensus of the minds of the persons participating in the act to bring about a particular result. Common intention is not the same or similar intention. It presupposes a prior meeting and prearranged plan. In other words, there must be a prior meeting of minds. It is not necessary that preconcert in the sense of a distinct previous plan is necessary to be proved. The common intention to bring about a particular result may well develop on the spot as between a number of persons which has to be gauged on the facts and circumstances of each case. (Para 10)

In the instant case, no evidence was led to show that the appellants had a common intention of committing rape on the victim. There is also nothing on evidence to show that they shared common intention. This aspect unfortunately has been lost sight of by the High Court though the trial court has elaborately dealt with this aspect. A bare reading of the entire evidence of the prosecutrix goes to show that the appellants were not involved in the act of rape. Above being the position the conviction as recorded by the High Court could not stand and is set aside. (Paras 11, 9 and 12). Hanuman Prasad v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 1 SCC 507: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 564: (2009) 73 AIC 231 (SC): (2009) 2 ECrN 48 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-11-2008]

[8990] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 376/34 and 342/34 — Gang rape — Sentence — Awarding sentence lesser than the prescribed minimum — Propriety — Held, court has to record "adequate and special reasons" for exercising the discretion of — No straitjacket formula can be imposed for determining what amounts to "adequate and special" — Reason that appellant had not actually committed the rape, held, could not be a ground to warrant a lesser sentence — Not only was the appellant present, but he was also waiting for his turn — On facts, there was no just or special reason to award a lesser sentence — High Court rightly enhanced the sentence from four years to the prescribed minimum i.e. ten years

Both, in cases of sub-sections (1) and (2) of Section 376 the court has the discretion to impose a sentence of imprisonment less than the prescribed minimum for "adequate and special reasons". If the court does not mention such reasons in the judgment there is no scope for awarding a sentence lesser than the prescribed minimum. (Para 15)

In order to exercise the discretion of reducing the sentence the statutory requirement is that the court has to record "adequate and special reasons" in the judgment and not fanciful reasons which would permit the court to impose a sentence less than the prescribed minimum. The reason has not only to be adequate but special. What is adequate and special would depend upon several factors and no straitjacket formula can be imposed. In the case at hand, the only reason which seems to have weighed with the trial court is that the present accused-appellant had not actually committed the rape. That cannot be a ground to warrant lesser sentence; more so, in view of Explanation 1 to sub-section (2) of Section 376. By operation of a deeming provision a member of a group of persons who have acted in furtherance of their common intention per se attracts the minimum sentence. Section 34 has been applied by both the trial court and the High Court to conclude that rape was committed in furtherance of common intention. Not only was the accused-appellant present, but he was also waiting for his turn, as is evident from the fact that he was in the process of undressing. The evidence in this regard is cogent, credible and trustworthy. Since no other just or special reason was given by the trial court nor could any such be shown as to what were the reasons to warrant a lesser sentence, the High Court was justified in awarding the minimum prescribed sentence. (Para 16). Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551: AIR 2003 SC 4684.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2003]

[8991] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 452/34 and 323/34 — Gang rape — Appellant along with other accused persons convicted under — Sustainability — Allegations of rape — On facts, undisputedly, unlike some others, appellant was not caught at the place of occurrence — Trial court had itself held that there was no TI parade in the eye of the law — Therefore, identification of appellant for the first time in court was really of no consequence — Added to that, the only evidence pressed into service by prosecution, so far as appellant was concerned, was that his name was similar to one of the names by which accused persons were addressing each other, as stated by prosecutrix —

4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy (contd.)

That, held, cannot by any stretch of imagination be an incriminating circumstance — Again, no evidence was led to show the presence of appellant at the spot of occurrence or to have participated in the crime — That being so, held, prosecution miserably failed to prove the accusations so far as appellant is concerned — He is entitled to acquittal (Paras 15 and 16). Bal Kishan v. State of H.P., (2008) 16 SCC 11: AIR 2009 SC 812.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2008]

[8992] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 506, 149 and 148 — Gang rape and criminal intimidation — Sentence — Quantum of — Award of maximum penalty of life sentence, in the instant case, whether warranted — On facts, trial court convicted all six accused and sentenced A-1, A-3 and A-4 (appellant herein) under S. 376(2)(g) to RI for life with fine and default stipulation concluding that they had gang raped the victim — Other accused, however, were sentenced to imprisonment for 10 years with fine and default stipulation — All accused were also convicted under Ss. 506/149 and S. 148 and sentenced accordingly — High Court confirmed life sentence of A-1, A-3 and of the appellant while letting off other accused with sentence already undergone, as they had not indulged in sexual intercourse with the victim — Only appellant came up in appeal to Supreme Court — Conviction recorded by courts below, held, proper — Question arose only of the sentence — Only plea of poverty and appellant's old parents being deprived of his company, raised — No material placed in support of his poverty — On facts, victim was a defenceless married person who was tricked out of her house taking advantage of drunkenness of her husband and then ravished in a most dastardly manner by as many as three persons out of six, one of whom was the appellant — Under such circumstances, held, no leniency can be shown in the matter of sentence — Also, as out of three accused persons who were awarded maximum penalty of life sentence by courts below, only appellant came up in appeal, therefore, he cannot be treated differently from others who are serving their life sentence — Hence, no interference called for with judgments of courts below regarding sentence

The courts below have awarded the maximum penalty against the three accused being the life sentence. The only plea raised herein is that the appellant comes from a poor background and that his old parents will be deprived of his company. There is no material placed before the trial and the appellate court as well as before the Supreme Court in support of his poverty. At any rate notice of the fact can be taken that the father of the appellant has been the Sarpanch for the last 20 years. Again there would be no question of taking a lenient view particularly because of the daring dastardly act on the part of the accused persons in which the appellant took active part inasmuch as out of the six accused persons, he was one of the three accused who had committed rape on the lady. (Para 11)

This fact cannot be ignored that the lady was a married person and was tricked to accompany the accused who obviously had an evil design. It cannot be forgotten that the husband of the lady was lured on the evening of the day of occurrence itself taking advantage of his addiction to alcohol and it was then that the lady was lured to come out of the house for taking back her husband who was lying in a drunken state. Here was a defenceless married person who was tricked out of her house taking the advantage of the drunkenness of her husband and then was ravished in a most dastardly manner by as many as three persons, one of whom was the appellant herein. Under such circumstances, no leniency can be shown in the matter of sentence. It cannot be forgotten that out of three accused persons only one of the accused person has come up by way of an appeal. He cannot be treated differently from others who are serving their life sentence. (Para 12). Ramesh Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2008) 5 SCC 139: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 541.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-2008]

[8993] — Ss. 376(2)(g) and 506 Pt. II — Gang rape — Delay in lodging the FIR — Absence of Test identification parade — Identification of the accused persons by the prosecutrix in court — Conviction — Legality of — Gang rape committed by the three appellants on a school teacher in broad daylight — Medical evidence supporting the prosecution case to some extent — Prosecutrix had abundant opportunity to notice the features of the accused persons — Further, on account of traumatic and tragic experience of the prosecutrix, the faces of the appellants must have got imprinted in her memory — Hence the chance of mistaken identity was remote — Evidence of prosecutrix found to be implicitly reliable — In such circumstances, held on facts, the identification of the appellants by the prosecutrix in court did not require further corroboration — The delay of about 10 days in lodging the FIR was fully explained and strongly supported by circumstantial evidence and, therefore, did not affect the prosecution case adversely — Hence, conviction of appellants by the courts below upheld

The courts below have carefully considered the evidence on record and have come to the conclusion that the delay, if any, in lodging the first information report was fully explained by the prosecutrix and was strongly supported by the circumstantial evidence on record. The prosecutrix was living all alone and was an unmarried person, about 28 years of age. She did not have any family member to whom she could have narrated her story immediately after the occurrence on 4-3-1992. Moreover, the sense of shame coupled with the fear on account of threats given out by the appellants must have deterred her from immediately reporting about the occurrence to others. The prosecutrix narrated the incident to the Deputy Director of Education on 6-3-1992. Later she narrated the incident to one of her colleagues whom she found to be sympathetic towards her and thereafter when her cause was taken up by the Teachers' Association, she could muster courage to lodge a report with the Superintendent of Police. Thus in the facts and circumstances of the case, the mere delay in lodging of the first information report does not discredit the prosecution case. (Para 5)

The courts below have also examined the medical evidence on record and have observed that the medical evidence, to some extent, supported the case of the prosecution that the prosecutrix may have been subjected to forcible sexual intercourse within a week or two of her medical examination. The medical evidence also indicated that the prosecutrix was not habituated to sexual intercourse. (Para 5)

The evidence of mere identification of the accused person at the trial for the first time is from its very nature inherently of a weak character. The purpose of a prior test identification, therefore, is to test and strengthen the trustworthiness of that evidence. It is accordingly considered a safe rule of prudence to generally look for corroboration of the sworn testimony of witnesses in court as to the identity of the accused who are strangers to them, in the form of earlier identification proceedings. This rule of prudence, however, is subject to exceptions, when, for example, the court is impressed by a particular witness on whose testimony it can safely rely, without such or other corroboration. It is no doubt true that much evidentiary value cannot be attached to the identification of the accused in court where identifying witness is a total stranger who had just a fleeting glimpse of the person identified or who had no particular reason to remember the person concerned, if the identification is made for the first time in court. (Paras 7 and 10)

But failure to hold a test identification parade would not make inadmissible the evidence of identification in court. The identification parades belong to the stage of investigation, and there is no provision in the CrPC which obliges the investigating agency to hold, or confers a right upon the accused to claim a test identification parade. These parades do not constitute substantive evidence. The substantive evidence is the evidence of identification in court and the test identification parade provides corroboration to the identification of the witness in court, if required. However, what weight must be attached to the evidence of identification in court, which is not preceded by a test identification parade, is a matter for the courts of fact to examine. In appropriate cases it may accept the evidence of identification even without insisting on corroboration. (Paras 7 and 16)

In the instant case, the crime was perpetrated in broad daylight. The prosecutrix had sufficient opportunity to observe the features of the appellants who raped her one after the other. Before the rape was committed, she was threatened and intimidated by the appellants. After the rape was committed, she was again threatened and intimidated by them. All this must have taken time. This is not a case where the identifying witness had only a fleeting glimpse of the appellants on a dark night. She also had a reason to remember their faces as they had committed a heinous offence and put her to shame. She had, therefore, abundant opportunity to notice their features. In fact on account of her traumatic and tragic experience the faces of the appellants must have got imprinted in her memory, and there was no chance of her making a mistake about their identity. The prosecutrix appears to be a witness on whom implicit reliance can be placed and there is no reason why she should falsely identify the appellants as the perpetrators of the crime if they had not actually committed the offence. In these circumstances if the courts below have concurrently held that the identification of the appellants by the prosecutrix in court does not require further corroboration, there is no reason to interfere with the finding recorded by the courts below after an appreciation of the evidence on record. (Para 16). Malkhansingh v. State of M.P., (2003) 5 SCC 746: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1247: AIR 2003 SC 2669: 2003 Cri LJ 3535.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, Ashok Bhan and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-2003]

4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy (contd.)

Kanta Prashad v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1958 SC 350: 1958 Cri LJ 698; Vaikuntam Chandrappa v. State of A.P., AIR 1960 SC 1340: 1960 Cri LJ 1681; Budhsen v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 128: 1970 SCC (Cri) 343; Rameshwar Singh v. State of J&K, (1971) 2 SCC 715: 1971 SCC (Cri) 638; Jadunath Singh v. State of U.P., (1970) 3 SCC 518: 1971 SCC (Cri) 124; Parkash Chand Sogani v. State of Rajasthan, Crl. A. No. 92 of 1956 decided on 15-1-1957 (SC); Harbajan Singh v. State of J&K, (1975) 4 SCC 480: 1975 SCC (Cri) 545; Ram Nath Mahto v. State of Bihar, (1996) 8 SCC 630: 1996 SCC (Cri) 726; Suresh Chandra Bahri v. State of Bihar, 1995 Supp (1) SCC 80: 1995 SCC (Cri) 60; State of U.P. v. Boota Singh, (1979) 1 SCC 31: 1979 SCC (Cri) 115; Ramanbhai Naranbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2000) 1 SCC 358: 2000 SCC (Cri) 113, relied on [8994] — S. 376(2)(g) Expln. 1 — Gang rape — Common intention — Version of the prosecutrix as regards presence of the accused-appellant at the time of occurrence contradictory — In the FIR, she stating that he entered the house after rape was committed by other accused and thereafter started consuming liquor, but in her deposition before court she stating that he was present right from the moment she entered the house — Although possibility of the accused-appellant at the place of occurrence cannot be ruled out since he was apprehended from a place nearby along with other accused, held, but mere presence at such place is insufficient to show that there was a prior concert or meeting of minds or plan formed suddenly at the time of commission of offence by the accused-appellant with the other accused persons for the commission of rape on the prosecutrix — Moreover, where specific acts had been attributed to the other accused persons to show their connivance and preconcert to facilitate the offence in a pre-planned manner, no such act or conduct attributed to the accused-appellant in furtherance of the common intention to commit rape — On the other hand, prosecutrix categorically stating before court that the accused-appellant had not defiled her — Held, in such circumstances accused-appellant entitled to benefit of doubt — High Court's impugned order of conviction set aside (Paras 13 and 14). Pardeep Kumar v. Union Admn., (2006) 10 SCC 608: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 41: AIR 2006 SC 2992: 2006 Cri LJ 3894.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2006]

[8995] — S. 376(2)(g) Expln. 1 — Gang rape — Common intention — Version of victim (PW 6) and her brother P (PW 7) corroborated by material objects, medical evidence and depositions — The accused persons riding on cycle and together dashing with the cycle carrying the victim and her brother, causing them to fall, removing her to a secluded place and committing rape, held, clearly shows that they had a common intention to gang rape

The prosecutrix, a coolie, was gang raped while on her way back from a movie at about 10.00 p.m. on 20-11-1994. Her brother, P who was slapped, ran for help and when he returned with other villagers, found her sister lying unconscious and naked. FIR was lodged at about 7.00 p.m. on 21-11-1994 after the victim regained her consciousness. The conviction of six accused persons under Section 376(2)(g) IPC was upheld by the High Court.

Allowing the appeal of Accused 4 to 6 and dismissing the appeal of Accused 1 to 3,

Held :

There may be some inconsistency with regard to recovery of the clothes or sending the same for chemical examination, but the findings are sufficient to prove the common intention on the part of Accused 1 to 3. The very fact that they came on cycles and dashed with the cycle of P (PW 7), would clearly show that they had a common intention to commit the offence. They not only gathered and obstructed her from proceeding towards her residence with her brother on the bicycle but also deliberately made her and her brother to fall down from the cycle. The prosecutrix was then physically removed to a secluded place and at least three of them took part in committing the offence of rape on her one by one. The evidence of PW 6 to the aforementioned extent is cogent and convincing and has been corroborated by PW 7 who not only is a witness to the events which took place immediately prior to the actual occurrence of rape but also a witness to the scene of occurrence where he found his sister lying naked in an unconscious state. Material objects were found to have semen stains. The accused were also tested as regards proof of potency and the doctors who examined them categorically came to the conclusion that they were not incapable of committing sexual intercourse. (Paras 24 and 23). Viswanathan v. State, (2008) 5 SCC 354: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 593: AIR 2008 SC 2222.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2008]

[8996] — S. 376(2)(g) Expln. 1 — Gang rape — Once it is established that the accused-appellants had acted in concert and entered the victim's house and raped even one victim then all the accused would be guilty under Explanation I irrespective of whether she had been raped by one or more of them — In the circumstances it is not necessary for the prosecution to adduce clinching proof of a completed act of rape by each one of the accused on the victim or on each one of the victims where there are more than one in order to find the accused guilty of gang rape and convict them under S. 376 — Defence failed to explain how an unmarried girl aged about 15-16 years sustained marks and injuries of rape on her person as found by medical evidence — Held on facts, accused rightly convicted. Pramod Mahto v. State of Bihar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 672: 1990 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 1475: 1989 Cri LJ 1479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1989]

[8997] — S. 376(2)(g) Expln. 1 — Gang rape — Proof — Clinching proof of a completed act of rape, held, not essential — Statutory intention behind introduction of Expln. 1, stated

In cases of gang rape the proof of completed act of rape by each accused on the victim is not required. The statutory intention in introducing Explanation 1 in relation to Section 376(2)(g) appears to have been done with a view to effectively deal with the growing menace of gang rape. In such circumstances, it is not necessary that the prosecution should adduce clinching proof of a completed act of rape by each one of the accused on the victim or on each one of the victims where there are more than one in order to find the accused guilty of gang rape and convict them under Section 376 IPC. (Para 14). Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551: AIR 2003 SC 4684.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2003]

Pramod Mahto v. State of Bihar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 672: 1990 SCC (Cri) 206, relied on [8998] — S. 376(2)(g) Expln. 1 — Gang rape — Requisites to sustain conviction for Prosecution must prove:

(i) that more than one person had acted in concert with the common intention to commit rape on the victim;

(ii) that more that one accused had acted in concert in commission of offence of rape with prearranged plan, prior meeting of mind and with element of participation in action. Common intention would be action in concert in pre-arranged plan or a plan formed suddenly at the time of commission of offence which is reflected by the element of participation in action or by inaction when the action would be necessary. The prosecution would be required to prove pre-meeting of minds of the accused persons prior to commission of offence of rape by substantial evidence or by circumstantial evidence; and

(iii) that in furtherance of such common intention one or more persons of the group actually committed offence of rape on victim or victims. Prosecution is not required to prove actual commission of rape by each and every accused forming the group. (Para 10). Pardeep Kumar v. Union Admn., (2006) 10 SCC 608: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 41: AIR 2006 SC 2992: 2006 Cri LJ 3894.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2006]

Ashok Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2003) 2 SCC 143: 2003 SCC (Cri) 446, relied on [8999] — S. 376(2)(g) Expln. 1 — Gang rape — Sentence — Sentence of life imprisonment imposed by trial court and High Court on one of the accused who played the leading role in commission of the offences sustained — But sentence of life imprisonment imposed on the remaining accused reduced to the minimum sentence of 10 years' RI as it is itself a severe punishment and also because of admission made on behalf of the State that there were no special circumstances to call for the imposition of the maximum sentence of life imprisonment on them. Pramod Mahto v. State of Bihar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 672: 1990 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 1475: 1989 Cri LJ 1479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1989]

[9000] — S. 376(2)(g) Expln. 1 — Proof of common intention to commit gang rape — Liability of the members — Held, actual act of rape by even one individual forming the group, would fasten the guilt on other members, although he or they have not committed rape on the victim or victims (Para 11). Pardeep Kumar v. Union Admn., (2006) 10 SCC 608: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 41: AIR 2006 SC 2992: 2006 Cri LJ 3894.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2006]

Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551: 2004 SCC (Cri) 31; Pramod Mahto v. State of Bihar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 672: 1990 SCC (Cri) 206; Priya Patel v. State of M.P., (2006) 6 SCC 263, relied on [9001] — S. 376(2)(g) Expln. 1 thereto — Gang rape — Prosecution of a woman therefor — Held, impermissible — A woman committing rape is conceptually inconceivable — Expression "in furtherance of their common intention" in Expln. 1 to S. 376(2)(g) relates to intention to commit rape

4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy (contd.)

— A woman cannot be said to have an intention to commit rape (Paras 5 and 6). State of Rajasthan v. Hemraj, (2009) 12 SCC 403: AIR 2009 SC 2644.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2009]

Priya Patel v. State of M.P., (2006) 6 SCC 263: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 96, followed

[9002] — S. 376(2)(g) r/w S. 34 and S. 114-A, Evidence Act, 1872 — Gang rape — Presumption of non-consensual intercourse — Prosecutrix consistently stating that she had never consented to intercourse and that she was forcibly caught, threatened at knife-point and thereafter subjected to gang rape — No dispute regarding place or alleged occurrence — FIR lodged promptly and accused arrested immediately — No evidence of false implication since accused were unknown to prosecutrix — Discrepancies found in her testimony insignificant considering that she was illiterate rustic village girl — Non-resistance because of fear, held, not unnatural — Consent by prosecutrix, even if assumed she was a major, not established — Hence, conviction of appellant under Ss. 376/34 and sentence of 10 years' RI along with fine of Rs 500, held proper — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114-A (Paras 46, 47, 37 and 38). Vijay v. State of M.P., (2010) 8 SCC 191: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2010]

State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; State of U.P. v. Pappu, (2005) 3 SCC 594: 2005 SCC (Cri) 780; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of Orissa v. Thakara Besra, (2002) 9 SCC 86: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1080; State of H.P. v. Raghubir Singh, (1993) 2 SCC 622: 1993 SCC (Cri) 674; Wahid Khan v. State of M.P., (2010) 2 SCC 9: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 1208; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 Cri LJ 547, relied on

[9003] — S. 376(2)(g) r/w Expln. 1 — Gang rape — Essential ingredients of offence of, restated — Appellant along with one K convicted under S. 376(2)(g) for committing rape on deceased S — On facts, held, it was not possible to draw a reasonable conclusion that the appellant had raped S — Further, in the absence of any evidence of concert between K and the appellant, held, the conviction recorded by the courts below was liable to be set aside

According to the prosecution, when PW 6 was passing in front of the baithak of the residence of R, father of the appellant, he heard the cries of his sister S and when he went inside the baithak by scaling over the wall he saw the accused K (who died during the pendency of appeal in the High Court) raping his sister. It was further stated that the appellant came from the adjoining room with a pistol in his hand and asked PW 6 to run away as otherwise he would shoot him. The courts below placed strong reliance upon the statements made by the brothers of S (PWs 4 and 6) that S had told them, when she came back to the house at midnight after consuming poison, that both the accused had raped her. The trial court convicted both the accused under Section 376(2)(g), and High Court dismissed their appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

From the sequence of events as narrated by PW 6, it is not possible to draw a reasonable conclusion that the appellant had raped the deceased person. The time gap between PW 6 noticing the victim being taken inside the baithak and his entry into the baithak was so short that it is not possible to infer that the appellant would have committed rape in the first instance. Soon after PW 6 entered the baithak and witnessed what was happening, the appellant withdrew from there. In the face of this version in the cross-examination, it is difficult to believe that both the accused had committed rape. When there is direct evidence of PW 6, the bald statement attributed to the deceased sister in an apparent bid to rope in the appellant in addition to the other accused cannot be given much weight. (Para 7)

The next question is whether the accused can be convicted under Section 376(2)(g) IPC even if he had not actually raped the victim. Now, in order to establish an offence under Section 376(2)(g) IPC, read with Explanation I thereto, the prosecution must adduce evidence to indicate that more than one accused had acted in concert and in such an event, if rape had been committed by even one, all the accused will be guilty irrespective of the fact that she had been raped by one or more of them and it is not necessary for the prosecution to adduce evidence of a completed act of rape by each one of the accused. The said provision embodies a principle of joint liability and the essence of that liability is the existence of common intention; that common intention presupposes prior concert which may be determined from the conduct of offenders revealed during the course of action and it could arise and be formed suddenly, but, there must be meeting of minds. It is not enough to have the same intention independently of each of the offenders. In such cases, there must be criminal sharing marking out a certain measure of jointness in the commission of offence. (Paras 7 and 8)

Apart from the factum that the appellant was present in his house at about 3.30 p.m. in hot summer month at the crucial time, nothing more is established. By that factum alone, it could not be inferred that the appellant was in concert with K. Further, the evidence of PWs 4 and 6 that they found K in a compromising position with S when the appellant walked in with a pistol and threatened to shoot them is not believed by the trial court. Thus, in the absence of any evidence of concert between K and the appellant, the conviction recorded by the trial court as affirmed by the High Court cannot be sustained. (Para 10). Ashok Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2003) 2 SCC 143: 2003 SCC (Cri) 446: AIR 2003 SC 777.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2002]

[9004] — Ss. 376(2)(g)/34 & 366/34 — Kidnapping and gang rape — Conviction can be founded on sole testimony of victim of the rape — Corroboration of her evidence not essential when her evidence otherwise inspires confidence — Prosecutrix having ample opportunity to see and identify the accused in broad daylight — Being a simple village girl, she cannot be expected to falsely implicate innocent persons leaving her own assailants — However, injuries on her private parts, medical evidence of doctor and FIR providing corroboration — Consent of the prosecutrix cannot be inferred from absence of multiple injuries on her private parts as in case of gang rape at the threat of her life she cannot be expected to have given continuous resistance resulting in sustaining numerous injuries — In the circumstances casual and mechanical approach, without regard to human probabilities, and consequent acquittal by High Court resulted in grave miscarriage of justice — Hence conviction and sentence of 3 years' RI recorded by trial court restored. State of Orissa v. Damburu Naiko, (1992) 2 SCC 522: 1992 SCC (Cri) 400: AIR 1992 SC 1161: 1992 Cri LJ 1537: (1992) 73 CLT 715: (1992) 2 Crimes 77.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1992]

[9005] — Ss. 376/34 and 336/34 — Conviction of appellant-accused M confirmed, but reversed in case of appellant-accused A — M, A and R (absconding accused) allegedly raped PW 6 (prosecutrix) — High Court convicted M and A under aforementioned sections — Sustainability — Held, statements of PW 6 (prosecutrix), PW 5 (constable) and PW 9 (investigating officer) were categoric insofar as presence of M was concerned — In her statement recorded under S. 164 CrPC, prosecutrix clearly stated that she was kidnapped and then raped by M and R and that A joined them much later who merely held her hand while she was raped second time by M and R — Thus, prosecutrix had not attributed any rape to A — Likewise, she had stated that A was not one of those who kidnapped her — It is true that in her statement in court, she attributed rape to A as well, but in light of contradictions, some doubt created with regard to A's involvement — Again, PW 5 (constable) made a statement which was corroborated by PW 9 (investigating officer), that only M and R along with prosecutrix were brought to police station as A had run away while en route to police station — Resultantly, an inference can rightly be drawn that A was perhaps not in the car (in which prosecutrix was kidnapped) when M, R and prosecutrix were apprehended by PW 5 — Therefore, involvement of A, held, uncertain — Hence, conviction of M confirmed, however, reversed in case of A — CrPC, 1973, S. 164 (Paras 7 to 12). Abbas Ahmad Choudhary v. State of Assam, (2010) 12 SCC 115: 2010 Cri LJ 2060.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-2009]

[9006] — Ss. 376/120-B — Rape and conspiracy to commit rape — Charge against two accused of taking photographs of rape victims in compromising position with a view to blackmail them — No evidence to suggest that they had ever visited the place (farmhouse) where the victims were raped — No evidence to establish that the photographs were printed and developed in accused's photo labs — No obscene photograph recovered by investigating officer at the instance of these accused — Solitary incident of developing and printing of nude photographs of a woman (who was not one of the victims) by one of the accused to whom the films had been given by the woman for that purpose, in absence of any suggestion that with the help of those photographs accused attempted to blackmail the woman, did not prove anything against the accused — Searches carried on by police officers at their photo labs did not reveal anything — Held, there was nothing to suggest that they had conspired with the co-accused to sexually exploit the girls after photographing them in a compromising position and to facilitate their continued exploitation — Hence such accused were rightly acquitted by High Court (Paras 34 to 38). Moijullah v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 2 SCC 90: 2004 SCC (Cri) 512.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-2003]

4. Gang rape/Rape by multiple accused/Conspiracy (contd.)

[9007] — Ss. 376/120-B — Rape and conspiracy to commit rape — Charge against two accused (respondents) of having raped one P — Acquittal by High Court — Propriety — Trial court placing reliance on some obscene photographs of P and the two accused convicting them — But P herself denying to have been raped by those accused and also denying the photographs — Victims of rape committed by some other persons never mentioned names of these two accused — Evidence on record not showing that these accused were ever seen in the company of those persons at the place (a farmhouse) where rape had been committed — In absence of any other evidence against these accused, held, they were rightly acquitted by High Court (Para 23). Moijullah v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 2 SCC 90: 2004 SCC (Cri) 512.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-2003]

5. Rape of pregnant woman

[9008] — S. 376(2)(e) — Rape of a pregnant woman — "knowing her to be pregnant" — Meaning and scope — Held, for attracting the stringent punishment, prosecution besides establishing that the victim was pregnant must further establish that the accused knew the victim to be pregnant — In the instant case no such evidence was led — However, trial court concluding that there was "full possibility" of the accused knowing it — Held, there is a gulf of difference between possibility and certainty — Mere possibility of knowledge is not sufficient — When a case relates to one where because of the serious nature of the offence, as statutorily prescribed, more stringent sentence is provided, it must be established and not a possibility is to be inferred — Positive evidence is to be adduced about the accused "knowing her to be pregnant" — In the absence of any material brought on record to show that the accused knew the victim to be pregnant S. 376(2)(e) cannot be pressed into service — Accused convicted under S. 376(1) and sentenced to 7 years' imprisonment (Para 17). Om Prakash v. State of U.P., (2006) 9 SCC 787: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 401: AIR 2006 SC 2214: 2006 Cri LJ 2913: (2006) 4 All LJ 575.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-2006]

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape

See also 'C.20.(a) Age of prosecutrix or accused', and

'C.24.(d) Death Sentence', below

See also Ss. 299-304 — CULPABLE HOMICIDE AND MURDER, 'D.35(f)(ii)20.2. Death Sentence — Rape and murder of minor', in Vol. 2

[9009] — S. 375 — Medical evidence — Rape — 10 or 12 years' old virgin girl with hymen intact having been subjected to rape — Injuries are likely to be on the male organ of the culprit — Absence of any such injuries on the male organs of accused — Circumstance points to their innocence

If a girl of 10 or 12 years who is a virgin and whose hymen is intact is subjected to rape by a fully developed man, there are likely to be injuries on the male organ of the man. No injury was, however, detected by the doctor on the male organs of any of the two accused. The absence of such injuries on the male organs of the accused would thus point to their innocence. Rahim Beg v. State of U.P., (1972) 3 SCC 759: 1972 SCC (Cri) 827: AIR 1973 SC 343: 1972 Cri LJ 1260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Shelat and H.R. Khanna, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1972]

[9010] — Ss. 375 and 300 — Rape and murder of a young girl aged 14 years — Testimony of eyewitnesses suffering from no infirmity — Conviction upheld — Death sentence not justified. Kumudi Lal v. State of U.P., (1999) 4 SCC 108: 1999 SCC (Cri) 491: AIR 1999 SC 1699: 1999 All LJ 1262.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1999]

[9011] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Death sentence — Mitigating circumstances — Rape of a child aged 4½ years and causing her death by inflicting cut injuries on her neck — Body put in a gunny bag with hands and legs tied and left in a pit near a stream — Accused-appellant then aged 24 years and alleged to be in drunken state — Even though he had been in custody no report regarding him made by probationary officer or jail authorities — Appellant having no previous criminal record — Held, it cannot be said that he would be a menace to the society in future — In the circumstances, death sentence commuted to sentence of life imprisonment (Paras 2 to 5). Rahul v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 10 SCC 322: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1516.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

[9012] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Examination of accused — External marks on the body of accused — Age of victim and delay as factors — Held, such marks need not be present when the victim was a girl of age of 5 years 6 months — Besides, nearly two days had already passed when medico-legal examination was conducted on the accused in the present case

Examination of the accused revealed the following results:

"The general behaviour of the patient was normal. The mental condition was normal. Bath not taken for the last five days. Urine passed many times. Passing motion normally. No stains were found on the body of the patient, clothing and undergarments. No injury marks were present on genitals. No venereal disease was found. On examination of genitals, pubic hairs were present. Penis normal, prepuce retracted, frenum normal. Testicles were normal. There were following injuries present on his person: Multiple contusions, some of them were pattered on back, buttocks, posteromedial aspect of thigh. Reddish in colour."

The examining doctor also opined that there was nothing to suggest that the accused was not fit to perform sexual intercourse.

Held :

It is true that marks of external injury have not been found on the person of the accused but that by itself does not negate the prosecution case. Modi has opined that even in the case of a child victim being ravished by a grown-up person, it is not necessary that there should always be marks of injuries on the penis in such case. Further, it is to be noted that about two days had elapsed between the time of the incident and medical examination of the accused. Minor injuries, even if caused, might have healed up in the meantime. (Para 15). State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980: AIR 2001 SC 2075.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, 22nd Edn., pp. 502, 509, relied on

Gian Chand v. State of H.P., (1996) 2 Crimes 213 (HP), reversed

[9013] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Examination of victim — External marks on victim's body — Age of victim — Held, such external marks need not be present on the body of a child who is incapable of offering any resistance

Absence of external marks of violence on the body of the victim does not necessarily mean that rape did not take place. In case of children who are incapable of offering any resistance external marks of violence may not be found. (Para 15). State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980: AIR 2001 SC 2075.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, 22nd Edn., pp. 502, 509, relied on

Gian Chand v. State of H.P., (1996) 2 Crimes 213 (HP), reversed

[9014] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Corroboration of evidence of prosecutrix — Whether mandatory — Rape of minor aged 12 years — Taking judicial note of (1) social repercussions, (2) backward looking Indian society (3) dangers of being ostracised and survival difficulties, and (4) the resultant psychology of an Indian girl or woman (especially an unmarried girl) to admit rape without rape actually having been committed, held, evidence of prosecutrix stands on equal footing with that of injured witness and if her evidence inspires confidence, corroboration is not necessary

In a case of rape, the testimony of a prosecutrix stands on a par with that of an injured witness. It is really not necessary to insist for corroboration if the evidence of the prosecutrix inspires confidence and appears to be credible. Corroboration is not the sine qua non for conviction in a rape case. No doubt, it is true that the doctor who initially conducted the medical examination of the prosecutrix, did not appear on behalf of the prosecution to depose. But, that alone is not sufficient to discard the prosecution story. (Paras 18 and 16)

In Indian society any girl or woman would not make such allegations against a person as she is fully aware of the repercussions flowing therefrom. If she is found to be false, she would be looked at by the society with contempt throughout her life. For an unmarried girl, it will be difficult to find a suitable groom. Therefore, unless an offence has really been committed, a girl or a woman would be extremely reluctant even to admit that any such incident had taken place which is likely to reflect on her chastity. She would also be conscious of the danger of being ostracised by the society. It would indeed be difficult for her to survive in Indian society which is, of course, not as forward-looking as the western countries are. (Para 17)

Looking from any angle, the appeal has no merit nor substance. It is proved beyond any shadow of doubt that the appellant had committed offence of rape on the minor girl and had completely ravished her. Even without the examination of the doctor, the evidence of the prosecutrix stands fully corroborated by the evidence of PW 3 Sub-Inspector of the police station who had virtually caught the appellant red-handed during commission of rape. Thus, even if the doctor had not been examined it would not throw or completely discard the prosecution story. The evidence of the prosecution witnesses is fully trustworthy and there is no reason to doubt genuineness thereof. (Paras 25 and 18)

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

In the present case, there is consistency in the evidence of the prosecutrix, which stands corroborated by the evidence of PW 3. He had no axe to grind against the appellant. In this case, the version of the prosecutrix right from lodging of the FIR, till her examination by the doctor and till she deposed in court, had been absolutely consistent. Not only this, to corroborate further, the evidence of PW 3 is also on record who had caught the appellant red-handed which fully establishes that it was the appellant who had committed offence of rape. (Para 24)

PW 1 prosecutrix had initially not supported the prosecution case and was declared hostile. But later when confronted with her statement recorded under Section 161 CrPC, she categorically deposed that the appellant removed her underwear, laid on her, put his male organ into her private part and was moving up and down. According to her, he committed bad act with her. PW 1 also proved her FIR recorded on 14-10-1988. When PW 1 was sent for medical examination, she again narrated rape on her by the appellant before the medical officer which finds place in her medical report. (Paras 9 and 12)

Whatever little lacunae was there in the prosecution story, have been cured in his cross-examination of PW 3 (IO). PW 3 (IO) corroborating the statement of PW 1 deposed that the accused and the prosecutrix were found to be in a compromising position and were naked below the waist, that the appellant was lying on the prosecutrix and was indulging in sexual intercourse and he had seen the incident in the light of the vehicle in which he was travelling and that thereafter they put on their clothes, were brought to police station and FIR was lodged. According to PW 3, the autorickshaw of the accused in which he had kidnapped PW 1 was seized on the same day and he was apprehended on the next day. (Paras 10 to 12)

Even the slightest penetration is sufficient to make out an offence of rape and depth of penetration is immaterial. It was contended on behalf of the appellant that since hymen of the prosecutrix was found to be intact, it cannot be said that an offence of rape was committed on her by the appellant. This contention cannot be accepted as the offence of rape has been defined in Section 375 IPC. The medical report recorded that the hymen of the prosecutrix was intact, that her private part admitted only the tip of little finger with difficulty and that no intercourse was done with her. (Paras 19 to 22 and 8). Wahid Khan v. State of M.P., (2010) 2 SCC 9.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2009]

Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 Cri LJ 547, relied on

Radhu v. State of M.P., (2007) 12 SCC 57: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 207, distinguished

Modi: Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, 22nd Edn., p. 495; Parikh: Textbook of Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, relied on [9015] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Independent witness — Examination of — Necessity — Submission that apart from PWs 4 and 5 (elder sister and mother of prosecutrix) no other independent witness was examined to support allegations of rape — Held, when a minor girl alleges rape and her testimony is not shaken in cross-examination, there is no reason to disbelieve her as no girl would ever lie on such a vital issue — Besides, her testimony was corroborated by PWs 4 and 5 to whom she had reported the incident immediately after occurrence — Furthermore, on facts held, there was an independent witness PW 6, who though turned hostile at one stage of her examination had admitted that PW 5 had told her that accused had raped her daughter — She also stated that on making enquiries prosecutrix had narrated entire incident to her (Paras 15 and 16). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2009) 16 SCC 697: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 387.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

[9016] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Minor — Punishment — Statutory punishment — Sentence of 10 years' RI and fine of Rs 10,000 awarded by High Court to appellant-accused for raping a girl aged 6 years — Prayer for reduction of sentence by appellant on ground of severity — Held, S. 376(2)(f) IPC specifically provides that where the victim is less than 12 years of age the sentence awarded shall not be less than 10 years but it may be for life and the accused shall also be liable to fine — Though proviso allows discretion to court for adequate and special reasons to be mentioned in the judgment, to impose a lesser sentence but in the instant case the victim was aged about 6 years and hence the case was fully covered by S. 376(2)(f) — No adequate and special reasons discernible for imposing lesser sentence — However, fine of Rs 10,000 found to be excessive and reduced to Rs 1000 (Paras 17 and 18). Rajendra Datta Zarekar v. State of Goa, (2007) 14 SCC 560: AIR 2008 SC 572: 2008 Cri LJ 710.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2007]

State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699, distinguished [9017] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape of a minor — Appreciation of evidence — Preparation for commission of an offence and an attempt to commit the same — Distinction between — Appellant removing minor's chaddi and also pulling down his trousers and sitting upon her — He fleeing away on her grandfather's arrival — Held, in such circumstances it cannot be said that the appellant had merely made preparation for committing the offence, but had made an attempt to criminally assault her — His conduct was indicative of his determination to gratify his passion (Paras 12 to 15). Guddu v. State of M.P., (2007) 14 SCC 654: (2006) 42 AIC 79 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2006]

Koppula Venkat Rao v. State of A.P., (2004) 3 SCC 602: 2004 SCC (Cri) 840, relied on [9018] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape of a minor — Appreciation of medical evidence — No semen detected on person or clothes of prosecutrix, but hymen found absent — Injuries detected on her private parts despite passage of a long time — Inference of partial/incomplete penetration — Offence of rape if made out — Effect of discrepancies in evidence of prosecutrix — Appellant alleged to have gagged mouth of prosecutrix aged about 11 years, and sexually assaulted her — On hearing her aunt's (PW 5) voice, accused fleeing away — No semen detected on any of the exhibits sent to chemical examiner — However, hymen found absent — Prosecutrix medically examined after a long time — Despite long passage of time (about 80 hours) injuries found on her private parts — Though the doctor failing to state specifically anything as regards actual intercourse, she testifying that there had been attempt to commit rape — PW 5 had detected the accused committing the offence, and he had fled away on hearing her voice — Thus, the act was incomplete — Evidence of PW 5 was found reliable by courts below — Hence, held, conclusion of High Court that absence of hymen clearly indicated that there was penetration, or that penetration may have been partial with no emission of semen, calls for no interference — Medical evidence in such cases needs to be appreciated in context of ocular evidence and other circumstances surrounding thereto — Discrepancies in evidence of prosecutrix also inconsequential, because she was a minor — Besides, there was time gap between occurrence and examination of witnesses — Hence, lapse of some memory on part of child witness possible — Delay in lodging FIR was also a natural phenomenon in rape cases — Conviction of appellant under S. 376, sustainable — CrPC, 1973, S. 154 (Paras 10, 14, 17 to 21). Satyapal v. State of Haryana, (2009) 6 SCC 635: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 108: AIR 2009 SC 2190: (2009) 77 AIC 66 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-2009]

Satyapal v. State of Haryana, 2007 Cri LJ 2095 (P&H), affirmed

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, 23rd Edn., at pp. 897 and 928, relied on [9019] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape of a minor — Child witness — Testimony — Reliability — Submission that both the prosecutrix and her elder sister were child witnesses and they therefore should not be believed, and that they were tutored by their parents and police — Held, evidence of a child cannot be rejected outrightly and same must be evaluated with great circumspection — In instant case, depositions of PWs 3 and 4 as regards alleged occurrence was found firm and convincing and same could not be said to be influenced by any tutoring — There was no reason as to why a child on her age would falsely implicate the accused for the offence which was indisputably committed on her (Paras 19, 20 and 22 to 24). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2009) 16 SCC 697.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

[9020] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape of minor — Injuries on prosecutrix — No definite medical opinion as to recent intercourse — Hymen of the prosecutrix remaining intact but there was swelling on her private part which had become red — Doctor unable to give definite opinion as regards whether she was subjected to intercourse in the immediate past — Held, even slight penetration was sufficient to constitute offence of rape and the redness of the hymen would not have been possible but for penetration to some extent (Paras 10, 11 and 12). Guddu v. State of M.P., (2007) 14 SCC 654: (2006) 42 AIC 79 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2006]

Koppula Venkat Rao v. State of A.P., (2004) 3 SCC 602: 2004 SCC (Cri) 840; Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266, relied on

[9021] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape of minor — Proof and corroboration of — Medical evidence — Consideration of — Rape of a 5 year old girl by the accused aged 22 years — High Court acquitting the accused disbelieving her testimony as well as that of other PWs who had entered the room on hearing her cry — High Court holding that the statement of the prosecutrix was not corroborated by the evidence of the doctor who examined her as there were no external injuries, there were no bloodstains on her dress, there was no injury on her female organ, hymen was ruptured and there was no fresh bleeding from the private parts — Doctor admitting that she was not in a position to state as to how the hymen of the girl was torn but stating that the male organ would not have penetrated in a young girl's vagina and there was no sign of rape — Held, the finding of the High Court is absolutely perverse and inconsistent with the evidence on record: (i) No opinion could be given by the doctor that there was no sign of rape; (ii) Regarding non-presence of bloodstains on her vaginal part and on her wearing apparel it was the categorical testimony of PWs 1, 8 and 9 that the prosecutrix was given a bath, her vagina and wearing apparel were washed before taking her to the doctor; and (iii) The doctor having recorded that hymen of the vagina was torn was not justified in giving an opinion that the male organ would not have penetrated into the young girl's vagina — Besides, the High Court completely overlooked the testimony of the doctor who examined the accused and found a cut wound at the bottom portion of his penis — He had further opined that such cut wound was possible only when the penis is forced into the vagina — It is unfortunate that this stark testimony against the accused for which he had no explanation, escaped the notice of the High Court — Evidence of the prosecutrix remained unimpeached and was well corroborated by evidence of other PWs — There was not an iota of evidence or even a suggestion that the accused had been falsely implicated because of animosity — Moreover, ocular evidence of PWs is well corroborated by the medical evidence — High Court committed grave miscarriage of justice in recording acquittal by reversing the conviction recorded by the trial court — Impugned order set aside and conviction recorded by the trial court restored (Paras 11, 12, 13, 21 and 22). State of T.N. v. Ravi, (2006) 10 SCC 534: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 133: AIR 2006 SC 2568: 2006 Cri LJ 3305.

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-7-2006]

Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Ranjit Hazarika v. State of Assam, (1998) 8 SCC 635: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1725; Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728, relied on

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology (21st Edn.), p. 369 and Parikh's Textbook of Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, relied on [9022] — Ss. 375 & 376(2)(f) or S. 302 or S. 304 Pt. II — Death occurring due to brutal manner of rape (of 7/8-year-old child) — Death sentence if warranted — Brutal rape of a young child aged 7/8 years by the appellant aged 31 years leading to her death due to excessive bleeding — Culpability of the appellant in the heinous crime for all practical purposes established — Death sentence imposed by the trial court, confirmed by the High Court on reference — Death of the victim occurring because of excessive bleeding and not because of any specific overt act on the part of the appellant — Thus, intention of the appellant to kill the deceased not proved — Hence held, imposition of death sentence was not proper — Manner in which the deceased was raped may be brutal but it could have been a momentary lapse on the part of the appellant, seeing a lonely girl at a secluded place — No premeditation for commission of the offence proved — Offence, though, may look heinous, but under no circumstances, can it be said to be the rarest of rare cases — However, considering the brutality with which the offence was committed maximum sentence of RI for life imposed (Paras 21, 22 and 10). Amrit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 12 SCC 79: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 397: AIR 2007 SC 132: 2007 Cri LJ 298.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-2006]

[9023] — S. 375 Thirdly & Sixthly — Rape — Consent — Consent for having sexual intercourse obtained by accused from the victim girls by deceitful means in some cases and under threat of dire consequences in some other cases and therefore, held, their acts fell under cl. thirdly, while some of the victims being aged below 16 years, their consent was immaterial in view of cl. Sixthly — Moreover, accused had dominion or control over the victims — Held, charge of rape against the accused made out

It is in the evidence of the prosecutrix that consent of many of the prosecutrix had been obtained by deceitful means that if they had sex with A-1 they would be cured of asthma or that if they had sex with A-1 it is service to God or some of the girls have been raped under threat of dire consequences. A-1 had dominion/control over the Ashram girls and most of them are orphans and no alternative place to go. Therefore the case clearly falls within the thirdly clause of Section 375 IPC. Furthermore, if the consent is obtained by deceitful means or under threat of death or hurt, it is no consent at all and it is without her consent. Therefore, the charge of rape levelled against A-1 falls within the definition of Section 375 IPC. This apart, under the sixthly clause the consent is immaterial when the prosecutrix is under 16 years of age. Some of the prosecutrix were below 16 years of age when they were raped by A-1. In view of the facts and circumstances of the case, A-1 was rightly charged and convicted under Section 376(2)(c) IPC. (Para 40). Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2005 SC 2132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2005]

[9024] — S. 375 Sixthly — Rape — Consent of girl under 16 years of age at the time of incident — Effect, if any — Held, in light of fact that prosecutrix was 13-15 years of age at the time of incident, consent, if any, which can be inferred from circumstances, would be meaningless (Para 8). Abbas Ahmad Choudhary v. State of Assam, (2010) 12 SCC 115: 2010 Cri LJ 2060.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-2009]

[9025] — S. 375 Sixthly — Sexual intercourse with minor girl — Whether the girl was a consenting party or not, she being a minor, the act of intercourse amounted to rape within the meaning of S. 375 Sixthly. Yeshwant Rao v. State of M.P., 1993 Supp (1) SCC 520: 1993 SCC (Cri) 283: AIR 1992 SC 1683.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1992]

[9026] — S. 375 Expln. — Rape — Penetration — How much necessary to constitute rape — Rape of minor girl (8 years) — Held, even slightest penetration of penis into vagina without rupturing the hymen would constitute rape — Medical officer on examination of the victim after 5 days finding an abrasion on the medial side of labia majora and redness around labia minora with white discharge but hymen intact admitting tip of a little finger — In view of absence of signs of full penetration, medical officer opining that there was an attempt to rape — Held, on the basis of the medical findings alone, it can be safely concluded that there was partial penetration within the labia majora or vulva or pudenda which in the legal sense is sufficient to constitute rape — Besides, extra-judicial confessions of the accused, corroborated by the reliable testimony of the prosecutrix herself as well as of other PWs, also showing commission of rape by the accused — Hence the opinion of attempt to rape given by an inexperienced medical officer (then aged 28 years) not acceptable — Conclusion of High Court that the offence made out was only under S. 354 not reasonable and justifiable having regard to the totality of the evidence — Accused-respondent must be must be convicted under S. 376. Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1992]

Natha v. Emperor, AIR 1923 Lah 536: (1925) 26 Cri LJ 1185: 88 IC 705; Abdul Majid v. Emperor, AIR 1927 Lah 735(2): 28 Cri LJ 241: 100 IC 113; Jantan v. Emperor, AIR 1934 Lah 797: (1934) 36 Punj LR 35; Ghanshyam Misra v. State, AIR 1957 Ori 78: 1957 Cri LJ 469; Das Bernard v. State, 1974 Cri LJ 1098; Anthony, In re, AIR 1960 Mad 308: 1960 Cri LJ 927, approved

[9027] — S. 376 — Child rape — Appreciation of evidence — Delay of 26 hours in lodging FIR fully explained by prosecution — When testimony of the prosecutrix and her relatives and the doctor, who had examined her, found to be trustworthy, convincing and reliable, non-examination of other witnesses cannot be a ground to reject the prosecution case — It cannot be expected from the mother of the victim to have shouted on seeing the accused committing the rape so as to collect others, nor can it be expected that after the occurrence in the village others would have visited her house who would stand as prosecution witnesses — Courts should adopt a sensitive approach in dealing with cases of child rape — On facts held, trial court by a well-considered and well-analysed judgment was justified in convicting the respondent under S. 376 and High Court erred in reversing the same and acquitting the respondent on benefit of doubt

According to the testimony of PW 2, her daughter, then aged 8 years, had gone to the house of one S to take therefrom buttermilk. When her daughter did not return for a long time, she went to that house and when she pressed open the door which was closed, she found the respondent, son of S then aged 18 years, committing rape on her daughter, who was totally unconscious. On seeing her the respondent, who was then alone in the house, ran away. She lifted her daughter and brought her back home. At that time her husband and brother-in-law had gone to another village. Next day a report was lodged with the police. Besides the mother (PW 2), the father of the prosecutrix (PW 1) and wife of the brother of PW 1 also deposed supporting the version of PW 2. Prosecutrix, PW 5, being a child witness, the Additional District and Sessions Judge before administering her oath asked general questions so as to satisfy that she was competent to answer the questions and take oath. Her statement in court was recorded about four years after the date of the incident. Her deposition also was that the respondent had committed rape on her under the same circumstances as narrated by PW 2. The testimony of the doctor, PW 11, who had examined the prosecutrix was that externally there was no injury on her body but on the inner parts of both thighs and at the outer part of the left foot there were signs of blood. For internal examination she was referred to Family Incharge Hospital. The injury report was in his handwriting wherein the reports of a lady doctor and another doctor had been incorporated. PW 11 stated that: "In my opinion, the intercourse was done with the girl i.e. the possibility of doing the intercourse cannot be ruled out." The tip of the finger in the whole of her uterus was passing easily. PW 11 deposed that: "According to the opinion of the lady doctor, the opinion of the pathologist and my opinion of the examination, something was penetrated in her vagina." The only cross-examination of the witness was that the main examination report by the lady and the other doctors was not before him, that the seminal stains were not present on the clothes and that after the sexual contact the vagina remained intact. The Additional District and Sessions Judge found the respondent guilty for offence under Section 376 of the Indian Penal Code and imposed rigorous imprisonment for seven years and fine of Rs 1000 and in default of payment of fine to further undergo six months' rigorous imprisonment. The High Court gave benefit of doubt to the respondent and acquitted him. The main reasons which prevailed with the High Court in reversing the conviction were two. First, the non-examination of other independent witnesses and second, the rejection of medical evidence i.e. testimony of the doctor, PW 11. As regards non-examination of other witnesses, the High Court noticed that the incident had taken place in the environment of the village where there were other residential houses; the house of the prosecutrix from where the incident took place was 2-3 houses away and in the house of the accused his other brothers and sisters-in-law were also living. The High Court held that it was unnatural that PW 2 and PW 5 would not have shouted and others might not have gathered at the place of incidence and that, except the family members no other witness had come forward to support the case of the prosecution. The High Court also described as unnatural the statement of the mother that except her husband's brother's wife, PW 4, not a single person of the village had come to her house. As regards the second reason the High Court held that in absence of the evidence of the lady doctor, there was no support from any medical evidence. The prosecution case was also questioned on the ground of delay of nearly 26 hours in lodging the FIR. The offence was alleged to have taken place at about 9 a.m. The FIR was registered at about 11.30 a.m. on the next day. It was contended that this delay had assumed importance and was fatal particularly when the brother of the prosecutrix, was admittedly at the house. The delay, according to the defence counsel, resulted in embellishments.

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

Allowing the State's appeal,

Held :

As regards the contention regarding the delay in lodging the FIR, the real question is about the explanation for the delay. It is not at all unnatural for the family members to await the arrival of the elders in the family when an offence of this nature is committed before taking a decision to lodge a report with the police. The reputation and prestige of the family and the career and life of a young child is involved in such cases. Therefore, the presence of the brother of the prosecutrix at home is not of much consequence. It has been established that the father of the girl along with his brother came back to their house at 7 o'clock in the evening. The girl was unconscious during the day. PW 2 told her husband as to what had happened to their daughter. The police station was at a distance of 15 km. According to the testimony of PW 1 no mode of conveyance was available. The police was reported to the next day morning and FIR was recorded at 11.30 a.m. The delay in reporting the matter to the police has thus been fully explained. (Para 9)

The conviction for offence under Section 376 IPC can be based on the sole testimony of a rape victim. However, after carefully scanning and scrutinising the evidence of the parents of the prosecutrix, her brother, the prosecutrix herself and the doctor (PW 11), the same is found to be trustworthy, convincing and reliable. At the time of the incident the accused was alone at home. When such an act is done, the natural tendency is not to talk about it to others but, to an extent possible, hide it. There was nothing unnatural in other villagers not visiting the house of PWs 1 and 2. Being a child witness, the testimony of the prosecutrix and that of her mother had been examined by the trial court with utmost care and caution. The High Court has clearly committed a serious illegality in assuming that in the natural course of events if rape had been committed, the young girl child and her mother would have shouted so as to collect others and they would have visited her house. The prosecutrix was unconscious. There was no question of the prosecutrix shouting as assumed by the High Court. Too much was made by the High Court on account of non-examination of persons other than the family members. The aspect of non-examination was given undue importance without having regard to the contextual facts. Cases involving sexual molestation and assault require a different approach — a sensitive approach and not an approach which a court may adopt in dealing with a normal offence under penal laws. (Para 15)

The evidence of the doctor, PW 11 is clear and specific. He was the author of the report. Though ideally the lady doctor could have been examined or her absence explained but that does not destroy the prosecution case, which otherwise stands proved. The High Court was clearly in error in coming to the conclusion that in the absence of evidence of the lady doctor there was no support from any medical evidence. She had reported to PW 11, who categorically stated that in his opinion, on examination, something had been penetrated in the vagina of the prosecutrix and that intercourse was done with the girl i.e. the possibility of doing intercourse cannot be ruled out. For no valid reason the High Court discarded the evidence of the doctor. (Para 16)

The evidence of a child witness is required to be evaluated carefully as the child may be swayed by what others may tell him or her as the child is an easy prey to tutoring. Wisdom requires that the evidence of a child witness must find adequate corroboration before it is relied on. In this case the evidence of the child (PW 5) and the other evidence had been examined carefully and it had been found that the reasons given by the High Court for rejecting the said evidence were wholly unconvincing. It is unfortunate that what to talk of considering, the High Court has not even noticed the testimony of the prosecutrix in the judgment under appeal. (Para 17)

There is no force in the contention that if there was any forcible sexual intercourse, it would have resulted in some injuries upon the prosecutrix. Presence of injuries are not always a sine qua non to prove a charge of rape. It has to be kept in mind that the case under consideration is one of rape on a girl child aged eight years and not on a grown-up woman. (Para 18)

Child rape cases are cases of perverse lust for sex where even innocent children are not spared in pursuit of sexual pleasure. It is a crime against humanity. In such cases, responsibility on the shoulders of the courts is more onerous so as to provide proper legal protection to these children. Their physical and mental immobility call for such protection. Children are the natural resource of our country. They are the country's future. Hope of tomorrow rests on them. In our country, a girl child is in a very vulnerable position and one of the modes of her exploitation is rape besides other modes of sexual abuse. These factors point towards a different approach required to be adopted. It is necessary for the courts to have a sensitive approach when dealing with cases of child rape. The effect of such a crime on the mind of the child is likely to be lifelong. A special safeguard has been provided for children in the Constitution of India in Article 39.

The overturning of a well-considered and well-analysed judgment of the trial court on grounds like non-examination of other witnesses, when the case against the respondent otherwise stood established beyond any reasonable doubt, was not called for. The minor contradiction of recovery of one or two underwears was wholly insignificant. (Paras 19 and 1)

Lastly, it is not possible to accept the contention on behalf of the respondent that the incident took place about 13 years back and by now the accused has matured and would be around 31 years of age and having already undergone nearly three years of sentence, the same may be treated by the Supreme Court as sufficient punishment to him and, therefore, taking a sympathetic view, the sentence already undergone be imposed. The trial court imposed on the respondent a sentence of seven years' rigorous imprisonment besides fine. Having played with the life of a child, the respondent does not deserve any leniency and for him sympathy on the ground sought for will be wholly uncalled for. The respondent deserves to undergo the remaining part of the sentence awarded by the trial court. (Para 20). State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980; State of U.P. v. Ashok Dixit, (2000) 3 SCC 70: 2000 SCC (Cri) 579, relied on

Joseph v. State of Kerala, (2000) 5 SCC 197: 2000 SCC (Cri) 926, distinguished

[9028] — S. 376 — Child rape — Appreciation of evidence — Medical evidence — Doctor PW 11 after examining the prosecutrix externally referring her to Family Incharge Hospital where she was examined internally by a lady doctor — In the injury report, prepared in the handwriting of PW 11, reports of the lady doctor and the pathologist

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

incorporated and PW 11 opining that possibility of doing intercourse cannot be ruled out — Held, though ideally the lady doctor could have been examined or her absence explained but that would not destroy the prosecution case, which otherwise stood proved

The evidence of the doctor, PW 11 is clear and specific. He was the author of the report. Though ideally the lady doctor could have been examined or her absence explained but that does not destroy the prosecution case, which otherwise stands proved. The High Court was clearly in error in coming to the conclusion that in the absence of evidence of the lady doctor there was no support from any medical evidence. She had reported to PW 11, who categorically stated that in his opinion, on examination, something had been penetrated in the vagina of the prosecutrix and that intercourse was done with the girl i.e. the possibility of doing intercourse cannot be ruled out. For no valid reason the High Court discarded the evidence of the doctor. (Para 16). State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

[9029] — S. 376 — Child rape — Rape of 10 year-old-girl — Sentence — Occurrence happened in 1976 when there was no legislative compulsion on court to impose any minimum punishment for rape — Trial court sentencing the respondent to 6 years' RI and fine of Rs 500 — High Court acquitting the respondent — But Supreme Court setting aside the High Court's order of acquittal and restoring conviction passed by trial court — A quarter of a century had elapsed since the occurrence and respondent was in jail for a long period — In the circumstances held, respondent sentenced to 2 years' RI — On completion of the sentence the jail authorities shall release him from jail as he continues to be in jail. State of U.P. v. Munnoo Lal, (2001) 10 SCC 79.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2001]

[9030] — S. 376 — Child rape — Rape of a 10-year-old girl at night — Accused-respondent's case was that he was misidentified for the rapist — Respondent was known to the victim as he was residing in the vicinity of victim's house — Victim had identified the respondent to PW 3, a neighbour who had rushed to the scene hearing a commotion as well as to her mother when she returned home next day — PW 3 deposed that he had seen the respondent running away from the victim's house — Held, merely because the victim had said in cross-examination that she could recognise the voice of respondent when he had uttered some words to her does not mean that she had identified the accused only by his voice at night — Further, merely because PW 3 had not caught hold of the respondent while respondent was running away, his testimony cannot be disbelieved — Furthermore, investigating officer's failure to subject the respondent to medical examination would not be fatal to the prosecution case — Hence trial court was justified in convicting the respondent under S. 376

In the facts and circumstances of the case there is no scope for doubt that the victim had identified the respondent as the rapist. The mere fact that she had said in cross-examination that the rapist had uttered some words to her and she could realise that it was the voice of the rapist himself, is not enough for the Court to ignore the other broad aspects regarding the evidence of identity of the rapist. Moreover, PW 3 had said in court that when he rushed to the house after hearing the commotion he saw the respondent running away from the house. There can be no possibility of doubt that PW 3 would have correctly identified the person who ran away. Even the defence did not dispute the competence of PW 3 to identify the accused if the version of PW 3 can be accepted as correct. (Paras 5 and 6)

The High Court did not place any reliance on the testimony of PW 3 on the fragile reasoning that PW 3 did not venture to catch the rapist. If PW 3 would have caught hold of the rapist, it was well and good. But if he had not done so, that cannot be regarded as a reason to doubt the truth of the testimony of PW 3. At the time when PW 3 saw the accused running away he had no reason to think that the said person had ravished the little girl inside the house and was in the process of escaping. Perhaps, PW 3 did not think why the respondent was running at that stage. Even that apart, PW 3 had to take a decision on the spur of the moment as to the wisdom of catching hold of such a person. If he had failed to take a right decision in a split second it is not a good ground for a court of law to jettison the testimony of such a witness. (Para 7)

Though the investigating officer did not subject the respondent to medical examination, but the worst against the prosecution and the best for the respondent in such a situation is that the respondent did not have any injury on his person. However, the counsel for the respondent was not able to satisfy the court that a person of the respondent's age and health would necessarily have sustained some injury if he had committed rape on a girl like PW 1. Therefore, it is not necessary to go into the question of absence of injury on the person of the respondent. (Para 10)

Thus the High Court has seriously erred in interfering with a well-merited conviction passed by the trial court on the respondent. (Para 11). State of U.P. v. Munnoo Lal, (2001) 10 SCC 79.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2001]

[9031] — S. 376 — Child rape — Rape on child of 8 years — Proof of — Injuries on the prosecutrix not always essential to prove the charge of rape

There is no force in the contention that if there was any forcible sexual intercourse, it would have resulted in some injuries upon the prosecutrix. Presence of injuries are not always a sine qua non to prove a charge of rape. It has to be kept in mind that the case under consideration is one of rape on a girl child aged eight years and not on a grown-up woman. (Para 18). State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

Joseph v. State of Kerala, (2000) 5 SCC 197: 2000 SCC (Cri) 926, distinguished

[9032] — S. 376 — Child rape — Sensitive approach of court needed — Onerous responsibility lies on court to provide proper legal protection to the victims — Constitution of India, Art. 39

Cases involving sexual molestation and assault require a different approach — a sensitive approach and not an approach which a court may adopt in dealing with a normal offence under penal laws. (Para 15)

Child rape cases are cases of perverse lust for sex where even innocent children are not spared in pursuit of sexual pleasure. It is a crime against humanity. In such cases, responsibility on the shoulders of the courts is more onerous so as to provide proper legal protection to these children. Their physical and mental immobility call for such protection. Children are the natural resource of our country. They are the country's future. Hope of tomorrow rests on them. In our country, a girl child is in a very vulnerable position and one of the modes of her exploitation is rape besides other modes of sexual abuse. These factors point towards a different approach required to be adopted. It is necessary for the courts to have a sensitive approach when dealing with cases of child rape. The effect of such a crime on the mind of the child is likely to be lifelong. A special safeguard has been provided for children in the Constitution of India in Article 39. State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

[9033] — S. 376 — Child rape — Sentence — Mitigating factors if applicable — Rape on child aged 8 years by accused-respondent then aged 18 years — Sentence of 7 years' RI imposed by trial court — High Court erroneously acquitting the accused — 13 years elapsed and accused already undergone 3 years' sentence — On the basis of these facts, plea taken on behalf of the accused that the Court should take a sympathetic view — Held, plea cannot be accepted — Accused should undergo remaining part of the sentence

It is not possible to accept the contention on behalf of the respondent that the incident took place about 13 years back and by now the accused has matured and would be around 31 years of age and having already undergone nearly three years of sentence, the same may be treated by the Supreme Court as sufficient punishment to him and, therefore, taking a sympathetic view, the sentence already undergone be imposed. The trial court imposed on the respondent a sentence of seven years' rigorous imprisonment besides fine. Having played with the life of a child, the respondent does not deserve any leniency and for him sympathy on the ground sought for will be wholly uncalled for. The respondent deserves to undergo the remaining part of the sentence awarded by the trial court. (Para 20). State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

[9034] — S. 376 — Prosecutrix 8 years old, held, competent to give evidence — Rule of corroboration explained — Statement made to mother admissible for corroboration

The tender years of the child, coupled with other circumstances appearing in the case, such for example, as its demeanour, unlikelihood of tutoring and so forth, may render corroboration unnecessary but that is a question of fact in every case. The only rule of law is that this rule of prudence must be present to the mind of the Judge or the jury as the case may be and be understood and appreciated by him or them. There is no rule of practice that there must, in every case, be corroboration before a conviction can be allowed to stand. Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 SCR 377: 1952 Cri LJ 547, 549, 55.

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Fazl Ali and Vivian Bose, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1951]

[9035] — S. 376 — Rape — Evidence — Medical evidence inconsistent with evidence of prosecutrix — Effect — Prosecutrix aged 8 years at the time of the alleged occurrence — According to evidence of the doctor who examined the prosecutrix immediately after the occurrence, there was no sign of rape — Thus evidence of prosecutrix belied by medical evidence — Held, accused-appellant entitled to acquittal. Yerumalla Latchaiah v. State of A.P., (2006) 9 SCC 713: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 373.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.N. Agrawal, A.K. Mathur and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2006]

[9036] — S. 376 — Rape — Medical evidence — Rape on minor girl aged 14 years — Statement of the doctor that hymen of the prosecutrix was ruptured and admitted two fingers — Held, this cannot be viewed as if the prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse

According to the doctor hymen of the prosecutrix was ruptured, admitted two fingers, bled on touch, was reddish in colour, and was painful and tender. On this basis, the doctor opined that these were signs of rape. The ability of admission of two fingers and the hymen being ruptured was viewed by the High Court as if the prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse. When the doctor had opined that the hymen was ruptured, she did not qualify her statement that it stood ruptured as of old or carried an old tear. With clear objective in view, the doctor must be presumed to have noticed the hymen as freshly ruptured, as otherwise, the doctor would not have described it in that fashion to be bleeding, tender and painful. The factum of admission of two fingers could not be held adverse to the prosecutrix for it would depend upon the size of the fingers inserted. When medical experts try to opine about the medical condition of a woman used to sexual intercourse, it is described as admission of two fingers easily, but here the doctor qualified her statement by saying that it was painful and bleeding on touch. These conditions obviously related to the hymen. The doctor was thus clear in her opinion that rape had been committed on the prosecutrix. Narayanamma v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 5 SCC 728: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1573.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1994]

[9037] — S. 376 — Rape — Sentence — Rape of a young girl of 13 years by holding out threats — Marriage of the accused and long lapse of time — Held, accused deserves no leniency in the matter of sentence. State of Haryana v. Jang Bahadur, 1998 SCC (Cri) 693.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-1997]

[9038] — S. 376 — Rape of a minor girl — Two pin-head abrasions found on the genitals of accused — Doctor opining that though as a result of forcible sexual intercourse such abrasion could be possible but there was no sign of the accused having sexual intercourse within one hour of his medical examination — That the accused aged 57 years was not used to sexual intercourse or that he had not an intercourse on the day of occurrence with someone else not established — Presence of blood in nail clippings and on the underpants explained by accused — Held, circumstance of abrasions on the genital, though raises suspicion but not conclusive of guilt of the accused when main circumstances of last seen together and recovery of the dead body at the instance of the accused could not be established. Jaharlal Das v. State of Orissa, (1991) 3 SCC 27: 1991 SCC (Cri) 527: AIR 1991 SC 1388: (1991) 2 Crimes 268: (1991) 72 CLT 298.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-1991]

[9039] — S. 376 — Rape of a minor student by the teacher, twice — Prosecutrix divulging about it only when her mother came to know that she was pregnant i.e. after more than 3 months of occurrence — Held, her not informing anyone about the incident in the circumstances cannot detract from her reliability — Moreover, defence put forth by the appellant was too vague to be acceptable — Conviction upheld (Paras 3, 6 and 7). Dildar Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 10 SCC 531: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2006 SC 3084: 2006 Cri LJ 3914.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

[9040] — S. 376 — Rape of fourteen-year-old, taking advantage of her being alone at home — High Court reducing sentence of 10 years' RI imposed by trial court to period already undergone, about 5 years and 4 months, on grounds that accused was an illiterate labourer and was only twenty at the time of commission of the rape — Held, said grounds are wholly irrelevant for reducing the sentence, having regard to nature of offence and manner of its commission — Sessions Judge rightly came to the conclusion that accused deserved no leniency — Approach of High Court lacked sensitivity towards the minor victim — Sentence restored to 10 years' RI (Paras 6 and 7). State of M.P. v. Bane Singh, (2005) 12 SCC 367.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-2-2005]

State of M.P. v. Balu, (2005) 1 SCC 108: 2005 SCC (Cri) 270, followed and clarified

[Ed.: See also Urmila (Minor) v. Raju, (2005) 12 SCC 366 and the holding in (2005) 8 SCC 1 and 8]

[9041] — S. 376 — Rape of minor — Conviction justified — Appellant-accused aged about 20 years alleged to have pulled the victim aged about 6 years into his room, bolted it from inside, and after removing his and her clothes raped her — Her cries attracting PW 1 (her mother) who knocked on the door, which was opened by accused after some time — In spite of fairly lengthy cross-examination nothing could come out in statements of PW 1 and the victim which would throw even a slightest doubt on the prosecution version of the incident — No enmity of any kind existing between PW 1 and accused which would impel her to falsely implicate the accused — Suggestion regarding taking of some money by PW 1 from accused and further that she wanted to have some kind of relationship with him was made but the same had not at all been made probable, much established by any evidence — Medical report of victim showing evidence of recent penetration, while accused was a young man found capable of sexual intercourse — Held, rape leaves a permanent scar and has a serious psychological impact on the victim and also her family members and, therefore, no one would normally concoct a story of rape just to falsely implicate a person — In the present case there was not even an iota of evidence to show that PW 1 or her husband had any reason whatsoever to falsely implicate the accused — Evidence led by prosecution clearly establishing guilt of accused beyond reasonable doubt (Paras 2 and 14). Rajendra Datta Zarekar v. State of Goa, (2007) 14 SCC 560: AIR 2008 SC 572: 2008 Cri LJ 710.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2007]

Santosh Kumar v. State of M.P., (2006) 10 SCC 595: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 28, considered and relied on

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, 21st Edn., at p. 369; Parikh's Textbook of Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, cited

[9042] — S. 376 — Rape of minor girl aged 7/8 years — Testimony of prosecutrix alone, if reliable, whether sufficient to convict the accused without seeking further corroboration — Injury on male organ of accused if necessary — On facts, convincing and trustworthy testimony of the prosecutrix corroborated by medical evidence and testimony of other PWs existing — Doctor who examined the prosecutrix finding her hymen ruptured, slight bleeding coming out of the vaginal edges, presence of blood clots and external genitals tender and red and vagina admitting one finger with difficulty which got smeared with blood — Shawl on which, according to the prosecution, she was made to lie while committing the rape, found by the doctor to be having some mud and blood stains — Doctor opining that prosecutrix had been subjected to sexual intercourse — Doctor who examined accused-respondent finding him potent and capable of sexual intercourse — Father of the prosecutrix and other PWs deposing to have seen the respondent running from the place of occurrence carrying with him his underwear — Held, trial court rightly convicted the respondent under S. 376 and High Court erred in acquitting him on the basis of conjectures and surmises — Circumstances such as absence of spermatozoa on the vaginal slide and absence of injuries on the male organ not always fatal to the prosecution case — These circumstances should be considered in the light of the peculiar factual set-up of the case

There is no legal compulsion to look for corroboration of the evidence of the prosecutrix before recording an order of conviction. Evidence has to be weighed and not counted. Conviction can be recorded on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix, if her evidence inspires confidence and there is absence of circumstances which militate her veracity. In the present case the evidence of the prosecutrix is found to be reliable and trustworthy. No corroboration was required to be looked for, though enough was available on the record. The medical evidence provided sufficient corroboration.

No inference can be drawn against the prosecution from the fact that only two blood stains had been found on the shawl by the Chemical Examiner. The doctor had found the presence of blood stains and mud on the shawl and had opined that the bleeding from the edges of the vagina was slight and that some amount of clotted blood was also present. The prosecutrix was a girl of tender age and on account of the rape committed on her, there was bleeding from her vagina but in the circumstances it cannot be expected that the shawl should have got "drenched with blood" as if the large blood arteries had been cut.

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

The absence of spermatozoa cannot be a circumstance against the prosecution case. The prosecution case itself was that on being surprised while the respondent was in the act of committing sexual intercourse on the prosecutrix, he ran away carrying his underwear. The absence of spermatozoa under the circumstances could not be said to be a circumstance in favour of the respondent at all.

There is no inflexible axiom of law which lays down that the absence of injuries on the male organ of the accused would always be fatal to the prosecution case and would discredit the evidence of the prosecutrix, otherwise found to be reliable. The presence of injuries on the male organ may lend support to the prosecution case, but their absence is not always fatal. Every case has to be approached with realistic diversity based on peculiar facts and circumstances of that case. The doctor who had examined the respondent had found him to be capable of sexual intercourse and according to his opinion the absence of injury on his male organ was not suggestive of the fact that he had not indulged in sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix, then of tender years of age. His evidence was not at all challenged on this aspect by the defence.

The judgment of the High Court was based more on surmises and conjectures than on proper appreciation of evidence. Court must be sensitive to the serious crime committed against human dignity. Courts must be wary, circumspect and slow to interfere with reasonable and proper findings based on appreciation of evidence as recorded by the lower courts, before upsetting the same and acquitting an accused involved in the commission of heinous offence of rape of hapless girl child. State of H.P. v. Raghubir Singh, (1993) 2 SCC 622: 1993 SCC (Cri) 674: 1993 (2) ALT (Cri) 286: (1993) 2 Crimes 887.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-1993]

Rahim Beg v. State of U.P., (1972) 3 SCC 759: 1972 SCC (Cri) 827, distinguished and limited

[9043] — S. 376 — Rape of teenaged girl — Sentence — On facts, reduced from 7 years' RI to the period of little less than 2 years of imprisonment already undergone by accused-respondent

The accused was taken into custody by the police on 3-11-1993. He was not allowed bail. During the trial as also during the hearing of the appeal by the High Court he remained in jail. It is only on 11-10-1995 when the High Court acquitted him of the charge that he was released from jail. Thus he had remained in jail for a little less than two years. Taking into consideration the period of remission for which he would have been entitled and the time which has elapsed from the date of commission of the offence, the accused-respondent need not now be sent to jail. It would meet the ends of justice if he is sentenced to undergo imprisonment for the period already undergone by him and to a fine of Rs 2000 with further simple imprisonment of one year and nine months in default of payment of fine as passed by the trial court. The accused-respondent is allowed time till 1-5-2000 for payment of fine. (Para 21). State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898: AIR 2000 SC 1812: 2000 Cri LJ 2205.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

[9044] — S. 376 — Rape on a minor girl aged 14 years — Prosecutrix being below the age of consent, the accused persons cannot escape liability merely because no marks on their person suggesting resistance could be found. Narayanamma v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 5 SCC 728: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1573.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1994]

[9045] — S. 376 — Rape on child — Unmerited acquittals, particularly in crimes against child encourage the criminals — Court must be sensitive while dealing with such cases. State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-1994]

[9046] — S. 376 — Rape on minor girl — Conviction can be based solely on the evidence of prosecutrix if her evidence is reliable and truthful — Prosecutrix giving vivid account of how she was subjected to sexual harassment and intercourse on several occasions even in presence of accused's wife — Her testimony corroborated by medical evidence indicating that hymen of the victim was ruptured and she was ravished — Having regard to the testimony of the prosecutrix, and of the neighbour to whom the prosecutrix had narrated the incident whereafter the matter was reported to the police and of the doctor who had examined the prosecutrix and of another doctor who had examined the accused, held, the prosecutrix had truthfully narrated the entire episode and there was no reason why it can be said that she tried to foist a false case on the accused — In the circumstances, the view that it is not possible for a man to commit rape in presence of his wife cannot be accepted —

High Court erred in acquitting accused of charge under S. 376 (Para 2). State of Sikkim v. Padam Lall Pradhan, (2000) 10 SCC 112.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-1999]

[9047] — S. 376 — Rape on minor girl aged 14 years — FIR lodged by her at the earliest possible opportunity and her medical examination done within 6 hours of the occurrence — Evidence of the prosecutrix corroborated not only by the medical evidence but also by the other witnesses who came by and who met her immediately after the occurrence — Order of acquittal passed by the High Court reversed and trial court's order restored — Sentence of 3 years' R.I. passed by the trial court, though inadequate, the Supreme Court did not enhance the same. Narayanamma v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 5 SCC 728: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1573.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1994]

[9048] — S. 376 — Rape on six-year-old girl by accused aged sixty-five — Offence concurrently made out in all the stages below — Supreme Court finding no reason to interfere — Conviction upheld

In the present case there is the evidence of the victim and her mother. The FIR was prompt. The story is corroborated by the playmate of the victim and blood was found on the genitals of the accused and on his clothing. The guilt was thus conclusively made out. Ram Kishan Aggarwala v. State of Orissa, (1976) 2 SCC 177: 1976 SCC (Cri) 244: AIR 1976 SC 1774: 1976 Cri LJ 1376.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud and V.R. Krishna Iyer, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-1976]

[9049] — S. 376 — Sentence — Rape by accused, 65 years of age on a girl six years' old — Trial Judge awarding three years' rigorous imprisonment and Rs 5000 as fine — Sessions Judge reducing imprisonment to six months and fine to Rs 500 — Held, regarding the beastliness of the crime the short term of imprisonment, in spite of his advanced age, was not improper. Ram Kishan Aggarwala v. State of Orissa, (1976) 2 SCC 177: 1976 SCC (Cri) 244: AIR 1976 SC 1774: 1976 Cri LJ 1376.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud and V.R. Krishna Iyer, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-1976]

[9050] — S. 376 — Sentence — Rape of minor girl — Occurrence prior to December 1982 amendment — Sentence of 5 years' RI imposed by trial court — Enhancement of sentence not sought by State — High Court acquitting the accused — In the circumstances, while reversing the acquittal order, sentence imposed by trial court maintained by Supreme Court in appeal

Though for such an offence a more severe sentence would have been desirable but the ends of justice would be met if the sentence to be imposed on the respondent is confined to five years RI as was awarded by the Sessions Judge for cogent reasons recorded by him. This is for the reason that the State did not seek any enhancement of the sentence by filing an appropriate petition in the High Court or in the Supreme Court and for over a period of seven years, while the case has remained pending here, no notice had been issued to the acquitted respondent to show cause as to why in the event of his acquittal being set aside, a more deterrent sentence, than the one imposed by the Sessions Judge, be not imposed upon him and without putting him on such a notice, the Court cannot enhance the sentence. If the notice were to issue now, it would further delay the disposal of the case and that would not be a proper course to be adopted. The more stringent minimum sentence prescribed for an offence under S. 376 IPC was also incorporated in the Code by an amendment only with effect from December 1982 after the offence in the present case had been committed. State of H.P. v. Raghubir Singh, (1993) 2 SCC 622: 1993 SCC (Cri) 674: 1993 (2) ALT (Cri) 286: (1993) 2 Crimes 887.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-1993]

[9051] — S. 376 — Village girl below 16 years as prosecutrix — Due allowance should be made for exaggeration of threats. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793: AIR 1972 SC 2661: (1973) 2 SCR 197: 1973 Cri LJ 179.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1972]

[9052] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Child witness — Examination of — Must be nearabout the date and time of the incident — Rape and murder of a girl aged 5 years — Solitary testimony of a child aged 4 years that while returning home along with the deceased after purchasing a balloon, accused took the deceased inside his house saying that her feet were mudstained — Not clear from her statement whether that happened before the date and time of the incident or on the date on which dead body of deceased was found — How and in what manner investigating officer came to know about this child witness so as to record her statement during investigation also remaining a mystery — Child witness examined by trial court about one year after the incident — On asking a few questions by way of preliminary examination, trial Judge finding that the witness could "answer some of the questions" — Even taking her testimony at its face value, no incriminating inference could be drawn against the accused on that basis so as to connect him with the crime — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 8 and 3. Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256.

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2001]

[9053] — Ss. 376 & 302 — Conviction — Rape and murder of a 6 year old girl — Sessions Court and High Court concurrently finding the appellant guilty — On reappreciation of evidence, conviction under Ss. 302 and 376 confirmed

According to the prosecution the accused-appellant had taken the deceased girl aged 6 years to a cinema show. When the girl did not return home a report was lodged at the police station and next day her dead body was found lying in the bushes standing across the railway line. It was noticed that the underwear of the deceased was lying near the dead body and that there were bloodstains and tooth-mark on her cheek. The doctor who carried out post-mortem examination noticed that the deceased was in a school uniform and she stated that three doctors who had examined the dead body arrived at the conclusion that rape had been committed and the murder of the deceased was committed by pressing her nose and mouth and obstructing breath of the deceased. It was also noticed that there was a thin mark of a scratch on the upper portion of penis of the accused. According to the witnesses, the deceased was last seen in the company of the appellant. On appreciation of evidence the trial court convicted the appellant under Sections 302 and 376 IPC and sentenced him to death. The High Court confirmed the judgment and order passed by the trial court. The accused preferred the present appeal before the Supreme Court against the conviction and sentence. As regards the sentence it was submitted that the accused on the relevant day was less than 22 years and that even though the act is heinous, considering the fact that no injuries were found on the deceased, it is probable that death might have occurred because of gagging her mouth and nostrils by the accused at the time of incident so that she may not raise a hue and cry. The death, it was submitted, was accidental and an unintentional one. Allowing the appeal partly,

Held :

After going through the entire evidence it cannot be held that the High Court or the Sessions Court committed any error in appreciating the evidence led by the prosecution. Hence, the conviction of the appellant for the offence punishable under Sections 302 and 376 IPC is confirmed. (Para 7). Bantu v. State of M.P., (2001) 9 SCC 615: AIR 2002 SC 70.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-2001]

[9054] — Ss. 376 & 302 — Conviction — Rape and murder of girl aged 11 years — Circumstantial evidence — Accused seen enticing deceased by offering toffee, thereafter both last seen together going out in the evening, they having not returned to house PWs searched for them whole night and in the morning dead body of deceased found — Immediately thereafter FIR lodged — Extrajudicial confession made by accused to PW 3 that he committed rape of the deceased and killed her by causing injury on her head by brick when she stated that she would report at the house about the rape — Bloodstained earth, bloodstained brick with hair stuck to it, shawl, chappals taken into possession by police — Bloodstains found on trousers and shirt and blood and semen stains found on underwear for which no explanation given by accused — At the stage of statement under S. 313 CrPC accused abjured his guilt and denied all the allegations made against him — Held, High Court rightly confirmed the conviction order passed by Sessions Court. Raju v. State of Haryana, (2001) 9 SCC 50: AIR 2001 SC 2043: 2001 Cri LJ 2580.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2001]

[9055] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Death sentence — When not warranted — No rigid standards and norms can be laid down — Rape of child aged 1½ years by appellant aged 30 years — In the process of committing rape, injuries inflicted on liver, apart from other injuries which resulting in death of the child — Held, case does not fall within the rarest of the rare category — Hence death sentence not justified — CrPC, 1973, S. 354(3)

Regarding the question of laying down standards and norms restricting the area of imposition of death penalty, if by "laying down standards", it is meant that "murder" should be categorised beforehand according to the degrees of its culpability and all the aggravating and mitigating circumstances should be exhaustively and rigidly enumerated so as to exclude all free play of discretion, the argument merits rejection. Such standardisation is well-nigh impossible. Firstly, degree of culpability cannot be measured in each case; secondly, criminal cases cannot be categorised, there being infinite, unpredictable and unforeseeable variations; thirdly, on such categorisation, the sentencing process will cease to be judicial; and fourthly, such standardisation or sentencing discretion is a policy-matter belonging to the legislature beyond the court's function. Only broad guidelines consistent with the policy indicated by the legislature in Section 354(3) can be laid down. (Paras 10 and 12)

In the present case the crime committed is undoubtedly serious and heinous and the conduct of the appellant is reprehensible. It reveals a dirty and perverted mind of a human being who has no control over his carnal desires. But treating the case on the touchstone of the guidelines laid down in Bachan Singh, Machhi Singh and other decisions and balancing the aggravating and mitigating circumstances emerging from the evidence on record, the case cannot be appropriately called one of the rarest of the rare cases. The appellant cannot be said to be such a dangerous person that to spare his life will endanger the community. It cannot be held that the circumstances of the crime are such that there is no alternative but to impose death sentence even after according maximum weightage to the mitigating circumstances in favour of the offender. The case is one in which a humanist approach should be taken in the matter of awarding punishment. Accordingly, the capital sentence imposed against the appellant by the courts below is set aside. Instead the appellant shall suffer rigorous imprisonment for life. (Paras 25 and 26). Mohd. Chaman v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 2 SCC 28: 2001 SCC (Cri) 278: 2001 Cri LJ 725.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2000]

Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580: AIR 1980 SC 898; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681; Nirmal Singh v. State of Haryana, (1999) 3 SCC 670: 1999 SCC (Cri) 472; Anshad v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 4 SCC 381: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1204, relied on

[9056] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder — Circumstantial evidence — Last seen together — Accused A and victim V (girl aged 11-12 years) last seen together by PWs 1 and 11 — Evidence of said PWs trustworthy and reliable — Close proximity of place and time between the event of A having been last seen with V and factum of death — In such circumstances, held, burden was on A to explain how and in what circumstances V suffered the death — No explanation offered in statement made by A under S. 313 CrPC — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 106

The evidence of PWs 1 and 11 is trustworthy and reliable. It has a ring of truth. It stands fully established that they had seen the deceased V and the appellant on 28-3-2001 in the forest. When on the next day PW 1 again came to the same area for grazing buffaloes, he found the dead body of V. At that time too, PW 11 was with PW 1. (Paras 8 and 2)

In Mohibur Rahman case, (2002) 6 SCC 715, it has been observed that there may be cases where, on account of close proximity of place and time between the event of the accused having been last seen with the deceased and the factum of death, a rational mind may be persuaded to reach an irresistible conclusion that either the accused should explain how and in what circumstances the victim suffered the death or should own the liability for the homicide. Here it has been established that the death took place on 28th March between 3 and 4 p.m. It is just about that much time that the appellant and the deceased were last seen by PW 1 and PW 11. No explanation has been offered in the statement by the appellant recorded under Section 313 CrPC. His defence is of complete denial. Thus, the conviction for offence under Sections 302 and 376 has been rightly recorded by the Court of Session and affirmed by the High Court. (Para 9). Amit v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 8 SCC 93: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1959: AIR 2003 SC 3131: 2003 Cri LJ 3873.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-2003]

Mohibur Rahman v. State of Assam, (2002) 6 SCC 715: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1496, applied

[9057] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder of a four-year-old girl — Prosecution case based on circumstantial evidence — Circumstances of last seen together, recovery of dead body from the place pointed out by the accused, evidence of test identification parade, injuries found in the male organ of the accused and detection of stains of human blood and semen on underclothes of the accused at the time of his arrest — Held, on facts, circumstances sufficient to convict the accused respondent with the offence of rape and murder of the minor girl. State of Maharashtra v. Suresh, (2000) 1 SCC 471: 2000 SCC (Cri) 263.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-1999]

Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580, relied on

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

[9058] — Ss. 376 & 302 — Rape and murder of a girl aged 7-8 years — Conviction — Punishment — Conviction of appellants on basis of circumstantial evidence — Sustainability of death sentence — Death sentence imposed by the Sessions Judge confirmed by the High Court — Held, if guilt is proved by circumstantial evidence, ordinarily, death penalty would not be awarded — Moreover, Appellant 1 showed his remorse and repentance and accepted his guilt even in his statement under S. 313 CrPC — Hence, instead of extreme death penalty, punishment of RI for life imposed — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 235(2) and 354(3) (Paras 57 to 65). Bishnu Prasad Sinha v. State of Assam, (2007) 11 SCC 467: AIR 2007 SC 848: (2007) 53 AIC 166 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1145.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2007]

State of Rajasthan v. Kheraj Ram, (2003) 8 SCC 224: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1979; State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559; Sahdeo v. State of U.P., (2004) 10 SCC 682: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1873; Raju v. State of Haryana, (2001) 9 SCC 50: 2002 SCC (Cri) 408; Amrit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 12 SCC 79: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 397; Sk. Ishaque v. State of Bihar, (1995) 3 SCC 392: 1995 SCC (Cri) 534; Ronny v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 3 SCC 625: 1998 SCC (Cri) 859; Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681, relied on

[9059] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder of a girl of five years — Vital link in the chain of circumstances snapped — Held on facts, offence under Ss. 376 and 302 not established

The crucial link in the chain of circumstances in the present case is the presence of the accused-appellant in his house at the time when the dead body of the deceased was discovered. Once that link snaps, the entire case would have to rest on slender titbits here and there.

The discovery of a blood-stain of the deceased's group ('B' Group) measuring 0.5 cms in diameter on the accused-appellant's pant could be a circumstance against the accused only if it is shown that that was not his blood group. Presence of a dried stain of semen on the underpant of accused, aged 30, is also a circumstance too feeble to establish the guilt. Absence of smegma around the accused's corona glandis cannot by itself prove that he had sexual intercourse. The presence of smegma may perhaps exclude the possibility of recent sexual intercourse but its absence will not necessarily establish that the person has had a recent intercourse. A small abrasion over the base of the glans-penis and its bluish discoloration are also inconclusive circumstances. Nor indeed can the bruises on the appellant thigh establish his involvement in the crime.

The circumstances that the total ignorance of the incident pleaded by the accused was false, cannot be said to have itself furnished a link in the chain of causation. Falsity of defence cannot take the place of proof of facts which the prosecution has to establish in order to succeed. A false plea can at best be considered as an additional circumstance, if other circumstances point unfailingly to the guilt of the accused. Moreover, from the facts and circumstances of the case it is clear that the accused was not present in the house at the time when the deceased's dead body was discovered from the accused's house. That makes it impossible that the accused's plea was false. Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 2 SCC 35: 1981 SCC (Cri) 315: AIR 1981 SC 765: 1981 Cri LJ 325: 1981 MLJ (Cri) 320.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and A.P. Sen and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1980]

[9060] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder of a minor girl — Recovery of dead body at the instance of the accused — Circumstance not mentioned in inquest report — No panchnama prepared for the recovery made under S. 27, Evidence Act — No evidence showing that accused was present near the place where dead body was found — Though father of the victim and the investigating officer deposing about the circumstance of the recovery, their testimony contradictory and unacceptable — Held on facts, the circumstance not established. Jaharlal Das v. State of Orissa, (1991) 3 SCC 27: 1991 SCC (Cri) 527: AIR 1991 SC 1388: (1991) 2 Crimes 268: (1991) 72 CLT 298.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-1991]

[9061] — Ss. 376 & 302 — Rape and murder of a minor girl aged 4 years — Three PWs seeing a little girl crying in the company of a man on the day of the incident — Both accused and victim were strangers to the PWs — Reason for the PWs remembering them was that next day when they heard about the murder of a little girl, they recollected seeing the man along with the little girl the previous day — PWs later identifying the accused in test identification parade — Held, recollection about the victim in the company of the accused was natural — Contention that there was inherent incredibility in the evidence of the PWs as normally accused would have taken precaution not to be seen by any other person on the way cannot be accepted

If a criminal court is to view the testimony of the three witnesses as unnatural it would be easy to brush it aside with the stereotyped reasoning that those persons had no cause to remember having seen the man with the girl accompanying him. Such a reasoning overlooks the broad aspect that a human mind, on hearing about any shocking incident, would have the tendency to recollect any previous event which could have had a connection with that incident. If as a matter of fact those witnesses had occasion to see a crying girl of that age on the very day of the gruesome episode as happened in this case, there is nothing improbable in those witnesses remembering the person who was seen in the company of that girl. If they had immediately informed the police that they noticed a similarly-aged girl crying in the company of an utter stranger of that locality that cannot be brushed aside as a doubtful conduct. Either the three witnesses concocted the story falsely or what they said must be true. No reason was suggested for those three witnesses to bother themselves to concoct such a canard. (Para 17)

It is not possible to accept that there is "an inherent incredibility in the evidence" on the premise that a culprit kidnapping a minor girl with a sinister design would normally take the precaution not to be seen by any other person on the way, but in this case the culprit along with the girl had moved from place to place in the town. Such a reasoning as a proposition of human conduct cannot be accepted. The victim would certainly have been abducted by somebody (even assuming that it was not this respondent) and that person had taken the abducted girl from her house up to the place of occurrence (farm). Unless it is suggested that there was another alternative and a safer route for the culprit to take the girl unnoticed by any shopkeeper or even a pedestrian, there is no rationale in the reasoning that there is "inherent incredibility" in the version that the respondent would have taken the girl through this route. (Para 19). State of Maharashtra v. Suresh, (2000) 1 SCC 471: 2000 SCC (Cri) 263.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-1999]

[9062] — Ss. 376 & 302 — Sentence — Rape and murder of 6 year old girl — On facts held, not a "rarest of the rare" case — Hence sentence of death commuted to that of life imprisonment

However, in the present case, there is nothing on record to indicate that the appellant was having any criminal record nor can it be said that he will be a grave danger to the society at large. It is true that his act is heinous and requires to be condemned but at the same time it cannot be said that it is the rarest of the rare case where the accused requires to be eliminated from the society. Hence, there is no justifiable reason to impose the death sentence. Therefore, the sentence is modified by commuting the sentence of death to an imprisonment for life. For the offence punishable under Section 376 IPC, he is sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 10 years. Both the sentences to run concurrently. (Paras 8 and 9). Bantu v. State of M.P., (2001) 9 SCC 615: AIR 2002 SC 70.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-2001]

[9063] — Ss. 376 & 302 — Sentence — Rape and murder of girl aged 11 years — Accused had no intention to commit murder of the deceased — When deceased said that she would disclose about the commission of rape to her house, accused on the spur of the moment without any premeditation caused injury on her head by hurling brick which resulted in her death — Accused having no criminal record nor can he be said to be a grave danger to the society at large — Held, it was not a rarest of the rare cases and hence imposition of death sentence not justified — Instead life imprisonment proper. Raju v. State of Haryana, (2001) 9 SCC 50: AIR 2001 SC 2043: 2001 Cri LJ 2580.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2001]

State of Haryana v. Raju, 2000 Cri LJ 2726 (P&H), partly affirmed

[9064] — Ss. 376 and 302 — When can an accused be convicted solely on the basis of circumstantial evidence — Principles reiterated — Rape and murder of a girl aged 5 years — Circumstances relied on by prosecution not found to be incriminating circumstantial evidence against accused — Held, courts below erred in convicting the accused on that basis — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 3

The Court has to proceed to examine each of the pieces of incriminating circumstantial evidence so as to find out if each one of the circumstantial evidence is proved individually and whether collectively it forges such a chain of incriminating circumstances as would fasten the guilt on the accused beyond any shadow of reasonable doubt. None of the pieces of evidence relied on as incriminating, by the trial court and the High Court, can be treated as incriminating pieces of circumstantial evidence against the accused. Though the offence is gruesome and revolts the human conscience but an accused can be convicted only on legal evidence and if only a chain of circumstantial evidence has been so forged as to rule out the possibility of any other reasonable hypothesis excepting the guilt of the accused. "Human nature is too willing, when faced with brutal crimes, to spin stories out of strong suspicions". Between may be true and must be true there is a long distance to travel which must be covered by clear, cogent and unimpeachable evidence by the prosecution before an accused is condemned a convict. (Paras 6 and 24). Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256.

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2001]

Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358; Sharad Birdhichand Sarda v. State of Maharashtra, (1984) 4 SCC 116: 1984 SCC (Cri) 487; Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 2 SCC 35: 1981 SCC (Cri) 315, relied on [9065] — Ss. 376, 302 and 201 — Rape and murder — Victim, a girl aged about 10 years — Eyewitness claiming having seen the accused throttling the victim — Evidence as to last seen together — Acquittal by the High Court — Propriety — Victim seen chewing sugarcane at "kolhu" of accused D — Later on seen going with D towards his sugarcane field — Not returning to her home — Complainant B (father of victim) going to the sugarcane field of D for searching the victim there — D not permitting him to do so — Thereafter, B taking "Pardhan" of the village and other persons with him making search there — Dead body of victim found buried in the said field — On such facts, held, conviction by trial court was proper — High Court erred in setting aside the same — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 386 and 374(2) (Paras 7 to 9). State of U.P. v. Devendra Singh, (2004) 10 SCC 616: AIR 2004 SC 3690: 2004 Cri LJ 3118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2004]

[9066] — Ss. 376, 302, 363 & 201 — Child rape — Sentence — Rape and murder of a 3 year old girl — Trial court imposing death sentence but High Court acquitting the accused-respondent — Held, though this case is perilously near the region of "rarest of the rare cases", but as the accused was once acquitted by High Court the extreme penalty need not be imposed, the lesser option being not unquestionably foreclosed — Hence death sentence altered to that of life imprisonment (Para 23). State of Maharashtra v. Bharat Fakira Dhiwar, (2002) 1 SCC 622: 2002 SCC (Cri) 217: AIR 2002 SC 16: 2002 Cri LJ 218: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 7.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-2001]

[9067] — Ss. 376, 302, 363 and 366 — Rape and murder of child by watchman — Death sentence, held, not warranted in this case — Appellant-accused aged about 27 years was watchman of building where deceased was residing — Death sentence imposed by trial court affirmed by High Court — Difference of opinion amongst Judges of Division Bench of Supreme Court as regards award of capital punishment in Rameshbhai (1) case, (2009) 5 SCC 740 — Possibility of rehabilitation and reformation of young offender — Uncertainty due to nature of circumstantial evidence — Hence held, death sentence cannot be maintained — Considering gravity of offence, behaviour of appellant, and fear and concern such incident generate in ordered society, death sentence commuted to life imprisonment directing that life sentence would extend to full life of appellant subject to any remission/commutation at instance of Government for good and sufficient reasons — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 366, 368, 415, 432 and 433 — Constitution of India, Arts. 72 and 161 (Paras 9 to 12). Rameshbhai Chandubhai Rathod (2) v. State of Gujarat, (2011) 2 SCC 764.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: H.S. Bedi, P. Sathasivam and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2011]

Ramraj v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2010) 1 SCC 573: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 842; Mulla v. State of U.P., (2010) 3 SCC 508: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1150; Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681, relied on

Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358, distinguished on facts

Opinion of A.K. Ganguly, J. in Rameshbhai Chandubhai Rathod (1) v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 5 SCC 740: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 881, affirmed

[9068] — Ss. 376 and 342 — Rape of a minor — Appreciation of evidence — Conviction restored — Non-reliance on medical report since time of occurrence not determined — Doctor who examined prosecutrix finding signs of recent sexual act but also accepting suggestion of accused that intercourse could have taken one week prior to her examination — Prosecutrix telling the doctor that accused had also sexually molested her one year prior to the alleged occurrence — Doctor finding hymen absent but categorically stating that prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted one finger only — Medical report, thus, corroborated by prosecutrix that she was earlier also raped by same accused — High Court acquitting the accused holding that when the doctor herself was unclear about the actual date of alleged rape, medical report could not be relied upon — While doing so, High Court ignoring the fact that doctor had also stated that there was possibility of recent intercourse i.e. within a week of her examination — Held, High Court appreciated the evidence erroneously by ignoring cogent and credible evidence of PWs 3, 4 and 5, which was further corroborated by medical evidence — Hence, impugned judgment acquitting accused set aside, and that of trial court convicting him under Ss. 376 & 342 restored

Facts:

On 15-3-2000, when parents of the prosecutrix had gone to visit her maternal uncle, her elder sister PW 4 had gone to the jungle to fetch leaves for goats, the accused is alleged to have taken the prosecutrix (minor) to his home, bolted the door of the room from inside, switched on the TV, gagged, and raped her. Thereafter he gave her Rs 5 and some "shakkar". Prosecutrix narrated the incident to PW 4. Her parents were informed about the occurrence on 16-3-2000 on their return. PW 4 also handed over to PW 5 (mother) currency note of Rs 5 given to her by the prosecutrix.

The trial court convicted the accused under Ss. 376 and 342 and sentenced him to RI for 7 years and fine of Rs 2000, and RI for 1 year respectively. The High Court acquitted the accused in appeal filed thereagainst. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above.

Held :

It was clearly proved and established that prosecutrix was a minor on the date of occurrence. Prosecutrix was examined on 17-3-2000 and she told the doctor that she had been sexually molested by accused about a year back. On examining her the doctor found signs of recent sexual act, as there was small reddened area over the left upper margin of hymen. In the cross-examination, the doctor has categorically stated that the prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted only one finger. The doctor, however, admitted that absence of hymen proves that she had been used to sexual intercourse earlier. (Paras 10 and 11)

The aforesaid medical report of the doctor is corroborated by the statement made by the prosecutrix that she was earlier also raped by the same accused. As against the suggestion of the accused that the sexual intercourse as alleged would have taken place more than one week prior to 17-3-2000, the doctor while accepting the same also stated that there can be a possibility of recent sexual intercourse i.e. within a week from 17-3-2000, which cannot be ruled out because of the redness on the margin of hymen. (Para 12)

The High Court mainly relied upon the opinion of the doctor holding that the doctor herself was unclear about the actual date of the alleged rape, and therefore, the said medical report could not be relied upon. While doing so, the High Court ignored the fact that the doctor had also stated that there can be a possibility of recent sexual intercourse i.e. within a week from 17-3-2000. The alleged rape was in fact committed within a week from 17-3-2000 i.e. on 15-3-2000. The fact that the prosecutrix was subjected to rape on 15-3-2000 is proved and established from the statement of the prosecutrix, medical report and the statement of the doctor (PW 8), who had examined the prosecutrix. The doctor had also stated that hymenal appearance cannot rule out recent coitus. Therefore, it is also proved and established beyond doubt that the prosecutrix was subjected to rape on 15-3-2000. (Para 13)

Further, prosecutrix had categorically stated that it was the accused who had raped her, and her statement was corroborated by PWs 4 and 5. (Para 14)

Submission that there is no other independent witness to support the aforesaid allegation is also baseless. In case of this nature when the prosecutrix, who was a minor girl on the date of incident, has come forward and stated that she was raped by the accused and her testimony could not be shaken in the cross-examination, we have no reason to disbelieve her for no girl would ever lie on a vital issue of this nature. Even her sister and mother also stated as to what was reported by the prosecutrix herself immediately after the alleged occurrence. Besides, there was PW 6 who though turned hostile at one stage of her examination, admitted that PW 5 had come to her house along with her daughter and narrated the incident to her. (Paras 15 and 16)

Submission by the respondent-accused that the prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse since her hymen was absent also liable to be rejected because the prosecutrix has stated that the accused himself had earlier raped her about a year back. It is also disclosed from the medical report that the prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse as the doctor herself stated that the prosecutrix was not used to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted only one finger. She has explained that there was redness over the margin of hymen and on the basis of this redness, the possibility of recent sexual intercourse could not be ruled out. As the testimony of the prosecutrix, her sister and mother has not been shaken in the cross-examination, the statement of the doctor appears to be a plausible and convincing version. (Para 17)

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

Further submission of accused that evidence of PWs 3 and 4 should not be relied upon because they were child witnesses and tutored by their parents and police, is unacceptable. Testimonies of PWs 3 and 4 as regards the alleged occurrence was firm and convincing. There was no reason as to why a child of her age would falsely implicate the accused. Besides, it is settled position in law that conviction under Section 376 on sole testimony of a rape victim can be maintained if her evidence is found credible and convincing. (Paras 18 and 19)

Evidence of PWs 3 and 4 was found cogent, credible and uninfluenced by any tutoring. The High Court erroneously appreciated the evidence by ignoring credible evidence of two child witnesses statement of their mother, which was further corroborated by medical evidence. Hence, judgment of the High Court set aside and that of the trial court restored. (Paras 22 to 24). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2009) 16 SCC 697.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210; Mohd. Kalam v. State of Bihar, (2008) 7 SCC 257: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 27, followed

Mohd. Kalam v. State of Bihar, (2008) 7 SCC 257: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 27, applied

State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210, considered and relied on

[9069] — Ss. 376 and 354 — Sexual assault or indecent assault — Victim aged about 5 years — Doctor finding the hymen completely torn, laceration on all sides of vagina and fresh bleeding — Evidence of lady doctor showing that a finger could be easily inserted inside the private part — Held, the victim was subjected to sexual assault and not merely indecent assault — Merely because the injuries found on the private part of the victim could also be caused by an instrument like a piece of glass cannot lead to the conclusion that she was not raped unless there is material to support such a conclusion

The victim girl was brought to the hospital in a semi-conscious state and her general condition was poor. On external examination of the girl the doctor found that the hymen was completely torn and there was laceration on all sides of vagina. The doctor noticed that there was fresh bleeding in her private part. On internal examination the doctor found that a finger could easily be inserted in her private part and bloodstained discharge was coming out. Thus from the medical evidence it is clear that the girl was not only subjected to an indecent assault but there was sexual activity and the girl was subjected to sexual assault, otherwise the doctor would not have found the hymen completely torn, laceration on all sides of the vagina and fresh bleeding. According to the evidence of lady doctor a finger could be easily inserted inside the private part of the victim which otherwise was not possible in the case of a child aged 5 years because according to the Medical Jurisprudence by Modi, 21st Edn., p. 376, in a girl under 14 years of age the vaginal orifice is usually so small that it will hardly allow the passage of the little finger through her hymen. In the present case if the girl aged 5 years was not subjected to sexual intercourse the finger could not have been easily inserted in her private part as observed by the lady doctor.

Simply because the injuries found on the private part of the girl could also be caused in several other ways than the sexual assault on the victim cannot lead to the conclusion that the injuries on her private part were not sustained by commission of the rape but by some other instrument in the absence of any material to support such a conclusion. In the present case though the doctor deposed that the injuries could also be caused by instrument like piece of glass but there were neither circumstances nor any material to conclude or even to suggest that the victim had sustained the injuries by any piece of glass. No piece of glass was found at or near the place of occurrence. On the contrary there is positive and convincing evidence showing that there was sexual assault on the girl and the finding that she was subjected to indecent assault is absolutely incorrect. State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-1994]

[9070] — Ss. 376, 363 and 302 — Rape and murder of victim — If a "rarest of rare case" — Award of death penalty by trial court — Held, case not "rarest of the rare" — In facts and circumstances of case, death penalty not justified — Commuted to sentence of life imprisonment (Para 8). State of Maharashtra v. Mansingh, (2005) 3 SCC 131: 2005 SCC (Cri) 657.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-2004]

[9071] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — Age of victim — Prosecutrix abducted and forcibly subjected to sexual intercourse by the accused persons without her consent and against her will

— Question of age of the victim not relevant — However, on facts, evidence of father and mother of the victim that she was below 16 years of age on the date of incident is fully corroborated by medical evidence and school leaving certificate. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

[9072] — Ss. 376, 363 and 366-A — Rape, kidnapping and procuration of minor girl — Age of minor — Benefit of doubt — When available — Prosecution failing to prove age of prosecutrix — Prosecutrix found as being habitual to sex and her secondary sexual characteristics well developed (as per clinical report of PW 1) — Appellant-accused frequently visiting prosecutrix's house — Prosecutrix in love with appellant, never resisting being repeatedly deflowered by him — Allegation that prosecutrix under threat accompanied appellant on a bicycle to another village where she was raped by appellant and then brought back home — Non-performance of tests for proving age of prosecutrix prescribed by the doctor, held, is a serious flaw in prosecution version — In such circumstances, held, a close and careful examination of age of prosecutrix is imperative, which if not proved, accused is entitled to benefit of doubt, as in present case

The appellant was convicted by the trial court under Sections 363, 366-A and 376 IPC. The appellant belonged to the same caste and gotra of the prosecutrix and he was visiting the house of the prosecutrix frequently. The finding of the High Court is that the prosecutrix fell in love with the appellant. The High Court also found that she did not ever resist her being repeatedly deflowered by the appellant.

The appellant submitted before the court that he was falsely implicated. No defence evidence was adduced on behalf of the appellant. Admittedly, no test identification parade was conducted in this case. The trial court on the basis of evidence on record came to the conclusion that the appellant kidnapped a minor girl and induced her to go to Village Kalka Madlya and committed rape on her and convicted the appellant. The High Court also found that the offences under Sections 363, 366-A and 376 IPC are proved against the appellant. The appellant aggrieved by the impugned judgment preferred this appeal on various grounds.

Allowing the appeal of the accused,

Held :

The short question in this appeal was as to whether the prosecutrix was a minor. It is clearly borne out from the evidence on record that the appellant belonged to the same caste and gotra of the prosecutrix and was a frequent visitor to the house of the prosecutrix. There was a love affair between them and the court also observed that she did not ever resist her being repeatedly deflowered by the appellant. (Paras 24 and 23)

PW 1, who had clinically examined the prosecutrix, found that her secondary sex characters were well developed. PW 1, after clinical examination of the prosecutrix, categorically observed that possibility cannot be ruled out that the prosecutrix was habitual to sex. In her report, PW 1 also stated that keeping in view the clinical examination, the possibility of rape cannot be ruled out. PW 2 made medico-legal examination of the appellant and found that he had the ability to perform sexual intercourse. In this background, close and careful determination of the age of the prosecutrix is imperative. (Paras 24, 7 and 23)

In a criminal case, the conviction of the appellant cannot be based on an approximate date which is not supported by any record. It would be quite unsafe to base conviction on an approximate date. PW 8, the father of the prosecutrix also could not give the correct date of birth of the prosecutrix. PW 8 stated that he was giving an approximate date without any basis or record. (Para 26)

The failure of getting the prosecutrix examined from the dental surgeon or the radiologist despite the fact that she was referred to them by PW 1 is a serious flaw in the prosecution version. It is not a rule that all these tests must be performed in all cases, but in the instant case, in the absence of primary evidence, reports of the dental surgeon and the radiologist would have helped in arriving at the conclusion regarding the age of the prosecutrix. (Para 24)

The prosecution also failed to produce any admission form of the school which would have been primary evidence regarding the age of the prosecutrix. The school leaving certificate produced by the prosecution was also procured six days after the incident and three days after the arrest of the appellant. As per that certificate also, she joined the school in the middle of the session and left the school in the middle of the session. The attendance in the school of 100 days is also not reliable. The prosecutrix was admitted in the school by A, her brother. A was not examined. The alleged school leaving certificate on the basis of which the age was entered in the school was not produced. (Para 25)

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

On consideration of the totality of the facts and circumstances of this case, it would be unsafe to convict the appellant when there are so many infirmities, holes and lacunae in the prosecution version. The appellant is clearly entitled to the benefit of doubt and consequently the appeal filed by the appellant deserves to be allowed. The appellant is directed to be released forthwith, if not required in any case. (Para 27). Sunil v. State of Haryana, (2010) 1 SCC 742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2009]

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, referred to

[9073] — Ss. 376, 364 and 302 — Circumstantial evidence — Conviction on the basis of — Sustainability — Appellant-accused alleged to have raped and murdered deceased, aged five years — Accused caught red-handed in completely naked state thrusting a stem/stick of dhanicha in vagina of deceased — Held, for a crime to be proved it is not necessary that the crime must be seen to have been committed and must, in all circumstances be proved by direct ocular evidence by examining before the court those persons who had seen its commission — Offence can be proved by circumstantial evidence also — Principal fact or factum probandum may be proved indirectly by means of certain inferences drawn from factum probans, that is, the evidentiary facts — Circumstantial evidence is not direct to the point in issue but consists of evidence of various other facts which are so closely associated with the fact in issue that taken together they form a chain of circumstances from which the existence of the principal fact can be legally inferred or presumed — In the instant case accused wanted to camouflage the serious crime of rape and so in a planned manner, after committing rape, he mercilessly inserted stem/stick deep inside the fragile vagina of the girl to the extent of 33 cm to cause her death, with a view to masquerade the crime as an accident — It was just by providence that due to timely reach of the witnesses (PWs 2, 3 and others) who were frantically searching the girl that he could be caught in naked condition while inserting a stick into the vagina of the lifeless body of the victim — Hence, conviction of appellant for offences punishable under Ss. 364, 376 & 302 IPC imposed by trial court and as affirmed by High Court, held, sustainable (Paras 3, 17, 18 and 19). Bantu v. State of U.P., (2008) 11 SCC 113.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-2008]

Wills' Circumstantial Evidence' (Chapter VI), cited

[9074] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Abduction and rape of a minor girl aged about 10/11 years — Prosecutrix being below the age of consent finding of the High Court that she was of a loose moral character and might have gone with the accused herself demolishing the case of abduction, held, not sustainable — Conviction restored — However, sentence reduced to the period already undergone which was about 5 years' RI. State of U.P. v. Om, 1998 SCC (Cri) 1343.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-1997]

[9075] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Rape — Quantum of fine — Financial constraints of the appellant-accused — Relief — Rape of a girl less than twelve years — For offence under S. 376, punishment of RI for ten years and fine of Rs 50,000 imposed, while for conviction under S. 366 RI for five years and fine of Rs 5000 imposed — Supreme Court considering the financial status of the appellant and his inability to pay the imposed fine, reducing the same to Rs 5000 for offence under S. 376 and to Rs 500 for offence under S. 366, with default stipulation — Further, suo motu, State Govt. directed to pay Rs 20,000 as ex gratia amount to the mother of the victim (since married), and not to the victim herself, in her own interest, considering the facts as disclosed in the affidavit filed by the Additional Superintendent of Police (Paras 2, 4 and 5). Shyama v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 13 SCC 544.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2004]

[9076] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Rape of minor — Sentence — Moulding of punishment — Respondent-accused found guilty under Ss. 366 and 376 IPC and sentenced to three years' and seven years' RI respectively, and fine of Rs 500 with default stipulation for each offence imposed by trial court — High Court though confirming the conviction, reducing the sentence to period already undergone — Appellant aged about 19 years while victim was less than 16 years — Evidence showing that accused and victim were in love with each other and victim admitted that she had sexual intercourse with accused because of that — Father of the victim filing an affidavit before High Court stating that since the victim was settled in life a liberal view may be taken — Held, her admission was irrelevant because she was less than 16 years of age — But considering the facts sentence fixed at three years' RI and fine of Rs 10,000 with default stipulation imposed — Out of the deposited amount of Rs 8000 directed to be paid to victim — Parameters relating to imposition of lesser sentence for offence relatable to S. 376 discussed through case law (Paras 2 and 5 to 7). State of Punjab v. Rakesh Kumar, (2008) 12 SCC 33.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-2008]

Iqbal v. State of Kerala, (2007) 12 SCC 724, followed

[9077] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Sentence — Minimum statutory sentence — Deviation from — When impermissible — Rape of minor — Respondent-accused alleged to have taken away the prosecutrix who was a minor but married from the lawful custody of her father, without his consent with the intention of forcing her to have sexual intercourse with him, and committed the offence against her will and without her consent — Trial court convicting him under Ss. 366/376 and sentencing him to 7 years' RI and fine of Rs 500 for each offence with default stipulation — High Court in appeal filed thereagainst reducing the sentence to period already undergone which was 4 years and 2 months observing that "she was a sensible girl having age of 15 years, she did not complain to anybody and lived for several days with the respondent at Chhatarpur" — Fact that she was a minor and subjected to rape and furthermore, according to her testimony she was compelled to live for several days with the respondent at Chhatarpur as he would not listen to her plea of taking her to her father lost sight of by High Court — Medical examination assessing her age to be between 11 to 13 years and rendering an opinion that rape was committed on her and she was not habituated to sexual intercourse — Affidavit affirmed by her stating her age to be 18 years found to have been obtained without her knowing the contents thereof and at the instance of respondent — Held, very fact that she was made to state that her age was 18 years and she was living with the respondent as a wife clearly goes to show the mental trauma which she was undergoing — Contents of the said affidavit were wrongly used for imposing a sentence less than the minimum prescribed sentence considering the same to be mitigating factor — Age of the prosecutrix was assessed between 11 and 13 years, but by way of abundant precaution, the Sessions Judge held her age to be less than 13, but did not award any punishment in terms of S. 376(2)(f) — Minimum statutory sentence was imposed by trial court which should have met the approval of the High Court — It was also not a case where the proviso to S. 376 could be invoked — Hence, judgment of High Court set aside so far as it relates to the quantum of sentence and sentence awarded by trial court restored (Paras 11, 12, 14 and 19 to 22). State of M.P. v. Bablu Natt, (2009) 2 SCC 272: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 713: AIR 2009 SC 1810: (2009) 1 KLJ 686 (SC): (2009) 2 ECrN 504 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 1722.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2008]

State of M.P. v. Bala, (2005) 8 SCC 1: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1947; State of Karnataka v. Raju, (2007) 11 SCC 490: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 787; State of A.P. v. Bodem Sundara Rao, (1995) 6 SCC 230: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1097, considered and relied on [9078] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Sentence — Rape of a minor girl aged 15 years by a young boy of 17 years of age — Prosecutrix a consenting party — In view of the fact that it was a one-time act and also the young age of the appellant sentence of imprisonment reduced to the period already undergone with a fine of Rs 12,000 to be paid to the prosecutrix as compensation. Jarnail Singh v. State of Punjab, (1998) 8 SCC 629: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1617.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and Sujata V. Manohar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1996]

[9079] — Ss. 376, 366 and 506 — Rape of a minor girl aged 13 years by holding out threats — Underwear of the accused, salwar of the prosecutrix and chaddar alleged to have been spread by the accused at the time of committing rape found to contain same group of semen — Vaginal swab also indicating presence of semen — Injuries found on the person of the accused also tallying with the time when the commission of rape was alleged — Prosecutrix found weeping by her neighbour immediately after the incident and the accused also found leaving the place at that time — Prosecutrix also complaining to the said neighbour about the rape committed on her — Held, in the circumstances of the case guilt of the accused is made out. State of Haryana v. Jang Bahadur, 1998 SCC (Cri) 693.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-1997]

[9080] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape — Ingredients — Hymen of victim remaining intact, hence submission that charge of rape under S. 376 as defined in S. 375 not made out — Held on facts, victim was a very young girl of six years of age and it is quite likely that full penetration did not take place as the accused was a grown-up person of over 20 years of age — However, injuries clearly indicate that rape, as defined in S. 375, did take place (Paras 15, 16 and 11). Rajendra Datta Zarekar v. State of Goa, (2007) 14 SCC 560: AIR 2008 SC 572: 2008 Cri LJ 710.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2007]

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

Santosh Kumar v. State of M.P., (2006) 10 SCC 595: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 28, considered and relied on

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, 21st Edn., at p. 369; Parikh's Textbook of Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, cited

[9081] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape on minor girl (aged 11 to 12 years) — Absence of spermatozoa — Girl profusely bleeding — Leaves on which blood was wiped and swab, found from place of occurrence, along with blood-stained salwar sent to Chemical Analyzer and Serologist — According to report no spermatozoa found on the materials sent for examination — Held, mere absence of spermatozoa cannot cast a doubt on correctness of prosecution case. Prithi Chand v. State of H.P., (1989) 1 SCC 432: 1989 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 702: (1989) 1 SCR 123: 1989 Cri LJ 841.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-1989]

[9082] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape on minor girl (aged 11 or 12 years) — Penetration — Proof of

It was argued that having regard to the girl's age and the fact that her vagina admitted one finger with difficulty, it is not possible to believe that there was penetration.

Held :

In the absence of penetration there would not be absence of hymen with the edges torn and profuse bleeding from the vagina staining the salwar. Merely because the doctor found that the vagina admitted one finger with difficulty, it cannot be inferred that there was no penetration as the muscles must have contracted by then. The accused-appellant, a robust man must have penetrated the vagina. Prithi Chand v. State of H.P., (1989) 1 SCC 432: 1989 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 702: (1989) 1 SCR 123: 1989 Cri LJ 841.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-1989]

[9083] — Ss. 376 & 375 and 366 — Rape of minor — Benefit of doubt — When available — Doubtful facts and circumstances being: (1) though fact of abduction of PW 2 (victim girl) on 31-7-1993 was immediately brought to notice of PW 1 (father of victim), PW 1 lodging FIR on 2-8-1993, (2) false implication by father not being ruled out because victim girl could have run away to avoid an arranged marriage, (3) there being no evidence of previous involvement of A-1 with victim, (4) important witnesses of abduction and forced marriage not having been examined, (5) there being no evidence of victim being forcibly taken in car, (6) close relations of girl witnessing alleged forced marriage in temple not lodging a complaint with police or rescuing girl, (7) victim not even raising a cry in temple when she was being married forcibly, (8) there being contradiction in evidence of victim's father and victim, (9) evidence of victim being wholly unreliable and contrary to evidence, and (10) it not being conclusively established that girl was minor — Appellants, held, are entitled to benefit of doubt — Hence, acquitted — Prosecution story of A-1 abducting and forcefully marrying PW 2 and then raping her have not been proved beyond reasonable doubt (Paras 31 to 35). Alamelu v. State, (2011) 2 SCC 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2011]

[9084] — Ss. 376 and 375 Fifthly — Prosecutrix below or about 16 years of age — Held, consent immaterial — Absence of violent or stiff resistance and the absence of marks of violence on private parts or elsewhere, held, of no consequence

Where a person on whom rape is committed is under 16 years of age, even consent is immaterial (vide Fifthly of S. 375) and penetration is sufficient to constitute the sexual intercourse necessary to the offence of rape (vide explanation to S. 375). The suggestion that, there being no marks of violence on the private parts or elsewhere on the person of the prosecutrix, there could be no offence of rape on her, is wholly misconceived. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793: AIR 1972 SC 2661: (1973) 2 SCR 197: 1973 Cri LJ 179.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1972]

[9085] — Ss. 376, 375 Fifthly (old), 366 and 342 — Abduction, rape and wrongful confinement — Prosecutrix, a village girl, abducted at knife point and wrongfully confined for one month at different places — Accused 1 committing rape on her — Her evidence found to be truthful and required no corroboration — However, her evidence was corroborated by medical evidence and circumstantial evidence, viz., underwear of the accused and petticoat of the prosecutrix — Prosecutrix being a minor (aged between 15-17 years) question of consent does not arise — Therefore, plea that she was a consenting party is not tenable — Conviction of accused persons upheld — But the High Court committed grave error of law in reducing the sentence to the period already undergone i.e. 1½ months — Consequently sentence enhanced to 5 years' RI with fine. State of Rajasthan v. Ram Narain, (1996) 8 SCC 64: AIR 1996 SC 2987.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, S. Saghir Ahmad and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-1996]

[Ed.: Under Section 376 IPC age of consent is 16 years. In this case the doctor had opined that the prosecutrix was aged between 15 and 17 years. It has been held in Jaya Mala v. Home Secy., Govt. of J&K, (1982) 2 SCC 538: 1982 SCC (Cri) 502 that the margin of error in age ascertained by the radiological examination is 2 years. It is not clear as to how the court on the basis of the medical evidence alone came to a definite conclusion that the prosecutrix was a minor i.e. below 16 years of age.

Further the court has not considered the question of delay of one month in lodging the FIR for which the first informant had offered no explanation. Also conduct of the accused in bringing the girl to her native village is unnatural.

See also (1991) 2 SCC 379: 1991 SCC (Cri) 438; (1970) 3 SCC 21: 1970 SCC (Cri) 371; (1981) 1 SCC 560: 1981 SCC (Cri) 208]

[9086] — Ss. 376 & 375 Sixthly — Rape — Consent — Age of victim about 14 years at the time of offence — Held, question of consent was of no consequence in the instant case (Para 14). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

[9087] — Ss. 376 and 375 Expln. — Rape on minor girl (aged 11 or 12 years) — Defence case that accused was falsely involved due to long standing enmity between accused's father and prosecutrix's father — Held on facts, it is unbelievable that prosecutrix and her parents would allow the real culprit to escape and falsely involve an innocent person for commission of the crime. Prithi Chand v. State of H.P., (1989) 1 SCC 432: 1989 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 702: (1989) 1 SCR 123: 1989 Cri LJ 841.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-1989]

[9088] — Ss. 376, 366 and 363/109 — Age — Determination of — Birth certificate issued by Municipality — Absence of name of child in — Reason for, given — Effect, if any — Held, it is a matter of common knowledge that birth certificate issued by Municipality generally does not contain name of child, for the reason, that it is recorded on basis of information furnished either by hospital or parents just after birth of child and by that time the child is not named — Herein, defence contention, that courts below erred in placing reliance upon such birth certificate of PW 4 (rape victim), for determining her age, because it did not contain her name, set aside on aforementioned ground (Paras 11 and 22). Murugan v. State of T.N., (2011) 6 SCC 111.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision : 6-5-2011]

Umesh Chandra v. State of Rajasthan, (1982) 2 SCC 202: 1982 SCC (L&S) 200: 1982 SCC (Cri) 396; State of Bihar v. Radha Krishna Singh, (1983) 3 SCC 118, relied on [9089] — Ss. 376, 366 and 363/109 — Kidnapping, forced marriage and rape — Minor victim — Alleged consent or volition of victim — Relevance — If once victim found to be a minor, then if issue of consent of any relevance — Victim, if was minor on date of incident (14 yrs old) — Determination of — Reliance upon birth certificate given by Municipality and victim's school and evidence of her mother, for ascertaining her age — Concurrent finding of victim being a minor on date of incident, on basis of, upheld — Conviction confirmed — A-1, after kidnapping victim, forcibly married and raped her — A-2 and A-3 helped A-1 in the act — A-1 convicted under Ss. 376 & 366 and A-2 & A-3 under Ss. 363/109 — Sustainability — Prosecution submission that if finding recorded by courts below on minority of victim remains undisturbed, no other issue is required to be examined — Tenability — Held, birth certificate of victim issued by Municipality, shows date of birth, date of registration and registration number — Names of victim's parents and their address have also been correctly mentioned — Thus, there is no reason to doubt veracity of said certificate — More so, school certificate has been issued by Headmaster on basis of entry made in school register, which corroborates contents of birth certificate issued by Municipality — Both these entries in school register as well as in Municipality, came much before criminal prosecution started — Those entries stand fully supported and corroborated by evidence of PW 15 (mother of victim) — She had been cross-examined at length, but nothing could be elicited to doubt her testimony — Suggestion put to her by defence, that she was talking about age of her younger daughter and not victim, was flatly denied — Her deposition remained unshaken and is fully reliable — In facts and circumstances, there is no reason to hold that victim was major on date of incident — Defence submission that PW 4 (victim) went voluntarily with A-1, as she was in love with him and wanted to marry him, hence of no use — In view thereof, no other issue is required to be considered — Therefore, conviction of appellants confirmed — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 35 (Paras 23, 26 and 27). Murugan v. State of T.N., (2011) 6 SCC 111.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision : 6-5-2011]

Mohd. Ikram Hussain v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 1625: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 590, relied on

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

[9090] — Ss. 376 and 376(2)(f) — Rape on a girl of eight years — Absence of injury on private parts of accused — Held, will not be of much help to accused as he was medically examined four days after the incident in question

The accused-respondent herein alleged to have committed rape on a girl of eight years. The father of the victim was out of station on the date of occurrence i.e. 6-3-1990. When he came back to home on 7-3-1990, he was told about the incident in question. The father decided that the accused should be first traced and taken to the police station and thereafter they should lodge a complaint. On finding the accused on 10-3-1990 the parents of the victim went to the police station and lodged a complaint in respect of the said incident. The trial court found the accused guilty of the offence charged and sentenced him to undergo RI for 10 years. In appeal, the High Court set aside the said conviction and sentence. The High Court found that the delay in lodging the complaint was fatal to the prosecution case. It held that it was not safe to rely on the evidence of the victim (PW 2) to base a conviction because there was some discrepancy as to the act of penetration while committing rape in the evidence of the victim and the evidence of the doctor. Relying on a reply given by the doctor to a suggestion made by the defence that the injury suffered by a PW 2 could also be suffered by a hard and blunt object, the High Court inferred that the injury on the victim could have been suffered by her by falling on some such hard and blunt object. Since there was no injury on the private parts of the accused, the High Court inferred that the accused could not have committed rape on the minor without hurting himself on his private parts. In regard to the evidence of PW 2, the High Court was of the opinion that she being a child witness, it was possible that she could have been tutored.

Restoring the conviction recorded by the trial court but reducing the sentence,

Held :

It is now well established that if the court is satisfied from the evidence of the victim a conviction can be solely based on such evidence without looking for further corroboration. Same can be done because the prosecutrix is no more treated as an accomplice in the crime. (Para 6)

The doctor stated that the injuries suffered by PW 2 could not have been self-inflicted. There was blood on her private parts, the hymen was torn and medial side of the labia minora was inflamed. This was even after 4 days of the incident. The mere fact that the doctor replied to a suggestion made in the cross-examination that such injuries could be suffered by the victim by falling on a hard and blunt substance, by itself, would not suffice to reject the evidence of PW 2 who had no enmity whatsoever to implicate the respondent. The suggestion which has come in the form of Section 313 CrPC statement merely says that there was some enmity between the parents of the accused and those of the victim. Neither the nature of enmity nor gravity of the same has been stated, therefore, that explanation would be of no assistance to the accused to establish the fact that he has been falsely implicated. The factum of injury suffered by PW 2 and the opinion of the doctor that such injury could have been caused by sexual intercourse and the victim having not been habituated to earlier sexual intercourse itself goes to show that the injury suffered by the victim was one that could have been caused only by an act of rape as alleged by the prosecution. Even in identification of the accused by the victim there is no doubt because he was known to the victim. (Para 6)

Though there has been some delay in filing the complaint, the same has been explained by the mother of the victim. The fact that the father was out of station on the date of occurrence is not disputed. In such circumstances since it is a minor who was violated, the possibility of there being hesitation on the part of the mother to lodge a complaint cannot be overruled. Even otherwise, the mere factum of delay in filing complaint in regard to an offence of this nature by itself would not be fatal so as to vitiate the prosecution case. (Para 7). State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699: 2004 Cri LJ 2109.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

[9091] — Ss. 376 and 506 — Rape — False implication — Plea of — Sustainability — Accused was teacher of victim — Stand of accused that he was falsely implicated because the brother of the victim was not successful in the examination and therefore his family had grudge against him, held, unacceptable — The incident involving the accused and mother and brother of the victim took place about a decade back — Not even a remote possibility of the same being the foundation for false implication — That apart, no girl of a tender age and her parents would like to jeopardise her entire future by falsely implicating a person alleging forcible sexual intercourse — Hence contention regarding false implication rejected (Para 22). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

[9092] — Ss. 376 and 506 Pt. II — Rape — Consent — Meaning and inference of — Consent and submission — Distinction between — Victim, a girl whose mental faculties were undeveloped cannot legally give consent — Where such a girl was ravished by accused several times, held, such a victim could not be said to have suffered sexual intercourses with consent — For constituting consent there must be exercise of intelligence based on the knowledge of the significance and the moral effect of the act — Consent is different from submission as every consent involves a submission but the converse does not follow — In law, an act of helpless resignation in the face of inevitable compulsion, quiescence, non-resistance or passive giving-in when the faculty is either clouded by fear or vitiated by duress or impaired due to mental retardation or deficiency, held, cannot be considered to be consent — It has to be a conscious and voluntary act — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114-A (Para 6). Tulshidas Kanolkar v. State of Goa, (2003) 8 SCC 590.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-2003]

[9093] — Ss. 376 Sixthly and 375 — Rape of a girl below sixteen years — Delay of ten days in filing FIR — Explanation that delay caused due to deliberations in the family whether to take the matter involving family honour to the court, held, reasonable — Testimony of prosecutrix consistent save a few minor contradictions and corroborated by her father and brother to whom she had related the details of the occurrence without delay after she was rescued — Conviction under S. 376 and four years' RI upheld. Harpal Singh v. State of H.P., (1981) 1 SCC 560: 1981 SCC (Cri) 208: AIR 1981 SC 361: 1981 Cri LJ 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1980]

[9094] — S. 376(1) — Rape of prosecutrix aged below 16 years — Appreciation of evidence — Evidence of prosecutrix (a school girl) not only corroborated by prosecution witnesses but also by medical evidence — Chemical examiner's report about presence of seminal stains on the lehnga worn by the prosecutrix also supporting the prosecution case — Lack of semen stains on the clothes of the accused was natural as he was examined more than 23 days after the incident — Narration of the incident to several independent witnesses without any discrepancy correctly admitted by trial court under S. 157 of Evidence Act as corroborative of prosecutrix's testimony — Statement of prosecutrix's father that his daughter was aged 15 years at the time of the incident not challenged — X-ray report to the effect that prosecutrix was aged about 16 years given by the doctor who admitted that she was not a specialist in radiology and therefore was not competent to determine the age — On facts held, there was no reason to disbelieve the evidence of the prosecutrix as regards the rape by the accused-respondent — Enmity alleged by the accused for falsely implicating him rightly rejected by trial court on the ground that given the present social ethos in this country, it was improbable that either the girl or her parents would set up such a case — Reasoning given by High Court in disbelieving the prosecutrix's testimony was entirely unacceptable — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 157. State of Karnataka v. Manjanna, (2000) 6 SCC 188: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1031: AIR 2000 SC 2231: 2000 Cri LJ 3471.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and D.P. Wadhwa and Ruma Pal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-2000]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on

[9095] — S. 376(1) (as amended by Act 43 of 1983) — Sentence — Rape on a helpless 13/14 year old girl — Absence of mitigating circumstances on record — Accused deserves deterrent punishment — High Court not justified in reducing the sentence to less than the prescribed minimum without assigning any special and adequate reasons — Merely because the accused would have completed the sentence of imprisonment about 5 years ago is no ground to take a lenient view ignoring the mandate of law — Sentence of 4 years' RI enhanced to 7 years' RI — Accused to be taken in custody to undergo the remaining period of the enhanced sentence

Keeping in view the nature of the offence and the helpless condition in which the prosecutrix a young girl of 13/14 years was placed, the High Court was clearly in error in reducing the sentence imposed upon the respondent and that too without assigning any reasons, much less special and adequate reasons. The High Court appears to have overlooked the mandate of the Legislature as reflected in Section 376(1) IPC. (Para 7)

There are no adequate and special reasons available on the record justifying reduction of sentence. To show mercy in the case of such a heinous crime would be travesty of justice and the plea for leniency is wholly misplaced. (Para 8). State of A.P. v. Bodem Sundara Rao, (1995) 6 SCC 230: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1097: AIR 1996 SC 530.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.S. Paripoornan, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-1995]

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

[9096] — Ss. 376(2) and 302 — Rape and murder of minor aged less than six years — If a "rarest of rare case" — Held, rape is one of the most depraved acts — Such iniquitous, flagitious act becomes abominable when the victim is a child — The diabolic act reaches the lowest level of humanity when the rape is followed by brutal murder — Hence, Supreme Court has no hesitation in holding that present case falls in the rarest of rare category and death sentence awarded by trial court was appropriate — Guidelines and tests for imposition of death sentence laid down in — Bachan Singh, (1980) 2 SCC 684 and Machhi Singh, (1983) 3 SCC 470, pp. 471-72 and p. 489, para 38 [set out in para 26 in SCC], applied — Death sentence awarded by trial court restored

The victim, who was not six years old lost her life on account of bestial acts of the respondent who allegedly raped her and thereafter murdered her. The victim had gone to school and did not return at the usual time. On the next morning her dead body was found in a sugarcane field around 6.00 a.m. She was found lying in a dead condition and blood was oozing from her private parts and there were marks of pressing on her neck. PW 7, the doctor conducted the post-mortem around 2.00 p.m. on the same day and opined that death had occurred within the preceding 24 hours.

Three persons claimed to have seen the accused nearby the place of occurrence between 1.00 p.m. to 2.00 p.m. on the date of occurrence. Two of them, namely, PW 3 and PW 5 claimed to have seen the deceased being carried on a bicycle by the accused who was taking the bicycle with the deceased sitting on the handle-bar thereof. PW 2 stated that he had seen the accused in perplexed state around 2.00 p.m. near the place from where the dead body of the deceased was found. Investigation was undertaken. During such investigation, there was recovery of the accused's underwear as also the undergarment the deceased was wearing.

Allowing the appeals and restoring the death sentence awarded by the trial court,

Held :

Rape is one of the most depraved acts. The iniquitous, flagitious act becomes abominable when the victim is a child. The diabolic act reaches the lowest level of humanity when the rape is followed by brutal murder. The Supreme Court has no hesitation in holding that the case at hand falls in the rarest of rare category and death sentence awarded by the trial court was appropriate. The acquittal of the respondent-accused is clearly unsustainable and is set aside. Guidelines and tests for imposition of death sentence laid down in Bachan Singh, (1980) 2 SCC 684 and Machhi Singh, (1983) 3 SCC 470, pp. 471-72 and p. 489, para 38 [set out in para 26 in SCC], applied. (Paras 2, 24, 26 and 31). State of U.P. v. Satish, (2005) 3 SCC 114: 2005 SCC (Cri) 642: AIR 2005 SC 1000: 2005 Cri LJ 1428.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-2005]

Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681, applied

(2004) 1 All Cri R 760 (All), reversed

[Ed.: But in a similar situation (or worse, of abduction as well) other Benches of the Supreme Court in Surendra Pal Shivbalakpal v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 127 and State of Maharashtra v. Mansingh, (2005) 3 SCC 131, have felt defferently and awarded life imprisonment instead. On the other hand, earlier decisions of the Supreme Court in Laxman Naik v. State of Orissa, (1994) 3 SCC 381: 1994 SCC (Cri) 656; Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358; Kamta Tiwari v. State of M.P., (1999) 9 SCC 581 have held death sentence appropriate where rape and murder of a minor girl was involved. Besides deterrence, retribution still survives as an object of punishment [Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358 and Jacabo George (Dr.) v. State of Kerala, (1994) 3 SCC 430: 1994 SCC (Cri) 774] and one may consider looking at the situation intimately from the perspective of John Grisham: A Time to Kill.]

[9097] — S. 376(2) and 302 — Sentence — Commutation of death sentence — Accused raping and murdering minor after abducting her in middle of the night, while asleep, from her home (after having had an altercation with her mother, brother and uncle, the mother having refused him sexual favours) and throwing body into a pond — Appellant aged 36 years at time of occurrence, impecunious, a migrant labourer and there being no evidence that he had been involved in any other criminal case previously — Held, it could not be said that he would be a menace to society in future, and no materials had been placed on record to draw such a conclusion — This is not a "rarest of rare" case — Death penalty was not warranted — Hence death sentence commuted to life imprisonment

This is not a "rarest of rare case" in which death penalty should be imposed on the appellant. The appellant was aged 36 years at the time of the occurrence and there is no evidence that the appellant had been involved in any other criminal case previously and the appellant was a migrant labourer from U.P. and was living in impecunious circumstances and it cannot be said that he would be a menace to society in future and no materials have been placed on record to draw such a conclusion. The death penalty was not warranted in this case. The conviction of the appellant is confirmed on all the counts, but the sentence of death penalty imposed on him for the offence under Section 302 IPC is commuted to life imprisonment. (Para 13). Surendra Pal Shivbalakpal v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 127: 2005 SCC (Cri) 653: AIR 2004 SC 4862: 2004 Cri LJ 4642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2004]

[Ed.: It is noted in para 9 that the "previous conduct ... would prove that the appellant was prone to do such crime". In this regard see State of U.P. v. Satish, (2005) 3 SCC 114, above.]

[9098] — Ss. 376(2) proviso & 376(2)(f) — Applicability of proviso to S. 376(2) — Rape on child below 12 years of age — Imposition of sentence below the prescribed minimum of 10 years — Impermissibility — Held, normal sentence in such case is not less than 10 years — Courts are obliged to respect the legislative mandate in this regard — Recourse to the aforesaid proviso can be had only for "special and adequate reasons" and not in a casual manner — Whether there exist any "special and adequate reasons" would depend upon a variety of factors and the peculiar facts and circumstances of each case — No hard-and-fast rule of universal application can be laid down in this respect

The legislative mandate to impose a sentence, for the offence of rape on a girl under 12 years of age, for a term which shall not be less than 10 years, but which may extend to life and also to fine reflects the intent of stringency in sentence. The proviso to Section 376(2) IPC, of course, lays down that the court may, for adequate and special reasons to be mentioned in the judgment, impose sentence of imprisonment of either description for a term of less than 10 years. Thus, the normal sentence in a case where rape is committed on a child below 12 years of age, is not less than 10 years' RI, though in exceptional cases "for special and adequate reasons" sentence of less than 10 years' RI can also be awarded. It is a fundamental rule of construction that a proviso must be considered with relation to the principal matter to which it stands as a proviso particularly in such like penal provisions. The courts are obliged to respect the legislative mandate in the matter of awarding of sentence in all such cases. Recourse to the proviso can be had only for "special and adequate reasons" and not in a casual manner. Whether there exist any "special and adequate reasons" would depend upon a variety of factors and the peculiar facts and circumstances of each case. No hard and fast rule can be laid down in that behalf of universal application. (Para 13). Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 1267: 2006 Cri LJ 1679: (2006) 1 KLT 1006.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2006]

[Ed.: See also State of M.P. v. Bala, (2005) 8 SCC 1, State of M.P. v. Makhmal Khan, (2005) 8 SCC 8, State of M.P. v. Sheshrao, (2005) 8 SCC 11(1); State of M.P. v. Rajesh, (2005) 8 SCC 11(2); State of M.P. v. Veerendra Singh, (2005) 8 SCC 11(3); State of M.P. v. Dayanand Dohar, (2005) 8 SCC 12(1); State of M.P. v. Gauri Shankar, (2005) 8 SCC 12(2); State of M.P. v. Govind, (2005) 8 SCC 12(3); State of M.P. v. Parasram, (2005) 8 SCC 13(1); State of M.P. v. Mahesh Bhoomia, (2005) 8 SCC 13(2); State of M.P. v. Mulli, (2005) 8 SCC 13(3); State of M.P. v. Rakesh, (2005) 8 SCC 13(4); State of M.P. v. Killu, (2005) 8 SCC 14(1); State of M.P. v. Vilru, (2005) 8 SCC 14(2).]

[9099] — Ss. 376(2)(b) and 363 — Rape of a child — Circumstantial evidence — Conviction on the basis of — Propriety — Victim, a 3½ years' child at the time of offence (i.e. on 21-1-1989), left in the custody of PW 1 by her parents (i.e. PWs 3 and 9) — Rape alleged to have been committed by respondent when PW 1 left the child in her own house and went to the house of PW 9 to watch a TV programme — Prosecution stating that after the incident, victim narrated the incident to PWs 1, 4 and 9 — But in court, victim unable to recollect what actually transpired at the time of the incident — Evidence indicating that PW 1 trying to protect her brother who could also have been a suspect — Plea of alibi supported by evidence of defence witnesses, not taken into consideration by trial court — Enmity between victim's father and respondent, also not taken into account — On facts, held, High Court rightly concluded that the prosecution failed to establish beyond all reasonable doubt that it was respondent who committed the rape — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 386 and 374 (Paras 6, 3 and 2). State (Andaman & Nicobar Admn.) v. Shyam Raj, (2003) 11 SCC 207: 2004 SCC (Cri) 79.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2003]

[9100] — Ss. 376(2)(c) & 376/106 — Rape of 13 girls of an Ashram by its founder, A-1, systematically abetted by co-accused of the Ashram — Victims being orphans, entirely dependent upon A-1 for their survival, A-1 had dominion/control over them physically, mentally and spiritually — Held, conviction of A-1 under S. 376(2)(c) and sentence of life imprisonment with fine of Rs 5,10,000

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

on each count justified — Conviction of co-accused under Ss. 376/106 and sentence of life imprisonment (except in case of A-3 who had been awarded RI for the period already undergone with fine of Rs 10,000) justified

In the present case, most of the victim girls were orphans brought from Sri Lanka. A-1 provided them food, clothing and shelter. They were entirely dependent on A-1 for their survival. Once they were thrown out by A-1 they had no alternative place to stay. A-1 had dominion/control over the prosecutrix physically, mentally and spiritually. In fact, many of them believed that A-1 was God to them. It is in these circumstances there is no reason why the prosecutrix should depose falsely against A-1 who was the source of their survival physically, mentally and spiritually, by providing shelter, food and clothes to them. The testimony of the prosecutrix inspires confidence, on the basis of which alone conviction can be safely sustained. Moreover, in the instant case the statements of the prosecutrix are well corroborated by medical and other contemporaneous documents. It is also well-established principle of law that minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix should not be a ground for throwing out an otherwise reliable prosecution case. (Paras 33 and 34). Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2005 SC 2132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2005]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on [9101] — S. 376(2)(f) — False implication alleged in a rape case on the ground of enmity — Neither nature of enmity nor gravity of the same stated — Fact of false implication, held, not established — CrPC, 1973, S. 313 (Para 7). State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699: 2004 Cri LJ 2109.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

[9102] — S. 376(2)(f) — Rape — Committed on a girl of eight years — Acquittal by High Court — Propriety — Blood present on private parts of victim, hymen torn and medial side of labia minora inflamed — Victim not habituated to sexual intercourse — Delay in lodging the complaint, explained — Nothing to establish false implication — No doubt regarding identification of accused by victim — Held, High Court erred in reversing the conviction by trial court (Para 7). State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699: 2004 Cri LJ 2109.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

[9103] — S. 376(2)(f) — Rape — Sentence — Leniency in — Rape of minor girl aged 10 years — Conviction by trial court to 10 years' imprisonment (the statutory minimum) — Interference with — When permissible — Accused already in custody for 6 years — In appeal High Court reducing sentence to 7 years on the basis that the accused was a young person who was the only breadearner of his family and his children need his supervision — Permissibility — Held, in view of the settled position in law the judgment of the High Court reducing the sentence to 7 years is clearly unsustainable — Sentence of 10 years as imposed by the trial court restored

In view of the settled position in law the judgment of the High Court reducing the sentence to 7 years is clearly unsustainable and is set aside. The sentence of 10 years as imposed by the trial court is restored. (Para 8). State of Rajasthan v. Madan Singh, (2008) 5 SCC 147: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 550: AIR 2008 SC 1292: 2008 Cri LJ 1939.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2008]

[9104] — S. 376(2)(f) — Rape — Sentence — Reduction of — Sustainability — In the present case, High Court reducing custodial sentence of respondent to 3½ years instead of 7 years as was imposed by trial court — Admittedly, the victim was 10 years of age at the time of commission of offence — Hence, present case was covered by S. 376(2)(f) IPC — Minimum punishment under S. 376(2)(f) is 10 years, provided that for "adequate and special reasons" mentioned in the judgment a sentence of less then 10 years can be imposed — Held, on facts, in the absence of any reason which could have been treated as "special and adequate reason", reduction of sentence by High Court, unsustainable — Trial court should have imposed sentence of 10 years in terms of S. 376(2)(f) — But, as the State had also not questioned the inadequacy of sentence on that ground, the sentence of 7 years as imposed by the trial court is restored — High Court's order reducing the sentence, set aside

It is to be noted that in sub-section (2) of Section 376 IPC more stringent punishment can be awarded taking into account the special features indicated in the said sub-section. The present case is covered by Section 376(2)(f) IPC i.e. when rape is committed on a woman when she is under 12 years of age. Admittedly, in the case at hand the victim was 10 years of age at the time of commission of offence. Unfortunately this aspect appears to have been lost sight of by both the trial court and the High Court and the State has also not questioned the inadequacy of sentence on that ground. (Paras 7 and 5)

The minimum punishment under Section 376(2) IPC is 10 years but the proviso provides that for "adequate and special reasons" mentioned in the judgment a sentence of less then 10 years can be imposed. But, considering the legal position and in the absence of any reason which could have been treated as "special and adequate reason" reduction of sentence as done by the High Court is clearly unsustainable. The trial court should have imposed sentence of 10 years in terms of Section 376(2)(f) IPC. But the State has not questioned the sentence as imposed; the sentence as imposed by the trial court is restored. The High Court's order reducing the sentence is set aside. (Paras 5 and 10). State of Karnataka v. Raju, (2007) 11 SCC 490: AIR 2007 SC 3225: (2007) 58 AIC 39 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 4700.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2007]

Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1; Shailesh Jasvantbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 2 SCC 359: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 499, relied on [9105] — S. 376(2)(f) — Rape of child aged 1½ years — Sentence of 10 years' RI — Enhancement of, when not called for — Ten years' RI and fine of Rs 1000 awarded by trial court upheld by High Court — Appeal preferred before Supreme Court by the accused from jail — Having regard to the facts of the case, especially the age of the victim, notice issued to appellant to show cause why the sentence of 10 years' RI should not be enhanced to life imprisonment — Mitigating circumstances stated on behalf of the appellant viz. appellant being the sole breadwinner, his family suffering, incident occurred 9 years back and appellant is in custody since the date of the incident; appellant and his family suffered great humiliation in the society; appellant has two daughters aged 16 and 10 years and prospects of their marriage have been marred to a great extent due to his conviction and sentence; and sentence of 10 years' imprisonment would be over within a year and if the Court enhances the sentence at this stage, then his family, particularly his two daughters and their future would be ruined for no fault of theirs — Having regard to the extenuating circumstances, specially the fact that appellant's two daughters have come of age and are to be married, held, the present period of incarceration of the appellant in jail is enough and he should not be made to further suffer the consequences of his bestiality (Paras 9 and 20). T.K. Gopal v. State of Karnataka, (2000) 6 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1037: AIR 2000 SC 1669: 2000 Cri LJ 2286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2000]

[9106] — S. 376(2)(f) — Rape of seven-year-old — Appropriate sentence for — "Adequate and special reasons" — What are — Trial court imposing sentence of three years' RI and fine of Rs 1000 — High Court reducing sentence of imprisonment to six months and directing compensation of Rs 25,000 to be paid to victim, on grounds that offence was 12 years old and victim had already been married — Held, improper — Sentence awarded by trial court restored. Urmila v. Raju, (2005) 12 SCC 366.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-1-2005]

[Ed.: See the emphatic holding in (2005) 8 SCC 1 and 8]

[9107] — S. 376(2)(f) — Rape on a girl of eight years — Sentence — Reduction — Accused hardly eighteen years of age at the time of incident — Already served about 6½ years' imprisonment — Was married and had a family — In such circumstances, sentence of ten years' RI imposed by trial court reduced to seven years' RI (Para 8). State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699: 2004 Cri LJ 2109.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

Distinguished in Rajendra Datta Zarekar v. State of Goa, (2007) 14 SCC 560

[9108] — S. 376(2)(f) — Sentence — Rape of minor girl of 8 years by a medical graduate without rupturing her hymen — Victim now 19 years old still unmarried and suffering the agony of the traumatic experience and shame and under an impression that her future chances for getting married and settling down in a respectable family completely lost — High Court while observing that "the respondent's activities were menace to the neighbours" erroneously convicting the accused under S. 354 showing misplaced sympathy to the accused by imposing a grossly inadequate sentence of only fine of Rs 3000 on the ground that accused was gainfully employed and there was nothing to show that he was indulging in his nefarious activities — Having regard to the seriousness and gravity of the repugnant offence committed by the accused

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

under S. 376, held, justice demands award of sentence of 7 years' RI and fine of Rs 25,000 (in default 1½ years' RI) if realised to be paid to the victim girl. Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1992]

[9109] — S. 376(2)(f) — Sentence — Rape on child below 12 years of age — Life sentence — Plea as to imposition of — Held, for said offence the statutorily provided minimum sentence is 10 years and life imprisonment can be awarded in a given case considering the attendant circumstances — In the present case, neither trial court nor High Court indicated any such circumstance/factor — Hence, sentence reduced from life imprisonment to 10 years

Sexual violence apart from being a dehumanising act is an unlawful intrusion on the right of privacy and sanctity of a female. It is a serious blow to her supreme honour and offends her self-esteem and dignity-it degrades and humiliates the victim and where the victim is a helpless innocent child or a minor, it leaves behind a traumatic experience. A rapist not only causes physical injuries but more indelibly leaves a scar on the most cherished possession of a woman i.e. her dignity, honour, reputation and not the least her chastity. Rape is not only a crime against the person of a woman, it is a crime against the entire society. It destroys the entire psychology of a woman and pushes her into deep emotional crisis. It is a crime against basic human rights, and is also violative of the victim's most cherished fundamental right, namely, the right to life contained in Article 21 of the Constitution. The courts are, therefore, expected to deal with cases of sexual crime against women with utmost sensitivity. Such cases need to be dealt with sternly and severely. A socially sensitised judge is a better statutory armour in cases of crime against women than long clauses of penal provisions, containing complex exceptions and provisos. (Para 6). Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 1267: 2006 Cri LJ 1679: (2006) 1 KLT 1006.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2006]

[9110] — Ss. 376(2)(f) and 511 — Applicability — Evidence of child witness (victim of rape herein), in absence of any corroboration — Admissibility — Consideration of — On facts, appellant allegedly raping victim, aged about 6 years — Trial court and High Court relying on evidence of victim and her mother held appellant guilty of offence punishable under Ss. 376/511 IPC and sentenced him to 10 years' RI and fine with default stipulation — Sustainability — Challenge before Supreme Court that evidence of child witness (victim) should not be accepted particularly in absence of any corroboration and that sentence was harsh — State contending that testimony of child witness, particularly in case of this nature, does not require corroboration, if testimony of victim is credible — Also, that victim had immediately after occurrence told her mother about the incident and, therefore, her evidence was of considerable importance — Held, trial court and High Court found evidence of child witness cogent, credible and having grain of truth — High Court found evidence of victim free from any influence — Therefore, trial court and High Court rightly relied upon evidence of victim — Again, relying on Rameshwar case, AIR 1952 SC 54, reiterated that previous statement of accomplice or complainant is to be treated as corroborative — Hence, High Court rightly held appellant guilty — Since age of victim was 6 years at the time of incident, appropriate conviction would have been under S. 376(2)(f) IPC under which permissible sentence is life sentence with minimum of 10 years — Herein, 5 years' custodial sentence with fine imposed by trial court and maintained by High Court would meet the ends of justice — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 118 and 157 (Paras 1 to 5, 8 and 9). Mohd. Kalam v. State of Bihar, (2008) 7 SCC 257: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 27: 2008 Cri LJ 3194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-6-2008]

Panchhi v. State of U.P., (1998) 7 SCC 177: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1561; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54, relied on

[9111] — S. 376(2)(f), proviso — Rape — Sentence — "Adequate and special reasons" must be disclosed by sentencing court for reducing the sentence from the statutory minimum of 10 years' RI — Sentencing court must award the sentence commensurate with the gravity of the offence, having regard to all the relevant facts and circumstances including the demand of the society for justice in case of such heinous crime of rape of innocent helpless children — Trial court convicting the respondent under S. 376 for rape of a minor girl aged 5 years and after taking into account the report of District Probation Officer relating to character, conduct and antecedents of the respondent, it awarding a sentence of 10 years' RI — In appeal, High Court while confirming the convic-

tion, merely stating "having regard to the circumstances of the case, the sentence of 10 years' RI imposed by the Court below is reduced to a period of 5 years' RI" — Held, this amounted to reducing the sentence without assigning any reasons, in a mechanical manner without proper application of mind — High Court was not justified in doing so and was expected to show sensitivity in dealing with such a case — In absence of any extenuating or mitigating circumstances mere long lapse of time and possibility that meanwhile the prosecutrix as also the accused might have got married and settled are not relevant for the Court to reduce the sentence

Normal sentence under Section 376(2) IPC in a case where rape is committed on a child below 12 years of age, is "not less than 10 years' RI", an expression which is pre-emptory in nature. The courts are obliged to respect this legislative mandate when the case falls under Section 376(2). The proviso to Section 376(2) would come into play only when there are "adequate and special reasons" available in a case. Those reasons need to be disclosed in the order/judgment itself so that the appellate forum is in a position to know as to what weighed with the court in awarding a sentence less than the minimum prescribed under the Act. (Para 8)

It is an obligation of the sentencing court to consider all relevant facts and circumstances bearing on the question of sentence and impose a sentence commensurate with the gravity of the offence. The sentencing court must hear the loud cry for justice by the society and more particularly, in cases of heinous crime of rape of innocent helpless children, as in this case, of the victim of crime and respond by imposing a proper sentence. (Para 9)

In the present case the order of the High Court in reducing the sentence from the statutory minimum of 10 years' RI contains no reasons, much less "special or adequate reasons". The sentence has been reduced in a rather mechanical manner without proper application of mind. It appears that the provisions of Section 376(2) IPC were not at all present to the mind of the Court. The Supreme Court has time and again drawn attention of the subordinate courts to the sensitivity which is required of the court to deal with all cases and more particularly in cases involving crime against women. (Para 11)

It is not possible to accept the contention that it being an old case the order of the High Court need not be interfered with. There are no extenuating or mitigating circumstances available on the record which may justify imposition of sentence less than the prescribed minimum on the respondent. To show mercy in a case like this, would be travesty of justice. There are no reasons, much less sufficient and adequate reasons available on the record to impose a lesser sentence than the prescribed minimum. (Para 14)

It is also not possible to accept the contention that because of the long time which has elapsed subsequent to the date of offence and the possibility that the prosecutrix, as also the respondent, may have got married and settled in life during the pendency of these proceedings, fine instead of sentence be imposed. These factors may be relevant for consideration by the executive or constitutional authorities, if they choose to remit the sentence on being so approached. (Para 16). State of A.P. v. Polamala Raju, (2000) 7 SCC 75: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1284: AIR 2000 SC 2854.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-8-2000]

State of A.P. v. Bodem Sundara Rao, (1995) 6 SCC 230: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1097; State of Karnataka v. Krishnappa, (2000) 4 SCC 75: 2000 SCC (Cri) 755; Kamal Kishore v. State of H.P. (2000) 4 SCC 502: 2000 SCC (Cri) 833, relied on

[9112] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 302 and 201 r/w S. 34 — Gang rape and murder of child aged 7-8 years — Conviction justified — Sentence to be imposed — Appellants alleged to have lifted the little girl from the waiting room, where she was sleeping along with her parents and younger brother, committed rape and then murdered her — Appellants seen talking in a suspicious manner — No explanation offered by Appellant 2 as regards his stained undergarments/injuries on his face (and which he accepted) — Lock and key of waiting room always in possession of Appellant 1 (chowkidar) — Absence of Appellant 2 from the bus in question, his effort to sleep in another bus leaving his own bus, his absence for about 1 to 1½ hour, and change of his garments during that period, proved — Appellant 1 making voluntary judicial confession wherein the roles played by the appellants were explicitly detailed — Possibility of some other passenger committing the offence ruled out on basis of circumstantial evidence — Held, S. 30 Evidence Act, 1872, can be taken aid of to take into consideration the confessional effect of the statements made by Appellant 1 as against Appellant 2 for arriving at an opinion that by reason thereof involvement of both of them amply stood proved — Judicial confession of Appellant 1, statement of Appellant 2 in his examination under CrPC 1973, S. 313 and other circumstantial evidence, prove the guilt of the appellants beyond reasonable doubt — Death sentence reduced to rigorous life imprisonment

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

Appellants were charged with and convicted for commission of offences under Sections 376(2)(g), 302 and 201 read with Section 34 of the Penal Code, 1860 for rape and murder of one B (deceased) aged 7-8 years. Deceased along with her parents and younger brother was travelling to Dimapur (State of Nagaland) in a private transport service known as Network Travels from Dharmanagar (Tripura). They reached Guwahati at around 10.30 p.m. on 12-7-2002. There was no connecting bus to Dimapur at that time. Appellant 1 was a night chowkidar of the waiting room of the said Network Travels. He represented that they could stay there for the night and therefore should not have any apprehension in regard to their safety. Their luggage was carried by Appellant 1 to the waiting room. The waiting room had two openings. It was covered by grills. Only the front gate was open, which was kept under lock and key, the key whereof was with Appellant 1. PW 23 (father of the deceased) and the two children slept. However, PW 22 (mother of the deceased) stayed awake. Appellant 1 insisted to her repeatedly that she should go to sleep stating that as the waiting room would be locked, there was nothing for her to worry about. As she had not been sleeping, Appellant 1, allegedly, scolded her to do so. At that time, a bus bearing No. AS 25C 1476 arrived at the said bus-stop. P, Appellant 2 was the "handyman" of the said bus. While the manager, driver and the conductor slept in the said bus, he did not. He was seen talking with Appellant 1.

PW 22 slept for a while and got up when her son cried out. She did not find B and raised hue and cry. They requested Appellant 1 to open the gates of the waiting room. He showed his reluctance at the first instance. He was thereafter told about the missing of the girl. On being so informed, he opined that she might be somewhere else within the room. A search was carried out in the three buses, which were at the bus-stop belonging to the travel agency. Nearabout places as also the railway station were searched. The bathroom situated in the said premises was also searched.

The dead body of B was found in a septic tank on 14-7-2000. FIR was lodged wherein apart from Appellant 1, suspicion was raised about the involvement of driver, PW 26, conductor, PW 25 and the handyman, P Appellant 2 herein of the bus bearing No. AS 25C 1476. The said bus had already left for its destination at about 6.30 in the morning. Even prior thereto, PW 2 was persuaded that the said bus be permitted to leave early for Jorhat, which was declined.

During the course of investigation, Appellant 1 made a confessional statement before the Magistrate under Section 164 CrPC. He gave a vivid description as to how the offence was committed by him and Appellant 2. On basis of circumstantial evidence and judicial confession of Appellant 1, appellants were convicted and sentenced to death by the trial court. Their appeal was dismissed by the High Court. Hence, the present appeal. Bishnu Prasad Sinha v. State of Assam, (2007) 11 SCC 467: AIR 2007 SC 848: (2007) 53 AIC 166 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1145.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2007]

[9113] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 302/34 and 201 — Rape and murder — Sentence — Death sentence justified — Rarest of rare cases — Jail officer sending to his quarter a guard and a prisoner to work in the house and in the garden attached thereto, respectively — 16-year-old daughter of the said officer was at that time alone in the quarter and was preparing for her Class 10th examination — Taking advantage of her loneliness, both the guard and the prisoner committing rape on her, strangulating and then stabbing her, removing her cycle and throwing her dead body in septic tank — In such circumstances sentence of death, held, was the only proper punishment — CrPC, 1973, S. 354(3) (Para 36). Molai v. State of M.P., (1999) 9 SCC 581: AIR 2000 SC 177.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.P. Kurdukar, K.T. Thomas and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-1999]

State of M.P. v. Molai, 1999 Cri LJ 2698 (MP), affirmed

[9114] — Ss. 376/34 and 304 Pt. II/34 — Committing rape and causing death of a female child aged 4 years by two respondents — Prosecution case based on circumstantial evidence — Circumstances found established on the basis of evidence of PWs — Post-mortem examination report showing that the child was violently and bestially ravished, molested, raped and sodomised — Child died due to "intracranial damage consequent upon surface force impact to the head" — Trial court convicting the accused under Ss. 364, 376, 377 and 302 r/w S. 34 on the basis of established circumstances and sentencing the first respondent to life imprisonment and the second respondent to death for murder and awarding lesser sentences for the remaining counts — But High Court acquitting both the respondents — Held on facts, though accused-respondents cannot be convicted on charge of murder but they had knowledge that the acts done by them on the child of tender age were likely to cause her death — Hence both of them are liable to be convicted under Ss. 376 and 377 r/w S. 34 and S. 304 Pt. II r/w S. 34 and sentenced to life imprisonment

On the day of occurrence, mother (PW 10) of the victim, a female child aged 4 years, went to factory for work leaving the child in the custody of PW 8 who was residing close by. Accused-Respondent 1 (A-1), who was known to PWs 10 and 8, took the child and her clothes and utensils by about noon during the short time when PW 8 had gone out to fetch milk. When PW 10 came home in the night, she learnt from PW 8 that her daughter had been taken by A-1. So she went to A-1's house at about 9 p.m. There she found her child lying completely nude next to accused-Respondent 2 (A-2) on the second floor of the house, who was then deep in his sleep. Then A-1 who was found in an inebriated condition, hurled a remark that he had despatched the deceased to heaven. It was then she realised that her child was not breathing. PW 10 Sharda then took the child to the hospital. The doctor who initially examined her noted only "multiple bruises all over the body" in the Medico-Legal Certificate (MLC) and pronounced her dead. But the doctor (PW 1) who conducted autopsy on her body gave full details in his post-mortem report about the features noticed by him on the dead body. The corpse was full of abrasions and contusions. The prominent among them were counted by the doctor as 25 in number and he described the situs and dimensions of all of them. Among them, oval fashioned multiple abrasions on the left cheek appeared to him as marks of biting. Both the upper and lower lips of the child were bruised violently. Marks of violent handling of both the thighs, lower abdomen and pubic region were also described by the doctor. The doctor noted that the vaginal orifice was so badly mutilated that one middle finger could be easily admitted into it. Even the tongue was not spared in that violence. The doctor also examined the head injury and opined that the child died "due to intracranial damage consequent upon surface force impact to the head". The Sessions Court accepted this medical report as reliable. It found that the prosecution had established the following circumstances: (1) A-1 had taken the child from the house of PW 8 by about noon on the fateful day; (2) the child was recovered from the house of A-1 and she was then found breathless; (3) the child was lying naked by the side of A-2 who was in deep sleep when PW 10 lifted her up; (4) A-1 who was then in an inebriated condition, blurted out that the child was sent to heaven; (5) the bloodstained knickers of the victim were later recovered from the house of A-2 on the basis of the statement given to the police. The trial court concluded on the strength of those circumstances that both the respondents are liable to be convicted for murder, rape and unnatural offence, while A-1 was additionally liable for kidnapping the child for murder. Accordingly the trial court convicted both the respondents under Sections 364, 376, 377 and 302 r/w Section 34 IPC and sentenced A-2 to death and A-1 to life imprisonment on the charge of murder and awarded lesser sentences for the remaining counts. However, the High Court doubted the correctness of the medical report of PW 1 in view of the entry made in the MLC by the doctor who had first examined her. The High Court also found discrepancy in the evidence of PWs 8, 10 and 12 (a neighbour). The High Court also declined to place any weight on the circumstances relating to recovery of bloodstained knickers of the victim on the ground that the seizure memo was not attested by any independent witness. Thus the High Court declined to believe the police version as true and consequently it acquitted the two accused-respondents. Disposing of the State's appeal,

Thus on consideration of the entire evidence in this case, there is no doubt that the trial court had come to the correct conclusion that the two respondents were the rapists who subjected the child to such savage ravishment. The Division Bench of the High Court has grossly erred in interfering with such a correct conclusion made by the trial court as the reasons adopted by the High Court for such interference are very tenuous. Nonetheless, it is difficult to enter upon a finding that the respondents are equally guilty of murder of the child. The opinion of PW 1 that the child died due to "intracranial damage consequent upon surface force impact to the head" was made with reference to the subdural haematoma which resulted in subarachnoid haemorrhage. Such a consequence happened during the course of the violent ravishment committed by either both or by one of the rapists without possibly having any intention or even knowledge that their action would produce any such injury. Even so, the rapists cannot disclaim knowledge that the acts done by them on a little infant of such a tender age were likely to cause its death. Hence they cannot escape conviction from the offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. In the result the impugned judgment of the High Court is set aside and the conviction passed by the trial court under Sections 376 and 377 read with Section 34 IPC is restored. The trial court awarded the maximum sentence to the respondents under the said counts i.e. imprisonment for life. The fact-situation in this case does not justify any reduction of that sentence. The respondents are also liable to be convicted under Section 304 Part II, read with Section 34 IPC though it is unnecessary to award any sentence thereunder, in view of the sentence of imprisonment for life awarded to the respondents under the other two counts. (Paras 23 and 24). State, Govt. of NCT of Delhi v. Sunil, (2001) 1 SCC 652: 2001 SCC (Cri) 248: 2001 Cri LJ 504.

6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-2000]

State v. Ramesh, 1998 Cri LJ 4233 (Del), reversed

[9115] — Ss. 376 (as amended in 1983)/511 or 354 — Applicable provision — After finding the accused guilty under Ss. 376/511, even in absence of a charge under S. 376 read with S. 511, held, High Court should have convicted him under Ss. 376/511 by invoking S. 222, CrPC and not under S. 354 — Quantum of punishment — Determination of — Keeping in view the objects of 1983 amendment to S. 376, held, no person committing or attempting to commit rape should be allowed to escape punishment — Having found the accused guilty, the quantum of punishment must be decided in accordance with law without being influenced by the press, electronic media or public agitation, as a trial by such agencies is the very antithesis of rule of law — While imposing fine and apportioning the whole or part thereof to the victim, the damage caused to her and even to her family should be taken into consideration — Father of eight-year-old daughter found guilty of attempting rape on a girl aged below twelve years and also found guilty under S. 57 of Bombay Children Act — High Court, however, setting aside the conviction under Ss. 376/511 and instead convicting him under S. 354 IPC and sentencing him to rigorous imprisonment for the period already undergone (only 33 days) and to a fine of Rs 40,000 of which Rs 25,000 was to be apportioned to the complainant (father of the prosecutrix in this case) — High Court upholding the respondent's conviction under S. 57 of the Bombay Act but restricting the sentence thereunder to the period of imprisonment already undergone — Matter coming up before the Supreme Court 11 long years after the incident and by then the fine imposed by the High Court having already been paid by the accused and the complainant having withdrawn his share of the fine — In such circumstances while converting the conviction of the accused from one under S. 354 IPC to that under Ss. 376/511 IPC, held, a sentence of five years' RI and a fine of Rs 40,000 would meet the ends of justice — Conviction and sentence under S. 57 of Bombay Children Act, however, affirmed — CrPC, 1973, S. 222 — Bombay Children Act, 1948 (71 of 1948), S. 57 — Law Commission Reports 42nd, 69th and 84th — Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1983

The accused-respondent was convicted by the trial court for offences under Section 376 of IPC and Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act, 1948 for having committed rape on a girl of eight years of age on 24-9-1986 and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 7 years and to pay fine of Rs 5000 and for offence under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act he was sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one year and to pay a fine of Rs 500. The substantive sentences were ordered to run concurrently. The Bombay High Court upset the conviction under Section 376 IPC and instead convicted him for an offence under Section 354 IPC and sentenced him to suffer rigorous imprisonment which he had already undergone (which was 33 days in all) and to pay fine of Rs 40,000 out of which Rs 25,000 was directed to be paid to the complainant who was the father of the girl. The conviction for the offence under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act was upheld but the sentence was reduced to the imprisonment already undergone. Cross appeals were filed against the High Court's decision. While the State of Maharashtra filed appeal against the conviction and sentence of the accused by the High Court praying for his conviction under Section 376 IPC and for enhancement of his sentence to a minimum of 10 years, the accused filed appeal against his very conviction and sentence under Section 354 IPC and Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act. On the question of sentence under Sections 376/511, IPC, the accused-respondent contended that when the offence was committed the accused had also a daughter of 8 years of age and that a long time had elapsed since the offence was committed and that in terms of the judgment of the High Court the accused had already deposited Rs 40,000 out of which Rs 25,000 had already been withdrawn by the father of the prosecutrix. It was submitted that if the Court came to the conclusion that the sentence had to be enhanced then only the amount of fine could be raised. Dismissing the respondent's appeal and partly allowing the State's appeal

Held :

The circumstances of the case show that the accused intended to commit rape on the girl. In the commission of that crime, he laid the girl on the seat in the Maruti car and then laid himself over her. He pulled down her knickers and also opened the zip of his pants and took out his male organ. He pressed his male organ on the private parts of the girl. But since he discharged, he could not penetrate and was unable to complete the offence of rape. However, it is clear that he did attempt to commit rape.

The High Court after having come to the conclusion that the accused was guilty of an offence under Sections 376/511 of the IPC could not have convicted the accused for an offence under Section 354 IPC. Section 511 IPC provides punishment for attempting to commit offences punishable with imprisonment for life or other imprisonment. In the instant case since the girl was under 12 years of age and the Sessions Judge having found that offence of rape had been committed could not have awarded sentence of 7 years when the law prescribes minimum sentence of rigorous imprisonment for a term not less than 10 years, unless exceptional circumstances existed. However, the State of the complainant did not come up in appeal in the High Court for enhancement of the sentence. Though there was no charge under Section 376 read with Section 511 IPC, under Section 222 CrPC when a person is charged for an offence he may be convicted of an attempt to commit such offence although the attempt is not separately charged.

The respondent's plea that in case the court took a decision to enhance the sentence the amount of fine could be raised, cannot be accepted. A heinous crime has been committed and the accused must suffer for the consequences. A rapist not only violates the victim's personal integrity but leaves indelible marks on the very soul of the helpless female. The girl of 8 years must have undergone a traumatic experience. Despite the 11 year long lapse of time after the offence, keeping the objects of the 1983 amendment to Section 376 of IPC in view, the law as it exists now and the decisions of the Supreme Court on the question of sentence, the message is loud and clear that no person who commits or attempts to commit rape shall escape punishment.

Considering the whole aspect of the matter, it has to be held that a sentence of five years' rigorous imprisonment and fine of Rs 40,000 will meet the ends of justice. The fine has already been paid, out of that Rs 25,000 has been withdrawn by the father of the girl as per direction of the High Court which is upheld. The conviction of the accused-respondent is converted from one under Section 354 IPC to that under Sections 376/511 IPC and he is sentenced as aforesaid. The conviction and sentence of the accused under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act as ordered by the High Court shall, however, stand. The sentences shall run concurrently. State of Maharashtra v. Rajendra Jawanmal Gandhi, (1997) 8 SCC 386: AIR 1997 SC 3986.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1997]

7. Abduction/Kidnapping/Trafficking and rape

[9116] — Ss. 375, 376 and 366 — Rape — Appreciation of evidence — Conviction justified — On facts, held, undoubtedly, victim was taken away from lawful custody of her parents and was subjected to rape by appellant-accused and coerced to indulge in prostitution — Thus, case certainly bordered on trafficking of women — As she had remained under constant threat and coercion, she could not share her agony with any person who could help her — There is nothing on record to show that prosecution could not prove the case against appellant beyond reasonable doubt under Ss. 366/376 — Hence, conviction proper (Paras 16 and 17). Fateh Chand v. State of Haryana, (2009) 15 SCC 543: AIR 2009 SC 2729: (2009) 81 AIC 216 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 3942.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

[9117] — Ss. 375, 376 and 366 — Rape — Delay in lodging/Filing FIR — Case of taking away victim fraudulently and subjecting her to rape by appellant-accused and forcing her to indulge in prostitution by coercion — Delay was bound to occur as FIR was filed only after return of victim from her captivity after one-and-a-half years — Reasons for which she could not come back or inform her parents, held, stood well explained by victim that she was given threat by appellant that dead body of some other girl had been identified by her parents to be of the victim and thus if she went back, her parents would be in difficulty — She had been living under a constant threat and could not muster courage to inform any person — CrPC, 1973, Section 154 (Paras 14 and 13). Fateh Chand v. State of Haryana, (2009) 15 SCC 543: AIR 2009 SC 2729: (2009) 81 AIC 216 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 3942.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

7. Abduction/Kidnapping/Trafficking and rape (contd.)

[9118] — Ss. 376, 147, 323/149, 342, 458 and 366 — Abduction and rape — Conviction justified — Marriage alleged by rapist not proved — Appellants convicted under Ss. 147, 323/149, 342, 458 and 366, while Appellant 1, also additionally convicted under S. 376 — Five accused armed with iron rod and lathis alleged to have abducted the prosecutrix (PW 5) and assaulted PW 2 during the occurrence — It was further alleged that they dressed her in new ornaments and clothes and Appellant 1 raped her on two consecutive nights — Defence of Appellant 1 that since victim was married to him there was no rape as contended, rejected by courts below — No evidence of marriage as claimed brought on record — DW 2 in his cross-examination admitting that Kazi wrote their nikah — But no signature or thumb impression was obtained and Kazi Y who was claimed to have solemnised the nikah was not examined — DW 1 who is claimed to have settled the marriage accepted that same is the procedure for proving the marriage — Thus, factum of marriage not proved — Held, that being so the conviction of Appellant 1 as recorded by trial court and maintained by High Court cannot be faulted — So far as the role played by Appellant 2 is concerned, the same was clearly established by the evidence of injured witnesses PW 2 and PW 4, apart from the evidence of PW 5 (prosecutrix) — Hence, his conviction also sustained — But so far as other appellants were concerned there was no evidence to link them with crime — Hence, their conviction set aside (Paras 8 and 9). Neku Khan v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 11 SCC 86: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1245: AIR 2009 SC 1954: (2009) 1 ECrN 859 (SC): (2009) 75 AIC 132 (SC): (2009) 1 APLJ 41 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-2009]

[9119] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — Abduction and rape — Appreciation of evidence — Principles — Course of normal human conduct of an Indian woman in such a situation to be kept in mind — Prosecutrix abducted by three young men in a car when she was coming out of examination centre and after committing rape leaving her at the same place next morning — Ignorance of the prosecutrix about the make, etc. of car in which she was abducted or failure to give colour of the car, though given in the FIR, does not affect reliability of her testimony — Prosecutrix abducted under threat of death — Hence she cannot be discredited for not raising an alarm when being abducted — Negligence of the police officer in not tracing out the driver or car cannot be a ground to reject her testimony — Conduct of the prosecutrix in not complaining to the teachers or other girl students not unnatural — Held, in the circumstances of the case testimony of the prosecutrix suffers from no infirmity and can be acted upon without looking for corroboration

The courts must, while evaluating evidence, remain alive to the fact that in a case of rape, no self-respecting woman would come forward in a court just to make a humiliating statement against her honour such as is involved in the commission of rape on her. In cases involving sexual molestation, supposed considerations which have no material effect on the veracity of the prosecution case or even discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix should not, unless the discrepancies are such which are of fatal nature, be allowed to throw out an otherwise reliable prosecution case. The inherent bashfulness of the females and the tendency to conceal outrage of sexual aggression are factors which the courts should not overlook.

The prosecutrix was a village girl. She was a student of Xth class. It was wholly irrelevant and immaterial whether she was ignorant of the difference between a Fiat, an Ambassador or a Master car. Again, the statement of the prosecutrix at the trial that she did not remember the colour of the car, though she had given the colour of the car in the FIR was of no material effect on the reliability of her testimony.

The prosecutrix in her statement categorically asserted that as soon as she was pushed inside the car she was threatened by the accused to keep quiet and not to raise any alarm, otherwise she would be killed. Under these circumstances to discredit the prosecutrix for not raising an alarm while the car was passing through the bus adda is a travesty of justice. The court overlooked the situation in which a poor helpless minor girl had found herself in the company of three desperate young men who were threatening her and preventing her from raising any alarm. Again, if the investigating officer did not conduct the investigation properly or was negligent in not being able to trace out the driver or the car, how can that become a ground to discredit the testimony of the prosecutrix? The prosecutrix had no control over the investigating agency and the negligence of an investigating officer could not affect the credibility of the statement of the prosecutrix. The trial court fell in error for discrediting the testimony of the prosecutrix on that account.

A girl, in a tradition-bound non-permissive society in India, would be extremely reluctant even to admit that any incident which is likely to reflect upon her chastity had occurred, being conscious of the danger of being ostracized by the society or being looked down upon by the society. Her not informing the teachers or her friends at the examination centre under the circumstances cannot detract from her reliability. In the normal course of human conduct, this unmarried minor girl, would not like to give publicity to the traumatic experience she had undergone and would feel terribly embarrassed in relation to the incident to narrate it to her teachers and others overpowered by a feeling of shame and her natural inclination would be to avoid talking about it to anyone, lest the family name and honour is brought into controversy. Therefore her informing her mother only on return to the parental house and no one else at the examination centre prior thereto is in accord with the natural human conduct of a female. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

[9120] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — Abduction and rape — Sentence — Mitigating factors — The three respondent accused acquitted by the trial court more than a decade ago and since then not involved in any other offence — They aged between 21-24 years at the time of occurrence and by now all of them and the prosecutrix got married and settled down in life — Held, sentence of 5 years' RI and a fine of Rs 5000 each is appropriate for offence under S. 376 — But, in the circumstances of the case, it is not desirable to award any compensation particularly as no scheme as suggested in Delhi Domestic Working Women's Forum case has been drawn up. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

Distinguished in State of M.P. v. Bablu Natt, (2009) 2 SCC 272*

But Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. in a later case of State of Karnataka v. Krishnappa, (2000) 4 SCC 75 refused reliance on the above decision by the accused and restored the sentence of 10 years fixed by the trial court for offence under S. 376 IPC See discussion on this aspect in Kamal Kishore v. State of H.P., (2000) 4 SCC 502 at 508

[9121] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — "Against her will" and "without her consent" — Case of kidnapping and rape — Absence of any alarm being raised by prosecutrix at public places, while being taken to other places — She being under constant threat — Inference of willingness to accompany accused — Not made out — Doubt about truthfulness of her evidence — Not created — Held, submission of respondent-accused (A-1), that no alarm was raised by prosecutrix at bus-stand or other places, where she was taken, created serious doubt about truthfulness of her evidence, rejected, as it overlooks situation in which prosecutrix was placed in — She had been kidnapped by two adult males, one of them (A-1) wielded a firearm and threatened her and she was taken away from her village — In such circumstances, she made sensible decision not to raise an alarm — Any alarm at unknown place might have endangered her life — Absence of alarm by her at public place, cannot lead to an inference that she had willingly accompanied A-1 and A-2 (another accused) — Circumstances made her a submissive victim and that does not mean that she was inclined and willing to have intercourse with A-1 — She had no free act of mind during her stay with A-1, as she was under constant fear (Para 30). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Prakash Singh v. Union of India, (2006) 8 SCC 1: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 417, relied on.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

[9122] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — Case of kidnapping and rape — Minor contradictions and omissions in testimony of prosecutrix — Prosecutrix being illiterate and rustic young woman — Evidence consistent in material aspects — Held, prosecutrix being illiterate and rustic young woman, some contradictions and omissions were natural, as her recollection, observance, memory and narration of chain of events may not be precise — Conviction restored (Para 29). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

Prakash Singh v. Union of India, (2006) 8 SCC 1: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 417, relied on

[9123] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — Kidnapping and rape — Appreciation of evidence — Guilt established — Conviction restored — Prosecutrix kidnapped from lawful custody of her brother, by A-1 (respondent-accused) and A-2 — She was taken to another place under threat and kept in a rented room for many days, where A-1 committed forcible sexual intercourse upon her — Whenever she asked A-1 for return to her village, she was threatened and her mouth was gagged — Held, evidence of prosecutrix was reliable and rightly acted upon by trial court — Except bald

7. Abduction/Kidnapping/Trafficking and rape (contd.)

statement of A-1 under S. 313 CrPC, that he was falsely implicated due to enmity, nothing brought on record that may probabilise that prosecutrix had motive to falsely implicate him — Delay in registration of FIR, also reasonably explained — Judgment of High Court not only cryptic and perfunctory but it also did not take into consideration crucial evidence on record — A-1, convicted of serious crime of kidnapping and rape, acquitted on flimsy grounds — There was no application of mind to evidence of prosecutrix at all — High Court not at all justified in taking a different view or conclusion from trial court — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 374 and 313 (Paras 29 to 38). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

[9124] — Ss. 376, 363 and 366-A — Rape, kidnapping and procuration of minor girl — Age of minor — Benefit of doubt — When available — Prosecution failing to prove age of prosecutrix — Prosecutrix found as being habitual to sex and her secondary sexual characteristics well developed (as per clinical report of PW 1) — Appellant-accused frequently visiting prosecutrix's house — Prosecutrix in love with appellant, never resisting being repeatedly deflowered by him — Allegation that prosecutrix under threat accompanied appellant on a bicycle to another village where she was raped by appellant and then brought back home — Non-performance of tests for proving age of prosecutrix prescribed by the doctor, held, is a serious flaw in prosecution version — In such circumstances, held, a close and careful examination of age of prosecutrix is imperative, which if not proved, accused is entitled to benefit of doubt, as in present case

The appellant was convicted by the trial court under Sections 363, 366-A and 376 IPC. The appellant belonged to the same caste and gotra of the prosecutrix and he was visiting the house of the prosecutrix frequently. The finding of the High Court is that the prosecutrix fell in love with the appellant. The High Court also found that she did not ever resist her being repeatedly deflowered by the appellant.

The appellant submitted before the court that he was falsely implicated. No defence evidence was adduced on behalf of the appellant. Admittedly, no test identification parade was conducted in this case. The trial court on the basis of evidence on record came to the conclusion that the appellant kidnapped a minor girl and induced her to go to Village Kalka Madlya and committed rape on her and convicted the appellant. The High Court also found that the offences under Sections 363, 366-A and 376 IPC are proved against the appellant. The appellant aggrieved by the impugned judgment preferred this appeal on various grounds.

Allowing the appeal of the accused,

Held :

The short question in this appeal was as to whether the prosecutrix was a minor. It is clearly borne out from the evidence on record that the appellant belonged to the same caste and gotra of the prosecutrix and was a frequent visitor to the house of the prosecutrix. There was a love affair between them and the court also observed that she did not ever resist her being repeatedly deflowered by the appellant. (Paras 24 and 23)

PW 1, who had clinically examined the prosecutrix, found that her secondary sex characters were well developed. PW 1, after clinical examination of the prosecutrix, categorically observed that possibility cannot be ruled out that the prosecutrix was habitual to sex. In her report, PW 1 also stated that keeping in view the clinical examination, the possibility of rape cannot be ruled out. PW 2 made medico-legal examination of the appellant and found that he had the ability to perform sexual intercourse. In this background, close and careful determination of the age of the prosecutrix is imperative. (Paras 24, 7 and 23)

In a criminal case, the conviction of the appellant cannot be based on an approximate date which is not supported by any record. It would be quite unsafe to base conviction on an approximate date. PW 8, the father of the prosecutrix also could not give the correct date of birth of the prosecutrix. PW 8 stated that he was giving an approximate date without any basis or record. (Para 26)

The failure of getting the prosecutrix examined from the dental surgeon or the radiologist despite the fact that she was referred to them by PW 1 is a serious flaw in the prosecution version. It is not a rule that all these tests must be performed in all cases, but in the instant case, in the absence of primary evidence, reports of the dental surgeon and the radiologist would have helped in arriving at the conclusion regarding the age of the prosecutrix. (Para 24)

The prosecution also failed to produce any admission form of the school which would have been primary evidence regarding the age of the prosecutrix. The school leaving certificate produced by the prosecution was also procured six days after the incident and three days after the arrest of the appellant. As per that certificate also, she joined the school in the middle of the session and left the school in the middle of the session. The attendance in the school of 100 days is also not reliable. The prosecutrix was admitted in the school by A, her brother. A was not examined. The alleged school leaving certificate on the basis of which the age was entered in the school was not produced. (Para 25)

On consideration of the totality of the facts and circumstances of this case, it would be unsafe to convict the appellant when there are so many infirmities, holes and lacunae in the prosecution version. The appellant is clearly entitled to the benefit of doubt and consequently the appeal filed by the appellant deserves to be allowed. The appellant is directed to be released forthwith, if not required in any case. (Para 27). Sunil v. State of Haryana, (2010) 1 SCC 742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2009]

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, referred to

[9125] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Abduction and rape — Defence of consent — But prosecutrix not raising alarm out of fear — Prosecutrix abducted by the appellants at the point of knife — When she tried to resist or shout she was given a thrashing and threatened to be killed — She categorically stating that she was given a slap on the mouth when she tried to resist — Her statement supported by medical evidence — Prosecutrix made to sit on the bar of the cycle while one of the appellants was driving the cycle and the other was sitting on the back of the cycle — Therefore, it was difficult for the prosecutrix to raise any alarm — Other circumstances mentioned in the judgment of the trial court also consistent with the guilt of the appellants — Held, in the circumstances of the case, the prosecutrix was not a consenting party — Conviction upheld. Harishankar v. State of Maharashtra, (1997) 11 SCC 191: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1065.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Faizan Uddin and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-1997]

[9126] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Abduction and rape of a minor girl aged about 10/11 years — Prosecutrix being below the age of consent finding of the High Court that she was of a loose moral character and might have gone with the accused herself demolishing the case of abduction, held, not sustainable — Conviction restored — However, sentence reduced to the period already undergone which was about 5 years' RI. State of U.P. v. Om, 1998 SCC (Cri) 1343.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-1997]

[9127] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Accused giving lift to the prosecutrix and her two companions in his truck and committing rape on the prosecutrix when her companions had gone to take water — Accused driving away the truck with the prosecutrix leaving her two companions near a Railway Station — Prosecutrix found below the driver's seat when intercepted by the police — Complaint made by the prosecutrix to her companions immediately after the incident ruling out the defence version that she was a consenting party — Ghagra of the prosecutrix and underwear of the accused found to be stained with semen and spermatozoa — Held, in the circumstances of the case, conviction of accused is justified. Ranvir Singh v. State of M.P., (1996) 11 SCC 595.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-1996]

[9128] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Conviction confirmed — Appellant-accused (three in number) alleged to have gagged mouth of prosecutrix, bodily lifted her to house of one of the accused and gang raped her — On failure by police concerned to take necessary action, a written complaint (Ext. DA) was filed before the SSP, who forwarded the same to DSP, DW 2 — Facts establishing diabolical role played by police, in particular DW 2 to sabotage entire prosecution case in order to save accused — On the other hand, testimonies of prosecutrix and PW 4 found credible — Hence held, no interference with impugned judgment convicting appellants called for (Paras 2, 3 and 9 to 14). Jaswant Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 16 SCC 201: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 243: AIR 2010 SC 894: 2010 Cri LJ 41: (2010) 2 ECrN 305 (SC): (2010) 85 AIC 193 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-2009]

[9129] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Prosecutrix alleged to have been forcibly taken away by accused and gang raped — Charge under S. 366 not established — Hence, submission that conviction under S. 376(2)(g) on the same evidence was uncalled for — Tenability — Held, evidence of rape is distinct from the other charge and the matter should be examined in that background — Merely because the accused have been acquitted for the offence punishable under S. 366 IPC is ipso facto no reason to disbelieve the entire prosecution story on this solitary ground — Veracity of the story projected by the prosecution qua allegations of rape would be required to be examined (Paras 6 and 13). Raju v. State of M.P., (2008) 15 SCC 133: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 751: AIR 2009 SC 858: (2009) 74 AIC 65 (SC).

7. Abduction/Kidnapping/Trafficking and rape (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2008]

Raja Ram v. State of M.P., (1994) 2 SCC 568: 1994 SCC (Cri) 573; Arokia Thomas v. State of T.N., (2006) 10 SCC 542: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 140; Suresh Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2003) 4 SCC 128: 2003 SCC (Cri) 801, followed

[9130] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Rape — Conviction reversed — Appellant-accused alleged to have abducted PW 4 allegedly a minor girl, maidservant of PW 2 & PW 3, and took her to a hotel and raped her — Prosecutrix roaming in the city by rickshaws/buses along with appellant for a long time, going to the hotel without any protest, accompanying the appellant to the room, spending the whole night with him, coming out of the hotel after checking out from the hotel, without raising any hue or cry or informing anybody that appellant had misbehaved with her in any manner — Held, such conduct of prosecutrix makes prosecution case unbelievable — No reason indicated as to why in absence of any allegation of threat or coercion, prosecutrix had not raised any alarm or informed any person on the road — Doctor who examined her, found no injury of any kind on her body or private parts, and opined that she was used to sexual intercourse — Further, there were serious contradictions in her deposition in court and her statement recorded under S. 164 CrPC — Material contradictions were also discernible regarding factual aspect of the incident — No material objects like clothes, blood samples, semen samples seized/taken by the IO — Prosecutrix had alleged that appellant had forcibly torn open her clothes, but no torn clothes recovered by IO — No person examined from the hotel to identify appellant or the prosecutrix — She was registered as wife of the appellant under a fictitious name, and hence her identification by some person from the hotel was necessary — Further, the doctor who examined her had opined that she was aged about 18 years, while the prosecutrix stated that she was only 13 years at the time of alleged incident — Her employer PW 2 stating that she was 13/14 years without indicating any basis therefor — However, her parents or any other family member who could be most reliable and natural witness on point of age not examined — Held, prosecutrix appears used to sexual intercourse and a dissolute woman — She had no objection in mixing up and having free movement with any of her known person, for enjoyment — Thus, she appeared to be a woman of easy virtues — Prosecution failed to prove its case against the appellant beyond reasonable doubt — Hence, impugned judgment of High Court convicting appellant under S. 376 set aside — CrPC, 1973, S. 164 (Paras 12 to 18)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The trial court and the High Court proceeded with altogether different set of facts. Before the trial court the prosecution case had been that the prosecutrix went to the zoo along with S and on her return from the zoo the appellant had seen both of them together and slapped S who ran away and thereafter the appellant took the prosecutrix on the pretext of taking her to movie and roamed; took her on a rickshaw to the hotel where she was kept and raped. (Para 12)

However, before the High Court the case was been entirely different. It was stated that when the prosecutrix came out from the house of the informant PW 2 A the appellant met her and proposed to take her to a movie and she went along with him. FIR lodged by PW 2 was to the effect that appellant-accused had entered his house and forcibly abducted his maidservant (prosecutrix). Thus, there were material contradictions regarding the factual aspects of the incident itself. (Para 13)

Further no explanation was given as to why the investigating officer did not seize any material objects like clothes, blood samples, etc. from the prosecutrix and the place of occurrence. Prosecutrix had stated that accused had torn open her clothes but no torn clothes were recovered by the IO. (Para 14)

Also no effort was made by IO to take the semen, blood samples, etc. from the appellant which could have given the prosecution an opportunity to obtain medical reports of the appellant as it was necessary to establish the guilt of the appellant. No person was examined from the hotel to identify the appellant or the prosecutrix as the IO has only seized the register of the hotel to establish that Room No. 102 was booked in the name of appellant MA and MB as husband and wife. Admittedly, the name of the prosecutrix was not MB. Therefore, some person from the hotel should have been examined to identify her as well as the appellant. (Para 15)

Furtheremore, discrepancies were discernible in her examination under S. 164 CrPC and deposition in court. No explanation was offered as to why in the absence of any allegation of threat or coercion, the prosecutrix could not have raised the alarm or informed any person on the road, nor as to why an independent witness or an employee of the hotel was not examined and why the parents of the prosecutrix were not examined to find out her age. (Para 16)

The prosecutrix appears to be a lady used to sexual intercourse and a dissolute lady. She had no objection in mixing up and having free movement with any of her known person, for enjoyment. Thus, she appeared to be a woman of easy virtues. The prosecution failed to prove its case against the appellant beyond reasonable doubt. Hence, impugned judgment of the High Court convicting accused under S. 376 set aside. (Paras 17 and 18). Mussauddin Ahmed v. State of Assam, (2009) 14 SCC 541: (2009) 80 AIC 1 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-7-2009]

Gopal Krishnaji Ketkar v. Mohd. Haji Latif, AIR 1968 SC 1413, relied on [9131] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Sentence — Accused guilty of abduction and rape — Accused holding responsible positions of Lambardar and Sarpanch in village — Held, sentence of three years' and four years' R.I. and fine justified. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793: AIR 1972 SC 2661: (1973) 2 SCR 197: 1973 Cri LJ 179.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1972]

[9132] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Territorial jurisdiction — Kidnapping and rape forming part of same transaction — Trial court continuing proceedings for kidnapping but dropping charge for rape, on ground of lack of territorial jurisdiction — Held, impermissible — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 228 and 220 (Para 4). Parshotam Lal v. State of Punjab, (2010) 1 SCC 65.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2009]

[9133] — Ss. 376, 366 and 363/109 — Kidnapping, forced marriage and rape — Minor victim — Alleged consent or volition of victim — Relevance — If once victim found to be a minor, then if issue of consent of any relevance — Victim, if was minor on date of incident (14 yrs old) — Determination of — Reliance upon birth certificate given by Municipality and victim's school and evidence of her mother, for ascertaining her age — Concurrent finding of victim being a minor on date of incident, on basis of, upheld — Conviction confirmed — A-1, after kidnapping victim, forcibly married and raped her — A-2 and A-3 helped A-1 in the act — A-1 convicted under Ss. 376 & 366 and A-2 & A-3 under Ss. 363/109 — Sustainability — Prosecution submission that if finding recorded by courts below on minority of victim remains undisturbed, no other issue is required to be examined — Tenability — Held, birth certificate of victim issued by Municipality, shows date of birth, date of registration and registration number — Names of victim's parents and their address have also been correctly mentioned — Thus, there is no reason to doubt veracity of said certificate — More so, school certificate has been issued by Headmaster on basis of entry made in school register, which corroborates contents of birth certificate issued by Municipality — Both these entries in school register as well as in Municipality, came much before criminal prosecution started — Those entries stand fully supported and corroborated by evidence of PW 15 (mother of victim) — She had been cross-examined at length, but nothing could be elicited to doubt her testimony — Suggestion put to her by defence, that she was talking about age of her younger daughter and not victim, was flatly denied — Her deposition remained unshaken and is fully reliable — In facts and circumstances, there is no reason to hold that victim was major on date of incident — Defence submission that PW 4 (victim) went voluntarily with A-1, as she was in love with him and wanted to marry him, hence of no use — In view thereof, no other issue is required to be considered — Therefore, conviction of appellants confirmed — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 35 (Paras 23, 26 and 27). Murugan v. State of T.N., (2011) 6 SCC 111.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision : 6-5-2011]

Mohd. Ikram Hussain v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 1625: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 590, relied on

[9134] — Ss. 376 & 375 and 366 — Rape — Conviction based on concurrent findings set aside — Evidence on record not supporting findings of High Court and trial court: (1) that A-1 abducted and forcibly married victim girl, and (2) that victim girl was not a major — Courts while recording concurrent conviction not considering inherent improbabilities in evidence of prime prosecution witnesses — Interference under Art. 136 of Constitution, held, can be made if conclusions recorded by High Court, as in present case, are manifestly perverse and unsupportable by evidence on record

Allegedly A-1, on 31-7-1993 abducted PW 2 (victim prosecutrix) with the help of A-2, A-4 and A-5 when she declined his proposal to marry him.

7. Abduction/Kidnapping/Trafficking and rape (contd.)

A-1 then forcibly married her in a temple and committed rape on her for three days. The father of the victim, PW 1 who was handicapped person though came to know of this from the very first day, lodged the FIR on 2-8-1993. On 4-8-1993, A-1 along with PW 2 went to the police station and A-1 explained that the allegations in FIR were false, that he had legally married PW 2 and that they were husband and wife. On 10-8-1993, the police recovered the girl.

The High Court by the impugned order upheld the conviction of A-1 and others who had helped him under Sections 366 and 376 read with Section 109 IPC.

Allowing the appeal the Supreme Court held as above.

Held :

Even though the power under Article 136 of the Constitution are very wide, in criminal appeals, concurrent findings of facts cannot be interfered with save in very exceptional cases. The assessment of the evidence by the High Court is accepted as final except where the conclusions recorded by the High Court are manifestly perverse and unsupportable by the evidence on record. (Para 19)

The High Court committed a grave error in confirming the conviction of the appellants under Section 366 IPC. Whilst upholding the conviction of A-1 under Section 376 IPC, the High Court has held that the girl would not have voluntarily gone with A-1. It has also been held that she was not a major at the relevant time. Both the conclusions recorded by the High Court are contrary to the evidence on record. (Paras 37 and 38)

The conclusions and findings recorded by both the courts below are perverse and unsupportable by the evidence on record. The trial court as well as the High Court had failed to bestow proper attention to the inherent improbabilities contained in the evidence of the prime witnesses of the prosecution. (Paras 57, 20 and 36). Alamelu v. State, (2011) 2 SCC 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2011]

[9135] — Ss. 376, 375 Fifthly (old), 366 and 342 — Abduction, rape and wrongful confinement — Prosecutrix, a village girl, abducted at knife point and wrongfully confined for one month at different places — Accused 1 committing rape on her — Her evidence found to be truthful and required no corroboration — However, her evidence was corroborated by medical evidence and circumstantial evidence, viz., underwear of the accused and petticoat of the prosecutrix — Prosecutrix being a minor (aged between 15-17 years) question of consent does not arise — Therefore, plea that she was a consenting party is not tenable — Conviction of accused persons upheld — But the High Court committed grave error of law in reducing the sentence to the period already undergone i.e. 1½ months — Consequently sentence enhanced to 5 years' RI with fine. State of Rajasthan v. Ram Narain, (1996) 8 SCC 64: AIR 1996 SC 2987.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, S. Saghir Ahmad and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-1996]

[Ed.: Under Section 376 IPC age of consent is 16 years. In this case the doctor had opined that the prosecutrix was aged between 15 and 17 years. It has been held in Jaya Mala v. Home Secy., Govt. of J&K, (1982) 2 SCC 538: 1982 SCC (Cri) 502 that the margin of error in age ascertained by the radiological examination is 2 years. It is not clear as to how the court on the basis of the medical evidence alone came to a definite conclusion that the prosecutrix was a minor i.e. below 16 years of age.

Further the court has not considered the question of delay of one month in lodging the FIR for which the first informant had offered no explanation. Also conduct of the accused in bringing the girl to her native village is unnatural.

See also (1991) 2 SCC 379: 1991 SCC (Cri) 438; (1970) 3 SCC 21: 1970 SCC (Cri) 371; (1981) 1 SCC 560: 1981 SCC (Cri) 208]

[9136] — Ss. 376 and 375 Expln. — Rape on minor girl (aged 11 or 12 years) — Defence case that accused was falsely involved due to long standing enmity between accused's father and prosecutrix's father — Held on facts, it is unbelievable that prosecutrix and her parents would allow the real culprit to escape and falsely involve an innocent person for commission of the crime. Prithi Chand v. State of H.P., (1989) 1 SCC 432: 1989 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 702: (1989) 1 SCR 123: 1989 Cri LJ 841.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-1989]

[9137] — Ss. 376, 511, 363 and 366 — Rape — Ingredients of — Kidnapping and attempt to commit rape, if made out — Case law discussed — In the present case, held, rape did not appear to have been committed but attempt was clearly established — In respect of offence under Ss. 363 and 366 both courts below had analysed the evidence in detail and there was no infirmity to warrant interference

The trial court placed reliance on the evidence of the prosecutrix (PW 1) and her mother (PW 3). As a plea relating to the age of the prosecutrix to show that she was a consenting party was taken, the person who had issued the date of birth certificate was examined as PW 4. The trial court held that the age of the victim was less than 16 years and placed reliance on the documents produced. (Para 7)

The medical officer (PW 9) has stated that rape had not been committed and sexual intercourse had not taken place. In the instant case though rape does not appear to have been committed but the attempt to commit rape is clearly established. That being so, conviction for the offence punishable under Section 376 IPC is not made out but the offence punishable under Section 511 IPC is clearly made out. So far as the offence under Sections 365 and 366 IPC is concerned the trial court and the High Court have analysed the evidence in great detail. There is no infirmity in the conclusion to warrant interference. (Paras 11 and 13). Arjun Singh v. State of H.P., (2009) 4 SCC 18: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 33: AIR 2009 SC 1568: (2009) 75 AIC 19 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 1332.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2009]

Vishnu v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 1 SCC 283: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 217; State of Chhattisgarh v. Lekhram, (2006) 5 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 66; Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551, relied on

Halsbury's Statutes of England and Wales, 4th Edn., Vol. 12; Encyclopaedia of Crime and Justice, Vol. 4, p. 1356; Stephen's Criminal Law, 9th Edn., p. 262; 1 Hon. 6, 1a, 9 Edw. 4, 26 a (Hale PC 628), cited

[9138] — S. 376(1) and proviso thereto — Rape — Mandatory minimum sentence of seven years' RI — Reduction of — When warranted — "Adequate and special reasons" — What are — Marriage and leading of married life by prosecutrix subsequently — Prosecutrix abducted by appellant-accused and then raped — Prosecutrix rescued from accused after twenty days — Sessions Judge convicting accused under S. 376 IPC to minimum sentence of RI for seven years and under S. 366 IPC to RI for five years — High Court on appeal holding that merely on consideration of age of appellant, reduction of the sentence was not warranted — Supreme Court on examination of evidence holding that sufficient evidence was tendered by prosecution to prove guilt of accused — However, since prosecutrix had since been married and was living with her husband, held, having regard to the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, the sentence imposed by the courts below is on the highside — Sentence reduced to three years. Ram Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2006) 4 SCC 347: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 308.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-2006]

[Ed.: See also (2005) 8 SCC 1 and the cases following it.]

[9139] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Sentence warranted — Appellants convicted under Ss. 376 & 366 and sentenced to RI for 10 years and fine of Rs 1000, and RI of 5 years and fine of Rs 1000 respectively — Considering gravity of crime, prayer for reduction of sentence rejected (Paras 1 and 16). Jaswant Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 16 SCC 201: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 243: AIR 2010 SC 894: 2010 Cri LJ 41: (2010) 2 ECrN 305 (SC): (2010) 85 AIC 193 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-2009]

[9140] — Ss. 376(2)(g)/34 & 366/34 — Kidnapping and gang rape — Conviction can be founded on sole testimony of victim of the rape — Corroboration of her evidence not essential when her evidence otherwise inspires confidence — Prosecutrix having ample opportunity to see and identify the accused in broad daylight — Being a simple village girl, she cannot be expected to falsely implicate innocent persons leaving her own assailants — However, injuries on her private parts, medical evidence of doctor and FIR providing corroboration — Consent of the prosecutrix cannot be inferred from absence of multiple injuries on her private parts as in case of gang rape at the threat of her life she cannot be expected to have given continuous resistance resulting in sustaining numerous injuries — In the circumstances casual and mechanical approach, without regard to human probabilities, and consequent acquittal by High Court resulted in grave miscarriage of justice — Hence conviction and sentence of 3 years' RI recorded by trial court restored. State of Orissa v. Damburu Naiko, (1992) 2 SCC 522: 1992 SCC (Cri) 400: AIR 1992 SC 1161: 1992 Cri LJ 1537: (1992) 73 CLT 715: (1992) 2 Crimes 77.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1992]

8. Incest and rape

[9141] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Father charged for raping his own daughter — High Court reversing the order of conviction passed by the trial court and acquitting the accused — Propriety — Testimony of prosecutrix PW 1, in spite of being subjected to lengthy cross-examination remaining unimpeached — Suggestion that false case had been hoisted against the accused at the instance of her mother (who had strained relations with the father and was residing separately), and that she was having menstruation at that time, denied by her — Testimony of prosecutrix well corroborated by testimony of PW 2 (sister) and PW 3 (mother) and also the medical evidence on record — Held, High Court erred in law as well as on facts, and thereby committed grave miscarriage of justice in acquitting the accused — Despite strained relations between the parents, PWs 1 and 2 were happily staying with the accused and there was no rhyme or reason as to why the daughter should depose falsely so as to expose her honour and dignity and also expose the whole family, risking the outcasting or ostracisation and condemnation by the family circle as well as by society — Hence, impugned order of High Court set aside and that of trial court restored — Supreme Court expressing displeasure and dismay at the way High Court had dealt with such a grave offence

8. Incest and rape (contd.)

The testimony of PW 1, the prosecutrix, is well corroborated by the testimony of PW 2 and PW 3, corroborated by the medical evidence of PWs 4, 5, 11 and 12, which inspires confidence and the trial court has rightly convicted the respondent-accused under Section 376 IPC. The High Court has erred in law as well as on facts and thereby committed grave miscarriage of justice in acquitting the respondent by reversing the conviction of the respondent recorded by the trial court. The impugned order of the High Court is, accordingly, set aside and the order of the trial court convicting the accused is restored. (Paras 13 and 21)

Contention that because of the strained relationship between PW 3 mother of the prosecutrix and the accused, the prosecution case has been foisted against the accused at the instigation of the mother deserves outright rejection. From the evidence it is clearly established that PWs 1 and 2 despite strained relationship between their mother and father were happily staying with the accused and there is no rhyme or reason as to why the daughter should depose falsely so as to expose her honour and dignity and also expose the whole family to society risking the outcasting or ostracisation and condemnation by the family circle as well as by society. No girl of self-respect and dignity who is conscious of her chastity having expectations of married life and livelihood would accuse falsely any person of rape, much less her father, sacrificing thereby her chastity. It is unthinkable to suggest that the mother would go to the extent of inventing a story of sexual assault of her own daughter and tutor her to narrate a story of sexual assault against a person who is no other than her husband and father of the girl, at the risk of bringing down their social status and spoiling their reputation in the society as well as family circle to which they belong to. (Para 14)

[The Supreme Court while expressing displeasure and dismay at the way the High Court had casually dealt with such a grave offence, overlooking the alarming and shocking increase of sexual assault on minor girls observed that the High Court was swayed by the sheer insensitivity, totally oblivious of the growing menace of sexual violence against minors much less by the father and while doing so totally overlooked the prosecution evidence, which inspired confidence and merited acceptance.] (Para 5). State of H.P. v. Asha Ram, (2005) 13 SCC 766: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 296: AIR 2006 SC 381: 2006 Cri LJ 139.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2005]

[9142] — S. 376 — Conviction of appellant accused for raping his own daughter on the basis of three eyewitnesses and medical evidence — Sufficiency of evidence — Passer-by witnesses hearing shrieks of prosecutrix in a dilapidated house, separated the prosecutrix from appellant-accused, took them to police station — FIR lodged and medical examination conducted — Medical report opining that possibility of rape could not be ruled out — Evidence, held, is sufficient for conviction

The prosecutrix is the daughter of the appellant-accused. On 5-2-2004 the appellant took the prosecutrix (PW 4) aged around 13 years on his cycle to Raghogarh to purchase clothes for her. At around 3 p.m., the prosecutrix was coming back with him on his cycle when on the way, the appellant stopped his cycle near "Bawdi Kheda Ashram". The appellant then took the prosecutrix to a dilapidated house situated there and removed the clothes of the prosecutrix. When the prosecutrix cried, the appellant slapped her and forcibly committed rape on her. The High Court affirmed the conviction under Section 376 IPC and sentence of imprisonment for life and fine of Rs 1000 with default stipulation as recorded by the Sessions Judge.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The evidence on records clinchingly nails the appellant as the offender. Three witnesses K, P and S who were passing by, heard the shrieks of the prosecutrix, went inside the room and separated the appellant from the prosecutrix. These witnesses took the prosecutrix and the appellant to the police station where FIR was lodged. The doctor (PW 2) who examined the prosecutrix found that her sexual character had started developing, pubic hairs were scanty and on internal examination found old hymen ruptured at 11 o'clock position including the redness over its posterior side. On the basis of this examination, the doctor opined that possibility of rape could not be denied. The vaginal swab of the prosecutrix was prepared and the panty of the prosecutrix was taken by the doctor and the same was sealed and handed over to the police for chemical examination. As per the x-ray report, the age of the prosecutrix was found above 17 years and below 19 years. The medical report found the appellant competent to perform sexual intercourse. (Paras 11 and 5 to 7)

No sympathy or leniency is called for. It is an unpardonable act. If the protector becomes the violator, the offence assumes a greater degree of vulnerability. Charged of raping his own daughter under his refuge and fortress is worse than the gamekeeper becoming a poacher and treasury guard becoming a robber. He not only delicts the law but, it is a betrayal of trust. The accused's lustful acts have indelible scar not only physically but also emotionally on the victim. There can never be more shocking, depraved and heinous crime than when the father is charged of having raped his own daughter. (Paras 14, 11 and 2). Siriya v. State of M.P., (2008) 8 SCC 72: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 422: AIR 2008 SC 2314.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2008]

Shailesh Jasvantbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 2 SCC 359: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 499; State of Karnataka v. Raju, (2007) 11 SCC 490: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 787, relied on [9143] — S. 376 — Four years' RI for raping cousin's wife — Accused of 22 years of age with no past criminal antecedent — Victim and her family forgiving the accused — Taking an overall view of the familial and criminal factors involved, the societal proneness to sex, people's abhorrence of released prisoners and the fact that a long incarceration would make the young accused a hardened criminal, sentence reduced to 2 years' RI — Within limits of Prisons Act and Rules, authorities directed to release the accused on parole, furlough, etc. so as to keep alive the family ties for the purpose of his reform. Phul Singh v. State of Haryana, (1979) 4 SCC 413: 1980 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1980 SC 249: 1980 Cri LJ 8.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-1979]

Held to be not good law in State of M.P. v. Balu, (2005) 1 SCC 108

[9144] — S. 376 — Sentence — Appropriate punishment — Father raping his daughter — Physical and emotional trauma of daughter — Shocking and heinous crime and betrayal of trust — When protector becomes violator the offence assumes greater degree of vulnerability, still worse when a father rapes his own daughter — Leniency and sympathy in such cases, held, unwarranted — Sentence of life imprisonment and fine, upheld — CrPC, 1973, S. 386

No sympathy or leniency is called for. It is an unpardonable act. If the protector becomes the violator, the offence assumes a greater degree of vulnerability. Charged of raping his own daughter under his refuge and fortress is worse than the gamekeeper becoming a poacher and treasury guard becoming a robber. He not only delicts the law but, it is a betrayal of trust. The accused's lustful acts have indelible scar not only physically but also emotionally on the victim. There can never be more shocking, depraved and heinous crime than when the father is charged of having raped his own daughter. (Paras 14, 11 and 2). Siriya v. State of M.P., (2008) 8 SCC 72: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 422: AIR 2008 SC 2314.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2008]

Shailesh Jasvantbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 2 SCC 359: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 499; State of Karnataka v. Raju, (2007) 11 SCC 490: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 787, relied on

[9145] — S. 376 — Sentence — Father raping his own daughter — Trial court on conviction sentencing accused to 5 years' RI and fine of Rs 1000 with default stipulation — Held, ordinarily offence of rape is grave in nature, more so, when perpetrator of the crime is the father against his own daughter and the rarest of the rare case which warrants strong deterrent judicial hand — Hence, while maintaining conviction, sentence of life imprisonment and fine of Rs 25,000 (on realisation to be paid to prosecutrix) imposed

The trial court on conviction sentenced the respondent to 5 years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs 1000 and in default rigorous imprisonment for 3 months. In the instant case the crime committed by the respondent not only delicts the law but it has a deleterious effect on civilised society. Gravity of the crime has to be necessarily assessed from the nature of the crime. A crime may be grave but the nature of the crime may not be so grave. Similarly, a crime may not be so grave but the nature of the crime may be very grave. Ordinarily, the offence of rape is grave by its nature. More so, when the perpetrator of the crime is the father against his own daughter it is more graver and the rarest of rare case, which warrants a strong deterrent judicial hand. Hence, while maintaining conviction recorded by trial court, sentence of imprisonment for life and fine of Rs 25,000 is imposed. The fine amount if realised shall be paid to the prosecutrix. (Paras 22 and 24). State of H.P. v. Asha Ram, (2005) 13 SCC 766: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 296: AIR 2006 SC 381: 2006 Cri LJ 139.

8. Incest and rape (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2005]

Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598, followed

[Ed.: A news report appearing on the internet website Indlaw News Detail dated December 15, 2005 says:

"The Supreme Court today decided to re-examine its judgment convicting and sentencing a man to life imprisonment for raping his daughter who retracted her allegations after the pronouncement of the verdict on November 17".

It is to be seen in the future what the outcome is of the review petition.]

[9146] — Ss. 376 & 451 — Rape of young married woman by a relative — Testimony of the prosecutrix, in absence of any strong reason to falsely implicate the accused, acceptable — Reliable testimony of other natural witnesses and medical evidence corroborating the version of the prosecutrix — Delay of two days in lodging the FIR not a factor casting doubt on prosecution story in view of the generally known fact that the rape victim or her husband would hesitate to approach the police — On facts held, offence of rape made out and High Court erred in reversing trial court's order of conviction and sentence under Ss. 376 and 451 on trivial grounds

According to the prosecution the husband of the prosecutrix was serving in the Army and had come to the village to celebrate Diwali with his wife and family members. When her husband had gone out and she was preparing to serve fodder to the cattle, the accused came from behind, put one hand on her mouth and the other on her back and tried to push her into the cattle-shed. She resisted him whereupon he threw her on the ground, lifted her ghagra, untied his dhoti and forcibly raped her. The prosecutrix being a strong woman resisted the accused and in the process sustained abrasions on her lumbar region as well as elbow joints. The prosecutrix cried for help and her cries attracted PWs 4 and 7 who saw the accused on the top of the prosecutrix. PW 7 pulled him up with one hand and consoled the prosecutrix who was weeping. She told the PWs that the accused had forcibly violated her person. While the accused was running away PW 5, the husband of the prosecutrix, saw him tying his dhoti from behind. The prosecutrix also narrated the incident to her husband. He was dissuaded by the accused and others from filing a complaint and was threatened with certain consequences if he did so. However, two days later he went with his wife to the police station to lodge the complaint. The doctor who examined the prosecutrix two days after the incident found that her clothes were torn, they carried slightly watery and blood-like discharge stains and there were two teeth marks, on her left breast near the nipple. On internal examination he found both the labia majora and minora and the clitoris swollen and red with slight bleeding discharge and the walls of the vagina tender with slight swelling. He also noticed abrasions on the back at the lumbar region and on both the elbow joints. In his evidence before the court he stated that the vaginal smear on microscopic examination showed 90 per cent of dead sperms and 10 per cent of live sperms. On the basis of these findings he concluded that the duration of the rape could be about 24 to 48 hours. The trial court found the accused guilty under Ss. 376 and 451 IPC and sentenced him to suffer rigorous imprisonment for two years and to pay a fine of Rs 1000, in default to suffer rigorous imprisonment for three months on the first count and sentenced him to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one year and to pay a fine of Rs 5000, in default to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one month on the second count. The substantive sentences were to run concurrently. But on appeal, the High Court reversed the trial court's order of conviction and sentence. Allowing the appeal

Held :

Unless the evidence discloses that the prosecutrix and her husband had strong reasons to falsely implicate the accused, ordinarily the court should have no hesitation in accepting her version regarding the incident. The accused was a distant relative whom the prosecutrix had met for the first time about 5 or 6 years before. Thereafter she had not many occasions to meet him. Her relations with the accused were not strained. The relations of her husband with the accused were also not strained. In the circumstances there was no motive or reason for the prosecutrix or her husband to falsely involve the accused in the commission of a crime which would put her chastity at stake. Her husband had come to celebrate Diwali with his wife and family members and quarrel with anyone, more so a relative, would be farthest from his thought.

The High Court rejected the testimony of the prosecutrix for wholly unacceptable reasons. There is nothing inconceivable about the accused committing rape with the prosecutrix merely because he happens to be a relative of the latter. Merely because the place of occurrence was near a thoroughfare the High Court also erred in doubting that the accused would commit the rape at such place. There is nothing surprising in the conduct of a man who is lust-ridden in behaving in a carefree manner trying to make most of the situation of the prosecutrix being alone and helpless. Moreover PWs 4 and 7 were natural witnesses being neighbours and in the absence of strong reasons to disbelieve their versions, it is not possible to ignore their evidence as has been done by the High Court. Further corroboration is to be found from the evidence of the doctor who examined her. While accepting the High Court's view that the possibility of her having sexual intercourse with her husband cannot be overlooked, it is not possible to believe that when a married woman has sex with her husband in the privacy of their bedroom she would suffer abrasions on her body and the vaginal walls. The abrasions on the vaginal wall and the consequential inflammation of the labia majora as well as minora and the clitoris provide corroborative evidence that someone had forcible sex with her. Maybe the torn clothes were worn once again by the prosecutrix when she and her husband went to lodge the complaint two days later or the police made out such a panchnama. The same can be said about the attachment of the dhoti also. That by itself does not provide strong reason to doubt the prosecution's story regarding the incident. True it is that the complaint was lodged two days later but in Indian society the victims of such a crime ordinarily consult relatives and are hesitant to approach the police since it involves the question of morality and chastity of a married woman. A woman and her relatives have to struggle with several situations before deciding to approach the police, more so when the culprit happens to be related. In such cases, therefore, the delay is understandable and hence merely on that account the prosecution version cannot be doubted. Thus totally wrong approach adopted by the High Court has resulted in miscarriage of justice. Therefore the Supreme Court's interference is called for. State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781: AIR 1992 SC 2004.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, Kuldip Singh and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-1992]

9. Attempt to rape

See also 'A.3.(d) Penetration/Intercourse', above, and

See also 'B.10. Rape or outraging modesty/indecent assault/other lesser sexual offences', below

[9147] — S. 376 or Ss. 376/511 — Case of rape converted to attempt to commit rape — Justifiability — Trial court convicting appellant-accused under S. 376 — However, High Court converting conviction to that under S. 376 r/w S. 511 — Sustainability — Held, contention of appellant that on the basis of evidence on record, no offence under S. 376 was proved, accepted — However, victim categorically stated in her examination-in-chief that appellant-accused had removed her clothes and gagged her mouth and that subsequently he felt sorry for the incident and also apologised for the same — There was no suggestion in cross-examination on the part of accused to the aforesaid statement of victim — Also, no suggestion was put to the effect that he sought an apology — If accused had removed her clothes and did not rebut the statement of victim in her examination-in-chief, it is definitely a case of attempt to rape — Hence, held, no reason to differ with findings arrived at by High Court — CrPC, 1973, S. 222 (Paras 14 to 16 and 21). Pandharinath v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 14 SCC 537: (2009) 80 AIC 240 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-7-2009]

State of Maharashtra v. Rajendra Jawanmal Gandhi, (1997) 8 SCC 386: 1998 SCC (Cri)) 76; Tarkeshwar Sahu v. State of Bihar, (2006) 8 SCC 560: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 556; Shamnsaheb M. Multtani v. State of Karnataka, (2001) 2 SCC 577: 2001 SCC (Cri) 358, relied on [9148] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Attempt to commit rape — Proof and corroboration — Presence of semen/human spermatozoa on salwar — Chemical Examiner reporting that chemical and miscroscopical tests of the seized salwar of the prosecutrix revealed the presence of semen/human spermatozoa — Even in absence of proof that the said spermatozoa was that of the accused, such a report, held, a strong corroborative piece of evidence — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 45. Madan Lal v. State of J&K, (1997) 7 SCC 677: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1151: AIR 1998 SC 386.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-1997]

[9149] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Attempt to commit rape — Proof and corroboration of — Evidence of prosecutrix — Proper mode of assessment of — Veracity of such evidence, held, cannot be examined by picking up one sentence in the cross-examination

9. Attempt to rape (contd.)

— The evidence of the prosecutrix in the instant case, read in its entirety, held, rightly accepted by the High Court — More so when there was sufficient corroborative evidence — Hence, conviction under Ss. 376 & 511, upheld

The High Court had reserved the order of acquittal passed by the trial court and convicted the appellant, who was the Headmaster of a Middle School, for the offence of "attempt to commit rape" under Sections 376/511 IPC of the prosecutrix, Mst R, a student of the same school. The prosecutrix had in her statement in cross-examination, made against the appellant allegation of penetration but the doctor, who examined the prosecutrix, stated that there was no mark of violence on any part of the body and on local examination there was no mark of violence on her private parts like the vagina, the hymen was intact and on examination of vaginal smear no living or dead sperm was found on the slide and accordingly she opined that no definite opinion could be given regarding the attempt to sexual intercourse. The appellant contended that the prosecution story was unbelievable inasmuch as if the prosecutrix's statement was that there had been a penetration into the vagina to a depth of quarter of one inch or one inch, the prosecutrix being a young girl of 13 years the hymen could not have been intact. Rejecting this contention,

Held :

The prosecutrix's evidence cannot be examined by picking one sentence in the cross-examination to find out whether she is a truthful witness or not. A reading of the entire evidence of the prosecutrix that the accused had rubbed his penis with the vagina of the prosecutrix and tried to penetrate but could not succeed in penetrating and ultimately got himself discharged and the hot semen fell on the thighs of the prosecutrix. The statement made by the prosecutrix on which appellant relied might have been made on account of the inexperience of the young girl who was being subjected to sexual harassment for the first time and the same cannot be read in isolation bereft of what she stated just previous to the aforesaid statement. The High Court rightly held that her evidence was that of a truthful witness, which gave an account of the incident that had happened to a rustic girl who was traumatised on account of sexual harassment meted out to her by none other than her own school Headmaster.

Apart from the trustworthy evidence of the prosecutrix herself there are several circumstances as found by the High Court which corroborate the prosecutrix's evidence and makes her statement wholly reliable. On the evidence on record the irresistible conclusion is that the prosecution has been able to establish the charge of attempt to commit rape beyond all reasonable doubts and consequently the conviction and sentence passed by the High Court does not call for any interference. Madan Lal v. State of J&K, (1997) 7 SCC 677: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1151: AIR 1998 SC 386.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-1997]

[9150] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Bar on Court Martial's jurisdiction to try the offence of rape, held, not applicable to the offence of attempting to commit rape — Provisions of Sch. I to CrPC in respect of Ss. 511 and 376 IPC could not be invoked to reach a different conclusion as the question of Court Martial's jurisdiction to try an offence has to be adjudged from the provisions of the Army Act itself and not with reference to CrPC — CrPC, 1973, S. 26(a)(ii) & (iii) and Sch. I — Army Act, 1950 — S. 70 (Para 2). Madan Lal v. Union of India, (2002) 10 SCC 185.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-9-1999]

State v. Jaikaran Singh, AIR 1955 NUC 1721 (All), overruled

[9151] — Ss. 376, 511, 363 and 366 — Rape — Ingredients of — Kidnapping and attempt to commit rape, if made out — Case law discussed — In the present case, held, rape did not appear to have been committed but attempt was clearly established — In respect of offence under Ss. 363 and 366 both courts below had analysed the evidence in detail and there was no infirmity to warrant interference

The trial court placed reliance on the evidence of the prosecutrix (PW 1) and her mother (PW 3). As a plea relating to the age of the prosecutrix to show that she was a consenting party was taken, the person who had issued the date of birth certificate was examined as PW 4. The trial court held that the age of the victim was less than 16 years and placed reliance on the documents produced. (Para 7)

The medical officer (PW 9) has stated that rape had not been committed and sexual intercourse had not taken place. In the instant case though rape does not appear to have been committed but the attempt to commit rape is clearly established. That being so, conviction for the offence punishable under Section 376 IPC is not made out but the offence punishable under Section 511 IPC is clearly made out. So far as the offence under Sections 365 and 366 IPC is concerned the trial court and the High Court have analysed the evidence in great detail. There is no infirmity in the conclusion to warrant interference. (Paras 11 and 13). Arjun Singh v. State of H.P., (2009) 4 SCC 18: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 33: AIR 2009 SC 1568: (2009) 75 AIC 19 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 1332.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2009]

Vishnu v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 1 SCC 283: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 217; State of Chhattisgarh v. Lekhram, (2006) 5 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 66; Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551, relied on

Halsbury's Statutes of England and Wales, 4th Edn., Vol. 12; Encyclopaedia of Crime and Justice, Vol. 4, p. 1356; Stephen's Criminal Law, 9th Edn., p. 262; 1 Hon. 6, 1a, 9 Edw. 4, 26 a (Hale PC 628), cited

[9152] — S. 376 r/w S. 511 — Attempted rape — Sentence — Reduction of — Rape attempted on the victim not succeeding in full measure — Sentence reduced to rigorous imprisonment for 3½ years, that is, half of that originally awarded. Ramcharan v. State of M.P., (2001) 10 SCC 108.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-2001]

[9153] — S. 376 r/w S. 511 and S. 354 — Attempt to commit rape — Conviction in respect of — Essential requirements to be satisfied for

In order to find an accused guilty of an attempt with intent to commit a rape, court has to be satisfied that the accused, when he laid hold of the prosecutrix, not only desired to gratify his passions upon her person, but that he intended to do so at all events, and notwithstanding any resistance on her part. Indecent assaults are often magnified into attempts at rape. In order to come to a conclusion that the conduct of the accused was indicative of a determination to gratify his passion at all events, and in spite of all resistance, materials must exist. Surrounding circumstances many times throw beacon light on that aspect. (Para 11). Koppula Venkat Rao v. State of A.P., (2004) 3 SCC 602: 2004 SCC (Cri) 840: AIR 2004 SC 1874: 2004 Cri LJ 1804.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2004]

[9154] — S. 376 r/w S. 511 and S. 354 — Offence of "attempt to commit rape" — Proof required in respect of, stated — Said offence distinguished from offence of "indecent assault"

In order to find the accused guilty of an assault with intent to commit a rape, court must be satisfied that the accused, when he laid hold of the prosecutrix, not only desired to gratify his passions upon her person but that he intended to do so at all events, and notwithstanding any resistance on her part. The point of distinction between an offence of attempt to commit rape and to commit indecent assault is that there should be some action on the part of the accused which would show that he was just going to have sexual connection with her. (Para 13). Raju Pandurang Mahale v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 4 SCC 371: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1259: AIR 2004 SC 1677: 2004 Cri LJ 1441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-2004]

R. v. James Lloyd, (1836) 7 C&P 317: 173 ER 141, relied on

[Ed.: See also (2004) 4 SCC 379]

[9155] — S. 376 r/w S. 511 and S. 354 — Offence of "attempt to commit rape" — Proof required in respect of, stated — Said offence distinguished from offence of "indecent assault"

In order to find an accused guilty of an attempt with intent to commit a rape, court has to be satisfied that the accused, when he laid hold of the prosecutrix, not only desired to gratify his passions upon her person, but that he intended to do so at all events, and notwithstanding any resistance on her part. Indecent assaults are often magnified into attempts at rape. The point of distinction between an offence of attempt to commit rape and to commit indecent assault is that there should be some action on the part of the accused which would show that he was just going to have sexual connection with her. In order to come to a conclusion that the conduct of the accused was indicative of a determination to gratify his passion at all events, and in spite of all resistance, materials must exist. Surrounding circumstances many times throw beacon light on that aspect. (Paras 11 and 14). Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266: AIR 2004 SC 1497: 2004 Cri LJ 1399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2004]

R. v. James Lloyd, (1836) 7 C&P 317: 173 ER 141, relied on [9156] — Ss. 376/511 — Attempt to commit rape — Held, is a serious offence as it leads to an assault on the most valuable possession of women, that is their character, reputation, dignity and honour. State of H.P. v. Dharam Pal, (2004) 9 SCC 681: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1477.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-2003]

State of Haryana v. Prem Chand, (1997) 7 SCC 756: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1176, followed

[9157] — Ss. 376/511 — Attempt to commit rape — Incident taking place in a doctor's clinic — Prosecutrix, an illiterate villager coming to the clinic with her father-in-law, M — The accused sent away M to fetch hot water — On his return he found

9. Attempt to rape (contd.)

the appellant scantily dressed in his underclothes (kachha and banian) while coaccused (Doctor) standing naked near the prosecutrix who was lying unconscious with half folded salwar — Held, in the circumstances the scanty dress clearly makes the appellant guilty of attempt to commit rape. Nathu Ram v. State of Haryana, (1994) 1 SCC 491: 1994 SCC (Cri) 88: 1994 Cri LJ 1095: (1994) 1 An LT (Cri) 3: (1994) 31 ACC 25.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and S. Mohan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-1993]

[9158] — Ss. 376/511 — Attempt to commit rape — Sentence — Modification of — Sentence of 10 years' RI imposed by High Court for conviction under Ss. 376/511 appropriately modified to five years' RI (Paras 18 and 19). Guddu v. State of M.P., (2007) 14 SCC 654: (2006) 42 AIC 79 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2006]

[9159] — Ss. 376/511 — Sentence — Attempt to commit rape — Held, 3½ years' R.I. with fine of Rs 1000 not excessive. Nathu Ram v. State of Haryana, (1994) 1 SCC 491: 1994 SCC (Cri) 88: 1994 Cri LJ 1095: (1994) 1 An LT (Cri) 3: (1994) 31 ACC 25.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and S. Mohan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-1993]

[9160] — Ss. 376/511 — Sentence — Release on probation — Attempt to commit rape — Accused aged less than 21 years — Prosecutrix found to be above 16 years of age — Offence not attracting imprisonment for life but only imprisonment up to 10 years — Held, in the circumstances, trial court justified in extending benefit of probation to the accused — CrPC, 1973, S. 360 — Probation of Offenders Act, 1958, S. 4. State of Haryana v. Prem Chand, (1997) 7 SCC 756: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1176.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-1997]

[9161] — Ss. 376/511 & 323 — Attempt to rape — Medical evidence — Presence of "smegma on the dorsal side of posterior 1/4th glans" of accused — Negates the case of recent intercourse — Victim's hymen and fourchette found intact, no bleeding or dried blood mark, no discharge, no swelling found — Both accused and victim medically examined within seven hours of the occurrence — On microscopic examination of vaginal smear and urethral smear, no semen or spermatozoa found — Witness deposing that on hearing cries when he went to side of the road he found accused raising his underwear and on seeing him he ran away and the victim said that the accused spoiled her — Held, circumstances attending the case, evidence of PWs coupled with medical evidence established attempt of rape and causing simple hurt — Hence accused liable to be convicted under Ss. 376/511 and 323 and sentenced to 5 years' RI and 4 months' imprisonment

The offence committed by accused-respondent is only an attempt of rape on the medical evidence which does not clinchingly establish the proof of rape as required by law. The presence of smegma was inconsistent with a recent intercourse. It would take about 24 hours to accumulate if the smegma is rubbed off during intercourse.

On the assessment and evaluation of the evidence, it must, therefore, be held that the respondent has made himself liable to be punished under S. 376 read with S. 511 IPC. Therefore, the respondent is convicted thereunder and is sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for five years. The conviction record by the High Court under S. 323 IPC and the sentence of four months' imprisonment is retained. State of Karnataka v. Mahabaleshwar Gourya Naik, 1992 Supp (3) SCC 179: 1993 SCC (Cri) 180: AIR 1992 SC 2043: (1992) 2 Crimes 654.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M.M. Punchhi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-1992]

Parikh's Textbook of Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, page 439, relied on

[9162] — Ss. 376/511 and 323 — Attempt to rape — Victim committing suicide one and half months after the occurrence — Mere fact of non-availability of the victim for examination not fatal to the prosecution — Court should decide on the basis of available evidence

Mere fact that a victim is dead and consequently could not be examined can never be a ground to acquit an accused if there is evidence otherwise available proving the criminal act of the accused concerned. The prosecution case cannot be thrown overboard because of the non-availability of the victim for examination on account of her death. The Court can record a conviction for any offence that is made out on the available evidence, let in by the prosecution. State of Karnataka v. Mahabaleshwar Gourya Naik, 1992 Supp (3) SCC 179: 1993 SCC (Cri) 180: AIR 1992 SC 2043: (1992) 2 Crimes 654.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M.M. Punchhi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-1992]

[9163] — Ss. 376/511 & 354 — Offence of attempt to commit rape and to commit indecent assault — Point of distinction between

The point of distinction between an offence of attempt to commit rape and to commit indecent assault is that there should be some action on the part of the accused which would show that he is just going to have sexual connection with the prosecutrix. (Para 17). Tarkeshwar Sahu v. State of Bihar (Now Jharkhand), (2006) 8 SCC 560: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 556.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

Ahmed Asalt Mirkhan, Cri A No. 161 of 1930, decided on 12-8-1930 in Law of Crimes by Ratanlal Dhirajlal, p. 922; R. v. James Lloyd, (1836) 7 C&P 317: 173 ER 141, relied on

10. Rape or outraging modesty/ indecent assault/other lesser sexual offences

See also 'B.9. Attempt to rape', above

[9164] — S. 376 — Cases involving sexual molestation — Duty of court to deal with such cases with utmost sensitivity — Minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix should not be a ground for throwing out an otherwise reliable prosecution case

Of late, crime against women in general and rape in particular is on the increase. It is an irony that while we are celebrating woman's rights in all spheres, we show little or no concern for her honour. It is a sad reflection on the attitude of indifference of the society towards the violation of human dignity of the victims of sex crimes. A rapist not only violates the victim's privacy and personal integrity, but inevitably causes serious psychological as well as physical harm in the process. Rape is not merely a physical assault — it is often destructive of the whole personality of the victim. A murderer destroys the physical body of his victim, a rapist degrades the very soul of the helpless female. The courts, therefore, shoulder a great responsibility while trying an accused on charges of rape. They must deal with such cases with utmost sensitivity. The courts should examine the broader probabilities of a case and not get swayed by minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix, which are not of a fatal nature, to throw out an otherwise reliable prosecution case. If evidence of the prosecutrix inspires confidence, it must be relied upon without seeking corroboration of her statement in material particulars. If for some reason the court finds it difficult to place implicit reliance on her testimony, it may look for evidence which may lend assurance to her testimony, short of corroboration required in the case of an accomplice. The testimony of the prosecutrix must be appreciated in the background of the entire case and the trial court must be alive to its responsibility and be sensitive while dealing with cases involving sexual molestations. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210, followed [9165] — S. 376 or S. 354 — A-1 alleged to have forced the prosecutrix to have sexual intercourse with him on false promise of marrying her, and thereafter A-1 to A-4 intimidating her and her mother, threatening them with dire consequences — Transfer certificate issued by school conclusively showing that prosecutrix was below sixteen years of age — On consideration of facts, however, conviction altered from S. 376 to S. 354 (Paras 2 and 7 to 10). Shekara v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 14 SCC 76: (2009) 76 AIC 150 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-2009]

Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551: 2004 SCC (Cri) 31; Vidyadharan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 1 SCC 215: 2004 SCC (Cri) 260, relied on

Stephen's Criminal Law, 9th Edn., p. 262; Encyclopaedia of Crime and Justice, Vol. 4, p. 1356; Halsbury's Statutes of England and Wales, 4th Edn., Vol. 12, cited

[9166] — S. 376 or S. 354 — Accused charged under S. 376 — Absence of injury on victim — Whether offence committed coming under purview of S. 354 — Absence of injury on the private parts of the prosecutrix — From a reading of the evidence of the prosecutrix, held, it is clear that the accused outraged the modesty but had not raped her — In her statement she loosely described his act as "fondling" — Offence is one under S. 354 IPC — Sentence reduced to that already undergone

The prosecutrix filed a report that on the preceding day in the morning, at about 9.00 or 9.30 a.m. when she went to the fields the accused all of a sudden came and caught hold of her and raped her. When she tried to resist, accused P gave a blow on her eye and threatened to kill her, if she made any sound. When she again cried for help, her aunt-in-law (PW 2) came and challenged him. Upon this, accused P fled away from the place of occurrence. The medical examination of the prosecutrix was conducted by the doctor at 2.00 p.m. The trial court convicted the accused under Section 376 of the Penal Code, 1860 imposing a sentence of 7 years' imprisonment. In appeal a Single Judge of the High Court upheld the conviction under Section 376 IPC.

10. Rape or outraging modesty/indecent assault/other lesser sexual offences (contd.)

Disposing the appeal in terms below,

Held :

There was no unexplained delay in lodging the FIR. So far as absence of injury on the private parts of the prosecutrix is concerned, admittedly, she was a married lady. But on a close reading of the evidence of the prosecutrix, it is clear that the accused outraged the modesty but had not raped her. The prosecutrix has not stated specifically about the act, but has loosely described as "fondling". So far as the enmity with the aunt of L (PW 4), the husband of the prosecutrix is concerned it is unnatural that a married lady belonging to the rural areas would falsely implicate the accused with whom she or her husband had no enmity. (Para 8)

After careful consideration of the evidence, the trial court and the High Court have found the accused guilty. But the offence is under Section 354 IPC. The conviction of the accused is altered from Section 376 IPC to Section 354 IPC. The accused has undergone nearly two years of sentence. The occurrence is of 1987. Custodial sentence shall be the period already undergone. Directed that the appellant be released forthwith unless required in custody in connection with any other case. (Paras 10 and 11). Premiya v. State of Rajasthan, (2008) 10 SCC 81: (2008) 70 AIC 45 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2008]

State of Punjab v. Major Singh, AIR 1967 SC 63, relied on

[9167] — Ss. 376 and 354 — Sexual assault or indecent assault — Victim aged about 5 years — Doctor finding the hymen completely torn, laceration on all sides of vagina and fresh bleeding — Evidence of lady doctor showing that a finger could be easily inserted inside the private part — Held, the victim was subjected to sexual assault and not merely indecent assault — Merely because the injuries found on the private part of the victim could also be caused by an instrument like a piece of glass cannot lead to the conclusion that she was not raped unless there is material to support such a conclusion

The victim girl was brought to the hospital in a semi-conscious state and her general condition was poor. On external examination of the girl the doctor found that the hymen was completely torn and there was laceration on all sides of vagina. The doctor noticed that there was fresh bleeding in her private part. On internal examination the doctor found that a finger could easily be inserted in her private part and bloodstained discharge was coming out. Thus from the medical evidence it is clear that the girl was not only subjected to an indecent assault but there was sexual activity and the girl was subjected to sexual assault, otherwise the doctor would not have found the hymen completely torn, laceration on all sides of the vagina and fresh bleeding. According to the evidence of lady doctor a finger could be easily inserted inside the private part of the victim which otherwise was not possible in the case of a child aged 5 years because according to the Medical Jurisprudence by Modi, 21st Edn., p. 376, in a girl under 14 years of age the vaginal orifice is usually so small that it will hardly allow the passage of the little finger through her hymen. In the present case if the girl aged 5 years was not subjected to sexual intercourse the finger could not have been easily inserted in her private part as observed by the lady doctor.

Simply because the injuries found on the private part of the girl could also be caused in several other ways than the sexual assault on the victim cannot lead to the conclusion that the injuries on her private part were not sustained by commission of the rape but by some other instrument in the absence of any material to support such a conclusion. In the present case though the doctor deposed that the injuries could also be caused by instrument like piece of glass but there were neither circumstances nor any material to conclude or even to suggest that the victim had sustained the injuries by any piece of glass. No piece of glass was found at or near the place of occurrence. On the contrary there is positive and convincing evidence showing that there was sexual assault on the girl and the finding that she was subjected to indecent assault is absolutely incorrect. State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-1994]

[9168] — Ss. 376, 354 and 506 — Effect of delay in filing FIR in cases of sexual assault — Respondent-accused alleged to have sexually ravished PW 1 and outraged the modesty of several other girl students of the school where he was a teacher — High Court setting aside his conviction considering delay in lodging FIR — Held, delay in a case of sexual assault, cannot be equated with the case involving other offences — There are several factors which weigh in the mind of the prosecutrix and her family members before coming to the police station to lodge a complaint — In a tradition-bound society prevalent in India, more particularly rural areas, it would be quite unsafe to throw out the prosecution case merely on the ground that there was some delay in lodging the FIR — Further, though prosecution had failed to establish allegations of rape but commission of offence punishable under Ss. 354 and 506 have clearly been established — Hence, respondent deserves to be convicted for the offences punishable under Ss. 354 and 506 — CrPC, 1973, S. 154 (Paras 2 and 6 to 8). State of H.P. v. Prem Singh, (2009) 1 SCC 420: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 351: AIR 2009 SC 1010: (2009) 73 AIC 238 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 786.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-11-2008]

[9169] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Attempts to molest — Judicial enquiry into — Corroboration of the complainant's evidence when not necessary — Enquiry into the alleged offence conducted by District Judge on the Pondicherry Administration's request as directed by the Supreme Court — When such an enquiry was conducted 17 long years after the offence was committed, held, the complainant's allegation ought not to have been rejected merely for want of corroboration — Constitution of India, Art. 136 (Paras 3, 5 and 6). Radha Bai v. UT, Pondicherry, (1995) 4 SCC 141: 1995 SCC (L&S) 942: (1995) 30 ATC 196: AIR 1995 SC 1476.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and K.S. Paripoornan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1995]

[9170] — Ss. 376 and 511 or S. 354 — Applicable provision — Attempt to commit rape, held, not negated by mere absence of penetration — Contention that such a case would attract not Ss. 376 and 511 but only S. 354, rejected

The appellant contended that in absence of any penetration into the vagina it could not be held that the accused had attempted to commit rape on the prosecutrix, and that therefore, it would at most amount to an offence of indecent assault under Section 354 IPC. Rejecting this contention

Held :

The difference between preparation and an attempt to commit an offence consists chiefly in the greater degree of determination and what is necessary to prove that an offence of an attempt to commit rape has been committed is that the accused has gone beyond the stage of preparation. If an accused strips a girl naked and then making her lie flat on the ground undresses himself and then forcibly rubs his erected penis on the private parts of the girl but fails to penetrate the same into the vagina and on such rubbing ejaculates himself then it cannot be held that it was a case of mere assault under Section 354 IPC and not an attempt to commit rape under Section 376 read with Section 511 IPC. Madan Lal v. State of J&K, (1997) 7 SCC 677: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1151: AIR 1998 SC 386.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-1997]

[9171] — Ss. 376(1) and proviso thereto, 363 and 366 — Trial court imposing sentences of 7 years' RI under Ss. 363 and 376 and ten years' RI under S. 366 — Reduction below statutory minimum by High Court — Sustainability — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction on all counts, in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of nearly two years and four months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Rakesh, (2005) 8 SCC 13(4): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1959 (3): AIR 2005 SC 4319.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2005]

[Ed.: Many similar appeals were filed in the Supreme Court by the State of M.P. involving the very same manner of reduction of sentence by Justice N.S. Azad of the M.P. High Court. All such appeals came before the present Bench of three Judges. The leading decision is reported above at (2005) 8 SCC 1.

All the remaining appeals [which are being reported below at pp. 11-14] have been disposed of identically except that in certain appeals besides S. 376 IPC the accused had been convicted of other offences as well, and the period of sentence undergone was also different. Since the text of all the judgments in the connected appeals in other respects is identical to the one reproduced below, they are not being reproduced. The slight difference in the conviction and period of sentence already undergone is detailed in each shortnote given separately below the cause title of each appeal. It is worthy of note that the trial court in each case had awarded the minimum mandatory sentence under S. 376(1) or S. 376(2), as the case may be.]

[9172] — S. 376/S. 354 — Rape alleged for the first time after eleven days of the occurrence for which no explanation put forth — Effect — Where on the basis of the FIR and the facts as alleged and proved only offence under S. 354 made out, conviction of appellant under S. 376 unsustainable — Sentence of imprisonment for period already undergone i.e. 13 months would serve the ends of justice (Paras 3 and 4). Tejpal v. State of M.P., (2006) 9 SCC 762: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 398.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.N. Agrawal, A.K. Mathur and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2006]

[9173] — Ss. 376 (as amended in 1983)/511 or 354 — Applicable provision — After finding the accused guilty under Ss. 376/511, even in absence of a charge under S. 376 read with S. 511, held,

10. Rape or outraging modesty/indecent assault/other lesser sexual offences (contd.)

High Court should have convicted him under Ss. 376/511 by invoking S. 222, CrPC and not under S. 354 — Quantum of punishment — Determination of — Keeping in view the objects of 1983 amendment to S. 376, held, no person committing or attempting to commit rape should be allowed to escape punishment — Having found the accused guilty, the quantum of punishment must be decided in accordance with law without being influenced by the press, electronic media or public agitation, as a trial by such agencies is the very antithesis of rule of law — While imposing fine and apportioning the whole or part thereof to the victim, the damage caused to her and even to her family should be taken into consideration — Father of eight-year-old daughter found guilty of attempting rape on a girl aged below twelve years and also found guilty under S. 57 of Bombay Children Act — High Court, however, setting aside the conviction under Ss. 376/511 and instead convicting him under S. 354 IPC and sentencing him to rigorous imprisonment for the period already undergone (only 33 days) and to a fine of Rs 40,000 of which Rs 25,000 was to be apportioned to the complainant (father of the prosecutrix in this case) — High Court upholding the respondent's conviction under S. 57 of the Bombay Act but restricting the sentence thereunder to the period of imprisonment already undergone — Matter coming up before the Supreme Court 11 long years after the incident and by then the fine imposed by the High Court having already been paid by the accused and the complainant having withdrawn his share of the fine — In such circumstances while converting the conviction of the accused from one under S. 354 IPC to that under Ss. 376/511 IPC, held, a sentence of five years' RI and a fine of Rs 40,000 would meet the ends of justice — Conviction and sentence under S. 57 of Bombay Children Act, however, affirmed — CrPC, 1973, S. 222 — Bombay Children Act, 1948 (71 of 1948), S. 57 — Law Commission Reports 42nd, 69th and 84th — Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1983

The accused-respondent was convicted by the trial court for offences under Section 376 of IPC and Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act, 1948 for having committed rape on a girl of eight years of age on 24-9-1986 and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 7 years and to pay fine of Rs 5000 and for offence under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act he was sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one year and to pay a fine of Rs 500. The substantive sentences were ordered to run concurrently. The Bombay High Court upset the conviction under Section 376 IPC and instead convicted him for an offence under Section 354 IPC and sentenced him to suffer rigorous imprisonment which he had already undergone (which was 33 days in all) and to pay fine of Rs 40,000 out of which Rs 25,000 was directed to be paid to the complainant who was the father of the girl. The conviction for the offence under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act was upheld but the sentence was reduced to the imprisonment already undergone. Cross appeals were filed against the High Court's decision. While the State of Maharashtra filed appeal against the conviction and sentence of the accused by the High Court praying for his conviction under Section 376 IPC and for enhancement of his sentence to a minimum of 10 years, the accused filed appeal against his very conviction and sentence under Section 354 IPC and Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act. On the question of sentence under Sections 376/511, IPC, the accused-respondent contended that when the offence was committed the accused had also a daughter of 8 years of age and that a long time had elapsed since the offence was committed and that in terms of the judgment of the High Court the accused had already deposited Rs 40,000 out of which Rs 25,000 had already been withdrawn by the father of the prosecutrix. It was submitted that if the Court came to the conclusion that the sentence had to be enhanced then only the amount of fine could be raised. Dismissing the respondent's appeal and partly allowing the State's appeal

Held :

The circumstances of the case show that the accused intended to commit rape on the girl. In the commission of that crime, he laid the girl on the seat in the Maruti car and then laid himself over her. He pulled down her knickers and also opened the zip of his pants and took out his male organ. He pressed his male organ on the private parts of the girl. But since he discharged, he could not penetrate and was unable to complete the offence of rape. However, it is clear that he did attempt to commit rape.

The High Court after having come to the conclusion that the accused was guilty of an offence under Sections 376/511 of the IPC could not have convicted the accused for an offence under Section 354 IPC. Section 511 IPC provides punishment for attempting to commit offences punishable with imprisonment for life or other imprisonment. In the instant case since the girl was under 12 years of age and the Sessions Judge having found that offence of rape had been committed could not have awarded sentence of 7 years when the law prescribes minimum sentence of rigorous imprisonment for a term not less than 10 years, unless exceptional circumstances existed. However, the State of the complainant did not come up in appeal in the High Court for enhancement of the sentence. Though there was no charge under Section 376 read with Section 511 IPC, under Section 222 CrPC when a person is charged for an offence he may be convicted of an attempt to commit such offence although the attempt is not separately charged.

The respondent's plea that in case the court took a decision to enhance the sentence the amount of fine could be raised, cannot be accepted. A heinous crime has been committed and the accused must suffer for the consequences. A rapist not only violates the victim's personal integrity but leaves indelible marks on the very soul of the helpless female. The girl of 8 years must have undergone a traumatic experience. Despite the 11 year long lapse of time after the offence, keeping the objects of the 1983 amendment to Section 376 of IPC in view, the law as it exists now and the decisions of the Supreme Court on the question of sentence, the message is loud and clear that no person who commits or attempts to commit rape shall escape punishment.

Considering the whole aspect of the matter, it has to be held that a sentence of five years' rigorous imprisonment and fine of Rs 40,000 will meet the ends of justice. The fine has already been paid, out of that Rs 25,000 has been withdrawn by the father of the girl as per direction of the High Court which is upheld. The conviction of the accused-respondent is converted from one under Section 354 IPC to that under Sections 376/511 IPC and he is sentenced as aforesaid. The conviction and sentence of the accused under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act as ordered by the High Court shall, however, stand. The sentences shall run concurrently. State of Maharashtra v. Rajendra Jawanmal Gandhi, (1997) 8 SCC 386: AIR 1997 SC 3986.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1997]

[9174] — Ss. 376/511 & 354 — Offence of attempt to commit rape and to commit indecent assault — Point of distinction between

The point of distinction between an offence of attempt to commit rape and to commit indecent assault is that there should be some action on the part of the accused which would show that he is just going to have sexual connection with the prosecutrix. (Para 17). Tarkeshwar Sahu v. State of Bihar (Now Jharkhand), (2006) 8 SCC 560: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 556.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

Ahmed Asalt Mirkhan, Cri A No. 161 of 1930, decided on 12-8-1930 in Law of Crimes by Ratanlal Dhirajlal, p. 922; R. v. James Lloyd, (1836) 7 C&P 317: 173 ER 141, relied on

[9175] — Ss. 376/511, 366 and 354 — Charge framed under Ss. 376/511, but conviction under Ss. 366 and 354 — Conviction where major offence not proved, but minor offence in respect of which no charge was framed is established — Accused charged only under Ss. 376/511 IPC — Said offence not made out — However, ingredients of minor offences under Ss. 366 and 354 IPC present — Held, accused could be convicted under Ss. 366 and 354 IPC by invoking S. 222 CrPC — CrPC, 1973, S. 222

In the instant case, the accused has been charged with Sections 376/511 IPC only. But, the offence committed does not come within the purview of offence punishable under Sections 376/511 IPC. In the absence of charge under any other section, the question now arises — whether the accused should be acquitted; or whether he should be convicted for committing any other offence pertaining to forcibly outraging the modesty of a girl. In a situation like this, Section 222 CrPC would be invoked which provides that in a case where the accused is charged with a major offence and the said charge is not proved, the accused may be convicted of the minor offence, though he was not charged with it. (Paras 23 and 36)

In the present case, the offence committed squarely covers the ingredients of Sections 366 and 354 IPC. The appellant is clearly guilty of the offences under Sections 366 and 354 IPC. (Paras 36 and 59). Tarkeshwar Sahu v. State of Bihar (Now Jharkhand), (2006) 8 SCC 560: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 556.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

Lakhjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 173: 1994 SCC (Cri) 235; Shamnsaheb M. Multtani v. State of Karnataka, (2001) 2 SCC 577: 2001 SCC (Cri) 358, relied on

[9176] — Ss. 376/511, 375 Expln., 366 and 354 — Rape — Basic ingredients of — Penetration of male organ into private parts of victim/prosecutrix, held, is necessary to constitute the said offence — Slightest penetration with or without any emission of semen or even an attempt at penetration

10. Rape or outraging modesty/indecent assault/other lesser sexual offences (contd.)

is sufficient — Rupture of hymen is not necessary — Appellant forcibly taking prosecutrix to his gumti with intention of committing illicit intercourse — But, before he could do anything, hearing alarm raised by prosecutrix, the father of prosecutrix and other villagers assembling there and rescuing the prosecutrix — Held, in absence of any attempt to penetrate, conviction under Ss. 376/511 was wholly illegal and unsustainable — However, ingredients of offences under Ss. 366 and 354 IPC being present, appellant held guilty under the said sections — Punished accordingly

On 18-2-1998, at about 1.30 a.m., when the prosecutrix, aged about 12 years, came out of her house to answer the call of nature, the appellant forcibly took her to his gumti for committing illicit sexual intercourse with her. The said gumti of the appellant was only a few feet away from the house of the prosecutrix. The prosecutrix raised an alarm, and immediately thereafter several persons including the father of the prosecutrix came from the adjoining houses and caught the appellant before he could even make any attempt to ravish the prosecutrix.

The trial court convicted the appellant under Sections 376/511 IPC and sentenced him to seven years' rigorous imprisonment. The appellant preferred an appeal before the High Court, but the same was dismissed. Hence, the present appeal.

Partly allowing the appeal,

Held :

The important ingredient of the offence under Section 375 punishable under Section 376 IPC is penetration which is altogether missing in the instant case. No offence under Section 376 IPC can be made out unless there was penetration to some extent. In the absence of penetration to any extent, it would not bring the offence of the appellant within the four corners of Section 375 of the Penal Code. (Para 10)

Under Section 375 IPC, six categories indicated therein are the basic ingredients of the offence of rape. In view of the Explanation to Section 375, mere penetration of penis in vagina is an offence of rape. Slightest penetration is sufficient for conviction under Section 376 IPC. (Paras 10 and 13)

Therefore, the basic ingredient for proving a charge of rape is the accomplishment of the act with force. The other important ingredient is penetration of the male organ within the labia majora or the vulva or pudenda with or without any emission of semen or even an attempt at penetration into the private part of the victim completely, partially or slightly would be enough for the purpose of Sections 375 and 376 IPC. In order to constitute rape, what Section 375 IPC requires is medical evidence of penetration, and this may occur and the hymen remain intact. In this regard, the position of law in England is the same. There also, where a penetration was proved, but not of such a depth as to injure the hymen, still it was held to be sufficient to constitute the crime of rape. The view has been taken that "proof of the rupture of the hymen is unnecessary". It has been laid down that "it is now unnecessary to prove actual emission of seed; sexual intercourse is deemed complete upon proof of penetration only". (Paras 10, 13, 14 and 21)

In the present case, what to talk about the penetration, there has not been any attempt of penetration to the slightest degree. The appellant had neither undressed himself nor even asked the prosecutrix to undress so there was no question of penetration. In the absence of any attempt to penetrate, the conviction under Sections 376/511 IPC is wholly illegal and unsustainable. (Paras 22 and 58)

However, the offence committed squarely covers the ingredients of Sections 366 and 354 IPC. (Para 36). Tarkeshwar Sahu v. State of Bihar (Now Jharkhand), (2006) 8 SCC 560: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 556.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585; R. v. Hill, (1781) 1 East PC 439; R. v. M'Rue, (1838) 8 C&P 641: 173 ER 653; R. v. Allen, (1839) 9 C&P 31: 173 ER 727; R. v. Hughes, (1841) 2 Mood 190: 169 ER 75; R. v. Lines, (1844) 1 C&K 393: 174 ER 861; R. v. Marsden, (1891) 2 QB 149; Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266, relied on

State of Kerala v. Kundumkara Govindan, 1969 Cri LJ 818: 1968 Ker LJ 485, approved

Nirmal Kumar v. State of Haryana, 2002 Cri LJ 3352 (P&H); Khalilur Rahman v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Rang 98: 34 Cri LJ 696 (FB); Rajendra v. State of Maharashtra, 1997 SCC (Cri) 840; Niranjan Singh v. State, (1986) 2 Crimes 335 (Del); Vishnu v. State of Maharashtra, 1997 Cri LJ 1724 (Bom); State of Kerala v. Hamsa, (1988) 3 Crimes 161 (Ker); State of Punjab v. Major Singh, AIR 1967 SC 63: 1967 Cri LJ 1; Kanhu Charan Patra v. State of Orissa, 1996 Cri LJ 1151 (Ori); Jai Chand v. State, 1996 Cri LJ 2039 (Del); Raja v. State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cri LJ 1608 (Raj); State of Karnataka v. Khaleel, 2004 Cri LJ (NOC) 10 (Kant); Nuna v. Emperor, 15 IC 309: (1912) 13 Cri LJ 469; Bisheshwar Murmu v. State of Bihar, 2004 Cri LJ 326 (Jhar); Keshab Padhan v. State of Orissa, 1976 Cutt LR (Cri) 236; Ram Mehar v. State of Haryana, 1998 Cri LJ 1999 (P&H); Rameshwar v. State of Haryana, 1984 Cri LJ 786 (P&H); Shoukat v. State of Rajasthan, 2002 Cri LJ 364 (Raj), considered

11. Rape of mentally deficient woman

[9177] — S. 376 — Rape on a mentally deficient woman — Sentence — Quantum of — Held, gravity of offence in such case is more serious than the enumerated categories indicated in S. 376(2) — Hence, need of prescribing higher minimum sentence in a case of this nature, recommended (Para 8). Tulshidas Kanolkar v. State of Goa, (2003) 8 SCC 590.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-2003]

[9178] — Ss. 376 and 506 Pt. II — Rape — Delay in lodging FIR — Victim, a mentally deficient girl — Delay, held on facts, not fatal — When accusations of rape are involved, held, said delay per se is not a mitigating circumstance — Such delay, if satisfactorily explained, held, not fatal — If not so explained and there is possibility of embellishment or exaggeration in prosecution version due to such delay, then it is a relevant factor — Where a mentally deficient girl totally unaware of the catastrophe which had befallen her was ravished by accused not once, but several times, held, the unusual circumstances satisfactorily explained the delay in lodging FIR — Thus, said delay did not affect the prosecution version adversely — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

Delay in lodging the first information report cannot be used as a ritualistic formula for discarding the prosecution case and doubting its authenticity. It only puts the court on guard to search for and consider if any explanation has been offered for the delay. Once it is offered, the court is to only see whether it is satisfactory or not. In case if the prosecution fails to satisfactorily explain the delay and there is possibility of embellishment or exaggeration in the prosecution version on account of such delay, it is a relevant factor. On the other hand, satisfactory explanation of the delay is weighty enough to reject the plea of false implication or vulnerability of the prosecution case. (Para 5)

Delay per se is not a mitigating circumstance for the accused when accusations of rape are involved. As the factual scenario shows, the victim was totally unaware of the catastrophe which had befallen her. That being so, the mere delay in lodging of the first information report does not in any way render the prosecution version brittle. (Para 5). Tulshidas Kanolkar v. State of Goa, (2003) 8 SCC 590.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-2003]

12. Other offences and rape

[9179] — Ss. 376 and 448 — House-trespass and rape — Alleged to be committed by respondent on 23-9-1981 — Absence of medical report regarding observations of doctor when he examined the victim PW 3 on 24-9-1981 — Hence, subsequent clarifications given by doctor in reply to certain queries asked by IO on 25-9-1981, held, not acceptable — Even though there were children and other adults nearabout the house of PW 3, none responded to her alarm — Further, if at all PW 3 raised an alarm it was only after the respondent went away from her house — No injuries on the body of PW 3 to indicate any forceful assault — Undue delay in lodging complaint — On facts, held, prosecution failed to establish its case — Acquittal upheld (Paras 2 to 4). State of Karnataka v. Mapilla P.P. Soopi, (2003) 8 SCC 202: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1977.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-2003]

[9180] — Ss. 376 and 506 — Offence alleged under both SC/ST Act and IPC — Proceedings under IPC if may continue if proceeding under 1989 Act vitiated — Accused charged under Ss. 376 and 506 IPC and S. 3(1)(xii) of the Act — High Court in revision against framing of charges quashed the entire proceedings — Investigation was carried out by IO in absence of authorisation by competent authority — Held, investigation of an offence under S. 3 of the Act by an officer not appointed in terms of R. 7 is illegal and invalid — But when the offence complained is also under IPC the investigation by a competent police officer in accordance with CrPC cannot be quashed — The proceedings shall proceed for the offences punishable under IPC notwithstanding investigation and the charge-sheet being not liable to be accepted for cognizance of offence under S. 3 of the Act — Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, Ss. 9 & 3 r/w R. 7 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 397 and 401 (Paras 5 and 7 to 9). State of M.P. v. Chunnilal, (2009) 12 SCC 649: (2009) 77 AIC 33 (SC): (2009) 2 KLT 335.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

Applied in State of Punjab v. Hardial Singh, (2009) 15 SCC 106 at p. 107*

[9181] — Ss. 376/34 and 306/34 — Rape and consequential suicide — Charge against two accused of committing rape on the person of a school teacher aged 20 years — Statement of the victim recorded by police 11 days after the occurrence and on that basis FIR registered and victim medically examined — In her statement, the victim

12. Other offences and rape (contd.)

narrating the circumstances relating to her rape — Victim committing suicide about 5½ months after the occurrence — Statement of the deceased held to be not a dying declaration and not admissible in evidence — Delay in lodging FIR, medical examination, non-examination of material witnesses and turning hostile of witnesses also going against the prosecution case — On facts held, prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt the charge of rape under Ss. 376/34 — Since according to the prosecution, suicide was due to humiliation suffered by the victim because of rape, conviction under Ss. 306/34 also cannot be sustained

A school teacher aged about 20 years was allegedly raped by the headmaster and a co-teacher (appellants) of the same school on 9-7-1994. According to the prosecution thereafter the prosecutrix narrated the incident to her mother, brother and uncle and later to her father who came back home after 2-3 days. The matter was reported to the police on 20-7-1994. The statement of the prosecutrix was recorded by an API at the police station and on that basis the crime report was registered. Petticoat of the prosecutrix and the metal bangles which she was wearing at the time of occurrence were seized. After preparation of panchnama, the seized articles were sent to the chemical analyser for his report. On 6-8-1994 statements of two child witnesses were recorded under Section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code before the Special Executive Magistrate. The doctor who examined the prosecutrix reported that she had been subjected to sexual intercourse in the recent past. The appellants were charged for offences under Section 376 read with Section 34 IPC. Having failed to withstand the humiliation which the prosecutrix was subjected to on account of rape committed by the appellants, she was stated to have committed suicide. Autopsy was conducted on the same date and the cause of death was reported as poisoning. In view of the subsequent development additional charge under Section 306 read with Section 34 IPC was added against the appellants on 8-5-1995. Both the accused pleaded not guilty and claimed to be tried. The trial court convicted the appellants under Sections 376/34 as well as Sections 306/34 IPC relying upon the statement made by the deceased before the API treating the same as the dying declaration being admissible in evidence under Section 32 of the Evidence Act. The High Court dismissed the appeal preferred by the accused-appellants. Allowing their further appeal

Held :

The conviction of the persons accused of offences cannot be based upon conjectures and suspicions. Her statement, if not treated as a dying declaration, there is no cogent and reliable evidence which can connect the accused with the commission of the crime. In that event the other arguments advanced on behalf of the appellants assume importance. Other circumstances such as delay in lodging FIR, medical examination of the prosecutrix, the non-examination of material witnesses and turning hostile of witnesses are also required to be taken note of. It has also to be kept in mind that after the incident on 9-7-1994 the prosecutrix is shown to have attended the school on 10-7-1994 and 11-7-1994 as well. Her mother in cross-examination also stated that the prosecutrix had told her about the incident only on 12-7-1994 at about 5.00 p.m. The father of the deceased deposed that his daughter had not told him on 17th, 18th, 19th July that she wanted to file a complaint, that he did not ask her as to what she wanted to complain about and that he did not disclose before the police on 20-7-1994 that she told him that she wanted to file the criminal complaint. It must, therefore, be held that the prosecution has failed to prove, beyond reasonable doubt, that the appellants had committed forcible sexual intercourse with the deceased on 9-7-1994 under the circumstances as narrated in the statement and relied upon by the courts below. The appellants cannot be convicted and sentenced merely on suspicion. (Paras 6, 11 and 12)

In the absence of the charge being proved under Section 376 IPC, the prosecution could not have asked for conviction of the appellants under Section 306 IPC as according to the prosecution it was the commission of rape on her person which resulted in the suicide of the deceased allegedly on the abetment of the appellants. If the cause for committing suicide is not legally proved, the appellants cannot be held responsible for the abetment of the ultimate offence of suicide. As the prosecution has failed to prove its case against the appellants beyond all reasonable doubt, they are entitled to acquittal. In the present case the investigating as well as the prosecuting agency have not acted promptly and diligently as was expected under the circumstances. (Paras 13 and 14). Sudhakar v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 6 SCC 671: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1250: AIR 2000 SC 2602: 2000 Cri LJ 3490.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, R.P. Sethi and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-7-2000]

[9182] — Ss. 376/511 and 323 — Attempt to rape — Victim committing suicide one and half months after the occurrence — Mere fact of non-availability of the victim for examination not fatal to the prosecution — Court should decide on the basis of available evidence

Mere fact that a victim is dead and consequently could not be examined can never be a ground to acquit an accused if there is evidence otherwise available proving the criminal act of the accused concerned. The prosecution case cannot be thrown overboard because of the non-availability of the victim for examination on account of her death. The Court can record a conviction for any offence that is made out on the available evidence, let in by the prosecution. State of Karnataka v. Mahabaleshwar Gourya Naik, 1992 Supp (3) SCC 179: 1993 SCC (Cri) 180: AIR 1992 SC 2043: (1992) 2 Crimes 654.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M.M. Punchhi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-1992]

C. TRIAL, SENTENCING AND OTHER ISSUES

See in detail CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vols. 18, 19 and 20, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 3 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

Synopsis

1. Treatment of prosecutrix 569
2. Acquittal justified 571
3. Appeal 575
4. Appreciation of Evidence 577
   - (a) Generally 578
   - (b) Appellate court's approach 579
   - (c) Contradictions, inconsistencies, exaggerations or embellishments 580
   - (d) Credibility of prosecutrix/witness 584
   - (e) Medical evidence vis-à-vis evidence of prosecutrix 585
   - (f) Reappreciation/Reappraisal of evidence 586
5. Bail/Suspension of sentence 586
6. Charge 588
7. Circumstantial Evidence 590
   - (a) Generally 590
   - (b) Clues and Tell-Tale Signs/Forensics 591
   - (c) Acquittal justified 593
   - (d) Conviction justified 594
   - (e) Injuries on accused 598
   - (f) Last seen together 599
   - (g) Motive 601
   - (h) Recovery of crime articles/incriminating articles/other articles 601
   - (i) Recovery of dead body/corpus delicti 602
8. Conduct of accused, prosecutrix, witnesses, etc. 602
9. Confession 603
10. Conviction justified 603
11. Conviction on sole testimony of prosecutrix 607
12. Defence 607
13. Dying declaration 608
14. Examination 608
15. FIR 610
   - (a) Generally 610
   - (b) Delay in lodging/filing FIR 610
16. Identification 621
17. Investigation 625
   - (a) Generally 625
   - (b) Defective or illegal or delayed investigation 626
   - (c) Tests which can be conducted on accused or prosecutrix 627
18. Judge/Presiding Judge/Court — Role of in rape cases 628
19. Juvenile/Child accused 630
20. Medical Jurisprudence/Evidence 631
   - (a) Age of prosecutrix or accused 631
   - (b) DNA test 637
   - (c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof 638
   - (d) Medical/Expert opinion 651
   - (e) Medical examination of prosecutrix 651
   - (f) Medical examination of accused 651
   - (g) Medico-legal report/Doctor 651
   - (h) Time of rape 652
   - (i) Medical evidence of sex/rape 653
21. Practice and Procedure 659
22. Proof 659
   - (a) Generally 659
   - (b) Corroboration 660
   - (c) Laboratory Test 661
   - (d) Recovery of crime/incriminating material/other articles 661
   - (e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act 662
23. Revision 695
24. Sentence 696
   - (a) Generally 696
   - (b) Premature release/Probation 702
   - (c) Compensation to rehabilitation of victim/Suit for damages 702
   - (d) Death Sentence 706
     - (i) Generally 706
     - (ii) Death upheld 706
     - (iii) Commutation to life when warranted 707
   - (e) Fine and Imprisonment in default 710

- (f) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos 711
  - (i) Generally 711
  - (ii) Adequate and Special reasons 711
    - (1) Generally 711
    - (2) Reasons that may be considered special and adequate 718
  - (iii) Instances 727
- (g) Principles for sentencing 733
  - (i) Generally 734
  - (ii) Age/Health state of accused/ Juvenile 734
  - (iii) Accused marrying prosecutrix 735
  - (iv) Delay/Pendency in proceedings/ execution of sentence 735
  - (v) Proportionality 737
  - (vi) Background/station/education of accused 737
  - (vii) Other 738
  - (viii) Sentence reduced 739
  - (ix) Sentence not reduced/enhanced 740

25. Witnesses 740

1. Treatment of prosecutrix

[9183] — S. 376 — Approach — Need of considering a self-respecting woman's state of mind, stressed

The trial Judge convicted A-1 and A-2 under Sections 376 and 506 Part II IPC for allegedly taking the two victim sisters in an auto and raping them after taking them in a wrong direction. The High Court by the impugned order dismissed the appeal against their conviction.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

In a case of rape, particularly if the victims are illiterate and uneducated, their statements have to be accepted in toto without further corroboration. Any statement of rape is an extremely humiliating experience for a woman and until she is a victim of sex crime, she would not blame anyone but the real culprit. While appreciating the evidence of the prosecutrix, the courts must always keep in mind that no self-respecting woman would put her honour at stake by falsely alleging commission of rape on her and, therefore, ordinarily a look for corroboration of her testimony is unnecessary and uncalled for. (Paras 15 and 17). Santhosh Moolya v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 5 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-2010]

[9184] — S. 376 — Casting stigma on the character of a victim of rape deprecated — Trial judge not justified in characterising a rape victim as a girl of loose character — Court must use self-restraint while recording such finding even if the girl is found to be habituated to sexual intercourse — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 155(4). State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

[9185] — S. 376 — Child rape — Sensitive approach of court needed — Onerous responsibility lies on court to provide proper legal protection to the victims — Constitution of India, Art. 39

Cases involving sexual molestation and assault require a different approach — a sensitive approach and not an approach which a court may adopt in dealing with a normal offence under penal laws. (Para 15)

Child rape cases are cases of perverse lust for sex where even innocent children are not spared in pursuit of sexual pleasure. It is a crime against humanity. In such cases, responsibility on the shoulders of the courts is more onerous so as to provide proper legal protection to these children. Their physical and mental immobility call for such protection. Children are the natural resource of our country. They are the country's future. Hope of tomorrow rests on them. In our country, a girl child is in a very vulnerable position and one of the modes of her exploitation is rape besides other modes of sexual abuse. These factors point towards a different approach required to be adopted. It is necessary for the courts to have a sensitive approach when dealing with cases of child rape. The effect of such a crime on the mind of the child is likely to be lifelong. A special safeguard has been provided for children in the Constitution of India in Article 39. State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

[9186] — S. 376 — Plight of victim and her family at hand of investigating agency/officials — Harassment of victim (harassed with unwelcome amorous advances, stalked and finally raped and murdered) and her parents — Conduct of police officials condemned as reprehensible (Para 80). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

[9187] — S. 376 — Rape — Broad parameters in assisting rape victims laid down — Problems arising from rape and defects in existing criminal justice system in this regard stated

It is rather unfortunate that in recent times, there has been an increase in violence against women causing serious concern. Rape does indeed pose a series of problems for the criminal justice system. There are cries for harshest penalties, but often times such cries eclipse the real plight of the victim. Rape is an experience which shakes the foundations of the lives of the victims. For many, its effect is a long-term one, impairing their capacity for personal relationships, altering their behaviour and values and generating endless fear. In addition to the trauma of the rape itself, victims have had to suffer further agony during legal proceedings. (Para 13)

The defects in the present system are: Firstly, complaints are handled roughly and are not given such attention as is warranted. The victims, more often than not, are humiliated by the police. The victims have invariably found rape trials a traumatic experience. The experience of giving evidence in court has been negative and destructive. The victims often say, they considered the ordeal to be even worse than the rape itself. Undoubtedly, the court proceedings added to and prolonged the psychological stress they had had to suffer as a result of the rape itself. (Para 14)

In this background, it is necessary to indicate the broad parameters in assisting the victims of rape.

(1) The complainants of sexual assault cases should be provided with legal representation. It is important to have someone who is well-acquainted with the criminal justice system. The role of the victim's advocate would not only be to explain to the victim the nature of the proceedings, to prepare her for the case and to assist her in the police station and in court but to provide her with guidance as to how she might obtain help of a different nature from other agencies, for example, mind counselling or medical assistance. It is important to secure continuity of assistance by ensuring that the same person who looked after the complainant's interests in the police station represent her till the end of the case.

(2) Legal assistance will have to be provided at the police station since the victim of sexual assault might very well be in a distressed state upon arrival at the police station, the guidance and support of a lawyer at this stage and whilst she was being questioned would be of great assistance to her.

(3) The police should be under a duty to inform the victim of her right to representation before any questions were asked of her and that the police report should state that the victim was so informed.

(4) A list of advocates willing to act in these cases should be kept at the police station for victims who did not have a particular lawyer in mind or whose own lawyer was unavailable.

(5) The advocate shall be appointed by the court, upon application by the police at the earliest convenient moment, but in order to ensure that victims were questioned without undue delay, advocates would be authorised to act at the police station before leave of the court was sought or obtained.

(6) In all rape trials anonymity of the victim must be maintained, as far as necessary.

(7) It is necessary, having regard to the Directive Principles contained under Article 38(1) of the Constitution of India to set up Criminal Injuries Compensation Board. Rape victims frequently incur substantial financial loss. Some, for example, are too traumatised to continue in employment.

(8) Compensation for victims shall be awarded by the court on conviction of the offender and by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board whether or not a conviction has taken place. The Board will take into account pain, suffering and shock as well as loss of earnings due to pregnancy and the expenses of child birth if this occurred as a result of the rape. (Para 15)

In the present situation, the third respondent will have to evolve such scheme as to wipe out the tears of such unfortunate victims. Such a scheme shall be prepared within six months from the date of this judgment. Thereupon, the Union of India, will examine the same and shall take necessary steps for the implementation of the scheme at the earliest. (Para 18). Delhi Domestic Working Women's Forum v. Union of India, (1995) 1 SCC 14: 1995 SCC (Cri) 7: (1995) 1 BLJR 1.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.N. Venkatachaliah, C.J. and S. Mohan and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-10-1994]

[9188] — S. 376 — Rape — Casting stigma on the character of prosecutrix deprecated — Absence of hymen — Even if it be concluded that the prosecutrix was used to sexual intercourse prior to the rape, she had every right to refuse to submit herself to sexual intercourse against her will

In the instant case the High Court after considering the medical evidence, while dealing with the question of rape opined:

"There is no direct evidence to show that the accused alone had sexual intercourse with her. The deceased was aged 16 years."

Held :

By using the word "alone" the High Court almost cast a stigma on the prosecutrix as if, apart from the appellant, there were other persons also who had sexual intercourse with her. There is no basis at all for such an assumption. There was no warrant for recording such a finding and if we may say so, with respect, the finding is an irresponsible finding. We express our strong disapproval of the approach of the High Court and its casting a stigma on the character of the deceased prosecutrix. Even if the Court formed an opinion, from the absence of hymen, that the victim had had sexual intercourse prior to the time when she was subjected to rape by the appellant, she had every right to refuse to submit herself to sexual intercourse by the appellant, as she certainly was not a vulnerable object or prey for being sexually assaulted by anyone and this position becomes all the more clear from the contents of the letter written by the deceased to the accused deprecating the idea of a married man enjoying another woman by terming it an act of grave sin. State of A.P. v. Gangula Satya Murthy, (1997) 1 SCC 272: 1997 SCC (Cri) 325: AIR 1997 SC 1588: 1997 Cri LJ 774.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1996]

[9189] — S. 376 — Rape trial — Unwarranted remarks or suggestions as to conduct, character or disposition of prosecutrix, deprecated — Plight of prosecutrix at hands of defence, highlighted (Para 37). Satpal Singh v. State of Haryana, (2010) 8 SCC 714: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1081: (2010) 93 AIC 50 (SC): 2010 Cri LJ 4283.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2010]

2. Acquittal justified

[9190] — Ss. 375 and 376 — No charge framed under, nor any evidence suggesting commission of rape — Medical report of the vaginal swab disclosing presence of semen and hence doctor opining that possibility of rape could not be ruled out — Trial court concluding that the deceased was raped before her death only on the basis of this solitary statement and imposing death sentence — High Court, concurring with the findings of the trial court and affirming the death sentence — Held, in absence of any charge framed under S. 376 and in absence of any evidence supporting the allegation, such finding cannot be sustained (Paras 19, 20 and 21). Jagjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 3 SCC 689: 2005 SCC (Cri) 893: AIR 2005 SC 913: 2005 Cri LJ 955.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2005]

[9191] — S. 376 — Allegation of rape — Doubt regarding the truthfulness of the prosecution case — Medical expert finding respondent-accused capable of having sexual intercourse, but stating that the prosecutrix would have had intercourse with her husband — Prosecutrix not raising alarm to attract the attention of her brother-in-law and his wife sleeping 20-25 feet away from her — Facts indicating that the accused and prosecutrix were quite intimate, the husband of the prosecutrix had some suspicion about the nefarious activities of his wife and the prosecutrix offered no resistance while having sexual intercourse with the accused — Further, non-seizure of the knife with which the accused, as alleged by the prosecutrix, had threatened her, raising a serious suspicion about the truthfulness of the prosecution version — In view of the said facts, held, the probability of the accused having had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix with her consent cannot be ruled out — Giving the benefit of doubt, the accused acquitted of all the charges levelled against him

The medical officer had examined the accused and found that he was capable of having sexual intercourse. He, however, stated that the prosecutrix appears to have had intercourse with her husband. (Para 23)

It is rather surprising that the accused entered the house at night and though the brother-in-law of the prosecutrix and his wife were sleeping only 20-25 feet away, the prosecutrix could not raise alarm so as to attract their attention. It further appears that the prosecutrix was known to the accused and that is why the first question asked by her was as to why he had come in the night. To this the accused replied stating that he wanted to have sexual intercourse with her. In the FIR as well as in the deposition of prosecutrix and her husband, there is a mention of the fact that the accused offered her Rs 20 for having sexual intercourse with her and also stated that one P will also pay her the same amount for having sexual intercourse with her. This is not disputed by the prosecutrix. This gives an impression that the prosecutrix and the respondent were quite intimate. According to the prosecutrix, she was having sexual intercourse with the accused when her husband came. According to her, it was her husband who separated the accused from her. The husband of the prosecutrix has not said so, though at one place he has stated that his wife was weeping when the accused was having sexual intercourse with her. It appears that the prosecutrix was offering no resistance while she was having sexual intercourse, when suddenly her husband entered the room. The other surprising feature of the case is that the husband of the prosecutrix after entering the house did not straight away chase the accused. He first questioned his wife as to whether she had called him, and only after her stating that she had not called him and that he had forcibly raped her, he started chasing the respondent and caught him. This again probabilises the fact that the husband also had at least some suspicion about the nefarious activities of his wife, otherwise it would be quite unnatural for a husband asking his wife, even before attempting to catch the accused, as to whether she had called him, and whether the accused had sexual intercourse with her consent. (Paras 24 and 25)

Further, it was contended by the prosecution that the respondent had carried a knife with him and had threatened the prosecutrix with the knife and, therefore, on account of fear, she could not raise an alarm or resist the respondent. It is indeed surprising that the knife has not been exhibited in the trial, nor does it appear to have been seized in the course of investigation. The non-seizure of the knife raises a serious suspicion about the truthfulness of the prosecution version that the respondent had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix under threat. (Para 25)

Having regard to these features of the case, the probability of the accused having had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix with her consent cannot be ruled out. The features noticed above probabilise the defence of the respondent, and there exists a serious doubt about the truthfulness of the prosecution case that the accused had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix without her consent. Hence, the respondent is entitled to the benefit of doubt and therefore he is acquitted of all the charges levelled against him. (Paras 26 and 27). State of Rajasthan v. Kishanlal, (2002) 5 SCC 424: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1149: AIR 2002 SC 2250: 2002 Cri LJ 2963.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-2002]

[9192] — S. 376 — Effect of unmerited acquittals on society considered — It leads to more attacks on women and demand for harsher sentence

An unmerited acquittal does no good to the society. If the prosecution has succeeded in making out a convincing case for recording a finding as to the accused being guilty, the court should not lean in favour of acquittal by giving weight to irrelevant or insignificant circumstances or by resorting to technicalities or by assuming doubts and giving benefit thereof where none exists. A doubt, as understood in criminal jurisprudence, has to be a reasonable doubt and not an excuse for a finding in favour of acquittal. An unmerited acquittal encourages wolves in the society being on the prowl for easy prey, more so when the victims of crime are helpless females. It is the spurt in the number of unmerited acquittals recorded by criminal courts which gives rise to the demand for death sentence to the rapists. The courts have to display a greater sense of responsibility and to be more sensitive while dealing with charges of sexual assault on women. (Para 9). State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898: AIR 2000 SC 1812: 2000 Cri LJ 2205.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728; State of Punjab v. Gurmeet Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on [9193] — S. 376 — Grounds for recording acquittal — Only because a lesser sentence is imposed by trial court (two years' RI in case of rape), held, the same would not be a ground for acquitting the accused — Matter remanded to High Court for fresh consideration — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 374 and 386 (Para 5). State of Rajasthan v. Bhanwar Singh, (2006) 6 SCC 9: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 9.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2006]

[9194] — S. 376 — Rape — Held, not proved — Absence of injury on any of the three accused or the prosecutrix — Case one of sexual intercourse with the consent of the prosecutrix and connivance of her husband. Pratap Misra v. State of Orissa, (1977) 3 SCC 41: 1977 SCC (Cri) 447: AIR 1977 SC 1307: 1977 Cri LJ 817.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-1977]

[9195] — S. 376 — Unmerited acquittals, particularly in crimes against girl child encourage the criminals — Court must be sensitive while dealing with such cases. State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-1994]

[9196] — Ss. 376 and 342 — Allegation that the appellants committed rape of the prosecutrix when she had gone to the shop of A-1 for purchasing a matchbox — Evidence of the prosecutrix found suffering from serious infirmities — Absence of injury on her person even though her version was that she was dragged and had received some scratches — Her evidence found to be inconsistent with the FIR lodged by her — Prosecutrix making deliberate improvement on material point (by saying that she was in an advanced stage of pregnancy) with a view to rule out consent — Fact of having suf- fered abortion not supported by medical evidence — Circumstances showing that she had gone inside the shop willingly and was not lifted from the outer portion of the shop and then dragged and taken into middle room — Conduct of her brother-in-law in pulling her out from the middle room, giving a kick and telling her to go home, not taking any action and waiting at the shop and purchasing tobacco leading to an inference that no complaint was made by the prosecutrix at the time she was allegedly raped — Held, in the circumstances of the case, no reliance can be placed upon her evidence — High Court not justified in reversing the order of acquittal passed by the trial court. Suresh N. Bhusare v. State of Maharashtra, (1999) 1 SCC 220: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1595: AIR 1998 SC 3131.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-1998]

[9197] — Ss. 376 and 342 — Offence of rape — Benefit of doubt — Prosecution case that PW 2 along with her helper came to the house of prosecutrix X and told her that she was required by her superior officer — X left with them in a jeep — Appellant met them on the way where PW 2 and her helper alighted from the jeep and appellant got into the driver's seat — Jeep driven by the appellant along with Ms X, the Malaria Inspector and the driver reached the house of the appellant at about 11.30 p.m. — Allegation that appellant committed forcible sexual intercourse with X at his house — Element of forcible taking away of X by appellant lacking in complaint — Evidence of X not supported by medical evidence — No stains of semen or blood found on the clothes of X — Delay in lodging FIR, on facts, also considered to be of some importance — Serious doubt about the genuineness of the prosecution case — Considering the broad probabilities of the case, held, the appellant was entitled to the benefit of doubt

It is reasonable to assume that no woman would falsely implicate a person in a sexual offence as the honour and prestige of that woman also would be at stake. However, the evidence of the prosecution shall be cogent and convincing and if there is any supporting material likely to be available, then the rule of prudence requires that evidence of the victim may be supported by such corroborative material. Thus, in rape cases the conviction can be solely based on the evidence of the victim, provided such evidence inspires confidence in the mind of the court. (Para 18)

The prosecutrix, though asserted that she had sustained scratch injuries by nails and biting, her medical examination did not reveal any such injuries. She had also stated that her clothes had seminal stains, but no stains of semen or blood were found on the clothes allegedly worn by her at the time of commission of offence. (Paras 19 and 6)

Ms X being an educated woman would have naturally foreseen the impropriety of travelling along with other males in a jeep for such a long distance during the night. It is true, people react differently to same situations. There are persons who are unduly timorous and imagine every path beset with lions and there are others of more robust temperament who fail to foresee or nonchalantly disregard even the most obvious dangers. Ms X, an unmarried woman travelled in a jeep for a long distance in the night and her conduct appears to be unusual and there is no rational explanation as to what urgent official work could have been there to undertake this nocturnal journey to meet her superior officer. Further, the previous acquaintance of Ms X with the appellant is also evident. That apart, on the next day of the incident, one Junior Engineer along with a driver came and enquired about Ms X. How these two persons came to know of the presence of Ms X in the house of the appellant, also is not known. (Paras 7 and 8)

It is true that in view of the social conditions prevalent in India, there may be delay in giving the first information of such an offence to the police. A rape victim may think seriously before giving the information to the police about rape as the onslaught of a social stigma may haunt her for life. Though the delay as such is not serious, but while considering the broad probabilities of the case, the delay in giving the information to the police, in the instant case, also assumes some importance. (Para 19)

Though the past conduct of the prosecutrix is an irrelevant matter, in the instant case, Ms X asserted that she was a virgin till the alleged incident, but the medical evidence supported by her physical features revealed that she was habituated to sex. (Para 19)

Further, though there is no apparent motive for Ms X to falsely implicate the appellant, it may be that Ms X must have changed her mind when she came to know that others must have come to know of her conduct. (Para 19)

Thus, in view of the broad probabilities of the case, the appellant is certainly entitled to the benefit of doubt. (Para 19). Sudhansu Sekhar Sahoo v. State of Orissa, (2002) 10 SCC 743: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1484: AIR 2003 SC 2136.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2002]

Sudhansu Sekhar Sahoo (Dr.) v. State of Orissa, (1993) 76 Cut LT 616, reversed

[9198] — Ss. 376, 366, 363 and 308 — Deceased, a girl aged 16½ years stating in FIR that she had attempted to commit suicide because she felt defamed and unable to live on account of misbehaviour of accused — That on one occasion while she was going to school along with her brother, accused had forcefully taken her in his white Ambassador car to Rose Garden and threatened her that in case she did not accompany him her brother would not be spared — That on second occasion while she was going to school along with her brother (PW 13) and friend (PW 15) accused along with his two accomplices had forcefully taken all of them in his car to a hotel and raped her — Eyewitnesses PWs 13 and 15 not supporting prosecution version and resiling from their statements made during investigation — Several contradictions/inconsistencies also discernible in two dying declarations, one which was allegedly recorded by the Head Constable and the other by Executive Magistrate — Held, when two courts on analysis of the evidence found the respondents not guilty, there is no scope for interference — Reasons indicated by trial court and affirmed by High Court discarding the two dying declarations do not suffer from any infirmity — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32(1) (Paras 3, 4 and 9 to 11). State of Punjab v. Chatinder Pal Singh, (2008) 17 SCC 90: AIR 2009 SC 974.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-11-2008]

[9199] — Ss. 376, 375, 148, 452, 149, 342, 323, 366 and 506 — Rape after forcible marriage — Allegations of — Acquittal confirmed — Prosecution failing to discharge its burden of proving ingredients of offences, not examining material witnesses (like father and brother of prosecutrix) — Delay of one month on part of prosecutrix in filing FIR and other discrepancies — Allegedly A-1 (an MP) with the help of other accused, at gunpoint took prosecutrix and her whole family to Bombay on 5-5-1999 — That A-1 converting himself to Islam and forcibly marrying prosecutrix by performing nikaah on 6-5-1999 in the presence of Kazi (PW 3) — Educated family and well-to-do parents of prosecutrix did not find time to report the serious matter concerning their daughter to police — Even FIR was lodged after a delay of about one month after marriage — There being nothing on record to suggest that A-1, at any point of time, coerced or threatened prosecutrix and her family members — Hence, findings of High Court upheld and acquittal confirmed

A-1 to A-5 were convicted by the trial court for the offences punishable under Sections 148, 452 read with Section 149, Section 366 read with Section 149, Section 342 read with Section 149, Section 323 read with Section 149 and Section 506(2) read with Section 149 IPC. A-1 was also convicted for the offences punishable under Section 386 read with Section 511, Section 376 IPC and Section 25(1)(a) of the Arms Act, 1959. The High Court by the impugned judgment set aside the conviction of the appellant.

Dismissing the appeal of the State filed against acquittal,

Held :

The High Court has not erred in coming to the conclusion that the whole prosecution story was a myth. In an appeal against acquittal, the burden was on the prosecution to prove and justify its contention that the findings of the High Court were perverse and were not justifiable and that inferences drawn by the High Court are not possible view or could not have been drawn in law. (Para 17)

Allegedly on 5-5-1999, A-1 under threat, took the prosecutrix and her whole family to Bombay for getting married with the prosecutrix and for that purpose he also converted himself to Islam. Thereafter, nikaah was performed on 6-5-1999 at Bombay in the presence of a kazi. In this nikaah, A-1 was helped by other accused persons who were his henchmen. Even after the nikaah, A-1 is alleged to have moved along with the prosecutrix at various places including Khandala, Mysore and Hyderabad where according to the prosecutrix, under threat, she was raped by A-1 from 9-5-1999 to 17-5-1999. The case of the prosecution was that it was only with the muscle and money power that A-1 (an MP) forced the prosecutrix for nikaah and ravished her. The prosecutrix lodged an FIR against the accused persons on 5-6-1999. (Para 4)

It was submitted that the High Court appreciated the evidence of PW 2 (prosecutrix), PW 8 (mother of prosecutrix), PW 3 (kazi) and other prosecution witnesses threadbare. There is nothing on record to suggest that A-1, at any point of time, coerced or threatened the prosecutrix and her family members. It was submitted that it was surprising that the educated family and well-to-do parents did not find the time to report the serious matter concerning their daughter to the police. Though A-1 allegedly ravished the prosecutrix in her own house in a bedroom when the other family members were also present, but none of them came forward to the rescue of the prosecutrix despite her cries for help and lodged any report. (Para 13)

A very substantial discrepancy in the prosecution case is that the father and the brother of the prosecutrix, who were professor and student, have not been examined as prosecution witnesses. The High Court has taken a reasonable and plausible view of the evidence of PWs 1, 3 and 8 and silence on the part of the material witnesses and failure to explain as to why they did not report the matter to the police of all these events creates a doubt on the prosecution story. (Para 14)

The State was not in a position to justify the evidence of PW 3, particularly, that he did not see happiness on the face of the bride when he performed the nikaah. The High Court has rightly concluded that from the solitary statement of PW 3 that he did not see happiness on the face of the bride, no inference can be drawn that it was a forced nikaah. It is also stated that the father and the brother of the prosecutrix acted as vakils of the prosecutrix and also gave consent for the marriage and in consideration, mehar of Rs 25,0000 was given. There is also a valid nikaahnama on record. (Paras 15 and 16)

Once the appeal fails against the main accused, there remains nothing against the other accused. The counsel for the State did not seriously challenge their acquittal. The evidence also does not suggest any criminal activity on their part. The appeal against their acquittal has to necessarily fail. (Para 18)

The well-considered judgment of the High Court needs no interference. The impugned judgment of the High Court, acquitting the accused persons, is confirmed. (Para 19). State of Maharashtra v. Ravikant Shankarappa Patil, (2011) 6 SCC 416.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : V.S. Sirpurkar and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2011]

[9200] — Ss. 376/149, 375, 148, 452, 342, 323, 366 and 506 — Rape after forcible marriage — Acquittal of main accused — There being nothing against other accused and State not seriously challenging their acquittal, their acquittal also confirmed

Once the appeal fails against the main accused, there remains nothing against the other accused. The counsel for the State did not seriously challenge their acquittal. The evidence also does not suggest any criminal activity on their part. The appeal against their acquittal has to necessarily fail. (Para 18)

The well-considered judgment of the High Court needs no interference. The impugned judgment of the High Court, acquitting the accused persons, is confirmed. (Para 19). State of Maharashtra v. Ravikant Shankarappa Patil, (2011) 6 SCC 416.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : V.S. Sirpurkar and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2011]

3. Appeal

[9201] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Appeal against acquittal — Appreciation of evidence — Powers of court — Compared with appeal against conviction — Held, though High Court would be slow in interfering with the order of acquittal but it has got same powers to review and reappreciate the entire evidence as in an appeal against conviction and if reasons recorded by the trial court for acquittal are unjustified and untenable, High Court can certainly interfere — On facts held, High Court rightly reversed the order of acquittal — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 378 and 386. Ayub Hussain Mandal v. State of Assam, (2007) 15 SCC 549.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Shivaraj V. Patil and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2002]

[9202] — Ss. 375, 376 and 511 — Appeal against acquittal — Power of High Court to review evidence — Scope — Held, High Court can review the evidence and come to its own conclusion — However, it should also examine the reasons for acquittal and should interfere only if the view of the trial court, which recorded the order of acquittal, was unreasonable — No interference if two views possible — Reasons should be given for reversing the order of acquittal — In the instant case, in view of the reasons given by the High Court, held, the High Court did not exceed its powers in interfering with the order of acquittal passed under Ss. 376 and 511, IPC, by the trial court — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 378 and 386

There is no limitation on the part of the appellate court to review the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is founded. The different expressions used in different judgments of the Supreme Court to the effect that there must be "sufficient and compelling reasons" or "good and sufficiently cogent reasons" for the appellate court to alter an order of acquittal to one of conviction, by no manner curtail the power of an appellate court in an appeal against acquittal to review the entire evidence and come to its conclusion. But in doing so the appellate court should consider every matter on record and the reasons given by the trial court in support of the order of acquittal; and should interfere on being satisfied that the view taken by the acquitting Judge is unreasonable. If two views are possible on a set of evidence then the appellate court need not substitute its own view in preference to the view of the trial court which has recorded an order of acquittal. If the Sessions Judge acquits an accused by giving undue importance to minor discrepancies and taking a suspicious view of the evidence based on conjectures then the High Court will be fully justified in interfering with the order of acquittal. But all the same while reversing an order of acquittal the High Court must give sufficient grounds for holding that the appreciation of evidence by the trial court is unsupportable.

In the instant case, the High Court on reading the evidence of the prosecutrix has come to the finding that the prosecutrix's evidence was cogent and clear to the effect that there was no penetration of the organ of the accused into the vagina of the prosecutrix and on the other hand the accused merely rubbed his genital organ as a result of which there was discharge of hot white liquid substance which fell on the thighs of the prosecutrix. On going through the reasoning advanced by the High Court for interfering with an order of acquittal passed by the trial court, it has to be held that the High Court has not exceeded the parameters indicated in the judgments of the Supreme Court for interference with an order of acquittal.

In assessing the testimonial potency of the victim's version, human psychology and behavioural probability must be looked into. The inherent bashfulness and the feminine tendency to conceal the outrage of masculine sexual aggression are factors which are relevant to improbabilise the hypothesis of false implication. The High Court review of the evidence on record and on examining the reasons given by the learned Sessions Judge for according an order of acquittal was fully justified in interfering with the said order of acquittal. Madan Lal v. State of J&K, (1997) 7 SCC 677: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1151: AIR 1998 SC 386.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-1997]

[9203] — S. 376 — Rape — Delay in filing appeal against acquittal before High Court — Dismissal of appeal by High Court — Impropriety — Respondent acquitted by trial court from charge under S. 376 for rape of a girl aged 11 years — Delay of 31 days in filing appeal before High Court by the State — Having regard to medical evidence and testimony of the prosecutrix, held, High Court should have gone into merits of the case in view of rise in crime against women, particularly minor children — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 378 & 386(Para 4). State of Rajasthan v. Madan, (2003) 11 SCC 730.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2000]

[9204] — S. 376 — Rape — Reversal of acquittal confirmed — Reiterated, appellate court has full power to review, reappreciate and reconsider evidence upon which order of acquittal is founded — Herein, High Court after evaluating manner in which evidence and other materials on record were appreciated as well as conclusions arrived at by trial court, concluded that findings of trial court were perverse and resulted in miscarriage of justice — Moreover, testimony of victim inspires confidence — Her testimony not only corroborated by other witnesses but also by medical evidence — Also, other corroborative evidence sufficient to connect appellant with crime — Hence, held, appellant committed rape — Therefore, his conviction by High Court justified — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 378 and 386(a) (Paras 10 to 13, 18 and 21 to 23). Ram Singh v. State of H.P., (2010) 2 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2010]

Chandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 4 SCC 415: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 325, relied on

Perla Somasekhara Reddy v. State of A.P., (2009) 16 SCC 98, distinguished [9205] — S. 376 — Reversal of conviction without appraisal of evidence — Impropriety of — Sessions Court imposing sentence of seven years' RI — High Court, without any discussion of evidence whatsoever modifying conviction to one under S. 354 and reducing sentence to period already undergone and fine of Rs 5000 — Held, for the serious and heinous crime of rape, judgment of Sessions Court could not have been reversed without adverting to the evidence at all, by general observations made in one paragraph of the impugned judgment — Matter remanded to High Court for decision afresh — Directed that matter be placed before a Judge other than the Judge who delivered the impugned judgment — CrPC, 1973, S. 374. State of U.P. v. Munni Lal, (2005) 11 SCC 574.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2005]

[9206] — Ss. 376 and 342 — Whether the conviction can be challenged on questions of fact — Findings of facts cannot be disturbed in special leave criminal appeal. Chhaterpati v. State of J&K, (1970) 3 SCC 201: 1971 SCC (Cri) 19.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.M. Sikri and K.S. Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-1970]

[9207] — Ss. 376, 506 and 511 — Offences under, held are not trivial — Application for leave to file appeal against acquittal — Manner of disposal of for serious offences — Objective and independent reappreciation of entire evidence, stressed — Non-application of mind by High Court in a case for offences under Ss. 376, 506 and 511 IPC — Unsustainability — High Court dismissing S. 378(3) CrPC application by summarily stating "Dismissed" — The dismissal of S. 378(3) application without giving reasons, held, is not sustainable — Matter therefore, remanded to High Court — CrPC, 1973, S. 378

The trial court, giving benefit of doubt, acquitted the respondent-accused for alleged commission of offences under Sections 376/511 IPC r/w Section 506 IPC. By the impugned order, the High Court dismissed an application for grant of leave under Section 378(3) CrPC by summarily stating "Dismissed".

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the absence of reason, the impugned judgment of the High Court is unsustainable. Reasons introduce clarity in an order. The High Court ought to have set forth its reasons, howsoever brief, in its order indicative of an application of its mind, all the more when its order is amenable to further avenue of challenge. The High Court has not given any reasons for refusing to grant leave to file appeal against acquittal and seems to have been completely oblivious to the fact that by such refusal a close scrutiny of the order of acquittal, by the appellate forum, has been lost once and for all. (Paras 9, 7 and 6)

The questions of giving benefit of doubt for alleged offences under Sections 376/511 IPC r/w Section 506 IPC are not trivial. The High Court ought to have in such circumstances granted leave and thereafter as a first court of appeal, reappreciated the entire evidence on the record independently and returned its findings objectively as regards guilt or otherwise of the accused. It has failed to do so. The impugned judgment of the High Court is unsustainable. The State was granted leave to file the appeal. The High Court is, therefore, directed to entertain the appeal and after formal notice to the respondent hear the appeal and dispose of it in accordance with law. (Paras 6 and 9)

The trial court on the facts of the case did not perform its duties, as was enjoined on it by law. The trial court is required to carefully appraise the entire evidence and then come to a conclusion. If the trial court was at a lapse in this regard, the High Court was obliged to undertake such an exercise by entertaining an appeal thereagainst. (Para 6). State of H.P. v. Manoj Kumar, (2008) 13 SCC 654.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2008]

State of U.P. v. Battan, (2001) 10 SCC 607: 2003 SCC (Cri) 639; State of Punjab v. Bhag Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 547, relied on [9208] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 506 and 34 — Appeal against conviction — Proper mode of disposal — Reasons for decision — Clarity of decision, necessity of, restated — Dismissal of the criminal appeal by a non-reasoned order — Order of High Court set aside, case remanded back — Casual manner in which appeal dismissed, deprecated — CPC, 1908, Or. 20 Rr. 4(2) and 5 — CrPC, 1973, S. 374

The appellants stood convicted for offence punishable under Sections 447, 376(2)(g) and 506 read with Section 34 of the Penal Code, 1860. Contention of the appellants was that the High Court's judgment was practically non-reasoned.

Remanding the case to the High Court,

Held :

A bare perusal of the High Court's impugned judgment shows that the same is non-reasoned and no basis or reasons have been indicated by the High Court and there is not even analysis of the evidence. Various infirmities pointed out by the accused to throw doubt on the authenticity of the prosecution evidence are not even referred to. (Paras 8 and 10). Prasad v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 3 SCC 174: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 70: AIR 2009 SC 1911: (2009) 76 AIC 213 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 1761.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-2-2009]

Breen v. Amalgamated Engg. Union, (1971) 2 QB 175: (1971) 2 WLR 742: (1971) 1 All ER 1148 (CA); Alexander Machinery (Dudley) Ltd. v. Crabtree, 1974 ICR 120 (NIRC); State of Punjab v. Bhag Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 547, relied on

4. Appreciation of Evidence

Synopsis

(a) Generally 578
(b) Appellate court's approach 579
(c) Contradictions, inconsistencies, exaggerations or embellishments 580
(d) Credibility of prosecutrix/ witness 584
(e) Medical evidence vis-à-vis evidence of prosecutrix 585
(f) Reappreciation/Reappraisal of evidence 586

(a) Generally

[9209] — S. 376 — Offence of rape being a serious one court should pay careful attention and show greater sensitivity — Evidence should be appreciated on broader probabilities

In view of the evidence of the prosecutrix, which is corroborated by medical evidence and other items of evidence and in the absence of any consent on the part of the prosecutrix, it is clearly established that the accused had committed rape on the prosecutrix and is liable for the offence punishable under Section 376 IPC. The offence of rape being a serious one, the case should have received careful attention and the Sessions Judge and the High Court should have shown greater sensitivity to these type of cases. The evidence should have been appreciated on broader probabilities and they should not have been carried away by insignificant contradictions. (Para 16). State of H.P. v. Mango Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331: AIR 2000 SC 2798.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2000]

[9210] — S. 376 — Rape trial — Duty of court, while evaluating evidence of victim, outlined — Keeping of Indian society's belief and value systems in mind, while examining evidence of prosecutrix — Need by courts for, emphasised

The important thing that the court has to bear in mind is that what is lost by a rape victim is face. The victim loses value as a person. Indian society is a conservative society and, therefore, a woman and more so a young unmarried woman will not put her reputation in peril by alleging falsely about forcible sexual assault. In examining the evidence of the prosecutrix, the courts must be alive to the conditions prevalent in the Indian society and must not be swayed by beliefs in other countries. The courts must be sensitive and responsive to the plight of the female victim of sexual assault. Society's belief and value systems need to be kept uppermost in mind, as rape is the worst form of women's oppression. A forcible sexual assault brings in humiliation, feeling of disgust, tremendous embarrassment, sense of shame, trauma and lifelong emotional scar to a victim and it is, therefore, most unlikely of a woman, and more so by a young woman, roping in somebody falsely in the crime of rape. The stigma that attaches to the victim of rape in Indian society ordinarily rules out the levelling of false accusations. An Indian woman traditionally will not concoct an untruthful story and bring charges of rape for the purpose of blackmail, hatred, spite or revenge. (Paras 26 to 28). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728, relied on

[9211] — Ss. 376, 346 and 366 — Rape — Appreciation of evidence — Approach and duty of courts while appreciating evidence in such cases, restated — Deficiencies and discrepancies in prosecution case — When not fatal — Victim (PW 1), her husband (PW 2) and their other relatives pursuing the profession of lead coating of utensils sleeping in a bus-stand when PWs 1 and 2 picked up by a Constable ostensibly for interrogation on suspicion allegedly on a complaint — Commission of rape on PW 1 by the Constable in a hotel, established — But dispute raised about the identity of the accused Constable (appellant) — Test identification parade not held — PWs 1, 2 and 4 could not identify the appellant in court — PWs 5 and 6 declared hostile — Name of appellant stated by PW 7 before the Judicial Magistrate at the instance of police — Despite the above deficiencies and discrepancies, bearing in mind the stratum of society to which the victim belonged and the nature of her profession, and considering that (i) accused had beard and moustaches at the time of identification by PWs 1 and 2 in court, but not at the time of occurrence, (ii) booking of a room in hotel by him was established, (iii) he failed to explain his whereabouts during the time the offence was committed, (iv) he declined to give sample of his semen, and (v) witnesses immediately after the commission of offence named him, held on facts, it was proved that the offence was committed by a Constable who was none other than the appellant — Conviction upheld

The approach required to be adopted by courts in rape cases has to be different. The cases are required to be dealt with utmost sensitivity. Courts have to show greater responsibility when trying an accused on charge of rape. In such cases, the broader probabilities are required to be examined and the courts are not to get swayed by minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies which are not of substantial character. The evidence is required to be appreciated having regard to the background of the entire case and not in isolation. The ground realities are to be kept in view. (Para 12)

Further, it is also required to be kept in view that every defective investigation need not necessarily result in the acquittal. In a case of defective investigation, the only requirement is of extra caution by courts while evaluating evidence. It would not be just to acquit the accused solely as a result of defective investigation. Any deficiency or irregularity in investigation need not necessarily lead to the rejection of the case of prosecution when it is otherwise proved. (Para 12)

It is a common practice with those carrying on the profession which PW 1 and PW 2 were carrying on, to sleep during the night on the roadside or such similar place, while going from place to place. It stands established from the evidence and could not be questioned that PW 1 was picked up and raped by a police Constable substantially in the manner deposed by her. The only dispute that has been raised is about the identity of the accused. (Paras 8 and 7)

An important aspect of the case is that the appellant had a beard and moustaches when PWs 1 and 2 were examined as witnesses for the prosecution. It was not so at the time of the occurrence. PWs 1 and 2, therefore, it is evident, could not identify the appellant in Court and stated in their deposition that the said person was not in Court. It does not mean that the acquittal is to follow as a natural corollary from the statements of PWs 1 and 2. The identification of the accused either in test identification parade or in Court is not a sine qua non in every case if from the circumstances the guilt is otherwise established. Many a time, crimes are committed under the cover of darkness when no one is able to identify the accused. The commission of a crime can also be proved by circumstantial evidence. In the present case, there are clinching circumstances unerringly pointing the accusing finger towards the appellant beyond any reasonable doubt. The non-holding of the test identification parade, having regard to the facts of the case, is not fatal and does not create any reasonable doubt in the case of the prosecution. (Paras 11 and 13)

Circumstances which have been taken into consideration against the appellant by the Courts below are that the appellant, a police official, was caught from a room in a hotel. The hotel record showed booking of the room in that hotel by the appellant and also payment of advance of Rs 100. The appellant could not explain his whereabouts during the time the offence was committed. He was not cooperative during investigation. He declined to give sample of his semen. He had a different appearance at the time of examination of PWs 1 and 2 in Court. The testimony of PWs 1 and 2 was straightforward. The witnesses, immediately after the commission of offence, had named the appellant. (Para 13)

From the proved circumstances, it has been fully established that PW 1 was picked up and raped in a hotel room by a police Constable who was none other than the appellant. (Para 13). Visveswaran v. State, (2003) 6 SCC 73: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1270: AIR 2003 SC 2471: 2003 Cri LJ 2548.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2003]

[9212] — Ss. 376, 375, 148, 452, 149, 342, 323 and 506 — Rape after forcible marriage — Allegations of — Appreciation of evidence — Solitary statement of PW 3 that he did not see happiness on face of bride — Held, inference of forced marriage cannot be drawn therefrom

The State was not in a position to justify the evidence of PW 3, particularly, that he did not see happiness on the face of the bride when he performed the nikaah. The High Court has rightly concluded that from the solitary statement of PW 3 that he did not see happiness on the face of the bride, no inference can be drawn that it was a forced nikaah. It is also stated that the father and the brother of the prosecutrix acted as vakils of the prosecutrix and also gave consent for the marriage and in consideration, mehar of Rs 25,0000 was given. There is also a valid nikaahnama on record. (Paras 15 and 16). State of Maharashtra v. Ravikant Shankarappa Patil, (2011) 6 SCC 416.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : V.S. Sirpurkar and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2011]

(b) Appellate court's approach

[9213] — S. 376 — Rape — Conviction — Reappreciation of evidence — Unmerited acquittal by High Court — Held, not justified — Courts have to display a greater sense of responsibility and to be more sensitive while dealing with charges of sexual assault on women, particularly of tender age and children — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 386 and 374(2)

The High Court was not justified in reversing the conviction of the respondent and recording the order of acquittal. An unmerited acquittal does no good to the society. If the prosecution has succeeded in making out a convincing case for recording a finding as to the accused being guilty, the court should not lean in favour of acquittal by giving weight to irrelevant or insignificant circumstances or by resorting to technicalities or by assuming doubts and giving benefit thereof where none reasonably exists. A doubt, as understood in criminal jurisprudence, has to be a reasonable doubt and not an excuse for a finding in favour of acquittal. An unmerited acquittal encourages wolves in the society being on the prowl for easy prey, more so when the victims of crime are helpless females or minor children. The courts have to display a greater sense of responsibility and to be more sensitive while dealing with charges of sexual assault on women, particularly of tender age and children. (Para 16). State of Punjab v. Ramdev Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 421: 2004 SCC (Cri) 307: AIR 2004 SC 1290.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2003]

(c) Contradictions, inconsistencies, exaggerations or embellishments

[9214] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape trial — Minor inconsistencies in prosecution case — Trial court finding prosecutrix's account of rape very natural and confidence inspiring — Her mother, whose testimony too was found natural and trustworthy, however creating some inconsistency about the place of occurrence — In FIR it was mentioned as room on first floor while in the statement before trial court it was mentioned as open lintel — Place of incident inspected by trial court — Lintel and room were near to each other and the place was secluded — Mother was not in the house at the time of incident — On reaching home, she found prosecutrix lying on lintel below a cot — Held, inconsistency in mother's version was too insignificant to be given much weightage — High Court wrongly treated it as a major lacuna in prosecution case (Para 13). State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980: AIR 2001 SC 2075.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

Gian Chand v. State of H.P., (1996) 2 Crimes 213 (HP), reversed

[9215] — S. 376 — Cases involving sexual molestation — Duty of court to deal with such cases with utmost sensitivity — Minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix should not be a ground for throwing out an otherwise reliable prosecution case

Of late, crime against women in general and rape in particular is on the increase. It is an irony that while we are celebrating woman's rights in all spheres, we show little or no concern for her honour. It is a sad reflection on the attitude of indifference of the society towards the violation of human dignity of the victims of sex crimes. A rapist not only violates the victim's privacy and personal integrity, but inevitably causes serious psychological as well as physical harm in the process. Rape is not merely a physical assault — it is often destructive of the whole personality of the victim. A murderer destroys the physical body of his victim, a rapist degrades the very soul of the helpless female. The courts, therefore, shoulder a great responsibility while trying an accused on charges of rape. They must deal with such cases with utmost sensitivity. The courts should examine the broader probabilities of a case and not get swayed by minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix, which are not of a fatal nature, to throw out an otherwise reliable prosecution case. If evidence of the prosecutrix inspires confidence, it must be relied upon without seeking corroboration of her statement in material particulars. If for some reason the court finds it difficult to place implicit reliance on her testimony, it may look for evidence which may lend assurance to her testimony, short of corroboration required in the case of an accomplice. The testimony of the prosecutrix must be appreciated in the background of the entire case and the trial court must be alive to its responsibility and be sensitive while dealing with cases involving sexual molestations. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210, followed

[9216] — S. 376 — Effect of minor discrepancy or variance in evidence — Discrepancy and contradiction — Distinguished — Whether a particular discrepancy is a minor one or one amounting to contradiction — Test to determine, stated — Minor discrepancy or variance in evidence, held, does not make the prosecution's case doubtful — It may rather lend credential to the deposition — Where the prosecutrix, subjected to rape, stated the place of occurrence to be 20 feet away from the road but the FIR lodged by an advocate, after hearing the narration of the prosecutrix (whom he had found then to be scared, nervous and hesitant) mentioned the road as the place of occurrence, held, there was no major discrepancy amounting to contradiction under the circumstances of the case — More so when in her statement under S. 161 CrPC the prosecutrix had stated that the accused persons had taken her to a place 20 feet away from the road — CrPC, 1973, S. 161

The prosecutrix, a 55-year-old widow who was the mother of two grown-up children, was while coming back to her house after attending the marriage of a relation, criminally assaulted and subjected to forcible intercourse by the respondents. The first information report was submitted by her on the next day against the respondents. She was medically examined and her torn salwar was sent for chemical analysis. On medical examination various injuries were found on her person. The doctor was of the opinion that they reflected the signs of a struggle. The trial court convicted the accused persons under Sections 376(2)(g) and 323 IPC and sentenced them to undergo rigorous imprisonment for five years and to pay a fine of Rs 5000 each under Section 376 IPC and six months' rigorous imprisonment under Section 323 with a fine of Rs 500 each. The High Court reversed that decision. It acquitted Respondent 2 on the ground that his identity could not be established by the prosecution at the trial. It further held that the case against Respondent 1 was not proved beyond doubt as the medical evidence and the finding showed that no dead or alive spermatozoa was seen. Another circumstance which weighed with the High Court was that the sealing of the salwar was not properly established. Moreover, before the Supreme Court the respondent attempted to point out some discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix and other witnesses for discrediting the prosecution version. One of such discrepancies was that the prosecutrix had stated the place of occurrence to be 20 feet away from the road while in the FIR the place of occurrence was mentioned as the road. Upholding the acquittal of Respondent 2 but setting aside the acquittal of Respondent 1 and restoring his conviction by the trial court,

Held :

Discrepancy has to be distinguished from contradiction. Whereas contradiction in the statement of the witness is fatal for the case, minor discrepancy or variance in evidence will not make the prosecution's case doubtful. The normal course of the human conduct would be that while narrating a particular incident there may occur minor discrepancies, such discrepancies in law may render credential to the depositions. Parrot-like statements are disfavoured by the courts. In order to ascertain as to whether the discrepancy pointed out was minor or not or the same amounted to contradiction, regard is required to be had to the circumstances of the case by keeping in view the social status of the witnesses and environment in which such witness was making the statement. (Para 7)

The prosecutrix has categorically stated that she was dragged from the road down the path which was about 20 feet away from the road and raped there. The discrepancy or contradiction pointed out is that in the FIR which was submitted in writing and was in the English language, the place of occurrence was mentioned as road. Such mention was based upon recording of the complaint by an advocate after hearing the narration of the prosecutrix whom he found at that time to be scared, nervous and hesitant. Such a discrepancy cannot be held to be a major discrepancy amounting to contradiction under the circumstances of this case. It is not disputed that the statement of the prosecutrix under Section 161 CrPC was recorded immediately and in that statement she had not alleged to have stated that the occurrence had taken place on the road and not away from the road. (Para 9). State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147: AIR 1999 SC 3916: 2000 Cri LJ 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-1999]

Ousu Varghese v. State of Kerala, (1974) 3 SCC 767: 1974 SCC (Cri) 243; Jagdish v. State of M.P., 1981 Supp SCC 40: 1981 SCC (Cri) 676; State of Rajasthan v. Kalki, (1981) 2 SCC 752: 1981 SCC (Cri) 593; Leela Ram v. State of Haryana, (1999) 9 SCC 525, relied on [9217] — S. 376 — Minor discrepancies on trivial matters not affecting core of prosecution case — Held, should not result in rejection of evidence in its entirety — Evidence of witnesses must be read as a whole and case to be considered in totality of circumstances — After exercising care and caution and sifting evidence to separate truth from untruth, exaggerations and improvements, court can convict accused on basis of residuary evidence — Discrepancies in instant case pertained to circumstances in which alleged occurrence had taken place, and dress prosecutrix was wearing then — Such contradictions having no material bearing on prosecution case, inconsequential, since admittedly prosecutrix was at place of alleged occurrence and appellant and other accused had intercourse with her (Paras 19 to 24 and 40 to 42). Vijay v. State of M.P., (2010) 8 SCC 191: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2010]

State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2007) 12 SCC 381: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 411; State of U.P. v. M.K. Anthony, (1985) 1 SCC 505: 1985 SCC (Cri) 105; State v. Saravanan, (2008) 17 SCC 587; Sohrab v. State of M.P., (1972) 3 SCC 751: 1972 SCC (Cri) 819; Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728; Prithu v. State of H.P., (2009) 11 SCC 588: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1502; State of U.P. v. Santosh Kumar, (2009) 9 SCC 626: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 88, relied on

4.(c) Contradictions, inconsistencies, exaggerations or embellishments (contd.)

[9218] — S. 376 — Rape — Reversal of acquittal confirmed — Reiterated, appellate court has full power to review, reappreciate and reconsider evidence upon which order of acquittal is founded — Herein, High Court after evaluating manner in which evidence and other materials on record were appreciated as well as conclusions arrived at by trial court, concluded that findings of trial court were perverse and resulted in miscarriage of justice — Moreover, testimony of victim inspires confidence — Her testimony not only corroborated by other witnesses but also by medical evidence — Also, other corroborative evidence sufficient to connect appellant with crime — Hence, held, appellant committed rape — Therefore, his conviction by High Court justified — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 378 and 386(a) (Paras 10 to 13, 18 and 21 to 23). Ram Singh v. State of H.P., (2010) 2 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2010]

Chandrappa v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 4 SCC 415: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 325, relied on

Perla Somasekhara Reddy v. State of A.P., (2009) 16 SCC 98, distinguished

[9219] — S. 376 — Rape — Unsatisfactory investigation — Effect — Held, defence cannot take advantage of a bad investigation where prosecution holds clinching evidence in support of itself (Para 25). Zindar Ali Sheikh v. State of W.B., (2009) 3 SCC 761: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 737: AIR 2009 SC 1467: 2009 Cri LJ 1324: (2009) 2 CHN 19 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 941 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2009]

[9220] — S. 376 — Rape cases — Proof in — Duty of court to deal with such cases with utmost sensitivity — Minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the witnesses should not be a ground for throwing out allegations of rape

The courts are expected to show great responsibility while trying an accused on charges of rape. They must deal with such cases with utmost sensitivity. The courts should examine the broader probabilities of a case and not get swayed by minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the witnesses, which are not of a fatal nature to throw out allegations of rape. This is all the more important because of late crime against women in general and rape in particular is on the increase. It is an irony that while we are celebrating woman's rights in all spheres, we show little or no concern for her honour. It is a sad reflection and it must be emphasised that the courts must deal with rape cases in particular with utmost sensitivity and appreciate the evidence in the totality of the background of the entire case and not in isolation. State of A.P. v. Gangula Satya Murthy, (1997) 1 SCC 272: 1997 SCC (Cri) 325: AIR 1997 SC 1588: 1997 Cri LJ 774.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1996]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on

[9221] — Ss. 376, 363 and 302 — Rape and murder of minor — Minor incongruity — Though there is an incongruity in prosecution evidence regarding recovery of body and inquest thereof, held, there is strong evidence to show guilt of appellant — Clothes of deceased recovered with blood-stains and lacerated wound found on private parts with hymen completely ruptured — Doctor opining cause of death as asphyxiation — Clothes worn by appellant at time of incident recovered with bloodstains thereon, underwear recovered also having semen stains — No rational explanation could be given by appellant as to presence of said stains on his clothes — Appellant seen near time of alleged abduction of deceased with a girl child on his shoulder, mistaken to be a niece of the appellant by a witness (PW 7) — Held, even though PW 7 had not identified that the girl was the deceased, it is a serious incriminating circumstance, and appellant being an unmarried man, could not have been found at night with a girl — Circumstance clearly shows that he had kidnapped the child during the night — Moreover, previous conduct of appellant (having been rejected sexual favours by mother of deceased and admonished and scolded therefor by mother, uncle and brother of deceased, earlier in the night) though not strictly admissible in evidence, would prove that appellant was prone to do the crimes alleged — Hence, Sessions Judge and High Court appreciated evidence in correct perspective and found appellant guilty and there were no reasons to disbelieve this finding — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 8

The appellant was staying in one of the rooms of a building owned by the complainant K, a widow having three children. On 11-9-2002 at about 10 p.m., the appellant came to PW 2 K and offered Rs 150 and sought sexual favours. PW 2 got angry and she asked him to go away, but the appellant declined to leave the place. PW 2 told her brother and her son that the appellant had been harassing her. They came and scolded the appellant and he left the place. During the night, PW 2 along with her two minor daughters was sleeping on a cot lying outside the room. At about midnight she felt cold and went inside and at 1.00 o'clock she came back and then she saw that one of her daughters, namely, S was missing. She immediately called her brother and her son who were sleeping in another portion of the same house. They searched for S at nearby places, and as they had suspicion on the appellant, they went in search of him to his house but he was not found there. They made enquiry with PW 7. He stated that he had seen appellant going away with a girl on his shoulder but he thought that the girl must be the daughter of a relative of the appellant. The people in the locality collected and at about 4 o'clock in the morning they saw the appellant coming from a nearby road. PW 2 and others took him to the police station. It seems that he made certain revelations and PW 2 gave the FI statement and on the basis of the FI statement a case was registered and investigation was started.

The dead body of S was recovered from a pond. The body was found floating on the water and it was identified by relatives. An inquest was held on the dead body and on post-mortem examination it was found that there were a series of injuries on the body of deceased S. The clothes were stained with blood and some mud particles. There was lacerated wound on the private parts of the deceased, and the hymen was completely ruptured. The doctor opined that the victim must have died due to asphyxia.

Commuting the sentence of death to life imprisonment,

Held :

There is incongruity in the prosecution evidence regarding recovery of the body and the inquest of the dead body. PW 19, the investigating officer could not throw much light on this infirmity in the investigation. Therefore no importance is being given to the alleged recovery of dead body at the instance of the appellant. (Para 6)

However, there is strong evidence to show that the appellant committed the offence. According to the prosecution, the appellant was immediately arrested and brought to the police station. His clothes were recovered and sent for chemical examination. Items F, G, H and I are the shirt, banyan, pants and underwear respectively worn by the appellant at the time of incident. The chemical analyst's report shows that on Items F, G and H there were presence of bloodstains and Item I was also having bloodstains mixed with semen. The appellant could not give any rational explanation for the presence of bloodstains on his clothes. (Para 7)

Another circumstance is the evidence of PW 7. He went to bed and at about 1 a.m. he got up to answer the call of nature and came to the bathroom situated outside his house, then he found the appellant moving around and he was having a child on his shoulder. In the FI statement also reference has been made to the statement made by Rambaran. Of course PW 7 had not identified that the girl was deceased S. Nevertheless, it is a serious incriminating circumstance and the appellant being an unmarried man, he could not have been found at night with a girl and this circumstance clearly shows that the appellant had kidnapped the child during night for the purpose of commission of this crime. The dead body of deceased S was found in the early morning of 12-9-2002 and the appellant was arrested immediately and previous conduct also though not strictly admissible in evidence would prove that the appellant was prone to do such crime. The Sessions Judge as well as the High Court appreciated the evidence in the correct perspective had found the appellant guilty and there are no reasons to disbelieve this finding. (Paras 8 and 9). Surendra Pal Shivbalakpal v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 127: 2005 SCC (Cri) 653: AIR 2004 SC 4862: 2004 Cri LJ 4642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2004]

[9222] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — Case of kidnapping and rape — Minor contradictions and omissions in testimony of prosecutrix — Prosecutrix being illiterate and rustic young woman — Evidence consistent in material aspects — Held, prosecutrix being illiterate and rustic young woman, some contradictions and omissions were natural, as her recollection, observance, memory and narration of chain of events may not be precise — Conviction restored (Para 29). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

Prakash Singh v. Union of India, (2006) 8 SCC 1: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 417, relied on [9223] — S. 376 r/w S. 34 — Minor discrepancies in evidence of PWs (including victim of rape) — Effect — Considering that evidence was recorded in court after about seven years of the occurrence, held, said discrepancies were of no consequence (Para 10). Sri Narayan Saha v. State of Tripura, (2004) 7 SCC 775.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2004]

(d) Credibility of prosecutrix/witness

See also 'C.8. Conduct of accused, prosecutrix, witnesses, etc.',

'C.11. Conviction on sole testimony of prosecutrix', and

'C.22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act', below

[9224] — S. 376 — Alleged rape of a married woman — Prosecution case primarily based on evidence of prosecutrix — Omissions and contradictions found in her cross-examination creating doubt about the truthfulness of her version and rendering her testimony unsafe to rely upon to convict the accused-appellant — Even otherwise, prosecution case found to be not credible and it appeared that father of the prosecutrix on discovering that prosecutrix was involved with appellant, after due deliberations, lodged a report implicating the appellant — Defence case that prosecutrix was a consenting party probable — On facts held, prosecution failed to prove its case beyond reasonable doubt — Appellant entitled to acquittal. Mohan Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 10 SCC 14: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1383: AIR 2003 SC 698: 2003 Cri LJ 862.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2002]

[9225] — S. 376 — Credibility of witness — Negligence of investigating agency — Whether a ground to discredit testimony of victim — Blood-stained clothes allegedly handed over to officer-in-charge at police station by husband of rape victim not sent for chemical examination — Effect — Held, victim had no control over investigating agency and negligence, if any, of investigating officer could not affect credibility of statement of victim — On basis of evidence on record, conviction of appellant, held, sustainable (Para 16). Ram Singh v. State of H.P., (2010) 2 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2010]

[9226] — S. 376 — Prosecutrix 8 years old, held, competent to give evidence — Rule of corroboration explained — Statement made to mother admissible for corroboration

The tender years of the child, coupled with other circumstances appearing in the case, such for example, as its demeanour, unlikelihood of tutoring and so forth, may render corroboration unnecessary but that is a question of fact in every case. The only rule of law is that this rule of prudence must be present to the mind of the Judge or the jury as the case may be and be understood and appreciated by him or them. There is no rule of practice that there must, in every case, be corroboration before a conviction can be allowed to stand. Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 SCR 377: 1952 Cri LJ 547, 549, 55.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Fazl Ali and Vivian Bose, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1951]

[9227] — S. 376 — Rape — Prosecution case mainly resting on evidence of prosecutrix — Absence of spermatozoa — No injuries found on prosecutrix or on accused suggesting forcible intercourse — Prosecutrix being a grown-up married woman doctor unable to give any opinion whether rape had been committed or not — Evidence of prosecutrix found to be highly untrustworthy — In circumstances held, accused entitled to benefit of doubt. Ram Nivas v. State of Karnataka, 1994 SCC (Cri) 503.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1993]

[9228] — S. 376 — Village girl below 16 years as prosecutrix — Due allowance should be made for exaggeration of threats. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793: AIR 1972 SC 2661: (1973) 2 SCR 197: 1973 Cri LJ 179.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1972]

[9229] — Ss. 376 and 506 — Discrepancies in evidence — Victim of offence not an intelligent girl as she passed Class 3 on third attempt — Her mother, a rustic woman, was practically illiterate — On facts, held, High Court erred in doubting the testimony of said witnesses by making hypothetical calculations regarding dates stated by them — Examining evidence of such witnesses with microscopic approach would be an insult to justice-oriented judicial system — Such approach totally detached from the realities of life (Para 6). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

[9230] — Ss. 376 and 506 Pt. II — Prosecutrices (PWs 1 and 2) being uneducated, poor labourers without any male members in their family to advise them and being threatened by accused — FIR being delayed by 42 days — Effect — High Court duly considering all material aspects — High Court considering corroboration by PW 14 (mother of prosecutrices) and PW 4 (owner of quarry where prosecutrices worked) regarding cause of delay — Conviction of accused under Ss. 376 and 506 Pt. II, therefore, held, justified

The evidence of prosecutrices cannot be rejected as unacceptable. Though there was a delay of 42 days in lodging the complaint to the police, PWs 1 and 2, in their evidence, explained that all their family members including themselves are uneducated, there are no male members in their family for their assistance and they settled in the present village to eke out their livelihood. They were working in quarry owned by PW 4 and while returning from their workplace by force A-1 and A-2 committed rape of PWs 1 and 2. PW 14 (mother of PWs 1 and 2) also corroborated them about their illiteracy and fear due to the threat call of A-1 and A-2. All these material aspects were duly considered by the trial court and accepted by the High Court. (Paras 15 and 19). Santhosh Moolya v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 5 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-2010]

(e) Medical evidence vis-à-vis evidence of prosecutrix

See also 'C.20. Medical Jurisprudence/Evidence', below

[9231] — S. 376 — Rape — Evidence — Medical evidence inconsistent with evidence of prosecutrix — Effect — Prosecutrix aged 8 years at the time of the alleged occurrence — According to evidence of the doctor who examined the prosecutrix immediately after the occurrence, there was no sign of rape — Thus evidence of prosecutrix belied by medical evidence — Held, accused-appellant entitled to acquittal. Yerumalla Latchaiah v. State of A.P., (2006) 9 SCC 713: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 373.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.N. Agrawal, A.K. Mathur and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2006]

[9232] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Medical evidence not corroborating the alleged forced sexual intercourse — Conviction based solely on oral evidence of prosecutrix and her subsequent conduct, upheld — Medical examination of prosecutrix not disclosing evidence of sexual intercourse — No injury marks on accused or prosecutrix — But oral testimony of prosecutrix found to be cogent, reliable, convincing and trustworthy as her evidence stood corroborated by other PWs and narration of events in the FIR — No interference with conviction called for — Appellant alleged to have raped prosecutrix in coffee estate — She unequivocally and clearly stating that while she was returning to worksite carrying meals for her mother the accused had suddenly come from behind, held her body with force and then dragged her to some distance in the coffee estate in spite of her resistance and request to the accused to release her — After committing rape accused fleeing away from place of occurrence — She narrating the incident to her mother and was so traumatised by the event and fear of being disgraced/humiliated, that she jumped into a water tank with intention to commit suicide — However, she was rescued by PWs 4 and 5 to whom she narrated the reason for taking the extreme step — She also narrated the incident to PW 6 who was the Manager of coffee estate, and on his advice lodged an FIR — Testimony of prosecutrix not shaken on material aspect — Suggestion by accused that a false case had been lodged against him because of enmity between his family members and the prosecutrix's family not found acceptable — Further, defence by accused that prosecutrix was a consenting party as she did not resist and no injuries were found on her body or on the accused, was unfounded and baseless and falsified by subsequent conduct of prosecutrix — Evidence of prosecutrix found trustworthy and fully corroborated by other PWs and narration of events in FIR — Though the report of the gynaecologist pertaining to medical examination of prosecutrix disclosed no evidence of sexual intercourse, yet even in the absence of any corroboration of medical evidence, the oral testimony of the prosecutrix, which is found to be cogent, reliable, convincing and trustworthy has to be accepted — Though undergarments of the accused and the victim did not contain any seminal stains, but the same cannot be given any importance because the underwear of the accused was taken into possession by the police on the next day of the incident when he was arrested and no evidence brought on record to show that the accused handed over the same underwear to the police, which he was wearing on the day of incident — Possibility of absence of seminal stains on petticoat of the prosecutrix which she was wearing at the time of the incident, could not be ruled out due to the fact that the petticoat got drenched in the water and the seminal stains might have been washed away — On such independent analysis of the oral and documentary evidence on record by Supreme Court, held, the conviction and sentence of 7 years' RI awarded by the trial court and confirmed by the High Court called for no interference (Paras 2, 11, 12, 13, 17, 18, 19 and 20). B.C. Deva v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 12 SCC 122: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 253.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-2007]

(f) Reappreciation/Reappraisal of evidence

[9233] — S. 376 — Appeal against conviction — Reappreciation of evidence — When warranted — Where appellant had already served his sentence, appeal not to be dismissed as infructuous since conviction for rape is most stigmatic — Hence reappreciation of evidence called for (Paras 13 and 14). Tameezuddin v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2009) 15 SCC 566.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2009]

5. Bail/Suspension of sentence

[9234] — S. 376 — Anticipatory bail — Grant and cancellation of — Considerations for dealing with application for grant of — While granting anticipatory bail, held, court must record reasons therefor — Whether accused tampered with evidence should be considered by appropriate authority at appropriate stage — Post-bail conduct of accused and other supervening circumstances should be taken into account while considering application for cancellation of the anticipatory bail — Cases involving serious offences such as one punishable under S. 376 IPC should be allowed to be fully investigated — Prosecutrix being a girl of easy virtue not a relevant consideration — Victims who are lured or coerced for immoral trafficking should be given protection — Accused absconding for a long time, not cooperating with IO, nor complying with the conditions imposed while granting the bail — Held on facts, grant of anticipatory bail by High Court was not justified — CrPC, 1973, S. 438 (as subs. in Maharashtra)

A girl was lured and while being taken for the purpose of immoral trafficking on 22-4-2007 by the respondent-accused persons comprising police officers, politicians and a businessman, the police arrived and the respondents were taken to police station. The girl was medically examined on the same day and her radiographical (bone) assessment suggested her age to be between 14-16 years. The Municipal Council issued a certificate on 29-5-2007 recording the date of birth of the girl as 28-6-1991 and mentioning name of her father. The date of registration of the said certificate was 4-7-1996 i.e. much before any controversy arose. Three school leaving certificates had also been placed before the court wherein her date of birth was shown as 28-6-1991. The respondents were not named in FIR. However, the girl made several statements thereafter implicating them. She also gave her statement under Section 164 CrPC.

The respondents, having come to know that they have been named by the said girl, absconded. They filed an application for anticipatory bail before the Sessions Judge. The same was dismissed. But the High Court allowed the application for anticipatory bail. The State filed the present appeal against the judgment of the High Court.

The Supreme Court called for a report from SP, CID who in his report pointed out, that the respondent-accused persons had been absconding for a long time and they during the course of interrogation have been giving evasive answers. It was furthermore stated that from the residence of Accused 3, thirteen CDs of blue films and books instigating sex have been seized. It was also submitted that recovery of vehicles used by the respondents from time to time for commission of the offence are yet to be seized and if they are released on bail, they would tamper with evidence.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Immoral trafficking is now widespread. Victims, who are lured, coerced or threatened for the purpose of bringing them to the trade should be given all protection. (Para 28)

In an application for cancellation of bail, conduct subsequent to release on bail and the supervening circumstances alone are relevant. But the court while considering an appeal against grant of anticipatory bail would keep in mind the parameters laid down therefor. The matter, however, may be different for deciding an appeal from an order granting bail, where the accused has been at large for a considerable time, in which event, the post-bail conduct and other supervening circumstances will also have to be taken note of. (Para 34)

While granting anticipatory bail, the court must record the reasons therefor. Parameters for grant of anticipatory bail in such a serious offence, being under Sections 376, 376(2)(g) IPC, are required to be satisfied. (Paras 28 and 31)

The four factors, which are relevant for considering the application for grant of anticipatory bail, have been set out in Section 438(1) CrPC. There cannot be any direct proof that the respondents have been tampering with evidence, but that question will have to be considered by the appropriate authority at the appropriate stage. Immoral conduct on the part of police officers should not be encouraged. After having come to know that names of the respondents had been taken by the prosecutrix in her supplementary statement, they had been absconding for a long time. Further, the respondents had not scrupulously complied with the conditions imposed upon them. Admittedly, at least on four occasions, some of them were not present. It is not understandable as to how the police officers could go underground. They had been changing their residence very frequently. Although most of them were police officers, their whereabouts were not known. During the aforementioned period attempts had been made even by the person who was taking care of the girl to obtain custody of the girl, but at whose instance, is not known. The mother of the girl, had also affirmed an affidavit in relation to her date of birth showing her to be not a minor on the date of the incident. These may not be acts of voluntariness on their part evidently the evidence is being collected by somebody who intends to save the accused. It, therefore, is a case where no anticipatory bail should have been granted. (Paras 20, 27, 25 and 33)

A mistake in regard to recording of age of the prosecutrix as recorded in the first information report or the first medical document or even in her supplementary affidavit should yield to the public documents which have been produced by the prosecution at this stage. Even before the learned Chief Judicial Magistrate, she disclosed her date of birth to be 28-6-1991. Therefore, even according to that she was below 16 years of age. (Para 32)

It may be true that the date of issuance of the certificates had not been stated, but evidently such certificates had been obtained by the prosecution. It may be true that in the first information report as also in her first supplementary examination, her age was recorded as 18 years, but she had been examined medically. The possibility of her trying to shield herself from prosecution at the time of her arrest and for that purpose disclosing her age to be 18 years cannot be ruled out. (Para 22)

A case of this nature should be allowed to be fully investigated. Once a criminal case is set in motion by lodging an information in regard to the commission of the offence in terms of Section 154 CrPC, it may not always be held to be imperative that all the accused persons must be named in the first information report. It has not been denied nor disputed that the prosecutrix does not bear any animosity against the respondents. There is no reason for her to falsely implicate them. It is also not a case that she did so at the behest of some other person, who may be inimically disposed towards the respondents. The prosecution has disclosed the manner in which she was being taken from place to place which finds some corroboration from the testimonies of the other witnesses and, thus, it can safely be concluded that at least at this stage her evidence should not be rejected outrightly. (Para 30)

So far as the fact that the respondents have not been named in the first information report is concerned, suffice it to say that the first information report may not be encyclop'dic, (Para 23)

The High Court has in regard to the first factor envisaged under the Maharashtra Amendment of Section 438 CrPC proceeded on the basis that the prosecutrix was a girl of easy virtue. This may be so but the same by itself may not be a relevant consideration. (Para 29)

The High Court itself has refused to grant regular bail to the accused against whom charge-sheet has been submitted. The Sessions Judge also did not grant bail to some of the accused persons. If on the same materials, prayer for regular bail has been rejected, there is no reason as to why and on what basis the respondents could be enlarged on anticipatory bail. (Para 36)

In the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, the High Court ought not to have granted anticipatory bail to the respondents. The impugned judgment, therefore, cannot be sustained which is set aside accordingly. (Para 37). State of Maharashtra v. Mohd. Sajid Husain Mohd. S. Husain, (2008) 1 SCC 213: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 176: AIR 2008 SC 155.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-2007]

D.K. Ganesh Babu v. P.T. Manokaran, (2007) 4 SCC 434: (2007) 2 SCC Cri 345; Vinod G. Asrani v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 3 SCC 633: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 129; State of U.P. v. Pappu, (2005) 3 SCC 594: 2005 SCC (Cri) 780, relied on [9235] — Ss. 376 and 450 — Conviction for rape with life imprisonment — Suspension of sentence and enlargement on bail — Propriety — High Court by impugned judgment granting bail and suspending sentence of life imprisonment passed against respondent-accused for offence punishable under Ss. 376 and 450 IPC — Victim a British journalist and businesswoman who was staying in guest house belonging to respondent-accused, where he forcibly barged into her room and raped her — Held, it was not a fit case where sentence awarded should have been suspended and accused released on bail — High Court totally unjustified in granting bail to accused, or in suspending the sentence — Impugned judgment set aside and High Court directed to dispose of the appeal expeditiously — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 389, 437 and 439 (Paras 3, 5 and 6). Suzanne Louise Martin v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 376: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 308: AIR 2009 SC 1740: 2009 Cri LJ 1567.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Markandey Katju and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2009]

[9236] — Ss. 376, 460, 325 and 506 — Suspension of sentence pending the appeal — Conviction under Ss. 460, 376, 325 and 506 IPC — During the pendency of appeal High Court rejecting appellant's application for suspension of sentence — Held, the normal rule is that when the appeal of a person convicted and sentenced is pending the sentence passed on him should be suspended unless any exceptional reason existing therein requires the denial of the same — There being no exceptional reason recorded in the impugned order, Supreme Court suspending the sentence and directing release of appellant on bail — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 389 and 374. Kiran Kumar v. State of M.P., (2001) 9 SCC 211.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-2000]

Bhagwan Rama Shinde Gosai v. State of Gujarat, (1999) 4 SCC 421: 1999 SCC (Cri) 553, followed

6. Charge

See also under Criminal Procedure Code, 1973

[9237] — Ss. 375 and 376 — No charge framed under, nor any evidence suggesting commission of rape — Medical report of the vaginal swab disclosing presence of semen and hence doctor opining that possibility of rape could not be ruled out — Trial court concluding that the deceased was raped before her death only on the basis of this solitary statement and imposing death sentence — High Court, concurring with the findings of the trial court and affirming the death sentence — Held, in absence of any charge framed under S. 376 and in absence of any evidence supporting the allegation, such finding cannot be sustained (Paras 19, 20 and 21). Jagjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 3 SCC 689: 2005 SCC (Cri) 893: AIR 2005 SC 913: 2005 Cri LJ 955.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2005]

[9238] — Ss. 376 (as amended in 1983)/511 or 354 — Applicable provision — After finding the accused guilty under Ss. 376/511, even in absence of a charge under S. 376 read with S. 511, held, High Court should have convicted him under Ss. 376/511 by invoking S. 222, CrPC and not under S. 354 — Quantum of punishment — Determination of — Keeping in view the objects of 1983 amendment to S. 376, held, no person committing or attempting to commit rape should be allowed to escape punishment — Having found the accused guilty, the quantum of punishment must be decided in accordance with law without being influenced by the press, electronic media or public agitation, as a trial by such agencies is the very antithesis of rule of law — While imposing fine and apportioning the whole or part thereof to the victim, the damage caused to her and even to her family should be taken into consideration — Father of eight-year-old daughter found guilty of attempting rape on a girl aged below twelve years and also found guilty under S. 57 of Bombay Children Act — High Court, however, setting aside the conviction under Ss. 376/511 and instead convicting him under S. 354 IPC and sentencing him to rigorous imprisonment for the period already undergone (only 33 days) and to a fine of Rs 40,000 of which Rs 25,000 was to be apportioned to the complainant (father of the prosecutrix in this case) — High Court upholding the respondent's conviction under S. 57 of the Bombay Act but restricting the sentence thereunder to the period of imprisonment already undergone — Matter coming up before the Supreme Court 11 long years after the incident and by then the fine imposed by the High Court having already been paid by the accused and the complainant having withdrawn his share of the fine — In such circumstances while converting the conviction of the accused from one under S. 354 IPC to that under Ss. 376/511 IPC, held, a sentence of five years' RI and a fine of Rs 40,000 would meet the ends of justice — Conviction and sentence under S. 57 of Bombay Children Act, however, affirmed — CrPC, 1973, S. 222 — Bombay Children Act, 1948 (71 of 1948), S. 57 — Law Commission Reports 42nd, 69th and 84th — Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1983

The accused-respondent was convicted by the trial court for offences under Section 376 of IPC and Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act, 1948 for having committed rape on a girl of eight years of age on 24-9-1986 and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 7 years and to pay fine of Rs 5000 and for offence under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act he was sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one year and to pay a fine of Rs 500. The substantive sentences were ordered to run concurrently. The Bombay High Court upset the conviction under Section 376 IPC and instead convicted him for an offence under Section 354 IPC and sentenced him to suffer rigorous imprisonment which he had already undergone (which was 33 days in all) and to pay fine of Rs 40,000 out of which Rs 25,000 was directed to be paid to the complainant who was the father of the girl. The conviction for the offence under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act was upheld but the sentence was reduced to the imprisonment already undergone. Cross appeals were filed against the High Court's decision. While the State of Maharashtra filed appeal against the conviction and sentence of the accused by the High Court praying for his conviction under Section 376 IPC and for enhancement of his sentence to a minimum of 10 years, the accused filed appeal against his very conviction and sentence under Section 354 IPC and Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act. On the question of sentence under Sections 376/511, IPC, the accused-respondent contended that when the offence was committed the accused had also a daughter of 8 years of age and that a long time had elapsed since the offence was committed and that in terms of the judgment of the High Court the accused had already deposited Rs 40,000 out of which Rs 25,000 had already been withdrawn by the father of the prosecutrix. It was submitted that if the Court came to the conclusion that the sentence had to be enhanced then only the amount of fine could be raised. Dismissing the respondent's appeal and partly allowing the State's appeal

Held :

The circumstances of the case show that the accused intended to commit rape on the girl. In the commission of that crime, he laid the girl on the seat in the Maruti car and then laid himself over her. He pulled down her knickers and also opened the zip of his pants and took out his male organ. He pressed his male organ on the private parts of the girl. But since he discharged, he could not penetrate and was unable to complete the offence of rape. However, it is clear that he did attempt to commit rape.

The High Court after having come to the conclusion that the accused was guilty of an offence under Sections 376/511 of the IPC could not have convicted the accused for an offence under Section 354 IPC. Section 511 IPC provides punishment for attempting to commit offences punishable with imprisonment for life or other imprisonment. In the instant case since the girl was under 12 years of age and the Sessions Judge having found that offence of rape had been committed could not have awarded sentence of 7 years when the law prescribes minimum sentence of rigorous imprisonment for a term not less than 10 years, unless exceptional circumstances existed. However, the State of the complainant did not come up in appeal in the High Court for enhancement of the sentence. Though there was no charge under Section 376 read with Section 511 IPC, under Section 222 CrPC when a person is charged for an offence he may be convicted of an attempt to commit such offence although the attempt is not separately charged.

The respondent's plea that in case the court took a decision to enhance the sentence the amount of fine could be raised, cannot be accepted. A heinous crime has been committed and the accused must suffer for the consequences. A rapist not only violates the victim's personal integrity but leaves indelible marks on the very soul of the helpless female. The girl of 8 years must have undergone a traumatic experience. Despite the 11 year long lapse of time after the offence, keeping the objects of the 1983 amendment to Section 376 of IPC in view, the law as it exists now and the decisions of the Supreme Court on the question of sentence, the message is loud and clear that no person who commits or attempts to commit rape shall escape punishment.

Considering the whole aspect of the matter, it has to be held that a sentence of five years' rigorous imprisonment and fine of Rs 40,000 will meet the ends of justice. The fine has already been paid, out of that Rs 25,000 has been withdrawn by the father of the girl as per direction of the High Court which is upheld. The conviction of the accused-respondent is converted from one under Section 354 IPC to that under Sections 376/511 IPC and he is sentenced as aforesaid. The conviction and sentence of the accused under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act as ordered by the High Court shall, however, stand. The sentences shall run concurrently. State of Maharashtra v. Rajendra Jawanmal Gandhi, (1997) 8 SCC 386: AIR 1997 SC 3986. Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1997]

[9239] — Ss. 376/511, 366 and 354 — Charge framed under Ss. 376/511, but conviction under Ss. 366 and 354 — Conviction where major offence not proved, but minor offence in respect of which no charge was framed is established — Accused charged only under Ss. 376/511 IPC — Said offence not made out — However, ingredients of minor offences under Ss. 366 and 354 IPC present — Held, accused could be convicted under Ss. 366 and 354 IPC by invoking S. 222 CrPC — CrPC, 1973, S. 222

In the instant case, the accused has been charged with Sections 376/511 IPC only. But, the offence committed does not come within the purview of offence punishable under Sections 376/511 IPC. In the absence of charge under any other section, the question now arises — whether the accused should be acquitted; or whether he should be convicted for committing any other offence pertaining to forcibly outraging the modesty of a girl. In a situation like this, Section 222 CrPC would be invoked which provides that in a case where the accused is charged with a major offence and the said charge is not proved, the accused may be convicted of the minor offence, though he was not charged with it. (Paras 23 and 36)

In the present case, the offence committed squarely covers the ingredients of Sections 366 and 354 IPC. The appellant is clearly guilty of the offences under Sections 366 and 354 IPC. (Paras 36 and 59). Tarkeshwar Sahu v. State of Bihar (Now Jharkhand), (2006) 8 SCC 560: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 556.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

Lakhjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 173: 1994 SCC (Cri) 235; Shamnsaheb M. Multtani v. State of Karnataka, (2001) 2 SCC 577: 2001 SCC (Cri) 358, relied on

7. Circumstantial Evidence

See also in detail under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vol. 19, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 3 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

Synopsis

(a) Generally 590
(b) Clues and Tell-Tale Signs/ Forensics 591
(c) Acquittal justified 593
(d) Conviction justified 594
(e) Injuries on accused 598
(f) Last seen together 599
(g) Motive 601
(h) Recovery of crime articles/ incriminating articles/other articles 601
(i) Recovery of dead body/ corpus delicti 602

(a) Generally

[9240] — Ss. 376 and 302 — When can an accused be convicted solely on the basis of circumstantial evidence — Principles reiterated — Rape and murder of a girl aged 5 years — Circumstances relied on by prosecution not found to be incriminating circumstantial evidence against accused — Held, courts below erred in convicting the accused on that basis — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 3

The Court has to proceed to examine each of the pieces of incriminating circumstantial evidence so as to find out if each one of the circumstantial evidence is proved individually and whether collectively it forges such a chain of incriminating circumstances as would fasten the guilt on the accused beyond any shadow of reasonable doubt. None of the pieces of evidence relied on as incriminating, by the trial court and the High Court, can be treated as incriminating pieces of circumstantial evidence against the accused. Though the offence is gruesome and revolts the human conscience but an accused can be convicted only on legal evidence and if only a chain of circumstantial evidence has been so forged as to rule out the possibility of any other reasonable hypothesis excepting the guilt of the accused. "Human nature is too willing, when faced with brutal crimes, to spin stories out of strong suspicions". Between may be true and must be true there is a long distance to travel which must be covered by clear, cogent and unimpeachable evidence by the prosecution before an accused is condemned a convict. (Paras 6 and 24). Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2001]

Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358; Sharad Birdhichand Sarda v. State of Maharashtra, (1984) 4 SCC 116: 1984 SCC (Cri) 487; Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 2 SCC 35: 1981 SCC (Cri) 315, relied on [9241] — Ss. 376/511 and 302 — Circumstantial evidence — Conviction on basis of — Sustainability — Held, when a case rests on circumstantial evidence, a complete chain of circumstances which rule out every other possibility except guilt of the accused has to be established — Attempt to rape and murder of a young girl aged 11 years alleged — Serious injuries sustained by accused not explained — Injuries on accused clearly indicating that he was beaten very badly after he was apprehended — Alleged extra-judicial confession was extracted from the accused by assaulting him severely and hence, neither voluntary nor natural — Moreover, evidence of the mother of the deceased was full of contradictions and inconsistencies — Hence held, High Court's view that the circumstances were not sufficient to fasten the guilt on the accused, calls for no interference (Paras 2, 12 and 13). State of U.P. v. Raja, (2008) 10 SCC 318: (2008) 70 AIC 102 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-2008]

[9242] — Ss. 376/511, 302/34 and 201/34 — Prosecution case solely based on circumstantial evidence — Circumstances should form a chain which should point to the guilt of the accused — Evidence should prove particular facts relevant for the purpose of the case — Proved facts should be wholly consistent with the guilt — On facts held, circumstances shown by prosecution were not sufficient to prove the guilt of the accused — Courts below erred in convicting the appellants under Ss. 376/511, 302/34 and 201/34 IPC on the basis of discrepant and fragile evidence. Sudama Pandey v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 679: 2002 SCC (Cri) 239: AIR 2002 SC 293: 2002 Cri LJ 582: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 65.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-2001]

Tanviben Pankajkumar Divetia v. State of Gujarat, (1997) 7 SCC 156: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1004; Sharad Birdhichand Sarda v. State of Maharashtra, (1984) 4 SCC 116: 1984 SCC (Cri) 487, relied on

(b) Clues and Tell-Tale Signs/Forensics

[9243] — S. 376 — Rape trial — Vaginal swabs and slides — Late deposit in malkhana — Whether on facts weakened prosecution case — Explanation if satisfactory — Post-mortem examination of victim conducted on 25-1-1996 — Samples of vaginal swabs and slides deposited in malkhana after a gap of three days on 29-1-1996 — Post-mortem report handed over by hospital to police on 25-1-1996 itself along with dead body whereas samples handed over on 29-1-1996 — In the intervening period, there were three holidays from 26-1-1996 to 28-1-1996 — Held, delay in deposit of samples satisfactorily accounted for — No adverse inference could be drawn against prosecution due to intervening period of three days between preparation of samples and deposit in malkhana (Para 56). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

[9244] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Genuineness of swabs and slides in rape and murder case — Malkhana register — Credibility of entries made therein — Entries relating to vaginal swabs and slides appeared to have been missed initially but subsequently made by incharge of malkhana — There was plausible explanation for omission — Initially, articles mentioned on first page of post-mortem examination report were entered in the register and then it was noticed that some more articles (swabs and slides) were mentioned on third page of report — Malkhana incharge, in his evidence, denying theory of interpolation — Even otherwise, there was evidence on record that swabs and slides were received in malkhana from hospital in a sealed jar and were delivered in the same condition to Centre for Cellular & Molecular Biology (CCMB), Hyderabad, for DNA profiling of accused — No suggestion made during cross-examination of doctors and police officials that seals of jar were tampered with — Held, genuineness of samples could not be doubted in such circumstances

PW 47, Constable Rajinder Singh of CBI, who was the incharge of the malkhana on the day in question deposed that there was no mention that swabs and slides were contained in a glass jar, but the fact that the entries had been interpolated has been emphatically denied by him. These items had been taken by Inspector Shekhawat from the malkhana on 31-1-1996 in a sealed condition and in a glass jar and handed over to CCMB, Hyderabad in an identical condition. PW 49, Dr. Lalji Singh from CCMB deposed on oath that all the aforesaid items along with several others had been received in a sealed condition as his organisation did not accept any item which was without a seal. He further stated that along with samples he had received the sample seals which had been affixed on the bundle of clothes and the bottle carrying vaginal swabs and slides. (Para 58)

The vaginal swabs and slides find mention on the third page of the post-mortem report whereas the other items taken from the dead body are on internal p. 1. This raises the possibility that the Head Constable had, at the initial stage, missed the articles on p. 3 and thereafter rectified the mistake. No adverse inference against the prosecution can be drawn with regard to the retention of the items in the malkhana. No suggestion was put either to the doctors or to DSP Ohri or to Sub-Inspector Shekhawat that the seals of the aforesaid articles had been tampered with. (Para 59). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

[9245] — Ss. 376, 302/34 and 201/34 — Guilt based on circumstantial evidence, established — Accused labourers taking pleas that semen stains found in their underwears cannot be used as an incriminating circumstance and that circumstances regarding extra-judicial and judicial confessions and part of circumstance relating to carnal intercourse were not proved — Chemical examination of seized underwears, not in dispute — Accused A-1 to A-4, after raping and murdering a minor girl (six years old), were throwing the deceased in a gunny bag, were seen, caught and handed over to police by PWs 2 to 5 established — Accused not disputing chemical examination showing their underwears stained with human semen and spermatozoa —

7.(b) Clues and Tell-Tale Signs/Forensics (contd.)

Nothing on record that PWs 2, 3, 4 and 5 had any enmity with A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 or had any special relations with the police — Medical evidence of doctor PW 1 establishing that the victim was subjected to rape and murder — Pleas regarding inadmissibility of semen stains evidence and not proving of confessions, held, have no merit — Circumstances were sufficiently proved and completed the chain cumulatively and unerringly pointed towards the guilt of the accused

On 25-9-2003, the six year old prosecutrix, daughter of PW 4 (a migrant labourer from Nepal) left home at about 8.00 a.m. When she did not return for quite some time and the efforts of PW 4 and other prosecution witnesses to find her out failed, PW 4 lodged an FIR in the police station at around 4.00 p.m. At about 1.30 p.m. in the night, when PWs 2, 3 and 5 (other migrant labourers from Nepal) were waiting for the prosecutrix four persons came from the side of the road up to the vacant plot of one Sardarji in that locality and were seen throwing the dead body of the prosecutrix from the gunny bag in that plot. The gunny bag was also thrown over there. PW 2, PW 3, PW 4 and PW 5 raised alarm and caught hold of them (Accused A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4). The dead body and A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 were taken to police station.

PW 4 lodged the written report at about 2.00 a.m. (26-9-2003) and a case under Sections 302/201/34 IPC was registered against A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4. Their formal arrest was made. In the morning of 26-9-2003 at about 6.30 a.m. seizure memo of the dead body was prepared by the IO (PW 11). PW 1 (doctor) conducted post-mortem of dead body at about 1.00 p.m. The accused persons were also sent for medical examination. On the basis of the disclosure statement of A-1 and A-2, two feet long electric wire of yellow colour from the house of one R where the accused were then residing was recovered.

The trial court awarded death sentence to the four appellant accused. The trial court also convicted the accused-appellants for the offences punishable under Sections 376 and 377 IPC and sentenced them to life imprisonment. Each of the appellants was also convicted for the offence punishable under Sections 201/34 IPC and sentenced to undergo seven years' rigorous imprisonment and fine of Rs 2000 and in default of payment of fine, additional imprisonment of six months. Since death sentence was awarded, the trial court made a reference to the High Court for confirmation.

The accused-appellants challenged the judgment of the trial court in separate appeals before the High Court. The death reference and the appeals were heard together. The High Court maintained the conviction of the appellants under Sections 302/34, 376 and 201/34 IPC. The sentence of death awarded under Sections 302/34 IPC to each of the appellants was commuted to that of rigorous imprisonment for life. The sentence awarded by the trial court under Sections 376 and 201/34 IPC was maintained. The High Court, however, acquitted the appellants of charge under Section 377 IPC and their conviction and sentence under this count was set aside. It is from the judgment dated 12-7-2005 that these four criminal appeals by special leave arise.

The High Court discarded the circumstances mentioned at Serial Nos. (vi), (viii) and (x) and the prosecution case of carnal intercourse. Despite that, the High Court was convinced that all other circumstances have been cogently and firmly established. The High Court discarded the following circumstance (1) That A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 made extra-judicial confession of their guilt before PW 1, PW 2, PW 3 and PW 4, (2) That at the instance and on the disclosure statement of A-1 and A-2, a piece of wire was recovered from the house of one R, and (3) That A-2 made a confession of his guilt before the Judicial Magistrate on 7-10-2003.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Where the entire case hinges on circumstantial evidence, great care must be taken in evaluating circumstantial evidence to ensure that the circumstances on which the prosecution relies are wholly consistent with the sole hypothesis of the guilt of the accused. There is no eyewitness account and the case depends wholly upon circumstantial evidence. While evaluating circumstantial evidence, which of course has to be done carefully, the circumstances must be of such a nature as to be capable of supporting the exclusive hypothesis that the accused is guilty of the crime of which he is charged and the circumstances so shown by the prosecution are compatible with no other reasonable hypothesis. (Paras 15, 13 and 17)

There is no merit in the contention that the accused being labourers, not changing their underwears daily, semen stains found in their underwears cannot be used as an incriminating circumstance. That the underwears of the accused were seized on 27-9-2003 when they were in jail and these articles were sent for chemical examination is not in dispute. That the evidence pertaining to chemical examination of underwears shows that those underwears were found stained with human semen and spermatozoa is also not in dispute. Nothing has been brought on record that PW 2, PW 3, PW 4 and PW 5 had any enmity with A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 or had any special relations with the police. That A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 were seen throwing the dead body of the victim in the intervening night of 25-9-2003/26-9-2003 is established. (Paras 31, 27 and 33)

It is true that circumstances regarding extra-judicial and judicial confessions and part of circumstance relating to carnal intercourse were not proved, but the remaining circumstances were sufficiently proved and completed the chain cumulatively and, therefore, there is no escape from the conclusion that within all human probabilities the crime was committed by the accused and none else as the proved circumstances unerringly point towards the guilt of the accused. The medical evidence of (PW 1) establishes that the victim was subjected to rape and murder. The injuries and medical evidence make it highly improbable that four persons raped the minor girl. Firstly, no question or suggestion has been put to PW 1 in this regard. Secondly, and more importantly, semen stains with spermatozoa were found on the underwears of all the four accused. Thirdly, chemical examination of the vaginal smear of the victim has also confirmed presence of human blood, semen and spermatozoa. In view of this evidence, rape of the victim by more than one culprit can be safely held to be established. The medical evidence proves beyond reasonable doubt that the victim died of homicidal death and that she was raped before being murdered. The view taken by the High Court is the only possible view on a proper appraisement of evidence and no other view is possible and it has not committed any error in upholding the conviction of the accused persons for the offences punishable under Sections 302/34, 376 and 201/34 IPC. The sentence awarded to them calls for no interference. (Paras 34, 32 and 43). Pawan v. State of Uttaranchal, (2009) 15 SCC 259: (2009) 2 ECrN 789 (SC): (2009) 3 All LJ 637: 2009 Cri LJ 2257.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha, A.K. Ganguly and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-2009]

Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 2 SCC 35: 1981 SCC (Cri) 315; Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256; Sadashiv Ramrao Hadbe v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 10 SCC 92: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 161, distinguished

(c) Acquittal justified

[9246] — S. 375 Thirdly — Rape by a policeman in police station — Onus on the prosecution to establish ingredients of the offence — Passive consent or submission out of fear by the prosecutrix — Circumstantial evidence regarding — Held, offence not established — Charge against companion policeman under S. 354 for fondling the private parts of the prosecutrix also fails

The onus is always on the prosecution to prove affirmatively each ingredient of the offence it seeks to establish and such onus never shifts. It was, therefore, incumbent on it to make out that all the ingredients of S. 375 were present in the case. For the proposition that the requisite consent was lacking in the present case reliance on behalf of the State can be placed only on clause Thirdly so that it would have to be shown that the girl had been put in fear of death or hurt and that that was the reason for her consent. In the absence of such a finding, the alleged fear would not vitiate the consent. Further, for circumstantial evidence to be used in order to prove an ingredient of an offence, it has to be such that it leads to no reasonable inference other than that of guilt. The fear which clause Thirdly of S. 375 speaks of is negatived by the circumstance that the girl is said to have been taken away by the accused policeman right from amongst her near and dear ones at a point of time when they were all leaving the police station together and were crossing the entrance gate. The circumstantial evidence available, therefore, is not only capable of being construed in a way different from that adopted by the High Court but actually derogates in no uncertain measure from the inference drawn by it.

Moreover, no marks of injury were found on the person of the girl after the incident and their absence goes a long way to indicate that the alleged intercourse was a peaceful affair, and that the story of a stiff resistance having been put up by the girl is all false. It is further clear that the averments on the part of the girl that she had been shouting loudly for help are untrue.

Thus the sexual intercourse in question is not proved to amount to rape and no offence is brought home to the appellant.

As regards another policeman who was alleged to have fondled the private parts of the girl, the girl's version could not be believed in view of the shifting positions taken by her in this regard. Further the circumstance that this policeman was present at the time of occurrence is not inculpatory and is capable of more explanations than one. Tukaram v. State of Maharashtra, (1979) 2 SCC 143: 1979 SCC (Cri) 381: AIR 1979 SC 185: 1978 Cri LJ 1864: (1979) 16 ACC 7.

7.(c) Acquittal justified (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Jaswant Singh, P.S. Kailasam and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1978]

See comments at (1974) 4 SCC (Jour) 17

[9247] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder of a girl of five years — Vital link in the chain of circumstances snapped — Held on facts, offence under Ss. 376 and 302 not established

The crucial link in the chain of circumstances in the present case is the presence of the accused-appellant in his house at the time when the dead body of the deceased was discovered. Once that link snaps, the entire case would have to rest on slender titbits here and there.

The discovery of a blood-stain of the deceased's group ('B' Group) measuring 0.5 cms in diameter on the accused-appellant's pant could be a circumstance against the accused only if it is shown that that was not his blood group. Presence of a dried stain of semen on the underpant of accused, aged 30, is also a circumstance too feeble to establish the guilt. Absence of smegma around the accused's corona glandis cannot by itself prove that he had sexual intercourse. The presence of smegma may perhaps exclude the possibility of recent sexual intercourse but its absence will not necessarily establish that the person has had a recent intercourse. A small abrasion over the base of the glans-penis and its bluish discoloration are also inconclusive circumstances. Nor indeed can the bruises on the appellant thigh establish his involvement in the crime.

The circumstances that the total ignorance of the incident pleaded by the accused was false, cannot be said to have itself furnished a link in the chain of causation. Falsity of defence cannot take the place of proof of facts which the prosecution has to establish in order to succeed. A false plea can at best be considered as an additional circumstance, if other circumstances point unfailingly to the guilt of the accused. Moreover, from the facts and circumstances of the case it is clear that the accused was not present in the house at the time when the deceased's dead body was discovered from the accused's house. That makes it impossible that the accused's plea was false. Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 2 SCC 35: 1981 SCC (Cri) 315: AIR 1981 SC 765: 1981 Cri LJ 325: 1981 MLJ (Cri) 320.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and A.P. Sen and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1980]

[9248] — Ss. 376 and 320 — Rape and murder — Circumstantial evidence — First circumstance that accused-appellant came to the house of deceased on the day of occurrence and gave a proposal to the deceased for going to orchard for plucking flowers, established — But the second circumstance that appellant and deceased left the house together, which was very material, could not be established — Prosecution also failed to prove the other circumstances — Hence appellant entitled to acquittal — CrPC, 1973, S. 313 (Paras 17 to 19). Kanhai Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2001) 3 SCC 451: 2001 SCC (Cri) 537: AIR 2001 SC 1113: 2001 Cri LJ 1259.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, R.P. Sethi and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-2001]

(d) Conviction justified

[9249] — S. 376 — Rape — On facts, held, circumstantial evidence is sufficient to conclusively establish guilt of the accused — No law point laid down. Nagarajan v. State of T.N., AIR 1995 SC 1926.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-1994]

[9250] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Conviction — Rape and murder of girl aged 11 years — Circumstantial evidence — Accused seen enticing deceased by offering toffee, thereafter both last seen together going out in the evening, they having not returned to house PWs searched for them whole night and in the morning dead body of deceased found — Immediately thereafter FIR lodged — Extrajudicial confession made by accused to PW 3 that he committed rape of the deceased and killed her by causing injury on her head by brick when she stated that she would report at the house about the rape — Bloodstained earth, bloodstained brick with hair stuck to it, shawl, chappals taken into possession by police — Bloodstains found on trousers and shirt and blood and semen stains found on underwear for which no explanation given by accused — At the stage of statement under S. 313 CrPC accused abjured his guilt and denied all the allegations made against him — Held, High Court rightly confirmed the conviction order passed by Sessions Court. Raju v. State of Haryana, (2001) 9 SCC 50: AIR 2001 SC 2043: 2001 Cri LJ 2580.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2001]

[9251] — Ss. 376, 302 and 392 — Circumstances pointing to one hypothesis only, namely guilt of accused — Rape and murder of a woman while she was alone in house and commission of robbery — Offences, held, proved — Accused seen in house by deceased's seven yr old son (PW 2) who had just returned after playing — Two neighbours (PWs 10 and 11) also seeing accused leaving with a bag containing household articles — Rape by violent sexual assault proved by presence of sperm in deceased's vagina and other injuries on her body, particularly bleeding vagina — Cause of death determined in post-mortem examination as smothering — Household articles taken away by accused, identified by deceased's sister — Accused's fingerprints found on handle of almirah — Besides, accused had also made extra-judicial confession to doctor who examined him for his sexual capacity that he (accused) pushed down deceased, removed her clothes, tied her hands and removed articles from house — Held, circumstantial evidence taken together proves that it was accused who committed rape, murder and robbery — Death sentence also confirmed — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 24

All the witnesses who claimed to be present at or near the place of occurrence remained unshaken in cross-examination, thereby completing the chain of circumstantial evidence in a manner that clearly indicates that no one other than the appellant committed the offences with which he was charged. The trial court has also relied upon the extra-judicial confession made by the appellant to Dr. Somashekar (PW 26), who examined him as to his sexual capacity, to the effect that he had pushed down the victim, removed her clothes, tied her hands and committed theft in the house. (Para 74)

The aforesaid position is further strengthened by the forensic report and that of the fingerprint expert to establish that the fingerprints which had been lifted by PW 13 from the handle of the steel almirah in the room, matched the fingerprint of the appellant which clearly established his presence inside the house of the deceased. The explanation attempted to be given for the presence of the fingerprints on the handle of the almirah situated inside the room of the deceased does not inspire any confidence whatsoever. In a way, it is the said evidence which scientifically establishes beyond doubt that the appellant was present in the room in which the deceased was found after her death and had been identified as such not only by PW 2, who actually saw the appellant in the house immediately after J was murdered, but also by PWs 10 and 11, who saw him coming out of the house at the relevant point of time with the bag in his hand. The fingerprints of the appellant found on the handle of the almirah in the room of the deceased proves his presence in the house of the deceased and that he and no other person caused J's death after having violent sexual intercourse with her against her will. (Para 75)

Apart from causing the death of the victim, the evidence also points to the commission of rape of the deceased by the appellant. That the deceased was lying naked with blood oozing out of her genitals and both her hands tied by a sari at one end clearly indicates violent sexual intercourse with the deceased. The presence of semen-like material in her vagina, which was found during the post-mortem examination, was collected and sent for microbiological examination and showed the presence of sperm. The presence of spermatozoa in the vaginal smear which was sent for microbiological examination and the presence of bloodstains at the vaginal outlet together with laceration of the vagina from the vaginal outlet on the posterior wall establishes and confirms the charge of violent sexual intercourse viz. rape. (Para 76)

In addition to the above, the examination of the accused by PW 26, the doctor, who conducted the post-mortem examination, discloses laceration on the inner aspect of the upper lip and inner abrasions in both lips and scratch abrasions over the right side of the face. Abrasions over the front of right shoulder and over the right side at the back of the neck of the appellant indicated that the same could have been caused due to resistance and strengthens the case of the prosecution of forced sexual intercourse with the victim against her wishes. (Para 77)

Even after committing the abovementioned offences, the appellant robbed various articles, including jewellery and a VCR set from the house of the deceased, and even made up a suitable story about his presence in the house in order to impress a young child who happened to notice him as he was leaving the house. (Para 78). B.A. Umesh v. State of Karnataka, (2011) 3 SCC 85.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2011]

[9252] — Ss. 376, 302 and 404 — Offences of rape, murder and theft committed as an integral part of same transaction — Recovery of stolen property belonging to deceased at the instance of accused within 2 days of the offence — Incriminating circumstances not explained — Presumption regarding the connection of accused with the aforesaid three offences — Tests required to be satisfied for said presumption, stated — Rape and sub-

7.(d) Conviction justified (contd.)

sequent murder of 11 year old girl — Medical evidence supporting the prosecution case — Ornaments worn by the victim, crime articles and clothes of accused stained with blood and semen recovered at the instance of accused — Accused seen with victim near the place of occurrence just before the incident — Injuries present on the person of accused — Identification of ornaments by victim's parents — Held, the existing chain of unexplained incriminating circumstantial evidence were sufficient for proving the guilt of the accused charged with the said offences — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (a)

Where several offences have taken place as part of one transaction, recent and unexplained possession of property belonging to the deceased by the accused may enable a presumption being raised against him that he is guilty not only of the offence of theft or dacoity but also of other offences forming part of that transaction. While raising such presumption, the time factor between the date of the offence and recovery of stolen property from the possession of the accused would play a significant role. Precaution has to be taken that the presumption may not be so stretched as to permit suspicion taking the place of proof. No hard-and-fast rule can be laid down in this regard. (Paras 12 and 14)

Recovery of stolen property from the possession of the accused enables a presumption as to commission of offence other than theft or dacoity being drawn against the accused so as to hold him a perpetrator of such other offences on the following tests being satisfied: (i) the offence of criminal misappropriation, theft or dacoity relating to the articles recovered from the possession of the accused and such other offences can reasonably be held to have been committed as an integral part of the same transaction; (ii) the time-lag between the date of commission of the offence and the date of recovery of articles from the accused is not so wide as to snap the link between recovery and commission of the offence; (iii) availability of some piece of incriminating evidence or circumstance, other than mere recovery of the articles, connecting the accused with such other offence; (iv) caution on the part of the court to see that suspicion, howsoever strong, does not take the place of proof. In such cases the explanation offered by the accused for his possession of the stolen property assumes significance. (Para 15)

In the present case, a little before the probable time of commission of the crime, the accused was seen near the place of occurrence. The recovery of ornaments worn by the deceased and the blood-stained axe used in the crime was made at the instance of the accused and there is a time-lag of just two days between the offence and the recovery. The clothes of the accused, which were stained with blood and semen, were also recovered on being produced by the accused from his house. The injuries on the person of accused appear to have been caused at or about the time of occurrence. Besides the said facts, the medical evidence has also supported the case of prosecution. (Para 19)

Thus, offences of rape, murder and theft were committed in one transaction and the accused had failed to offer any explanation to the aforesaid incriminating circumstances and therefore they can be used as inculpatory circumstances against him. It is not only the recovery of stolen property but also availability of other strong circumstances which have fastened inescapable connectivity of the accused with the aforesaid offences. (Para 19). Ganesh Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 731: 2002 SCC (Cri) 247: 2002 Cri LJ 967.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-2001]

Baiju v. State of M.P., (1978) 1 SCC 588: 1978 SCC (Cri) 142; Earabhadrappa v. State of Karnataka, (1983) 2 SCC 330: 1983 SCC (Cri) 447: Gulab Chand v. State of M.P., (1995) 3 SCC 574: 1995 SCC (Cri) 552; Mukund v. State of M.P., (1997) 10 SCC 130: 1997 SCC (Cri) 799; A. Devendran v. State of T.N., (1997) 11 SCC 720: 1998 SCC (Cri) 220; State of Maharashtra v. Suresh, (2000) 1 SCC 471: 2000 SCC (Cri) 263; Shivappa v. State of Mysore, (1970) 1 SCC 487: 1970 SCC (Cri) 215, relied on

[9253] — Ss. 376, 302/34 and 201/34 — Guilt based on circumstantial evidence, established — Accused labourers taking pleas that semen stains found in their underwears cannot be used as an incriminating circumstance and that circumstances regarding extra-judicial and judicial confessions and part of circumstance relating to carnal intercourse were not proved — Chemical examination of seized underwears, not in dispute — Accused A-1 to A-4, after raping and murdering a minor girl (six years old), were throwing the deceased in a gunny bag, were seen, caught and handed over to police by PWs 2 to 5 established — Accused not disputing chemical examination showing their underwears stained with human semen and spermatozoa — Nothing on record that PWs 2, 3, 4 and 5 had any enmity with A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 or had any special relations with the police — Medical evidence of doctor PW 1 establishing that the victim was subjected to rape and murder — Pleas regarding inadmissibility of semen stains evidence and not proving of confessions, held, have no merit — Circumstances were sufficiently proved and completed the chain cumulatively and unerringly pointed towards the guilt of the accused

On 25-9-2003, the six year old prosecutrix, daughter of PW 4 (a migrant labourer from Nepal) left home at about 8.00 a.m. When she did not return for quite some time and the efforts of PW 4 and other prosecution witnesses to find her out failed, PW 4 lodged an FIR in the police station at around 4.00 p.m. At about 1.30 p.m. in the night, when PWs 2, 3 and 5 (other migrant labourers from Nepal) were waiting for the prosecutrix four persons came from the side of the road up to the vacant plot of one Sardarji in that locality and were seen throwing the dead body of the prosecutrix from the gunny bag in that plot. The gunny bag was also thrown over there. PW 2, PW 3, PW 4 and PW 5 raised alarm and caught hold of them (Accused A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4). The dead body and A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 were taken to police station.

PW 4 lodged the written report at about 2.00 a.m. (26-9-2003) and a case under Sections 302/201/34 IPC was registered against A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4. Their formal arrest was made. In the morning of 26-9-2003 at about 6.30 a.m. seizure memo of the dead body was prepared by the IO (PW 11). PW 1 (doctor) conducted post-mortem of dead body at about 1.00 p.m. The accused persons were also sent for medical examination. On the basis of the disclosure statement of A-1 and A-2, two feet long electric wire of yellow colour from the house of one R where the accused were then residing was recovered.

The trial court awarded death sentence to the four appellant accused. The trial court also convicted the accused-appellants for the offences punishable under Sections 376 and 377 IPC and sentenced them to life imprisonment. Each of the appellants was also convicted for the offence punishable under Sections 201/34 IPC and sentenced to undergo seven years' rigorous imprisonment and fine of Rs 2000 and in default of payment of fine, additional imprisonment of six months. Since death sentence was awarded, the trial court made a reference to the High Court for confirmation.

The accused-appellants challenged the judgment of the trial court in separate appeals before the High Court. The death reference and the appeals were heard together. The High Court maintained the conviction of the appellants under Sections 302/34, 376 and 201/34 IPC. The sentence of death awarded under Sections 302/34 IPC to each of the appellants was commuted to that of rigorous imprisonment for life. The sentence awarded by the trial court under Sections 376 and 201/34 IPC was maintained. The High Court, however, acquitted the appellants of charge under Section 377 IPC and their conviction and sentence under this count was set aside. It is from the judgment dated 12-7-2005 that these four criminal appeals by special leave arise.

The High Court discarded the circumstances mentioned at Serial Nos. (vi), (viii) and (x) and the prosecution case of carnal intercourse. Despite that, the High Court was convinced that all other circumstances have been cogently and firmly established. The High Court discarded the following circumstance (1) That A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 made extra-judicial confession of their guilt before PW 1, PW 2, PW 3 and PW 4, (2) That at the instance and on the disclosure statement of A-1 and A-2, a piece of wire was recovered from the house of one R, and (3) That A-2 made a confession of his guilt before the Judicial Magistrate on 7-10-2003.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held:

Where the entire case hinges on circumstantial evidence, great care must be taken in evaluating circumstantial evidence to ensure that the circumstances on which the prosecution relies are wholly consistent with the sole hypothesis of the guilt of the accused. There is no eyewitness account and the case depends wholly upon circumstantial evidence. While evaluating circumstantial evidence, which of course has to be done carefully, the circumstances must be of such a nature as to be capable of supporting the exclusive hypothesis that the accused is guilty of the crime of which he is charged and the circumstances so shown by the prosecution are compatible with no other reasonable hypothesis. (Paras 15, 13 and 17)

There is no merit in the contention that the accused being labourers, not changing their underwears daily, semen stains found in their underwears cannot be used as an incriminating circumstance. That the underwears of the accused were seized on 27-9-2003 when they were in jail and these articles were sent for chemical examination is not in dispute. That the evidence pertaining to chemical examination of underwears shows that those underwears were found stained with human semen and spermatozoa is also not in dispute. Nothing has been brought on record that PW 2, PW 3, PW 4 and PW 5 had any enmity with A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 or had any special relations with the police. That A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 were seen throwing the dead body of the victim in the intervening night of 25-9-2003/26-9-2003 is established. (Paras 31, 27 and 33)

7.(d) Conviction justified (contd.)

It is true that circumstances regarding extra-judicial and judicial confessions and part of circumstance relating to carnal intercourse were not proved, but the remaining circumstances were sufficiently proved and completed the chain cumulatively and, therefore, there is no escape from the conclusion that within all human probabilities the crime was committed by the accused and none else as the proved circumstances unerringly point towards the guilt of the accused. The medical evidence of (PW 1) establishes that the victim was subjected to rape and murder. The injuries and medical evidence make it highly improbable that four persons raped the minor girl. Firstly, no question or suggestion has been put to PW 1 in this regard. Secondly, and more importantly, semen stains with spermatozoa were found on the underwears of all the four accused. Thirdly, chemical examination of the vaginal smear of the victim has also confirmed presence of human blood, semen and spermatozoa. In view of this evidence, rape of the victim by more than one culprit can be safely held to be established. The medical evidence proves beyond reasonable doubt that the victim died of homicidal death and that she was raped before being murdered. The view taken by the High Court is the only possible view on a proper appraisement of evidence and no other view is possible and it has not committed any error in upholding the conviction of the accused persons for the offences punishable under Sections 302/34, 376 and 201/34 IPC. The sentence awarded to them calls for no interference. (Paras 34, 32 and 43). Pawan v. State of Uttaranchal, (2009) 15 SCC 259: (2009) 2 ECrN 789 (SC): (2009) 3 All LJ 637: 2009 Cri LJ 2257.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha, A.K. Ganguly and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-2009]

Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 2 SCC 35: 1981 SCC (Cri) 315; Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256; Sadashiv Ramrao Hadbe v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 10 SCC 92: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 161, distinguished

[9254] — Ss. 376, 364 and 302 — Circumstantial evidence — Conviction on the basis of — Sustainability — Appellant-accused alleged to have raped and murdered deceased, aged five years — Accused caught red-handed in completely naked state thrusting a stem/stick of dhanicha in vagina of deceased — Held, for a crime to be proved it is not necessary that the crime must be seen to have been committed and must, in all circumstances be proved by direct ocular evidence by examining before the court those persons who had seen its commission — Offence can be proved by circumstantial evidence also — Principal fact or factum probandum may be proved indirectly by means of certain inferences drawn from factum probans, that is, the evidentiary facts — Circumstantial evidence is not direct to the point in issue but consists of evidence of various other facts which are so closely associated with the fact in issue that taken together they form a chain of circumstances from which the existence of the principal fact can be legally inferred or presumed — In the instant case accused wanted to camouflage the serious crime of rape and so in a planned manner, after committing rape, he mercilessly inserted stem/stick deep inside the fragile vagina of the girl to the extent of 33 cm to cause her death, with a view to masquerade the crime as an accident — It was just by providence that due to timely reach of the witnesses (PWs 2, 3 and others) who were frantically searching the girl that he could be caught in naked condition while inserting a stick into the vagina of the lifeless body of the victim — Hence, conviction of appellant for offences punishable under Ss. 364, 376 & 302 IPC imposed by trial court and as affirmed by High Court, held, sustainable (Paras 3, 17, 18 and 19). Bantu v. State of U.P., (2008) 11 SCC 113.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-2008]

Wills' Circumstantial Evidence' (Chapter VI), cited

(e) Injuries on accused

[9255] — Ss. 376/511 and 302 — Circumstantial evidence — Conviction on basis of — Sustainability — Held, when a case rests on circumstantial evidence, a complete chain of circumstances which rule out every other possibility except guilt of the accused has to be established — Attempt to rape and murder of a young girl aged 11 years alleged — Serious injuries sustained by accused not explained — Injuries on accused clearly indicating that he was beaten very badly after he was apprehended — Alleged extra-judicial confession was extracted from the accused by assaulting him severely and hence, neither voluntary nor natural — Moreover, evidence of the mother of the deceased was full of contradictions and inconsistencies — Hence held, High Court's view that the circumstances were not sufficient to fasten the guilt on the accused, calls for no interference (Paras 2, 12 and 13). State of U.P. v. Raja, (2008) 10 SCC 318: (2008) 70 AIC 102 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-2008]

(f) Last seen together

[9256] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Child witness — Examination of — Must be nearabout the date and time of the incident — Rape and murder of a girl aged 5 years — Solitary testimony of a child aged 4 years that while returning home along with the deceased after purchasing a balloon, accused took the deceased inside his house saying that her feet were mudstained — Not clear from her statement whether that happened before the date and time of the incident or on the date on which dead body of deceased was found — How and in what manner investigating officer came to know about this child witness so as to record her statement during investigation also remaining a mystery — Child witness examined by trial court about one year after the incident — On asking a few questions by way of preliminary examination, trial Judge finding that the witness could "answer some of the questions" — Even taking her testimony at its face value, no incriminating inference could be drawn against the accused on that basis so as to connect him with the crime — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 8 and 3. Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2001]

[9257] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder — Circumstantial evidence — Last seen together — Accused A and victim V (girl aged 11-12 years) last seen together by PWs 1 and 11 — Evidence of said PWs trustworthy and reliable — Close proximity of place and time between the event of A having been last seen with V and factum of death — In such circumstances, held, burden was on A to explain how and in what circumstances V suffered the death — No explanation offered in statement made by A under S. 313 CrPC — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 106

The evidence of PWs 1 and 11 is trustworthy and reliable. It has a ring of truth. It stands fully established that they had seen the deceased V and the appellant on 28-3-2001 in the forest. When on the next day PW 1 again came to the same area for grazing buffaloes, he found the dead body of V. At that time too, PW 11 was with PW 1. (Paras 8 and 2)

In Mohibur Rahman case, (2002) 6 SCC 715, it has been observed that there may be cases where, on account of close proximity of place and time between the event of the accused having been last seen with the deceased and the factum of death, a rational mind may be persuaded to reach an irresistible conclusion that either the accused should explain how and in what circumstances the victim suffered the death or should own the liability for the homicide. Here it has been established that the death took place on 28th March between 3 and 4 p.m. It is just about that much time that the appellant and the deceased were last seen by PW 1 and PW 11. No explanation has been offered in the statement by the appellant recorded under Section 313 CrPC. His defence is of complete denial. Thus, the conviction for offence under Sections 302 and 376 has been rightly recorded by the Court of Session and affirmed by the High Court. (Para 9). Amit v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 8 SCC 93: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1959: AIR 2003 SC 3131: 2003 Cri LJ 3873.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-2003]

Mohibur Rahman v. State of Assam, (2002) 6 SCC 715: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1496, applied

[9258] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder of a minor girl aged 4 years — Three PWs seeing a little girl crying in the company of a man on the day of the incident — Both accused and victim were strangers to the PWs — Reason for the PWs remembering them was that next day when they heard about the murder of a little girl, they recollected seeing the man along with the little girl the previous day — PWs later identifying the accused in test identification parade — Held, recollection about the victim in the company of the accused was natural — Contention that there was inherent incredibility in the evidence of the PWs as normally accused would have taken precaution not to be seen by any other person on the way cannot be accepted

If a criminal court is to view the testimony of the three witnesses as unnatural it would be easy to brush it aside with the stereotyped reasoning that those persons had no cause to remember having seen the man with the girl accompanying him. Such a reasoning overlooks the broad aspect that a human mind, on hearing about any shocking incident, would have the tendency to recollect any previous event which could have had a connection with that incident. If as a matter of fact those witnesses had occasion to see a crying girl of that age on the very day of the gruesome episode as happened in this case, there is nothing improbable in those witnesses remembering the person who was seen in the company of that girl. If they had immediately informed the police that they noticed a similarly-aged girl crying in the company of an utter stranger of that locality that cannot be brushed aside as a doubtful conduct. Either the three witnesses concocted the story falsely or what they said must be true. No reason was suggested for those three witnesses to bother themselves to concoct such a canard. (Para 17)

7.(f) Last seen together (contd.)

It is not possible to accept that there is "an inherent incredibility in the evidence" on the premise that a culprit kidnapping a minor girl with a sinister design would normally take the precaution not to be seen by any other person on the way, but in this case the culprit along with the girl had moved from place to place in the town. Such a reasoning as a proposition of human conduct cannot be accepted. The victim would certainly have been abducted by somebody (even assuming that it was not this respondent) and that person had taken the abducted girl from her house up to the place of occurrence (farm). Unless it is suggested that there was another alternative and a safer route for the culprit to take the girl unnoticed by any shopkeeper or even a pedestrian, there is no rationale in the reasoning that there is "inherent incredibility" in the version that the respondent would have taken the girl through this route. (Para 19). State of Maharashtra v. Suresh, (2000) 1 SCC 471: 2000 SCC (Cri) 263.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-1999]

[9259] — Ss. 376, 302 and 201 — Rape and murder — Victim, a girl aged about 10 years — Eyewitness claiming having seen the accused throttling the victim — Evidence as to last seen together — Acquittal by the High Court — Propriety — Victim seen chewing sugarcane at "kolhu" of accused D — Later on seen going with D towards his sugarcane field — Not returning to her home — Complainant B (father of victim) going to the sugarcane field of D for searching the victim there — D not permitting him to do so — Thereafter, B taking "Pardhan" of the village and other persons with him making search there — Dead body of victim found buried in the said field — On such facts, held, conviction by trial court was proper — High Court erred in setting aside the same — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 386 and 374(2) (Paras 7 to 9). State of U.P. v. Devendra Singh, (2004) 10 SCC 616: AIR 2004 SC 3690: 2004 Cri LJ 3118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2004]

[9260] — Ss. 376, 363 and 302 — Rape and murder of minor — Minor incongruity — Though there is an incongruity in prosecution evidence regarding recovery of body and inquest thereof, held, there is strong evidence to show guilt of appellant — Clothes of deceased recovered with blood-stains and lacerated wound found on private parts with hymen completely ruptured — Doctor opining cause of death as asphyxiation — Clothes worn by appellant at time of incident recovered with bloodstains thereon, underwear recovered also having semen stains — No rational explanation could be given by appellant as to presence of said stains on his clothes — Appellant seen near time of alleged abduction of deceased with a girl child on his shoulder, mistaken to be a niece of the appellant by a witness (PW 7) — Held, even though PW 7 had not identified that the girl was the deceased, it is a serious incriminating circumstance, and appellant being an unmarried man, could not have been found at night with a girl — Circumstance clearly shows that he had kidnapped the child during the night — Moreover, previous conduct of appellant (having been rejected sexual favours by mother of deceased and admonished and scolded therefor by mother, uncle and brother of deceased, earlier in the night) though not strictly admissible in evidence, would prove that appellant was prone to do the crimes alleged — Hence, Sessions Judge and High Court appreciated evidence in correct perspective and found appellant guilty and there were no reasons to disbelieve this finding — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 8

The appellant was staying in one of the rooms of a building owned by the complainant K, a widow having three children. On 11-9-2002 at about 10 p.m., the appellant came to PW 2 K and offered Rs 150 and sought sexual favours. PW 2 got angry and she asked him to go away, but the appellant declined to leave the place. PW 2 told her brother and her son that the appellant had been harassing her. They came and scolded the appellant and he left the place. During the night, PW 2 along with her two minor daughters was sleeping on a cot lying outside the room. At about midnight she felt cold and went inside and at 1.00 o'clock she came back and then she saw that one of her daughters, namely, S was missing. She immediately called her brother and her son who were sleeping in another portion of the same house. They searched for S at nearby places, and as they had suspicion on the appellant, they went in search of him to his house but he was not found there. They made enquiry with PW 7. He stated that he had seen appellant going away with a girl on his shoulder but he thought that the girl must be the daughter of a relative of the appellant. The people in the locality collected and at about 4 o'clock in the morning they saw the appellant coming from a nearby road. PW 2 and others took him to the police station. It seems that he made certain revelations and PW 2 gave the FI statement and on the basis of the FI statement a case was registered and investigation was started.

The dead body of S was recovered from a pond. The body was found floating on the water and it was identified by relatives. An inquest was held on the dead body and on post-mortem examination it was found that there were a series of injuries on the body of deceased S. The clothes were stained with blood and some mud particles. There was lacerated wound on the private parts of the deceased, and the hymen was completely ruptured. The doctor opined that the victim must have died due to asphyxia.

Commuting the sentence of death to life imprisonment,

Held :

There is incongruity in the prosecution evidence regarding recovery of the body and the inquest of the dead body. PW 19, the investigating officer could not throw much light on this infirmity in the investigation. Therefore no importance is being given to the alleged recovery of dead body at the instance of the appellant. (Para 6)

However, there is strong evidence to show that the appellant committed the offence. According to the prosecution, the appellant was immediately arrested and brought to the police station. His clothes were recovered and sent for chemical examination. Items F, G, H and I are the shirt, banyan, pants and underwear respectively worn by the appellant at the time of incident. The chemical analyst's report shows that on Items F, G and H there were presence of bloodstains and Item I was also having bloodstains mixed with semen. The appellant could not give any rational explanation for the presence of bloodstains on his clothes. (Para 7)

Another circumstance is the evidence of PW 7. He went to bed and at about 1 a.m. he got up to answer the call of nature and came to the bathroom situated outside his house, then he found the appellant moving around and he was having a child on his shoulder. In the FI statement also reference has been made to the statement made by Rambaran. Of course PW 7 had not identified that the girl was deceased S. Nevertheless, it is a serious incriminating circumstance and the appellant being an unmarried man, he could not have been found at night with a girl and this circumstance clearly shows that the appellant had kidnapped the child during night for the purpose of commission of this crime. The dead body of deceased S was found in the early morning of 12-9-2002 and the appellant was arrested immediately and previous conduct also though not strictly admissible in evidence would prove that the appellant was prone to do such crime. The Sessions Judge as well as the High Court appreciated the evidence in the correct perspective had found the appellant guilty and there are no reasons to disbelieve this finding. (Paras 8 and 9). Surendra Pal Shivbalakpal v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 127: 2005 SCC (Cri) 653: AIR 2004 SC 4862: 2004 Cri LJ 4642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2004]

(g) Motive

[9261] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Motive — Motive for commission of crime — Relevance — Held, motive alone cannot form basis for conviction but in the light of other circumstances, motive goes a long way in forging links in chain of evidence — Rape and murder case — Appellant's advances towards deceased, his junior in college, and his subsequent frustration and anger when deceased did not respond positively — Held, amply proved appellant's motive for commission of crime

The motive stands proved beyond any doubt. It appears that as the appellant's overtures had been rebuffed by the deceased, he had resorted to harassing her in a manner which became more and more aggressive and crude as time went by. It is evident that the appellant was well aware of her family background and despite several complaints against him and the provision of a PSO, he had fearlessly and shamelessly pursued her right to the doorsteps of her residence ignoring the fact that she had first lived in the house of Lt. Col. S.K. Dhar, an army officer from the end of 1994 onwards and after January 1996 with her parents, her father too being a very senior officer in a semi-government organisation. (Paras 79 and 81). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

(h) Recovery of crime articles/ incriminating articles/other articles

[9262] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Murder and rape — Recovery of underwear stained with blood (Group B) and semen on information given by accused — But the same not produced and exhibited in court — Nothing to show that the same was of the accused — No evidence to show as to what was the blood group of the accused and therefore, possibility of blood on the underwear being of the accused himself not ruled out — Number and extent of spread of stains also not known — Held, recovery of stained underwear was not an incriminating circumstance

7.(i) Recovery of dead body/corpus delicti

In the present case the age of the accused was about 21 years at the time of the incident. On his arrest he was subjected to medical examination and found to be a potent and capable person. Presence of semen stain on underwear, assuming that the underwear belonged to the accused, though there is no evidence adduced in this regard, is not by itself an incriminating piece of evidence connecting the accused with the crime in question. So also the discovery of Group B bloodstain on the underwear cannot be treated as an incriminating piece of evidence against the accused connecting him with the crime because there is no evidence that the underwear belonged to the accused and further the possibility of the underwear being stained with the blood of the person to whom it belonged, or the accused if he was wearing it has not been ruled out. (Para 19) . Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2001]

Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 2 SCC 35: 1981 SCC (Cri) 315, relied on

(i) Recovery of dead body/corpus delicti

[9263] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder of a minor girl — Recovery of dead body at the instance of the accused — Circumstance not mentioned in inquest report — No panchnama prepared for the recovery made under S. 27, Evidence Act — No evidence showing that accused was present near the place where dead body was found — Though father of the victim and the investigating officer deposing about the circumstance of the recovery, their testimony contradictory and unacceptable — Held on facts, the circumstance not established. Jaharlal Das v. State of Orissa, (1991) 3 SCC 27: 1991 SCC (Cri) 527: AIR 1991 SC 1388: (1991) 2 Crimes 268: (1991) 72 CLT 298.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-1991]

8. Conduct of accused, prosecutrix, witnesses, etc.

See also 'C.4.(d) Credibility of prosecutrix/ witness', above

'C.11. Conviction on sole testimony of prosecutrix', and

'C.22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act', below

[9264] — S. 376 — Conduct of prosecutrix — Relevance — Resistance — Absence of — Inference — Held, would merely suggest want of violent resistance on part of prosecutrix and not consensus — Prosecutrix was forcibly caught, threatened at knife-point and thereafter gang raped — Non-resistance because of fear in such circumstances not unnatural (Paras 25, 26 and 46). Vijay v. State of M.P., (2010) 8 SCC 191: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2010]

Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793; Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185, followed

[9265] — Ss. 376, 363 and 302 — Rape and murder of minor — Minor incongruity — Though there is an incongruity in prosecution evidence regarding recovery of body and inquest thereof, held, there is strong evidence to show guilt of appellant — Clothes of deceased recovered with blood-stains and lacerated wound found on private parts with hymen completely ruptured — Doctor opining cause of death as asphyxiation — Clothes worn by appellant at time of incident recovered with bloodstains thereon, underwear recovered also having semen stains — No rational explanation could be given by appellant as to presence of said stains on his clothes — Appellant seen near time of alleged abduction of deceased with a girl child on his shoulder, mistaken to be a niece of the appellant by a witness (PW 7) — Held, even though PW 7 had not identified that the girl was the deceased, it is a serious incriminating circumstance, and appellant being an unmarried man, could not have been found at night with a girl — Circumstance clearly shows that he had kidnapped the child during the night — Moreover, previous conduct of appellant (having been rejected sexual favours by mother of deceased and admonished and scolded therefor by mother, uncle and brother of deceased, earlier in the night) though not strictly admissible in evidence, would prove that appellant was prone to do the crimes alleged — Hence, Sessions Judge and High Court appreciated evidence in correct perspective and found appellant guilty and there were no reasons to disbelieve this finding — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 8

The appellant was staying in one of the rooms of a building owned by the complainant K, a widow having three children. On 11-9-2002 at about 10 p.m., the appellant came to PW 2 K and offered Rs 150 and sought sexual favours. PW 2 got angry and she asked him to go away, but the appellant declined to leave the place. PW 2 told her brother and her son that the appellant had been harassing her. They came and scolded the appellant and he left the place. During the night, PW 2 along with her two minor daughters was sleeping on a cot lying outside the room. At about midnight she felt cold and went inside and at 1.00 o'clock she came back and then she saw that one of her daughters, namely, S was missing. She immediately called her brother and her son who were sleeping in another portion of the same house. They searched for S at nearby places, and as they had suspicion on the appellant, they went in search of him to his house but he was not found there. They made enquiry with PW 7. He stated that he had seen appellant going away with a girl on his shoulder but he thought that the girl must be the daughter of a relative of the appellant. The people in the locality collected and at about 4 o'clock in the morning they saw the appellant coming from a nearby road. PW 2 and others took him to the police station. It seems that he made certain revelations and PW 2 gave the FI statement and on the basis of the FI statement a case was registered and investigation was started.

The dead body of S was recovered from a pond. The body was found floating on the water and it was identified by relatives. An inquest was held on the dead body and on post-mortem examination it was found that there were a series of injuries on the body of deceased S. The clothes were stained with blood and some mud particles. There was lacerated wound on the private parts of the deceased, and the hymen was completely ruptured. The doctor opined that the victim must have died due to asphyxia.

Commuting the sentence of death to life imprisonment,

Held :

There is incongruity in the prosecution evidence regarding recovery of the body and the inquest of the dead body. PW 19, the investigating officer could not throw much light on this infirmity in the investigation. Therefore no importance is being given to the alleged recovery of dead body at the instance of the appellant. (Para 6)

However, there is strong evidence to show that the appellant committed the offence. According to the prosecution, the appellant was immediately arrested and brought to the police station. His clothes were recovered and sent for chemical examination. Items F, G, H and I are the shirt, banyan, pants and underwear respectively worn by the appellant at the time of incident. The chemical analyst's report shows that on Items F, G and H there were presence of bloodstains and Item I was also having bloodstains mixed with semen. The appellant could not give any rational explanation for the presence of bloodstains on his clothes. (Para 7)

Another circumstance is the evidence of PW 7. He went to bed and at about 1 a.m. he got up to answer the call of nature and came to the bathroom situated outside his house, then he found the appellant moving around and he was having a child on his shoulder. In the FI statement also reference has been made to the statement made by Rambaran. Of course PW 7 had not identified that the girl was deceased S. Nevertheless, it is a serious incriminating circumstance and the appellant being an unmarried man, he could not have been found at night with a girl and this circumstance clearly shows that the appellant had kidnapped the child during night for the purpose of commission of this crime. The dead body of deceased S was found in the early morning of 12-9-2002 and the appellant was arrested immediately and previous conduct also though not strictly admissible in evidence would prove that the appellant was prone to do such crime. The Sessions Judge as well as the High Court appreciated the evidence in the correct perspective had found the appellant guilty and there are no reasons to disbelieve this finding. (Paras 8 and 9). Surendra Pal Shivbalakpal v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 127: 2005 SCC (Cri) 653: AIR 2004 SC 4862: 2004 Cri LJ 4642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2004]

9. Confession

[9266] — Ss. 376, 302 and 392 — Extra-judicial confession — Confession made to doctor — Relied upon — Nothing on record to indicate that confessional statement made by appellant before doctor was made in the presence of any police personnel — No suggestion in cross-examination of doctor that at the time of examination of appellant for evidence of sexual intercourse either any force was used or any police personnel was present when he is said to have made confessional statement to doctor — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 24 (Paras 44 to 46 and 65). B.A. Umesh v. State of Karnataka, (2011) 3 SCC 85.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2011]

M.A. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2009) 6 SCC 220: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 959; Ram Singh v. Sonia, (2007) 3 SCC 1: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 1; Gura Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 2 SCC 205: 2001 SCC (Cri) 323, relied on

10. Conviction justified

[9267] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Conviction of appellant-accused under S. 376 — Challenge to — Sustainability — On facts, appellant pleading innocence before Supreme Court on grounds that there were certain suspicious circumstances —

Firstly, admittedly FIR was lodged at 11 a.m. but doctor claimed that she examined victim at 9.15 a.m. — Secondly, victim in her cross-examination clearly stated that her consent was there — Sustainability — Held, according to evidence on record, both pleas were without substance — Hence, appeal lacked merit (Paras 1, 5 and 7 to 11). Nehru v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2008) 7 SCC 341: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 96: AIR 2008 SC 2574: 2008 Cri LJ 3490.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-6-2008]

[9268] — S. 376 — Accused caught redhanded while in act of committing sexual intercourse with prosecutrix — Testimony of prosecutrix corroborated by evidence of her husband — Lower courts giving very cogent and convincing reasons for accepting testimony of eyewitnesses — No interference by Supreme Court called for — Constitution of India — Art. 136. Mehboob v. State of Maharashtra, 1990 Supp SCC 606: 1991 SCC (Cri) 216.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1987]

[9269] — S. 376 — Rape on married woman — Testimony of the victim of the rape corroborated by her immediate and subsequent conduct as also medical evidence — Testimony found to be truthful and trustworthy — Prosecutrix neither a woman of easy virtue nor having any grudge or reason to falsely implicate the accused — Non-examination of neighbour who had responded to her cry but was not a witness to the crime, held, not fatal — Held on facts, High Court seriously erred in reversing trial court's verdict of conviction, on the basis of wild surmises — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 374 and 386

According to the prosecutrix, at midnight during absence of her husband, the two accused-respondents entered her room by making a passage from the thatched roof. Both of them then closed the mouth of the prosecutrix and threatened her. They then subjected her to forcible sexual intercourse one after the other and thereafter, they made good their escape. The prosecutrix raised a cry whereupon one of the neighbours rushed towards her house. Next day the prosecutrix was carried in a trolley to the police station which is seven kilometres away from the place of occurrence. She lodged a report at 1030 hours in the morning. In the course of investigation the police seized the petticoat of the prosecutrix which she was wearing at the time of forcible sexual intercourse with her and also the kantha and mat on which she was sleeping. The prosecutrix was sent for medical examination and was found to have stains of human blood and semen and a bruise of 1 cm x 1 cm ¼ cm on the lateral side of the left of the genital channel. The bruise was found to have been caused within 24 hours. According to chemical examination report there was presence of blood and semen stains on the articles including petticoat sent for chemical examination. According to the trial Judge, the version of the prosecutrix was corroborated by the medical evidence and the evidence of the chemical report of the Forensic Science Laboratory. However, the High Court disbelieved the prosecutrix's version. With regard to injuries found on her private parts, the High Court observed that there was no evidence as to how long before and after the alleged offence the husband of the prosecutrix was absent and the possibility of her sexual contact with her husband could not be ruled out. The High Court also took note of the statement made in cross-examination by the doctor that the injury could be self-inflicted. It was observed that the possibility of semen being that of her husband could not be ruled out. It also saw some infirmity in the prosecution case as her neighbour who was alleged to have rushed towards her house after she had given a cry and when the accused ran away, was not examined as a witness. The High Court also took note of the omission of the investigating officer (PW 5) in not making any attempt to collect any evidence of forcible entry of the accused in the house through the roof. On the above reasoning the High Court acquitted the accused.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court discarded the apparent truthful testimony of the prosecutrix on wild surmises and strange reasoning. The High Court did not at all bestow any importance to the fact that the victim of the rape was not a woman of easy virtue. There has been no suggestion made to her in cross-examination or in the defence plea of the accused in the course of their examination under Section 313 CrPC that the prosecutrix had any grudge or reason to falsely implicate the two accused in such a heinous crime in which she herself was ravished and her honour was at stake. The High Court gave no importance to the report of the chemical examiner and serologist which showed blood and semen stains on the petticoat of the prosecutrix. It gave no importance to the fact that the trial Judge rejected the defence plea that the semen stains on the petticoat of the prosecutrix might have been caused by her physical contact with her husband. There was nothing to disbelieve, according to the trial Judge — the version of the prosecutrix that her husband had left the house on the previous afternoon and was absent at the time of incident and when she made the report to the police. The High Court then ventured into a wild surmise that the injury found on her private parts could have been self-inflicted. It is most unlikely that only to falsely implicate the accused the prosecutrix would inflict injury on her private parts. Non-examination of one of the neighbours who had rushed towards her house after hearing a call by her, is also not a serious infirmity in the prosecution case as he was not the witness of the commission of the offence. The testimony of the prosecutrix appears truthful and trustworthy being without any embellishments and exaggerations. She is corroborated by her immediate and subsequent conduct as also the medical evidence. Consequently, the judgment of acquittal passed by the High Court is set aside and the judgment of conviction and sentence of the trial court is restored. (Paras 7, 8 and 9). State of Orissa v. Thakara Besra, (2002) 9 SCC 86: AIR 2002 SC 1963: 2002 Cri LJ 2642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-4-2002]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on

Thakara Besra v. State, (1994) 2 Crimes 596 (Ori), reversed

[9270] — S. 376 — Rape proved by evidence — Evidence of prosecutrix corroborated — Conviction upheld

There is no doubt that the girl was criminally assaulted and suffered severe injuries as a result. She was examined 40 hours later and injuries were found on her person. It was argued that the lady doctor ought to have smear from the vagina to see if spermatozoa could be found. There was hardly any need. The witnesses found the clothes stained with semen and she had suffered injuries.

The law is that the evidence of the prosecutrix must be corroborated in some measure to connect the accused. Enough corroboration to the evidence of the prosecutrix is available in this case from the evidence of her nephew who gave the information to his grandmother immediately after the incident and also deposed on oath in Court. Janardhan Tewary v. State of Bihar, (1971) 3 SCC 927: 1972 SCC (Cri) 175.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M. Hidayatullah, C.J. and A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-1970]

relied on in (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793*

[9271] — Ss. 376, 323, 342 and 506 — Conviction upheld — Appellant-accused alleged to have raped the prosecutrix and threatened her with dire consequences in case she disclosed about the incident — Submission that evidence of doctor clearly established that no rape, was in fact committed and that the age of victim was about 18 years — Held, though prima facie it appeared that the doctor had opined that rape was not committed, it was, in fact, not so — On a closer reading of the evidence of PW 9, it is crystal clear that the doctor has, in fact, stated that sexual intercourse had occurred — Apart from that, presence of human semen and protozoa clearly establishes the allegation of rape — Question of age of victim was inconsequential as the stand of the accused was not one of consent, even then the documentary evidence adduced i.e. school certificate clearly showed that she was about 14 years of age — Further, stand of appellant that there was no corroboration of evidence of prosecutrix rejected — PW 1 had told about the alleged occurrence to PWs 2, 3 and 4 — Impugned judgment upholding conviction of appellant under Ss. 376 and 342 calls for no interference (Paras 3, 8 and 11 to 13). S. Ramakrishna v. State, (2009) 1 SCC 133: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 487: AIR 2009 SC 885: (2008) 71 AIC 66 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2008]

[9272] — Ss. 376(2)(e) and 375 — Rape — Conviction for, if proper — Appellant-accused alleged to have raped the prosecutrix after felling her to the ground while she, PW 8 and PW 2 were collecting cow dung in a "jungle"/"kokad" (land covered by bushes) — Testimony of prosecutrix and other PWs inspiring confidence — No motive imputed to her to falsely implicate the accused — Simple abrasions found on her person corroborating the version that she was felled to the ground and raped — No possibility that such injuries were self-inflicted, in absence of any evidence therefor and in view of clear and categorical case of the prosecution — Absence of any blood or stains of semen on the clothes of the prosecutrix or the appellant inconsequential as the clothes were seized and examined after four days of the occurrence — Conclusion of the trial court that it was consensual sexual intercourse, unwarranted and based solely on conjectures and suspicion, and hence perverse — Held, High Court was fully justified in setting aside judgment and order of the trial court and convicting the accused — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 378 and 386

Appellant-accused alleged to have raped one V (PW 1), a pregnant woman, after felling her to the ground when she had gone to a "jungle"/"kokad" (meaning land covered with bushes) to collect cow dung along with PW 2 and PW 8. The trial court acquitted the appellant finding that: (i) It was not possible to commit rape in an open field with a "rasta" nearby; (ii) No blood or broken bangles were found at the place of occurrence; (iii) Medical evidence did not support the prosecution case; (iv) Absence of any stains of semen on the clothes of the prosecutrix or the appellant; (v) Testimony of PW 2 and PW 8 (eyewitnesses) not inspiring confidence; and (vi) It was a consensual sexual course.

The High Court by the impugned judgment reversed the findings of the trial court and held the appellant guilty, and sentenced him to undergo 10 years' rigorous imprisonment and to pay a fine of Rs 1000 with default stipulation. Hence, the present appeal by the appellant-accused.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

No interference is called for with the reasoning of the High Court. (Para 5)

The trial court was unduly influenced by the fact that the occurrence took place in an open field and there was a "rasta" nearby and hence it was not possible to commit rape at such a location. The finding of the trial court is not supported by any evidence on record because the consistent evidence of the prosecution witnesses is that the place where the occurrence took place was a forest or at least a place where bushes were growing and, therefore, the trial court was not justified in jumping to the conclusion that it was an open field where the offence was committed. (Para 6)

The prosecutrix has fully supported the case of the prosecution. The fact that there was no bleeding or no broken bangles were found at the place of occurrence has been unduly exaggerated by the trial court to disbelieve the witness. There is no good reason to disbelieve the prosecutrix when she has fully supported the case against the appellant. It is not suggested that she had any enmity with the appellant or there was any particular reason for her to involve the appellant in this offence. Some far-fetched disputes were sought to be highlighted, but there is nothing on record to suggest that the prosecutrix or her husband had any motive to falsely implicate the appellant. (Para 7)

Further, the trial court was also impressed by the fact that the medical evidence does not support the case of the prosecution. This is also a finding contrary to the record. Some simple injuries were caused to the prosecutrix when she was felled on the ground and raped. The abrasions found on her person certainly corroborate the case of the prosecution. The fact that abrasions may also be caused by self-infliction is no ground for holding that in this case they were so caused, when there is direct evidence to the effect that she was pushed on the ground and rape was committed. The fact that in his cross-examination the doctor admitted that such injuries may be self-inflicted, is no basis for holding that the injuries were in fact self-inflicted, in the absence of any evidence to prove that. This is particularly so when the case of the prosecution is clear and categorical that the appellant caught the prosecutrix by her neck and felled her on the ground and committed rape. Therefore, the medical evidence does support the case of the prosecution. The absence of any stains of semen on the clothes of the prosecutrix or the appellant is of no consequence in this case since the clothes of the appellant were seized and examined after four days of the occurrence. (Para 8)

The trial court has really not recorded any convincing reason for not accepting the testimonies of PW 2 and PW 8. Their evidence appears to be natural having a ring of truth. Much was sought to be made of minor discrepancies in the evidence of the two eyewitnesses, which have been described as glaring contradictions. Some variation in matters of detail is but natural, and much depends on the capacity of a witness to observe and remember events, particularly in matters of minor details. Moreover, the two witnesses came from two different directions, and they may have observed the incident at different stages, though in quick succession. However, such minor discrepancies do not warrant rejection of their evidence. Their deposition is natural and consistent with the case of the prosecution and there is no reason to disbelieve them. (Para 9)

Lastly, there was no justification for the trial court to have concluded that it was sexual intercourse by consent. This finding is based solely on conjectures and suspicion. The medical evidence discloses that the internal wall of the vagina of the prosecutrix was congested, having reddish colour. In his cross-examination, the doctor did state that this could be caused by sexual intercourse in ordinary course. From this, the trial court jumped to the conclusion that since the prosecutrix, who was pregnant did not abort and gave birth to a normal healthy child after three months, this was a case in which it must be held that the prosecutrix was a consenting party. Such reasoning of the trial court is perverse. (Para 10)

The findings of the trial court are not such as could possibly be reached on the basis of the evidence on record, much less can they be said to be a possible reasonable view of the evidence on record. The High Court was, therefore, fully justified in setting aside the judgment and order of the trial court. (Para 10). Parbata v. State of Rajasthan, (2005) 13 SCC 398: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 252: AIR 2006 SC 747: 2006 Cri LJ 562.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-11-2005]

11. Conviction on sole testimony of prosecutrix

See also 'C.4.(d) Credibility of prosecutrix/witness', and

'C.8. Conduct of accused, prosecutrix, witnesses, etc.', above, and

'C.22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act', below

[9273] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Appreciation of evidence — False implication — Trial court believing the "straightforward" evidence of the prosecutrix and rejecting the defence put forward by the accused that in order to avoid repayment of loan taken by the husband of the prosecutrix from the employer, the prosecutrix had falsely implicated the accused — Moreover, the court treating one day delay in filing of FIR by the prosecutrix and her husband as not amounting to unexplained delay — In such circumstances, held, the trial court was right in recording the finding of guilt as well as in rejecting the defence

It is settled law that if a court of law finds evidence of prosecutrix truthful, trustworthy and reliable, conviction can be recorded solely on the basis of her testimony and no further corroboration is necessary. (Para 18)

The trial court rightly held that there was no unexplained delay in filing the complaint. The "straightforward" evidence of the prosecutrix was believed by the court and accordingly the accused was convicted. Therefore, it has to be held that in recording a finding of guilt against the respondent, the trial court had not committed any error, either of fact or of law. It is further held that the trial court rightly rejected the defence. (Paras 17 and 21). State of M.P. v. Babulal, (2008) 1 SCC 234: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2008 SC 582: 2008 Cri LJ 714.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2007]

Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728; State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781, relied on

12. Defence

[9274] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Appreciation of evidence — False implication — Trial court believing the "straightforward" evidence of the prosecutrix and rejecting the defence put forward by the accused that in order to avoid repayment of loan taken by the husband of the prosecutrix from the employer, the prosecutrix had falsely implicated the accused — Moreover, the court treating one day delay in filing of FIR by the prosecutrix and her husband as not amounting to unexplained delay — In such circumstances, held, the trial court was right in recording the finding of guilt as well as in rejecting the defence

It is settled law that if a court of law finds evidence of prosecutrix truthful, trustworthy and reliable, conviction can be recorded solely on the basis of her testimony and no further corroboration is necessary. (Para 18)

The trial court rightly held that there was no unexplained delay in filing the complaint. The "straightforward" evidence of the prosecutrix was believed by the court and accordingly the accused was convicted. Therefore, it has to be held that in recording a finding of guilt against the respondent, the trial court had not committed any error, either of fact or of law. It is further held that the trial court rightly rejected the defence. (Paras 17 and 21). State of M.P. v. Babulal, (2008) 1 SCC 234: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2008 SC 582: 2008 Cri LJ 714.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2007]

Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728; State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781, relied on [9275] — Ss. 376 and 506 — Rape — False implication — Plea of — Sustainability — Accused was teacher of victim — Stand of accused that he was falsely implicated because the brother of the victim was not successful in the examination and therefore his family had grudge against him, held, unacceptable — The incident involving the accused and mother and brother of the victim took place about a decade back — Not even a remote possibility of the same being the foundation for false implication — That apart, no girl of a tender age and her parents would like to jeopardise her entire future by falsely implicating a person alleging forcible sexual intercourse — Hence contention regarding false implication rejected (Para 22). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

[9276] — S. 376(2)(f) — False implication alleged in a rape case on the ground of enmity — Neither nature of enmity nor gravity of the same stated — Fact of false implication, held, not established — CrPC, 1973, S. 313 (Para 7). State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699: 2004 Cri LJ 2109.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

13. Dying declaration

[9277] — S. 376 r/w Ss. 302 and 511 — Rape and murder alleged — Improbable prosecution case — Unreliable dying declaration — Both deceased and accused-appellant found lying in a pool of blood in appellant's room having suffered serious injuries — Deceased found totally naked and underclothes of both the deceased and appellant found in the same room — Appellant and deceased had love affair and deceased had gone to appellant's place alone — Deceased taken to hospital by her brother (PW 5) where she was found dead — Complaint given by PW 5 to police which formed the basis of formal FIR — In the complaint PW 5, after stating that deceased had told him that appellant had tried to rape her and on her refusal he had stripped and stabbed her, adding his own assessment that deceased died due to deep head injuries caused by appellant and that appellant had thereafter tried to kill himself — Last words in the complaint that appellant had also tried to commit suicide by stabbing himself in the stomach appeared to have been inserted later — But on the basis of medical evidence serious nature of injuries found on appellant cannot be said to be self-inflicted — Having regard to facts and circumstances of the case, held, the uncorroborated alleged oral dying declaration was unreliable — Prosecution case of rape and murder of deceased by appellant appears to be improbable — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32

In the absence of explanation as to the serious nature of injuries sustained by the appellant giving rise to serious doubt as to the very genesis of the incident, the last portion of the statement in the complaint of PW 5 (wherein he had said that the deceased died due to deep head injuries caused by the appellant, who also tried to kill himself by stabbing in the stomach) appears to have been inserted after deliberation and consultation. This insertion probabilises the defence version that the appellant and the deceased were in love. The very fact that the deceased was totally naked and the underclothes of both the deceased and the appellant were found in the same room probabilises the theory of intercourse by consent and negatives the story of rape. The story that the appellant tried to kill himself by jumping from the upper floor cannot also be accepted. That apart, in the earliest version given in the report given to the police by PW 5, there is no mention about the appellant jumping from the upper floor. In view of the injuries found on the deceased and the defence taken by the appellant that she died on the spot and in the absence of any other evidence except the statement of PW 5, it is difficult to accept that the deceased was alive or at any rate she was in a position to make the statement to PW 5 as sought to be made out. The theory that the appellant tried to kill himself does not appear to be probable as both PW 4 and PW 5 admitted that the deceased and the appellant knew each other; the deceased voluntarily went to the house of the appellant to say goodbye, since she was going back to her country. In this background it appears improbable that the appellant forcefully tried to rape the deceased. It appears that both the appellant and the deceased may have been in a compromising position and were surprised and attacked by an assailant. Since the injuries found on the appellant could not be said to be self-inflicted, his defence that he sustained injuries at the hands of an unknown person when he tried to save the deceased, appears to be probable. It was enough to show that the defence was probable in the given circumstances. In this case the defence statement is probabilised by the surrounding circumstances and the evidence brought on record. The so-called dying declaration does not appear to be in the words of the deceased. It does not inspire confidence. There was considerable delay in registering the FIR and the explanation given for the delay is not convincing. Further, except the interested statement of PW 5 there is no other evidence to corroborate the dying declaration. Having regard to all these infirmities, improbabilities and contradictions found in the case, it is unsafe to act upon the said dying declaration. (Paras 7 to 9). Ronald Kiprono Ramkat v. State of Haryana, (2001) 6 SCC 423: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1034: AIR 2001 SC 2488.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-2001]

14. Examination

[9278] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape trial — Appreciation of evidence — Non-examination of material witnesses — Held, is not always fatal to the prosecution case — Facts and circumstances of each case have to be considered — Adverse inference permissible only if available evidence suffers from some infirmity or is unacceptable in the absence of other evidence — Minor girls, related both to accused and victim, were eyewitnesses to a rape incident but not examined by the prosecution — Family consideration were the probable cause for their non-examination — Held, prosecution story could not be discarded on this count — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (g)

Prosecutrix stated that soon before the incident she was playing with three girl-children of the same age as hers, and they were present when the accused committed rape on her. One of the girls picked up a broom and tried to scare away the accused by striking the broom on him. This girl also raised a hue and cry but none from the neighbourhood came to the spot.

Held :

Non-examination of a material witness is not a mathematical formula for discarding weight of testimony available on record howsoever natural, trustworthy and convincing it may be. Withholding a material prosecution witness should be considered in the background of facts and circumstances of each case so as to find whether the witnesses were available for being examined in the court and were yet withheld by the prosecution. The court has first to assess the trustworthiness of evidence adduced and available on record. If court finds the evidence adduced worthy of being relied on, then testimony has to be accepted and acted upon, though there may be other witnesses available who could also have been examined but were not examined. However, if available evidence suffers from some infirmity or cannot be accepted in the absence of other evidence which though available has been withheld from the Court then the question of drawing an adverse inference against the prosecution for non-examination of such witness may arise. (Para 14)

The accused in the present case being a relation of the in-laws of the mother of the prosecutrix and the other young girls being from family of in-laws, it was futile to expect that the girls of tender age would have been allowed by their parents to be examined as witnesses, and if allowed, could have freely deposed to, in the court. The question of drawing an adverse inference against the prosecution for such non-examination does not arise. (Para 14). State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980: AIR 2001 SC 2075.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898; State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147; Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598, relied on

Gian Chand v. State of H.P., (1996) 2 Crimes 213 (HP), reversed

[9279] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape trial — Non-examination of witness — Held, undoubtedly, non-examination of material witnesses may go against the prosecution in some cases but not in all cases — On facts held, such non-examination was not material having regard to the evidence brought on record, particularly the evidence of victim girl herself. Ayub Hussain Mandal v. State of Assam, (2007) 15 SCC 549.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Shivaraj V. Patil and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2002]

[9280] — S. 376 — Failure of prosecution to produce witness to whom prosecution narrated her story after the rape — Held, on facts, not fatal in view of the remaining evidence

It would have been better if she would have been examined. However, no dent is caused in the case of the prosecution by her non-examination. She would have repeated the same story as had been narrated by the father of the prosecutrix. State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898: AIR 2000 SC 1812: 2000 Cri LJ 2205.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

State of Punjab v. Gurmeet Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 SCR 377: 1952 Cri LJ 547; Sidheswar Ganguly v. State of W.B., AIR 1958 SC 143: 1958 Cri LJ 273; Madho Ram v. State of U.P., (1973) 1 SCC 533: 1973 SCC (Cri) 417; State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598; State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781; Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; Bodhisattwa Gautam v. Subhra Chakraborty, (1996) 1 SCC 490: 1996 SCC (Cri) 133; Sk. Zakir v. State of Bihar, (1983) 4 SCC 10: 1983 SCC (Cri) 76; Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, (1987) 2 SCC 27: 1987 SCC (Cri) 249; Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977, relied on

[9281] — S. 376 — Rape — Appreciation of evidence — Non-examination of some persons — Effect — Victim, a mentally deficient girl — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 134

Non-examination of some persons per se does not corrode the vitality of the prosecution version, particularly when the prosecutrix has, notwithstanding her mental deficiencies, withstood incisive cross-examination and pointed to the appellant as the perpetrator of the crime. (Para 6). Tulshidas Kanolkar v. State of Goa, (2003) 8 SCC 590.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-2003]

15. FIR

(a) Generally

[9282] — S. 376(2)(g) — Evidentiary value of FIR — Prosecutrix naming Accused 4 in FIR but neither identifying him in Court nor naming him in her deposition — Held, the allegations, made in FIR are not evidence — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 154 and 164 — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 145 and 9

The prosecutrix, a coolie, was gang raped while on her way back from a movie at about 10.00 p.m. on 20-11-1994. Her brother, P who was slapped, ran for help and when he returned with other villagers, found her sister lying unconscious and naked. FIR was lodged at about 7.00 p.m. on 21-11-1994 after the victim regained her consciousness. The conviction of six accused persons under Section 376(2)(g) IPC was upheld by the High Court.

Allowing the appeal of Accused 4 to 6 and dismissing the appeal of Accused 1 to 3,

Held :

The allegations made in the first information report are not evidence. Naming some of the accused persons in the first information report and not naming them in the course of deposition casts a serious doubt. The prosecutrix might have named four persons, namely, Accused 1 to 4 in the FIR, but, she named only Accused 1 to 3 in her deposition. She neither named nor identified Accused 4 to 6. On what basis, therefore, their guilt is said to have been established is not known. Both, the learned trial Judge as also the High Court, in their judgments did not deal with this aspect of the matter. (Paras 16 and 18). Viswanathan v. State, (2008) 5 SCC 354: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 593: AIR 2008 SC 2222.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2008]

Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185, relied on

[9283] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 302, 201 and 120-B — FIR — Contents of — Eyewitness' account of incident not incorporated in complaint lodged with police — Whether fatal to prosecution — Held, not fatal since complainant and eyewitness had not talked with each other prior to filing of FIR (Paras 13 to 15). State of Rajasthan v. Hanif Khan, (2009) 3 SCC 549: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 161: AIR 2009 SC 2043: 2009 Cri LJ 1765.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-2009]

(b) Delay in lodging/filing FIR

See in detail under S. 154, CrPC, 1973 in Vol. 16, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 1 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

[9284] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Delay in filing FIR — Effect — Delay, held, by itself is not fatal to the prosecution case but requires satisfactory explanation — Delay in filing FIR in rape cases is normal especially when the perpetrator is a relative — A village girl of the age of 5 years 6 months, complaining commission of rape on her at about 6.30 p.m. on 29-10-1991 while her widow mother was away — The accused (appellant) was a relative — FIR lodged by mother on 31-10-1991 in the morning — In the intervening period, the mother discussed the incident with her in-laws who in turn called upon respondent's father — The matter was reported to police when it was not settled within the family — Held, the sequence of events as projected by the prosecution sounded quite natural and provided satisfactory explanation for the delay — Prosecution story could not therefore be disbelieved on the ground of delay — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

Delay in lodging FIR cannot be used as a ritualistic formula for doubting the prosecution case and discarding it. Delay has the effect of putting the court on its guard to search if any explanation has been offered, and if offered, whether or not it is satisfactory. If prosecution fails to satisfactorily explain the delay and there is possibility of embellishment in the prosecution version on account of such delay, the delay would be fatal to the prosecution case. However, if the delay is explained to the satisfaction of the court, it cannot by itself be a ground for disbelieving and discarding the entire prosecution case. The accused, in the present case, is a close relation of prosecutrix's late father. The mother obviously needed her in-laws to accompany her or at least to help her in lodging an FIR. The incident having occurred in a village, the approach of in-laws displayed rusticity in first calling upon father of the accused. It remained an unpleasant family affair on the next day of the incident which was tried to be settled, if it could be, within the walls of the family. That failed. It is thereafter only that the complainant who is a widow, left all by herself and having no male family member willing to accompany her, proceeded alone to the police station. She was lent moral support by the village Panch, whereupon report of the incident was lodged. The sequence of events soon after the crime provide a satisfactory explanation for the delay. The High Court has not looked into the explanation offered and very superficially recorded a finding of the delay having remained unexplained. It is common knowledge and also judicially noted fact that incidents like rape, more so when the perpetrator of the crime happens to be a member of the family or related therewith, involve the honour of the family and therefore there is a reluctance on the part of victim's family to report the matter to police and carry it to the court. A cool thought may precede lodging of FIR. The delay has been satisfactorily explained in this case and therefore it does not cause any dent in the prosecution case. (Para 12). State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980: AIR 2001 SC 2075.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Harpal Singh v. State of H.P., (1981) 1 SCC 560: 1981 SCC (Cri) 208, relied on

Gian Chand v. State of H.P., (1996) 2 Crimes 213 (HP), reversed

[9285] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Delay in lodging FIR — When does not affect prosecution case — In instant case of gang rape, delay in lodging FIR stood properly explained — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

When FIR by a Hindu lady is to be lodged with regard to commission of offence like rape, many questions would obviously crop up for consideration before one finally decides to lodge the FIR. It is difficult to appreciate the plight of the victim who has been criminally assaulted in such a manner. Obviously, the victim must have also gone through great turmoil and only after giving it a serious thought, must have decided to lodge the FIR. Precisely this appears to be the reason for little delayed FIR. The delay was found to be properly explained by both the courts below. (Para 13). Sohan Singh v. State of Bihar, (2010) 1 SCC 68.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2009]

[9286] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape of a minor — Appreciation of medical evidence — No semen detected on person or clothes of prosecutrix, but hymen found absent — Injuries detected on her private parts despite passage of a long time — Inference of partial/incomplete penetration — Offence of rape if made out — Effect of discrepancies in evidence of prosecutrix — Appellant alleged to have gagged mouth of prosecutrix aged about 11 years, and sexually assaulted her — On hearing her aunt's (PW 5) voice, accused fleeing away — No semen detected on any of the exhibits sent to chemical examiner — However, hymen found absent — Prosecutrix medically examined after a long time — Despite long passage of time (about 80 hours) injuries found on her private parts — Though the doctor failing to state specifically anything as regards actual intercourse, she testifying that there had been attempt to commit rape — PW 5 had detected the accused committing the offence, and he had fled away on hearing her voice — Thus, the act was incomplete — Evidence of PW 5 was found reliable by courts below — Hence, held, conclusion of High Court that absence of hymen clearly indicated that there was penetration, or that penetration may have been partial with no emission of semen, calls for no interference — Medical evidence in such cases needs to be appreciated in context of ocular evidence and other circumstances surrounding thereto — Discrepancies in evidence of prosecutrix also inconsequential, because she was a minor — Besides, there was time gap between occurrence and examination of witnesses — Hence, lapse of some memory on part of child witness possible — Delay in lodging FIR was also a natural phenomenon in rape cases — Conviction of appellant under S. 376, sustainable — CrPC, 1973, S. 154 (Paras 10, 14, 17 to 21). Satyapal v. State of Haryana, (2009) 6 SCC 635: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 108: AIR 2009 SC 2190: (2009) 77 AIC 66 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-2009]

Satyapal v. State of Haryana, 2007 Cri LJ 2095 (P&H), affirmed

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, 23rd Edn., at pp. 897 and 928, relied on [9287] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape trial — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — Held on facts, was not fatal — In cases involving offence of rape, the victim or her family members hesitate to file a complaint as there are other factors to be considered — Besides, no cross-examination on this aspect was made — CrPC, 1973, S. 154. Ayub Hussain Mandal v. State of Assam, (2007) 15 SCC 549.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Shivaraj V. Patil and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2002]

[9288] — Ss. 375, 376 and 366 — Rape — Delay in lodging/Filing FIR — Case of taking away victim fraudulently and subjecting her to rape by appellant-accused and forcing her to indulge in prostitution by coercion — Delay was bound to occur as FIR was filed only after return of victim from her captivity after one-and-a-half years — Reasons for which she could not come back or inform her parents, held, stood well explained by victim that she was given threat by appellant that dead body of some other girl had been identified by her parents to be of the victim and thus if she went back, her parents would be in difficulty — She had been living under a constant threat and could not muster courage to inform any person — CrPC, 1973, Section 154 (Paras 14 and 13). Fateh Chand v. State of Haryana, (2009) 15 SCC 543: AIR 2009 SC 2729: (2009) 81 AIC 216 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 3942.

15.(b) Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

[9289] — S. 376 — Child rape — Appreciation of evidence — Delay of 26 hours in lodging FIR fully explained by prosecution — When testimony of the prosecutrix and her relatives and the doctor, who had examined her, found to be trustworthy, convincing and reliable, non-examination of other witnesses cannot be a ground to reject the prosecution case — It cannot be expected from the mother of the victim to have shouted on seeing the accused committing the rape so as to collect others, nor can it be expected that after the occurrence in the village others would have visited her house who would stand as prosecution witnesses — Courts should adopt a sensitive approach in dealing with cases of child rape — On facts held, trial court by a well-considered and well-analysed judgment was justified in convicting the respondent under S. 376 and High Court erred in reversing the same and acquitting the respondent on benefit of doubt

According to the testimony of PW 2, her daughter, then aged 8 years, had gone to the house of one S to take therefrom buttermilk. When her daughter did not return for a long time, she went to that house and when she pressed open the door which was closed, she found the respondent, son of S then aged 18 years, committing rape on her daughter, who was totally unconscious. On seeing her the respondent, who was then alone in the house, ran away. She lifted her daughter and brought her back home. At that time her husband and brother-in-law had gone to another village. Next day a report was lodged with the police. Besides the mother (PW 2), the father of the prosecutrix (PW 1) and wife of the brother of PW 1 also deposed supporting the version of PW 2. Prosecutrix, PW 5, being a child witness, the Additional District and Sessions Judge before administering her oath asked general questions so as to satisfy that she was competent to answer the questions and take oath. Her statement in court was recorded about four years after the date of the incident. Her deposition also was that the respondent had committed rape on her under the same circumstances as narrated by PW 2. The testimony of the doctor, PW 11, who had examined the prosecutrix was that externally there was no injury on her body but on the inner parts of both thighs and at the outer part of the left foot there were signs of blood. For internal examination she was referred to Family Incharge Hospital. The injury report was in his handwriting wherein the reports of a lady doctor and another doctor had been incorporated. PW 11 stated that: "In my opinion, the intercourse was done with the girl i.e. the possibility of doing the intercourse cannot be ruled out." The tip of the finger in the whole of her uterus was passing easily. PW 11 deposed that: "According to the opinion of the lady doctor, the opinion of the pathologist and my opinion of the examination, something was penetrated in her vagina." The only cross-examination of the witness was that the main examination report by the lady and the other doctors was not before him, that the seminal stains were not present on the clothes and that after the sexual contact the vagina remained intact. The Additional District and Sessions Judge found the respondent guilty for offence under Section 376 of the Indian Penal Code and imposed rigorous imprisonment for seven years and fine of Rs 1000 and in default of payment of fine to further undergo six months' rigorous imprisonment. The High Court gave benefit of doubt to the respondent and acquitted him. The main reasons which prevailed with the High Court in reversing the conviction were two. First, the non-examination of other independent witnesses and second, the rejection of medical evidence i.e. testimony of the doctor, PW 11. As regards non-examination of other witnesses, the High Court noticed that the incident had taken place in the environment of the village where there were other residential houses; the house of the prosecutrix from where the incident took place was 2-3 houses away and in the house of the accused his other brothers and sisters-in-law were also living. The High Court held that it was unnatural that PW 2 and PW 5 would not have shouted and others might not have gathered at the place of incidence and that, except the family members no other witness had come forward to support the case of the prosecution. The High Court also described as unnatural the statement of the mother that except her husband's brother's wife, PW 4, not a single person of the village had come to her house. As regards the second reason the High Court held that in absence of the evidence of the lady doctor, there was no support from any medical evidence. The prosecution case was also questioned on the ground of delay of nearly 26 hours in lodging the FIR. The offence was alleged to have taken place at about 9 a.m. The FIR was registered at about 11.30 a.m. on the next day. It was contended that this delay had assumed importance and was fatal particularly when the brother of the prosecutrix, was admittedly at the house. The delay, according to the defence counsel, resulted in embellishments.

Allowing the State's appeal,

Held :

As regards the contention regarding the delay in lodging the FIR, the real question is about the explanation for the delay. It is not at all unnatural for the family members to await the arrival of the elders in the family when an offence of this nature is committed before taking a decision to lodge a report with the police. The reputation and prestige of the family and the career and life of a young child is involved in such cases. Therefore, the presence of the brother of the prosecutrix at home is not of much consequence. It has been established that the father of the girl along with his brother came back to their house at 7 o'clock in the evening. The girl was unconscious during the day. PW 2 told her husband as to what had happened to their daughter. The police station was at a distance of 15 km. According to the testimony of PW 1 no mode of conveyance was available. The police was reported to the next day morning and FIR was recorded at 11.30 a.m. The delay in reporting the matter to the police has thus been fully explained. (Para 9)

The conviction for offence under Section 376 IPC can be based on the sole testimony of a rape victim. However, after carefully scanning and scrutinising the evidence of the parents of the prosecutrix, her brother, the prosecutrix herself and the doctor (PW 11), the same is found to be trustworthy, convincing and reliable. At the time of the incident the accused was alone at home. When such an act is done, the natural tendency is not to talk about it to others but, to an extent possible, hide it. There was nothing unnatural in other villagers not visiting the house of PWs 1 and 2. Being a child witness, the testimony of the prosecutrix and that of her mother had been examined by the trial court with utmost care and caution. The High Court has clearly committed a serious illegality in assuming that in the natural course of events if rape had been committed, the young girl child and her mother would have shouted so as to collect others and they would have visited her house. The prosecutrix was unconscious. There was no question of the prosecutrix shouting as assumed by the High Court. Too much was made by the High Court on account of non-examination of persons other than the family members. The aspect of non-examination was given undue importance without having regard to the contextual facts. Cases involving sexual molestation and assault require a different approach — a sensitive approach and not an approach which a court may adopt in dealing with a normal offence under penal laws. (Para 15)

The evidence of the doctor, PW 11 is clear and specific. He was the author of the report. Though ideally the lady doctor could have been examined or her absence explained but that does not destroy the prosecution case, which otherwise stands proved. The High Court was clearly in error in coming to the conclusion that in the absence of evidence of the lady doctor there was no support from any medical evidence. She had reported to PW 11, who categorically stated that in his opinion, on examination, something had been penetrated in the vagina of the prosecutrix and that intercourse was done with the girl i.e. the possibility of doing intercourse cannot be ruled out. For no valid reason the High Court discarded the evidence of the doctor. (Para 16)

The evidence of a child witness is required to be evaluated carefully as the child may be swayed by what others may tell him or her as the child is an easy prey to tutoring. Wisdom requires that the evidence of a child witness must find adequate corroboration before it is relied on. In this case the evidence of the child (PW 5) and the other evidence had been examined carefully and it had been found that the reasons given by the High Court for rejecting the said evidence were wholly unconvincing. It is unfortunate that what to talk of considering, the High Court has not even noticed the testimony of the prosecutrix in the judgment under appeal. (Para 17)

There is no force in the contention that if there was any forcible sexual intercourse, it would have resulted in some injuries upon the prosecutrix. Presence of injuries are not always a sine qua non to prove a charge of rape. It has to be kept in mind that the case under consideration is one of rape on a girl child aged eight years and not on a grown-up woman. (Para 18)

Child rape cases are cases of perverse lust for sex where even innocent children are not spared in pursuit of sexual pleasure. It is a crime against humanity. In such cases, responsibility on the shoulders of the courts is more onerous so as to provide proper legal protection to these children. Their physical and mental immobility call for such protection. Children are the natural resource of our country. They are the country's future. Hope of tomorrow rests on them. In our country, a girl child is in a very vulnerable position and one of the modes of her exploitation is rape besides other modes of sexual abuse. These factors point towards a different approach required to be adopted. It is necessary for the courts to have a sensitive approach when dealing with cases of child rape. The effect of such a crime on the mind of the child is likely to be lifelong. A special safeguard has been provided for children in the Constitution of India in Article 39.

15.(b) Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

The overturning of a well-considered and well-analysed judgment of the trial court on grounds like non-examination of other witnesses, when the case against the respondent otherwise stood established beyond any reasonable doubt, was not called for. The minor contradiction of recovery of one or two underwears was wholly insignificant. (Paras 19 and 1)

Lastly, it is not possible to accept the contention on behalf of the respondent that the incident took place about 13 years back and by now the accused has matured and would be around 31 years of age and having already undergone nearly three years of sentence, the same may be treated by the Supreme Court as sufficient punishment to him and, therefore, taking a sympathetic view, the sentence already undergone be imposed. The trial court imposed on the respondent a sentence of seven years' rigorous imprisonment besides fine. Having played with the life of a child, the respondent does not deserve any leniency and for him sympathy on the ground sought for will be wholly uncalled for. The respondent deserves to undergo the remaining part of the sentence awarded by the trial court. (Para 20). State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980; State of U.P. v. Ashok Dixit, (2000) 3 SCC 70: 2000 SCC (Cri) 579, relied on

Joseph v. State of Kerala, (2000) 5 SCC 197: 2000 SCC (Cri) 926, distinguished

[9290] — S. 376 — Delay in filing FIR — By itself not fatal to the prosecution case, if the delay is explained to the satisfaction of the court — Incident of rape taking place on Oct. 1 but reported to the police on Oct. 5 — Initial hesitation on the part of victim's father to give publicity as also other factors such as likelihood of communal tension etc. stated as reasons for the delay — Held, on facts explanation acceptable — Hence prosecution case cannot be wholly disbelieved merely on ground of such delay — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

A mere delay in lodging the FIR cannot be a ground by itself for throwing the entire prosecution case overboard. The court has to seek an explanation for delay and test the truthfulness and plausibility of the reason assigned. If the delay is explained to the satisfaction of the court it cannot be counted against the prosecution. (Para 15)

In the present case it is true that the incident dated 1-10-1993 was reported to the police on 5-10-1993. The prosecutrix was a married woman. Her muklana ceremony had not taken place. Muklana ceremony is a rural custom prevalent in Rajasthan, whereunder the bride is left with the parents after marriage having been performed and is taken away by the husband and/or the in-laws to live with them only after a lapse of time. The origin of the custom owes its existence to performance of child-marriages which are widely prevalent there. The muklana was yet to take place. The prosecutrix was a virgin prior to the commission of the crime and this fact finds support from the medical evidence. The parents of such a prosecutrix would obviously be chary to such an incident gaining publicity because it would have serious implications for the reputation of the family and also on the married life of the victim. The husband and the in-laws having become aware of the incident may even refuse to carry the girl to reside with them. The incident if publicised may have been an end to the marriage of the prosecutrix. Added to this is the communal tinge which was sought to be given by the community of the accused. (The accused and the prosecutrix belonged to different communities.) The father of the prosecutrix and other witnesses have stated that while they were about to move to the police station they were prevented from doing so by the community fellows of the accused who persuaded them not to lodge a report with the police and instead to have the matter settled by convening a panchayat of the village people. After all the family of the victim had to live in the village in spite of the incident having taken place. The explanation is not an afterthought. An indication thereof is to be found in the FIR itself where the complainant stated — "the delay in lodging the report is due to village panchayat, insult and social disrepute". Nothing has been brought out in the cross-examination of the witnesses to doubt the truth and reasonableness of the explanation so offered. (Para 14). State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898: AIR 2000 SC 1812: 2000 Cri LJ 2205.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781; State of Punjab v. Gurmeet Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977, relied on

[9291] — S. 376 — Delay in lodging FIR — Effect — Factors that usually cause delay in such matters considered — Held, though mere delay in lodging of the report may not by itself be fatal to the case of the prosecution, but the delay has to be considered in the background of the facts and circumstances in each case and is a matter of appreciation of evidence by the court of fact — Circumstances under which delay may be condoned, stated — On facts, further held, FIR was lodged eight days after the alleged occurrence, for which no satisfactory explanation was rendered — Hence, appellants given benefit of doubt — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

In the light of the totality of the evidence, the court of fact has to consider whether the delay in lodging the report adversely affects the case of the prosecution. That is a matter of appreciation of evidence. There may be cases where there is direct evidence to explain the delay. Even in the absence of direct explanation there may be circumstances appearing on record which provide a reasonable explanation for the delay. There are cases where much time is consumed in taking the injured to the hospital for medical aid and, therefore, the witnesses find no time to lodge the report promptly. There may also be cases where on account of fear and threats, witnesses may avoid going to the police station immediately. The time of occurrence, the distance to the police station, mode of conveyance available, are all factors which have a bearing on the question of delay in lodging of the report. (Para 24)

It is also possible to conceive of cases where the victim and the members of his or her family belong to such a strata of society that they may not even be aware of their right to report the matter to the police and seek legal action, nor was any such advice available to them. (Para 24)

In the case of sexual offences there is another consideration which may weigh in the mind of the court i.e. the initial hesitation of the victim to report the matter to the police which may affect her family life and family's reputation. Very often in such cases only after considerable persuasion the prosecutrix may be persuaded to disclose the true facts. There are also cases where the victim may choose to suffer the ignominy rather than to disclose the true facts which may cast a stigma on her for the rest of her life. These are cases where the initial hesitation of the prosecutrix to disclose the true facts may provide a good explanation for the delay in lodging the report. In the ultimate analysis, what is the effect of delay in lodging the report with the police is a matter of appreciation of evidence, and the court must consider the delay in the background of the facts and circumstances of each case. Different cases have different facts and it is the totality of evidence and the impact that it has on the mind of the court that is important. No straitjacket formula can be evolved in such matters, and each case must rest on its own facts. (Para 24). Ramdas v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 2 SCC 170: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 546: AIR 2007 SC 155: (2007) 49 AIC 418 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2006]

[9292] — S. 376 — Rape — Acquittal — Delay in filing FIR, effect of — Acquittal on the ground that FIR was delayed thus the prosecutrix may be a consenting party as she was above 16 years of age — Absence of explanation in filing delayed FIR, does not per se apply to cases of rape, reiterated (Para 3). State of U.P. v. Manoj Kumar Pandey, (2009) 1 SCC 72: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 244: AIR 2009 SC 711: (2009) 1 ECrN 862 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2008]

[9293] — S. 376 — Rape — Delay in lodging complaint — Case solely based on evidence of prosecutrix — Complaint made by prosecutrix seven months after the alleged commission of rape on her by appellant — At the time of filing the complaint prosecutrix was carrying child of seven months — Prosecutrix explained that initially she had not protested in view of appellant's promise to marry her but on appellant's refusal to her proposal for marriage at the stage of her seven months' pregnancy, she filed the complaint — Held, prosecutrix having waited for seven months for filing FIR, in absence of any other supporting evidence it would be unsafe to convict appellant wholly on the basis of testimony of the prosecutrix

In cases where the sole testimony of the prosecutrix is available, it is very dangerous to convict the accused, specially when the prosecutrix could venture to wait for seven months for filing the FIR for rape. This leaves the accused totally defenceless. Had the prosecutrix lodged the complaint soon after the incident, there would have been some supporting evidence like the medical report or any other injury on the body of the prosecutrix so as to show the sign of rape. If the prosecutrix has willingly submitted herself to sexual intercourse and waited for seven months for filing the FIR it will be very hazardous to convict on such sole oral testimony. Moreover, no DNA test was conducted to find out whether the child was born out of the said incident of rape and that the appellant-accused was responsible for the said child. In the face of lack of any other evidence, it is unsafe to convict the accused. Therefore, the view taken by the trial court and the Single Judge of the High Court in convicting the appellant-accused under Section 376 IPC cannot be sustained. (Para 5). Vijayan v. State of Kerala, (2008) 14 SCC 763: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 585.

15.(b) Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-7-2008]

[9294] — S. 376 — Rape — Delay in lodging FIR — Effect of — FIR lodged after about four months of commission of offence — Panchayat had intervened and it pressurised complainant to compromise — Panchayat met several times — Fine of Rs 1100 imposed on appellant — Complainant had demanded that appellant be fined to the tune of Rs 5000 and be taken in procession after blackening his face and be paraded in village — Demand not accepted by Panchayat — Ultimately complainant raised grievance before SP — Report lodged on instruction of SP — Held, delay in lodging FIR has been satisfactorily explained — Delay in lodging FIR in sexual offences has to be considered with a different yardstick (Paras 10 to 18). Satpal Singh v. State of Haryana, (2010) 8 SCC 714: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1081: (2010) 93 AIC 50 (SC): 2010 Cri LJ 4283.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2010]

Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of A.P. v. M. Madhusudhan Rao, (2008) 15 SCC 582: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1123; Satyapal v. State of Haryana, (2009) 6 SCC 635: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 108; State of H.P. v. Prem Singh, (2009) 1 SCC 420: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 351, relied on

[9295] — S. 376 — Rape — Delay of about 17-18 days in lodging the FIR — On facts, explained — Hence, did not prove fatal — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

Delay in lodging the FIR cannot be used as a ritualistic formula for doubting the prosecution case and discarding the same solely on the ground of delay in lodging the first information report. Delay has the effect of putting the court on its guard to search if any explanation has been offered for the delay, and if offered, whether it is satisfactory or not. If the prosecution fails to satisfactorily explain the delay and there is possibility of embellishment in the prosecution version on account of such delay, the same would be fatal to the prosecution. However, if the delay is explained to the satisfaction of the court, the same cannot by itself be a ground for disbelieving and discarding the entire prosecution version, as was done by the High Court in the present case. (Para 9)

The evidence of PWs 4 and 5 read with that of the victim clearly explained as to why the first information report was lodged after 17-18 days. The evidence of the aforesaid three witnesses clearly shows that PW 5 (father of victim) was seriously ill and the family members did not want to create tension in his mind when he was not physically well and waited for his recovery. In spite of the lengthy cross-examination this aspect has not been shaken by the defence. The view of the High Court that PW 4 should have told some respectable person or the father earlier to say the least is a view which has no foundation and overlooks the very reason to shun or openly publicise it to avoid the ignominy involved in it. In a tradition-bound and conservative society, more particularly in a rural area, the shame of sexual assault on a girl of about 14 years cannot be lost sight of. This down-to-earth reality has been lost sight of by the High Court. The trial court had rightly emphasized this aspect, but unfortunately, the High Court took a contrary view irrationally. (Para 10). State of Punjab v. Ramdev Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 421: 2004 SCC (Cri) 307: AIR 2004 SC 1290.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2003]

[9296] — S. 376 — Rape case — Delay in lodging FIR — Effect of — In view of the social conditions prevalent in India, there may be delay in giving the first information of such an offence to the police — Though the delay as such is not serious, but while considering the broad probabilities of the case, the delay in giving information to police in the instant case, considered to be of some importance — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

It is true that in view of the social conditions prevalent in India, there may be delay in giving the first information of such an offence to the police. A rape victim may think seriously before giving the information to the police about rape as the onslaught of a social stigma may haunt her for life. Though the delay as such is not serious, but while considering the broad probabilities of the case, the delay in giving the information to the police, in the instant case, also assumes some importance. (Para 19). Sudhansu Sekhar Sahoo v. State of Orissa, (2002) 10 SCC 743: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1484: AIR 2003 SC 2136.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2002]

[9297] — S. 376 — Rape of a "married woman" — Delay in lodging FIR — Held, does not necessarily indicate that the version of victim is false — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

In India if the prosecutrix happened to be a married person, she will not do anything without informing her husband. Merely because the complaint was lodged less than promptly, does not raise the question that the complaint was false. The reluctance to go to the police is because of society's attitude towards such women. It casts doubt and shame upon her rather than comfort and sympathy. Therefore, the delay in lodging complaint in such cases does not necessarily indicate that her version is false. (Para 8). Sri Narayan Saha v. State of Tripura, (2004) 7 SCC 775.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2004]

[9298] — S. 376 — When offence under clearly made out, delay in filing complaint, held, cannot wash away the offence (Para 17). Bhupinder Singh v. UT, Chandigarh, (2008) 8 SCC 531: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 553: 2008 Cri LJ 3546.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-2008]

[Ed.: An interesting question arises whether on these facts the appellant could have been charged under Sections 493 and 494 IPC, and if so why not.]

[9299] — Ss. 376 and 302 — FIR — Fardbeyan — Delay in recording — Rape and murder — According to prosecution, informant had gone to the police station, narrated the occurrence and after 10-20 minutes' stay there, returned to his village where the officer in charge of the police station recorded his fardbeyan naming appellant as having committed the offence — But while in police station, informant had not disclosed the name of appellant — Held, recording of fardbeyan at the house of informant instead of at police station when he had gone there shows that there was inordinate delay in recording the fardbeyan — This further shows that by the time the informant was at the police station he did not suspect complicity of the appellant with the crime and subsequently, after due deliberations, fardbeyan was given by the informant at his house alleging therein that the appellant had committed the crime — Thus the evidence of this witness makes the prosecution case showing complicity of the appellant with the crime doubtful — CrPC, 1973, S. 154 (Para 7). Kanhai Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2001) 3 SCC 451: 2001 SCC (Cri) 537: AIR 2001 SC 1113: 2001 Cri LJ 1259.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, R.P. Sethi and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-2001]

[9300] — Ss. 376, 354 and 506 — Effect of delay in filing FIR in cases of sexual assault — Respondent-accused alleged to have sexually ravished PW 1 and outraged the modesty of several other girl students of the school where he was a teacher — High Court setting aside his conviction considering delay in lodging FIR — Held, delay in a case of sexual assault, cannot be equated with the case involving other offences — There are several factors which weigh in the mind of the prosecutrix and her family members before coming to the police station to lodge a complaint — In a tradition-bound society prevalent in India, more particularly rural areas, it would be quite unsafe to throw out the prosecution case merely on the ground that there was some delay in lodging the FIR — Further, though prosecution had failed to establish allegations of rape but commission of offence punishable under Ss. 354 and 506 have clearly been established — Hence, respondent deserves to be convicted for the offences punishable under Ss. 354 and 506 — CrPC, 1973, S. 154 (Paras 2 and 6 to 8). State of H.P. v. Prem Singh, (2009) 1 SCC 420: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 351: AIR 2009 SC 1010: (2009) 73 AIC 238 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 786.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-11-2008]

[9301] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — Delay in lodging/filing FIR — Reasonably explained — Held, in such a case, High Court was in grave error in concluding that there was no reasonable and plausible explanation for belated FIR and that it was lodged after consultation and due deliberation which created doubt about instant case — Unfortunately, High Court did not advert to evidence of PW 1 (complainant, brother of rape victim) and reasoning of trial court in this regard — CrPC, 1973, S. 154 (Para 33). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Prakash Singh v. Union of India, (2006) 8 SCC 1: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 417, relied on.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

[9302] — Ss. 376, 375, 148, 452, 149, 342, 323 and 506 — Rape after forcible marriage — Acquittal confirmed — Prosecution failing to discharge its burden of proving ingredients of offences, not examining material witnesses (like father and brother of prosecutrix) — Delay of one month on part of prosecutrix in filing FIR and other discrepancies — Allegedly A-1 (an MP) with the help of other accused, at gunpoint took prosecutrix and her whole family to Bombay on 5-5-1999 — That A-1 converting himself to Islam and forcibly marrying

15.(b) Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

prosecutrix by performing nikaah on 6-5-1999 in the presence of Kazi (PW 3) — Educated family and well-to-do parents of prosecutrix did not find time to report the serious matter concerning their daughter to police — Even FIR was lodged after a delay of about one month after marriage — There being nothing on record to suggest that A-1, at any point of time, coerced or threatened prosecutrix and her family members — Hence, findings of High Court upheld and acquittal confirmed. State of Maharashtra v. Ravikant Shankarappa Patil, (2011) 6 SCC 416.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : V.S. Sirpurkar and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2011]

[9303] — Ss. 376 & 375 and 366 — Delayed lodging of FIR — Effect — Benefit of doubt — When available — Doubtful facts and circumstances being: (1) though fact of abduction of PW 2 (victim girl) on 31-7-1993 was immediately brought to notice of PW 1 (father of victim), PW 1 lodging FIR on 2-8-1993, (2) false implication by father not being ruled out because victim girl could have run away to avoid an arranged marriage, (3) there being no evidence of previous involvement of A-1 with victim, (4) important witnesses of abduction and forced marriage not having been examined, (5) there being no evidence of victim being forcibly taken in car, (6) close relations of girl witnessing alleged forced marriage in temple not lodging a complaint with police or rescuing girl, (7) victim not even raising a cry in temple when she was being married forcibly, (8) there being contradiction in evidence of victim's father and victim, (9) evidence of victim being wholly unreliable and contrary to evidence, and (10) it not being conclusively established that girl was minor — Appellants, held, are entitled to benefit of doubt — Hence, acquitted — Prosecution story of A-1 abducting and forcefully marrying PW 2 and then raping her have not been proved beyond reasonable doubt. Alamelu v. State, (2011) 2 SCC 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2011]

[9304] — Ss. 376 and 375 Sixthly — Rape of a girl below sixteen years — Delay of ten days in filing FIR — Explanation that delay caused due to deliberations in the family whether to take the matter involving family honour to the court, held, reasonable — Testimony of prosecutrix consistent save a few minor contradictions and corroborated by her father and brother to whom she had related the details of the occurrence without delay after she was rescued — Conviction under S. 376 and four years' RI upheld. Harpal Singh v. State of H.P., (1981) 1 SCC 560: 1981 SCC (Cri) 208: AIR 1981 SC 361: 1981 Cri LJ 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1980]

[9305] — Ss. 376 and 376(2)(f) — Rape — Delay in filing complaint/FIR — The mere factum of, held, by itself not fatal to prosecution case — Occurrence on 6-3-1990 — Filing of complaint on 10-3-1990 — Victim, a girl of eight years — Her father out of station on the date of occurrence — Possibility of hesitation on the part of mother in lodging complaint — Thus said delay, held, explained — Hence, did not prove fatal (Para 7). State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699: 2004 Cri LJ 2109.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

[9306] — Ss. 376, 377, etc. — Delay in lodging FIR — Effect — Held, delay in lodging the first information report cannot be used as a ritualistic formula for doubting the prosecution case and discarding the same. Dildar Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 10 SCC 531: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2006 SC 3084: 2006 Cri LJ 3914.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

[9307] — Ss. 376, 457 and 380 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Rape case — Version of prosecutrix that the FIR was lodged after three days of the incident — Reliability of — Held on facts, not correct — Evidence indicating that the FIR was lodged six days after the occurrence — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

The prosecutrix claimed that she lodged the report on the third day of the incident. This apparently is not correct because the report identified by her as the report lodged by her was lodged on 26-2-1994. She deposed that on the third day she had talked to some labourers and narrated to them the incident. None of those labourers has been examined as a witness. In fact evidence of the residents of the building in which she was residing, who appeared as witnesses, is not that the prosecutrix, either in the morning following the incident or on any other day, mentioned to them about the incident which took place on the night of 20-2-1994. The evidence on record, therefore, does establish that for six days after the occurrence, the prosecutrix did not narrate the incident to anyone. (Para 16). Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185: AIR 2003 SC 3365.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2003]

[9308] — Ss. 376 and 506 — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Rape cases — Inordinate delay of 6 months — When accusations of rape involved, held, said delay per se is not a mitigating circumstance — Such delay, if satisfactorily explained, held, not fatal — If not so explained and there is possibility of embellishment or exaggeration in prosecution version due to such delay, then it is a relevant factor — Victim, a girl of about 14 years, ravished by her teacher in the month of May — She not disclosing about the incident to anyone due to threats given by the accused — Few days after the incident, accused again committing sexual intercourse with her — Since victim complaining about stomach ache, her mother taking her to a hospital in the month of September — Doctor telling the mother about pregnancy of victim — On enquiry by mother, victim disclosing that her conception was due to sexual intercourse by accused — FIR lodged in the month of November — Victim totally unaware of the catastrophe which had befallen her — Held, High Court's conclusion that there was unexplained delay in lodging the FIR was not sustainable — CrPC, 1973, S. 154 (Paras 18 and 19). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

Tulshidas Kanolkar v. State of Goa, (2003) 8 SCC 590: 2004 SCC (Cri) 44, relied on

[9309] — Ss. 376 and 506 Pt. II — Prosecutrices (PWs 1 and 2) being uneducated, poor labourers without any male members in their family to advise them and being threatened by accused — FIR being delayed by 42 days — Effect — High Court duly considering all material aspects — High Court considering corroboration by PW 14 (mother of prosecutrices) and PW 4 (owner of quarry where prosecutrices worked) regarding cause of delay — Conviction of accused under Ss. 376 and 506 Pt. II, therefore, held, justified

The evidence of prosecutrices cannot be rejected as unacceptable. Though there was a delay of 42 days in lodging the complaint to the police, PWs 1 and 2, in their evidence, explained that all their family members including themselves are uneducated, there are no male members in their family for their assistance and they settled in the present village to eke out their livelihood. They were working in quarry owned by PW 4 and while returning from their workplace by force A-1 and A-2 committed rape of PWs 1 and 2. PW 14 (mother of PWs 1 and 2) also corroborated them about their illiteracy and fear due to the threat call of A-1 and A-2. All these material aspects were duly considered by the trial court and accepted by the High Court. (Paras 15 and 19). Santhosh Moolya v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 5 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-2010]

[9310] — Ss. 376 and 506 Pt. II — Rape — Delay in lodging FIR — Victim, a mentally deficient girl — Delay, held on facts, not fatal — When accusations of rape are involved, held, said delay per se is not a mitigating circumstance — Such delay, if satisfactorily explained, held, not fatal — If not so explained and there is possibility of embellishment or exaggeration in prosecution version due to such delay, then it is a relevant factor — Where a mentally deficient girl totally unaware of the catastrophe which had befallen her was ravished by accused not once, but several times, held, the unusual circumstances satisfactorily explained the delay in lodging FIR — Thus, said delay did not affect the prosecution version adversely — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

Delay in lodging the first information report cannot be used as a ritualistic formula for discarding the prosecution case and doubting its authenticity. It only puts the court on guard to search for and consider if any explanation has been offered for the delay. Once it is offered, the court is to only see whether it is satisfactory or not. In case if the prosecution fails to satisfactorily explain the delay and there is possibility of embellishment or exaggeration in the prosecution version on account of such delay, it is a relevant factor. On the other hand, satisfactory explanation of the delay is weighty enough to reject the plea of false implication or vulnerability of the prosecution case. (Para 5)

Delay per se is not a mitigating circumstance for the accused when accusations of rape are involved. As the factual scenario shows, the victim was totally unaware of the catastrophe which had befallen her. That being so, the mere delay in lodging of the first information report does not in any way render the prosecution version brittle. (Para 5). Tulshidas Kanolkar v. State of Goa, (2003) 8 SCC 590.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-2003]

[9311] — S. 376(2)(g) — FIR — Delay in lodging FIR — Grounds/considerations for ascertaining bona fides — Offence under S. 376(2)(g) IPC — Prosecution case, held, should not be thrown out only on the ground of delay in lodging FIR — Other factors like trauma suffered by the victim, sociological factors along with other evidence should be taken into consideration — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

15.(b) Delay in lodging/filing FIR (contd.)

The prosecutrix, a coolie, was gang raped while on her way back from a movie at about 10.00 p.m. on 20-11-1994. Her brother, P who was slapped, ran for help and when he returned with other villagers, found her sister lying unconscious and naked. FIR was lodged at about 7.00 p.m. on 21-11-1994 after the victim regained her consciousness. The conviction of six accused persons under Section 376(2)(g) IPC was upheld by the High Court.

Allowing the appeal of Accused 4 to 6 and dismissing the appeal of Accused 1 to 3,

Held:

The prosecution case should not be thrown out only on the ground of delay in lodging the FIR. Some delay has occurred in the lodging of the FIR but keeping in view the trauma suffered by the victim, her statement that she had regained her composure only in the evening cannot be disbelieved particularly in view of the evidence of PW 8. The fact that she was found lying naked at the place of occurrence in an unconscious state, stands proved not only by PW 7 but also by PW 8. The evidence of PW 8 remains uncontroverted. Prosecution case and the factor of delay should also be considered with regard to the sociological backgrounds from which PW 6 and PW 7 and other witnesses hail. (Paras 20, 19 and 14). Viswanathan v. State, (2008) 5 SCC 354: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 593: AIR 2008 SC 2222.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2008]

[9312] — S. 376(2)(g) — FIR — Gang rape by entering into victims' house at night — Victims taking shelter in another's house after the rape and lodging FIR next morning — Delay in lodging FIR, held on facts, satisfactorily explained. Pramod Mahto v. State of Bihar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 672: 1990 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 1475: 1989 Cri LJ 1479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1989]

[9313] — Ss. 376(2)(g) and 506 Pt. II — Gang rape — Delay in lodging the FIR — Absence of Test identification parade — Identification of the accused persons by the prosecutrix in court — Conviction — Legality of — Gang rape committed by the three appellants on a school teacher in broad daylight — Medical evidence supporting the prosecution case to some extent — Prosecutrix had abundant opportunity to notice the features of the accused persons — Further, on account of traumatic and tragic experience of the prosecutrix, the faces of the appellants must have got imprinted in her memory — Hence the chance of mistaken identity was remote — Evidence of prosecutrix found to be implicitly reliable — In such circumstances, held on facts, the identification of the appellants by the prosecutrix in court did not require further corroboration — The delay of about 10 days in lodging the FIR was fully explained and strongly supported by circumstantial evidence and, therefore, did not affect the prosecution case adversely — Hence, conviction of appellants by the courts below upheld

The courts below have carefully considered the evidence on record and have come to the conclusion that the delay, if any, in lodging the first information report was fully explained by the prosecutrix and was strongly supported by the circumstantial evidence on record. The prosecutrix was living all alone and was an unmarried person, about 28 years of age. She did not have any family member to whom she could have narrated her story immediately after the occurrence on 4-3-1992. Moreover, the sense of shame coupled with the fear on account of threats given out by the appellants must have deterred her from immediately reporting about the occurrence to others. The prosecutrix narrated the incident to the Deputy Director of Education on 6-3-1992. Later she narrated the incident to one of her colleagues whom she found to be sympathetic towards her and thereafter when her cause was taken up by the Teachers' Association, she could muster courage to lodge a report with the Superintendent of Police. Thus in the facts and circumstances of the case, the mere delay in lodging of the first information report does not discredit the prosecution case. (Para 5)

The courts below have also examined the medical evidence on record and have observed that the medical evidence, to some extent, supported the case of the prosecution that the prosecutrix may have been subjected to forcible sexual intercourse within a week or two of her medical examination. The medical evidence also indicated that the prosecutrix was not habituated to sexual intercourse. (Para 5)

The evidence of mere identification of the accused person at the trial for the first time is from its very nature inherently of a weak character. The purpose of a prior test identification, therefore, is to test and strengthen the trustworthiness of that evidence. It is accordingly considered a safe rule of prudence to generally look for corroboration of the sworn testimony of witnesses in court as to the identity of the accused who are strangers to them, in the form of earlier identification proceedings. This rule of prudence, however, is subject to exceptions, when, for example, the court is impressed by a particular witness on whose testimony it can safely rely, without such or other corroboration. It is no doubt true that much evidentiary value cannot be attached to the identification of the accused in court where identifying witness is a total stranger who had just a fleeting glimpse of the person identified or who had no particular reason to remember the person concerned, if the identification is made for the first time in court. (Paras 7 and 10)

But failure to hold a test identification parade would not make inadmissible the evidence of identification in court. The identification parades belong to the stage of investigation, and there is no provision in the CrPC which obliges the investigating agency to hold, or confers a right upon the accused to claim a test identification parade. These parades do not constitute substantive evidence. The substantive evidence is the evidence of identification in court and the test identification parade provides corroboration to the identification of the witness in court, if required. However, what weight must be attached to the evidence of identification in court, which is not preceded by a test identification parade, is a matter for the courts of fact to examine. In appropriate cases it may accept the evidence of identification even without insisting on corroboration. (Paras 7 and 16)

In the instant case, the crime was perpetrated in broad daylight. The prosecutrix had sufficient opportunity to observe the features of the appellants who raped her one after the other. Before the rape was committed, she was threatened and intimidated by the appellants. After the rape was committed, she was again threatened and intimidated by them. All this must have taken time. This is not a case where the identifying witness had only a fleeting glimpse of the appellants on a dark night. She also had a reason to remember their faces as they had committed a heinous offence and put her to shame. She had, therefore, abundant opportunity to notice their features. In fact on account of her traumatic and tragic experience the faces of the appellants must have got imprinted in her memory, and there was no chance of her making a mistake about their identity. The prosecutrix appears to be a witness on whom implicit reliance can be placed and there is no reason why she should falsely identify the appellants as the perpetrators of the crime if they had not actually committed the offence. In these circumstances if the courts below have concurrently held that the identification of the appellants by the prosecutrix in court does not require further corroboration, there is no reason to interfere with the finding recorded by the courts below after an appreciation of the evidence on record. (Para 16). Malkhansingh v. State of M.P., (2003) 5 SCC 746: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1247: AIR 2003 SC 2669: 2003 Cri LJ 3535.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, Ashok Bhan and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-2003]

Kanta Prashad v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1958 SC 350: 1958 Cri LJ 698; Vaikuntam Chandrappa v. State of A.P., AIR 1960 SC 1340: 1960 Cri LJ 1681; Budhsen v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 128: 1970 SCC (Cri) 343; Rameshwar Singh v. State of J&K, (1971) 2 SCC 715: 1971 SCC (Cri) 638; Jadunath Singh v. State of U.P., (1970) 3 SCC 518: 1971 SCC (Cri) 124; Parkash Chand Sogani v. State of Rajasthan, Crl. A. No. 92 of 1956 decided on 15-1-1957 (SC); Harbajan Singh v. State of J&K, (1975) 4 SCC 480: 1975 SCC (Cri) 545; Ram Nath Mahto v. State of Bihar, (1996) 8 SCC 630: 1996 SCC (Cri) 726; Suresh Chandra Bahri v. State of Bihar, 1995 Supp (1) SCC 80: 1995 SCC (Cri) 60; State of U.P. v. Boota Singh, (1979) 1 SCC 31: 1979 SCC (Cri) 115; Ramanbhai Naranbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2000) 1 SCC 358: 2000 SCC (Cri) 113, relied on

[9314] — S. 376 r/w S. 34 — Rape — Delay in lodging FIR, explained — Hence held, not fatal — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

Mere delay in lodging the FIR is really of no consequence, if the reason is explained. In the instant rape case, the evidence of PW 3, the victim and that of her husband, PW 4, clearly shows that there was initial reluctance to report the matter to the police by PW 4. He, in fact, had taken his wife to task for the incident and had slapped her. (Para 5). Sri Narayan Saha v. State of Tripura, (2004) 7 SCC 775.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2004]

16. Identification

See in detail under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vol. 19, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 3 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

[9315] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Appreciation of evidence — Identification of accused — Appellant-accused not named in FIR — Hence, submission that he had been falsely implicated — He not known to victim personally — Held, in such circumstances there was no question of naming him in FIR — However, prosecutrix categorically stating that she was raped by the truck driver and correctly identifying him in TI parade — Impugned judgment convicting appellant accused calls for no interference — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9 (Paras 2 and 15). Mohan Chand v. State of Uttarakhand, (2009) 4 SCC 63: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 67: AIR 2009 SC 1896: (2009) 3 All LJ 240: 2009 Cri LJ 1755.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-2009]

[9316] — S. 376 — Child rape — Rape of a 10-year-old girl at night — Accused-respondent's case was that he was misidentified for the rapist — Respondent was known to the victim as he was residing in the vicinity of victim's house — Victim had identified the respondent to PW 3, a neighbour who had rushed to the scene hearing a commotion as well as to her mother when she returned home next day — PW 3 deposed that he had seen the respondent running away from the victim's house — Held, merely because the victim had said in cross-examination that she could recognise the voice of respondent when he had uttered some words to her does not mean that she had identified the accused only by his voice at night — Further, merely because PW 3 had not caught hold of the respondent while respondent was running away, his testimony cannot be disbelieved — Furthermore, investigating officer's failure to subject the respondent to medical examination would not be fatal to the prosecution case — Hence trial court was justified in convicting the respondent under S. 376

In the facts and circumstances of the case there is no scope for doubt that the victim had identified the respondent as the rapist. The mere fact that she had said in cross-examination that the rapist had uttered some words to her and she could realise that it was the voice of the rapist himself, is not enough for the Court to ignore the other broad aspects regarding the evidence of identity of the rapist. Moreover, PW 3 had said in court that when he rushed to the house after hearing the commotion he saw the respondent running away from the house. There can be no possibility of doubt that PW 3 would have correctly identified the person who ran away. Even the defence did not dispute the competence of PW 3 to identify the accused if the version of PW 3 can be accepted as correct. (Paras 5 and 6)

The High Court did not place any reliance on the testimony of PW 3 on the fragile reasoning that PW 3 did not venture to catch the rapist. If PW 3 would have caught hold of the rapist, it was well and good. But if he had not done so, that cannot be regarded as a reason to doubt the truth of the testimony of PW 3. At the time when PW 3 saw the accused running away he had no reason to think that the said person had ravished the little girl inside the house and was in the process of escaping. Perhaps, PW 3 did not think why the respondent was running at that stage. Even that apart, PW 3 had to take a decision on the spur of the moment as to the wisdom of catching hold of such a person. If he had failed to take a right decision in a split second it is not a good ground for a court of law to jettison the testimony of such a witness. (Para 7)

Though the investigating officer did not subject the respondent to medical examination, but the worst against the prosecution and the best for the respondent in such a situation is that the respondent did not have any injury on his person. However, the counsel for the respondent was not able to satisfy the court that a person of the respondent's age and health would necessarily have sustained some injury if he had committed rape on a girl like PW 1. Therefore, it is not necessary to go into the question of absence of injury on the person of the respondent. (Para 10)

Thus the High Court has seriously erred in interfering with a well-merited conviction passed by the trial court on the respondent. (Para 11). State of U.P. v. Munnoo Lal, (2001) 10 SCC 79.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2001]

[9317] — S. 376 — Identification of rapist — Rape victim allegedly identifying the accused twice before Army Officers prior to T.I. parade — But such Army Officers not examined in the court — Held, no credence can be given to the identification allegedly made before the T.I. parade — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 9. Prahlad Singh v. State of M.P., (1997) 8 SCC 515: AIR 1997 SC 3442: 1997 Cri LJ 4078.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-1997]

[9318] — Ss. 376 and 304 Pt. II — Rape and murder — Identification of the accused at night — According to eyewitness, he had seen the occurrence by flashing torchlight — Failure on the part of the investigating agency to seize the torchlight, held, not fatal to the prosecution case (Para 20). State of Orissa v. Dibakar Naik, (2002) 5 SCC 323: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1128: AIR 2002 SC 2148: 2002 Cri LJ 2826.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-2002]

Balo Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1997) 5 SCC 360: 1997 SCC (Cri) 701, relied on

[9319] — Ss. 376, 457 and 380 — Non-holding of Test identification parade — Rape case — Identification for the first time in court after 2 years of the incident — Held, holding of Test identification parade may not be necessary in every case, but that depends on the facts and circumstances of each case — Rape committed at night in a room where there was no light — Held, even if it was accepted that the prosecutrix had a fleeting glimpse of the accused-appellants when they lighted the torch in her room, in the absence of any other evidence to show that the prosecutrix had occasion to see the appellants earlier, or to know them, it was incumbent on the prosecution to hold a Test identification parade — Failure to do so, held, fatal to the prosecution case — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 9

Though the appellants were arrested within a few days of the incident, they were never put up for identification in a test identification parade. While it is true that in every case the holding of a test identification parade may not be necessary, but that depends on the facts and circumstances of each case. (Para 20)

In the instant case the prosecutrix had not said in the course of her deposition that she had personally known all the appellants by name or otherwise. She also does not claim that she had other reasons to know them as to be able to identify them. In her first information report, she had stated that some unknown persons were knocking at her door, but she identified the appellants in court after about two years of the incident. (Para 20)

In the facts and circumstances of the case, even if it is accepted that the prosecutrix had a fleeting glimpse of the appellants when they lighted the torch in her room, in the absence of any other evidence to show that the prosecutrix had occasion to see the appellants earlier, or to know them, it was incumbent on the prosecution to hold a test identification parade. This is not a case where an occurrence took place in broad daylight and the prosecutrix had ample opportunity of noticing the features of the appellants. (Para 21). Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185: AIR 2003 SC 3365.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2003]

[9320] — Ss. 376, 457 and 380 — Rape — Occurrence at night — Identification in torchlight — Prosecution version in respect of, if on facts reliable — Prosecutrix alleged to have been raped in a room where there was no light — Further alleged that she identified the accused persons when they took out a torch from her almirah and lighted the same in the room to see each other's face — Prosecution story about prosecutrix having an opportunity to identify the accused-appellants, held on facts, doubtful

The story narrated by the prosecutrix about her having an opportunity to identify the appellants is very unconvincing. In the first information report she stated that after the appellants entered the room they asked her to switch on the light but when she said there was no light, they lighted a matchstick and took out a torch from her almirah, put cells in it and then lighted the same and started seeing each other. This gave her an opportunity to identify them by face. Thereafter they switched off the torch. In her deposition also she has deposed to the same effect, except that lighting of the matchstick and torch took place after she was raped by them, and just before they departed. The story appears to be highly improbable and unworthy of belief. In the first instance it is difficult to believe that the appellants knew that the prosecutrix had kept a torch in her almirah. Moreover, after discovering the torch they also found cells to be put into the torch and thereafter they switched on the torch. The lighting of the torch and flashing it on the faces of the appellant was, as if only to give an opportunity to the prosecutrix to see their faces. Thereafter the torch was switched off. (Para 20). Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185: AIR 2003 SC 3365.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2003]

[9321] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Identification of the accused for the first time in court — Non-holding of TI parade, on facts, was not fatal — Non-holding of TI parade — When not fatal — Rape case — Prosecutrix (PW 1) saw the accused-appellants on three occasions almost immediately prior to the commission of offence and also when they committed sexual assault on her — On hearing cries of PW 1, her father and brother came to the spot and saw the appellants running away — Brother identifying them by their description — Appellants, when chased and caught by the father, confessed their guilt but refused to come with him — Later when arrested, appellants shown to PW 1 by IO in order to ensure that correct persons were arrested — That apart, appellants named in FIR — Held, TI parade was not necessary in the instant case — Non-holding of it, on facts, did not vitiate the trial — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9

Non-holding of TI parade would not by itself disprove the prosecution case. To what extent and if at all the same would adversely affect the prosecution case, would depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. (Para 9)

In the facts of this case, holding of TI parade was wholly unnecessary. PW 1 (prosecutrix) disclosed enough materials to show that she had occasion to see the accused persons at least on three occasions almost immediately prior to the commission of offence and also when the accused-appellants forcibly committed sexual assault on her. PW 1 gave sufficient particulars of the persons committing the offence of criminal assault on her. They had been identified by their description by her brother. The appellants were chased and they were caught and allegedly they had made a confession of their guilt. (Paras 10, 5 and 14)

The appellants were arrested on 6-11-1993 (six days after the incident) and according to the investigating officer they were shown to the prosecutrix to ensure that they have arrested the correct persons and in that view of the matter it was impracticable to hold a test identification parade. (Para 7)

That apart, the names of the appellants have been mentioned in the first information report. (Para 14)

Thus, in view of the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case, it is held that non-holding of a test identification parade cannot be said to have vitiated the trial. (Para 7). Dastagir Sab v. State of Karnataka, (2004) 3 SCC 106: 2004 SCC (Cri) 678: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 694: (2004) 3 MPLJ 154.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-2004]

State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147; Malkhansingh v. State of M.P., (2003) 5 SCC 746: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1247; Ashfaq v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2004) 3 SCC 116: (2003) 10 Scale 732, followed

Dana Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2002) 7 SCC 295: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1698, relied on

[9322] — S. 376(2)(g) — Requirement of TI Parade in the absence of other evidence to identify the accused — Accused 4 to 6 had been arrested on the basis of statements by co-accused — Neither TI parade nor any other basis laid for establishing involvement of Accused 4 to 6 — Prosecutrix could identify only Accused 1 to 3 in the court although Accused 4 was named by her in FIR — However, Accused 5 and 6 were not named in FIR also — Conviction of Accused 4 to 6 (without TI parade or any identification in the court) solely on the statements made by co-accused, held, was wrong — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9

The prosecutrix, a coolie, was gang raped while on her way back from a movie at about 10.00 p.m. on 20-11-1994. Her brother, P who was slapped, ran for help and when he returned with other villagers, found his sister lying unconscious and naked. FIR was lodged at about 7.00 p.m. on 21-11-1994 after the victim regained her consciousness. The conviction of six accused persons under Section 376(2)(g) IPC was upheld by the High Court.

Allowing the appeal of Accused 4 to 6 and dismissing the appeal of Accused 1 to 3,

Held:

In the absence of any test identification parade having been held or they having been identified in court, Accused 4 to 6 cannot be held guilty of commission of the offence. Before the learned trial Judge, the victim did not identify all the accused. She identified Accused 1, 2 and 3. The names of Accused 5 and 6 were not mentioned by her at all. They had been arrested on the basis of the statements made by their co-accused. (Paras 18, 9 and 16). Viswanathan v. State, (2008) 5 SCC 354: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 593: AIR 2008 SC 2222.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2008]

[9323] — Ss. 376(2)(g) and 323 — Identification, necessity of for person unknown to prosecutrix/complainant — Necessity of Test identification parade and exception — Explained — Where the accused (Respondent 2 herein) was neither a person already known to the prosecutrix nor was specifically named in the FIR nor was subjected to test identification, putting him on trial for offence under Ss. 376(2)(g) and 323, held, was improper — Further held, identification of the accused for the first time at the trial is a weak evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 9

The prosecutrix, a 55-year-old widow who was the mother of two grown-up children, was while coming back to her house after attending the marriage of a relation, criminally assaulted and subjected to forcible intercourse by the respondents. The first information report was submitted by her on the next day against the respondents. She was medically examined and her torn salwar was sent for chemical analysis. On medical examination various injuries were found on her person. The doctor was of the opinion that they reflected the signs of a struggle. The trial court convicted the accused persons under Sections 376(2)(g) and 323 IPC and sentenced them to undergo rigorous imprisonment for five years and to pay a fine of Rs 5000 each under Section 376 IPC and six months' rigorous imprisonment under Section 323 with a fine of Rs 500 each. The High Court reversed that decision. It acquitted Respondent 2 on the ground that his identity could not be established by the prosecution at the trial. It further held that the case against Respondent 1 was not proved beyond doubt as the medical evidence and the finding showed that no dead or alive spermatozoa was seen. Another circumstance which weighed with the High Court was that the sealing of the salwar was not properly established. Moreover, before the Supreme Court the respondent attempted to point out some discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix and other witnesses for discrediting the prosecution version. One of such discrepancies was that the prosecutrix had stated the place of occurrence to be 20 feet away from the road while in the FIR the place of occurrence was mentioned as the road. Upholding the acquittal of Respondent 2 but setting aside the acquittal of Respondent 1 and restoring his conviction by the trial court,

Held :

During the investigation of a crime the police agency is required to hold identification parade for the purposes of enabling the witness to identify the person alleged to have committed the offence particularly when such person was not previously known to the witness or the informant. The absence of test identification may not be fatal if the accused is known or sufficiently described in the complaint leaving no doubt in the mind of the court regarding his involvement. Identification parade may also not be necessary in a case where the accused persons are arrested at the spot. The evidence of identifying the accused person at the trial for the first time is, from its very nature, inherently of a weak character. (Para 3)

Admittedly Respondent 2 was not known to the prosecutrix and his name was not specifically mentioned in the FIR. Admittedly no identification parade was held and the prosecutrix saw Respondent 2 only in the court after the day of occurrence. Though the holding of identification proceedings are not substantive evidence, yet they are used for corroboration purposes for believing that the person brought before the court was the real person involved in the commission of the crime. The identification parade even if held, cannot, in all cases, be considered as safe, sole and trustworthy evidence on which the conviction of the accused could be sustained. It is a rule of prudence which is required to be followed in cases where the accused is not known to the witness or the complainant. (Para 3)

The holding of identification parade in the instant case would have been irrelevant, had the name of Respondent 2 been mentioned in the FIR Exhibit P/D. The identity of Respondent 2 was, admittedly, not established during the investigation and it is not clear as to how the said respondent was put on trial along with Respondent 1. Hence, Respondent 2 could not have been put on trial and held guilty. (Para 4) . State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147: AIR 1999 SC 3916: 2000 Cri LJ 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-1999]

17. Investigation

Synopsis

(a)	Generally	625
(b)	Defective or illegal or delayed investigation	626
(c)	Tests which can be conducted on accused or prosecutrix	627

(a) Generally

[9324] — S. 376 — Exercise of discretion by Magistrate under Ss. 156(3) & 200 CrPC — If proper — Application under S. 156(3) CrPC, but, initiation of proceeding directly under S. 200 CrPC — Warrantedness — Scope of interference by High Court — Application filed under S. 156(3) CrPC by R-3 (alleged rape victim), before appellant Judicial Magistrate, alleging rape by her father-in-law and praying that appellant direct police to register her complaint and investigate case against accused under S. 156(3) — Appellant, after calling for police report and considering all material filed by R-3 finding case unfit to be referred to police for investigation under S. 156(3), therefore, directed application to be registered as complaint and further ordered Registry to present file before her for recording statement of R-3 under S. 200 — However, High Court, while severely criticising appellant for such order, set aside the order and directed appellant to decide application of R-3 within ambit of her power under S. 156(3) and also directed her to pass an order for registration of FIR against erring police officers, who had refused to register FIR of R-3 — Sustainability — If on reading of complaint, Magistrate finds that allegations therein disclose cognizable offence and forwarding of complaint to police for investigation under S. 156(3) will not be conducive to justice, held, Magistrate will be justified in adopting the course suggested in S. 200 — Herein, judicial discretion exercised by appellant was in consonance with scheme postulated by CrPC — There was no material on record to indicate that judicial discretion exercised was either arbitrary or perverse — Hence, there was no occasion for High Court to interfere with discretion exercised judiciously in terms of provisions of CrPC merely because another view was possible — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 156(3), 200 and 482 (Paras 21 to 24). Mona Panwar v. High Court of Judicature of Allahabad, (2011) 3 SCC 496.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and H.L. Gokhale, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-2-2011]

Gulab Chand Upadhyaya v. State of U.P., 2002 Cri LJ 2907 (All); Ram Babu Gupta v. State of U.P., (2001) 43 ACC 50; Chandrika Singh v. State of U.P., (2007) 50 ACC 777; Sukhwasi v. State of U.P., (2007) 59 ACC 739, approved

(b) Defective or illegal or delayed investigation

[9325] — S. 376 — Credibility of witness — Negligence of investigating agency — Whether a ground to discredit testimony of victim — Blood-stained clothes allegedly handed over to officer-in-charge at police station by husband of rape victim not sent for chemical examination — Effect — Held, victim had no control over investigating agency and negligence, if any, of investigating officer could not affect credibility of statement of victim — On basis of evidence on record, conviction of appellant, held, sustainable (Para 16). Ram Singh v. State of H.P., (2010) 2 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2010]

[9326] — S. 376 — Rape — Evidence and proof — Rape of a married woman, a labourer, by another labourer — Failure of the prosecution to examine independent witnesses who could have corroborated the testimony of the prosecutrix — Recovery of semen-stained chaddi of the accused not proved — Presence of semen stains on the petticoat and in the vagina of the prosecutrix lending assurance to her accusation — Held, in the circumstances of the case, defective investigation by the police cannot be a ground for acquitting the accused — Mere delay in lodging FIR does not raise the inference that the complaint was false — Indian women are slow and hesitant to complain of such assault — Rape having been committed on a pile of sand, absence of injury on her person inconsequential

The prosecutrix, a labourer, was working in a factory along with another labourer C. The appellant and his companion came to the factory premises and asked C to fetch tea and on his departure the appellant lifted her bodily and took her inside the machine room and committed rape. After the appellant had satisfied his lust and before his companion could take his turn the prosecutrix ran away and met R, a female co-labourer, and narrated to her the incident. Thereafter she searched for her husband, a rickshaw-puller, and lodged the FIR. The witnesses C and the female co-labourer were not examined by the prosecution. Recovery or seizure of chaddi of the accused which contained semen stains was also not proved. Both the courts below convicted the appellant.

Dismissing the special leave appeal

Held :

In cases of defective investigation the court has to be circumspect in evaluating the evidence but it would not be right in acquitting an accused person solely on account of the defect; to do so would tantamount to playing into the hands of the investigating officer if the investigation is designedly defective. Any investigating officer, in fairness to the prosecutrix as well as the accused, would have recorded the statements of the two witnesses and would have drawn up a proper seizure-memo in regard to the 'chaddi'. But the accused cannot be acquitted solely on that ground. (Para 5)

Merely because the complaint was lodged less than promptly does not raise the inference that the complaint was false. The reluctance to go to the police is because of society's attitude towards such women; it casts doubt and shame upon her rather than comfort and sympathise with her. Therefore, delay in lodging complaints in such cases does not necessarily indicate that her version is false. The possibility of tutoring is ruled out because the evidence does not show that her husband knew the appellant and his companion before the incident. (Para 7)

In the instant case the prosecutrix, a victim of the crime, had absolutely no reason whatsoever to falsely involve the appellant nor did her husband have any reason to do so or tutor his wife to involve the appellant. The prosecutrix is a poor labourer who was toiling to earn her livelihood to augment the family income. She was working in the factory since the last few days only and the appellant and his companion, taking advantage of the situation, drove away C by asking him to fetch tea and after he left the appellant violated her person. The finding of semen stains on the petticoat and in the vagina lend assurance to the story narrated by the prosecutrix. The submission that there was delay in lodging the complaint has to be stated to be rejected for the simple reason that immediately after the incident she had to go in search of her husband who was a rickshaw-puller, narrate to him the incident, go down to the police station and then lodge the complaint. She has explained the absence of injuries by stating that she was laid on minute sand which was lying on the floor and, therefore, there were no marks of injury. Therefore, taking an overall view of the matter it must be held that the courts below rightly placed reliance on the testimony of the prosecutrix and convicted the appellant. (Para 8). Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977: AIR 1995 SC 2472.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and S.C. Sen, J. [Date of decision: 11-8-1995]

[9327] — S. 376 — Rape — Unsatisfactory investigation — Effect — Held, defence cannot take advantage of a bad investigation where prosecution holds clinching evidence in support of itself (Para 25). Zindar Ali Sheikh v. State of W.B., (2009) 3 SCC 761: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 737: AIR 2009 SC 1467: 2009 Cri LJ 1324: (2009) 2 CHN 19 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 941 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2009]

[9328] — S. 376 — Rape trial — Vaginal swabs and slides — Late deposit in malkhana — Whether on facts weakened prosecution case — Explanation if satisfactory — Post-mortem examination of victim conducted on 25-1-1996 — Samples of vaginal swabs and slides deposited in malkhana after a gap of three days on 29-1-1996 — Post-mortem report handed over by hospital to police on 25-1-1996 itself along with dead body whereas samples handed over on 29-1-1996 — In the intervening period, there were three holidays from 26-1-1996 to 28-1-1996 — Held, delay in deposit of samples satisfactorily accounted for — No adverse inference could be drawn against prosecution due to intervening period of three days between preparation of samples and deposit in malkhana (Para 56). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

(c) Tests which can be conducted on accused or prosecutrix

[9329] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Right to privacy — Basis, scope and extent — Privacy as an aspect of personal liberty — Mental privacy and physical privacy — Held, while physical privacy may be curtailed to some extent in reasonable exercise of police powers under CrPC, there is no corresponding provision for intruding upon a person's mental privacy — A female who alleges to be victim of sexual offence cannot be subjected to polygraph test to ascertain whether she is making truthful allegation — Extracting testimonial responses by means of narcoanalysis, polygraph and BEAP tests, held, intrude upon a person's mental privacy and are therefore impermissible in law — Protection of mental privacy is available to accused as well as to victim of an offence — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 24 to 27 and 114-A — CrPC, 1973, S. 164-A — Laboratory Procedure Manual for Polygraph Examination, Para 3.4(v) — European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, 1950, Art. 8 — Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984 (UK), S. 64(1-A)

Medical test for ascertaining mental condition of a person is most likely to be in the nature of a psychiatric evaluation which usually includes testimonial responses. Subjecting a person to the impugned techniques (narco-analysis, lie-detector and BEAP tests) in an involuntary manner violates prescribed boundaries of privacy. Forcible interference with a person's mental processes is not provided for under any statute and it most certainly comes into conflict with right against self-incrimination. However, this determination does not account for circumstances where a person could be subjected to any of the impugned tests but not exposed to criminal charges and the possibility of conviction. In such cases, he/she could still face adverse consequences such as custodial abuse, surveillance, undue harassment and social stigma among others. In order to address such circumstances, it is important to examine some other dimensions of Article 21. (Paras 204 and 226)

There is possibility that victims of offences could be forcibly subjected to any of these techniques during the course of investigation. There is provision in Laboratory Procedure Manual for polygraph tests which contemplates the same for ascertaining the testimony of victims of sexual offences. Irrespective of the need to expedite investigations in such cases, no person who is a victim of an offence can be compelled to undergo any of the tests in question. Such a forcible administration would be an unjustified intrusion into mental privacy and could lead to further stigma for the victim. (Para 254). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2010]

M.P. Sharma v. Satish Chandra, AIR 1954 SC 300: 1954 Cri LJ 865: 1954 SCR 1077; Kharak Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 1295: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 329; Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, (1978) 1 SCC 248; Gobind v. State of M.P., (1975) 2 SCC 148: 1975 SCC (Cri) 468; R. Rajagopal v. State of T.N., (1994) 6 SCC 632; People's Union for Civil Liberties v. Union of India, (1997) 1 SCC 301; 'X' v. Hospital 'Z', (2003) 1 SCC 500; Attorney General's Reference (No. 3 of 1999), (2001) 2 AC 91: (2001) 2 WLR 56: (2001) 1 All ER 577 (HL), relied on

M. Vijaya v. Singareni Collieries Co. Ltd., AIR 2001 AP 502; R.(S) v. Chief Constable of the South Yorkshire Police, (2002) 1 WLR 3223: (2003) 1 All ER 148 (CA), approved

'X' v. Hospital 'Z', (1998) 8 SCC 296, held, partly overruled

94 Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology 243-293 (2004), relied on

18. Judge/Presiding Judge/Court — Role of in rape cases

[9330] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape trial — Responsibility of courts — Observations made in Gurmit Singh (1996) 2 SCC 384, repeated that courts shoulder a great responsibility while considering a rape case — Such cases must be considered with utmost sensitivity — Courts should examine broader probabilities of a case and not get swayed by minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix, which are not of a fatal nature, to throw out an otherwise reliable prosecution case (Para 17). State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980: AIR 2001 SC 2075.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on

[9331] — S. 376 — Approach — Need of considering a self-respecting woman's state of mind, stressed

The trial Judge convicted A-1 and A-2 under Sections 376 and 506 Part II IPC for allegedly taking the two victim sisters in an auto and raping them after taking them in a wrong direction. The High Court by the impugned order dismissed the appeal against their conviction.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

In a case of rape, particularly if the victims are illiterate and uneducated, their statements have to be accepted in toto without further corroboration. Any statement of rape is an extremely humiliating experience for a woman and until she is a victim of sex crime, she would not blame anyone but the real culprit. While appreciating the evidence of the prosecutrix, the courts must always keep in mind that no self-respecting woman would put her honour at stake by falsely alleging commission of rape on her and, therefore, ordinarily a look for corroboration of her testimony is unnecessary and uncalled for. (Paras 15 and 17). Santhosh Moolya v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 5 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-2010]

[9332] — S. 376 — Casting stigma on the character of a victim of rape deprecated — Trial judge not justified in characterising a rape victim as a girl of loose character — Court must use self-restraint while recording such finding even if the girl is found to be habituated to sexual intercourse — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 155(4). State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

[9333] — S. 376 — Child rape — Sensitive approach of court needed — Onerous responsibility lies on court to provide proper legal protection to the victims — Constitution of India, Art. 39

Cases involving sexual molestation and assault require a different approach — a sensitive approach and not an approach which a court may adopt in dealing with a normal offence under penal laws. (Para 15)

Child rape cases are cases of perverse lust for sex where even innocent children are not spared in pursuit of sexual pleasure. It is a crime against humanity. In such cases, responsibility on the shoulders of the courts is more onerous so as to provide proper legal protection to these children. Their physical and mental immobility call for such protection. Children are the natural resource of our country. They are the country's future. Hope of tomorrow rests on them. In our country, a girl child is in a very vulnerable position and one of the modes of her exploitation is rape besides other modes of sexual abuse. These factors point towards a different approach required to be adopted. It is necessary for the courts to have a sensitive approach when dealing with cases of child rape. The effect of such a crime on the mind of the child is likely to be lifelong. A special safeguard has been provided for children in the Constitution of India in Article 39. State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

[9334] — S. 376 — Effect of unmerited acquittals on society considered — It leads to more attacks on women and demand for harsher sentence

An unmerited acquittal does no good to the society. If the prosecution has succeeded in making out a convincing case for recording a finding as to the accused being guilty, the court should not lean in favour of acquittal by giving weight to irrelevant or insignificant circumstances or by resorting to technicalities or by assuming doubts and giving benefit thereof where none exists. A doubt, as understood in criminal jurisprudence, has to be a reasonable doubt and not an excuse for a finding in favour of acquittal. An unmerited acquittal encourages wolves in the society being on the prowl for easy prey, more so when the victims of crime are helpless females. It is the spurt in the number of unmerited acquittals recorded by criminal courts which gives rise to the demand for death sentence to the rapists. The courts have to display a greater sense of responsibility and to be more sensitive while dealing with charges of sexual assault on women. (Para 9). State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898: AIR 2000 SC 1812: 2000 Cri LJ 2205.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728; State of Punjab v. Gurmeet Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on [9335] — S. 376 — Exercise of discretion by Magistrate under Ss. 156(3) & 200 CrPC — If proper — Application under S. 156(3) CrPC, but, initiation of proceeding directly under S. 200 CrPC — Warrantedness — Scope of interference by High Court — Application filed under S. 156(3) CrPC by R-3 (alleged rape victim), before appellant Judicial Magistrate, alleging rape by her father-in-law and praying that appellant direct police to register her complaint and investigate case against accused under S. 156(3) — Appellant, after calling for police report and considering all material filed by R-3 finding case unfit to be referred to police for investigation under S. 156(3), therefore, directed application to be registered as complaint and further ordered Registry to present file before her for recording statement of R-3 under S. 200 — However, High Court, while severely criticising appellant for such order, set aside the order and directed appellant to decide application of R-3 within ambit of her power under S. 156(3) and also directed her to pass an order for registration of FIR against erring police officers, who had refused to register FIR of R-3 — Sustainability — If on reading of complaint, Magistrate finds that allegations therein disclose cognizable offence and forwarding of complaint to police for investigation under S. 156(3) will not be conducive to justice, held, Magistrate will be justified in adopting the course suggested in S. 200 — Herein, judicial discretion exercised by appellant was in consonance with scheme postulated by CrPC — There was no material on record to indicate that judicial discretion exercised was either arbitrary or perverse — Hence, there was no occasion for High Court to interfere with discretion exercised judiciously in terms of provisions of CrPC merely because another view was possible — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 156(3), 200 and 482 (Paras 21 to 24). Mona Panwar v. High Court of Judicature of Allahabad, (2011) 3 SCC 496.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and H.L. Gokhale, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-2-2011]

Gulab Chand Upadhyaya v. State of U.P., 2002 Cri LJ 2907 (All); Ram Babu Gupta v. State of U.P., (2001) 43 ACC 50; Chandrika Singh v. State of U.P., (2007) 50 ACC 777; Sukhwasi v. State of U.P., (2007) 59 ACC 739, approved

[9336] — S. 376 — Offence of rape being a serious one court should pay careful attention and show greater sensitivity — Evidence should be appreciated on broader probabilities

In view of the evidence of the prosecutrix, which is corroborated by medical evidence and other items of evidence and in the absence of any consent on the part of the prosecutrix, it is clearly established that the accused had committed rape on the prosecutrix and is liable for the offence punishable under Section 376 IPC. The offence of rape being a serious one, the case should have received careful attention and the Sessions Judge and the High Court should have shown greater sensitivity to these type of cases. The evidence should have been appreciated on broader probabilities and they should not have been carried away by insignificant contradictions. (Para 16). State of H.P. v. Mango Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331: AIR 2000 SC 2798.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2000]

[9337] — S. 376 — Rape — Courts should be strict and vigilant to protect the society from such evils — But it is equally important that there must be fairness to all sides — Purpose of criminal law and duty of court while dealing with criminal cases, discussed

It is true that the evidence of the prosecutrix in a rape case is to be given due weight. Sexual violence is a dehumanising act and it is an unlawful encroachment into the right to privacy and sanctity of a woman. The courts also should be strict and vigilant to protect society from such evils. It is in the interest of the society that serious crimes like rape should be effectively investigated. It is equally important that there must be fairness to all sides. In a criminal case, the court has to consider the triangulation of interests. It involves taking into account the position of the accused, the victim and his or her family and the public. The purpose of criminal law is to permit everyone to go about their daily lives without fear of harm to person or property. (Para 9). Sudhansu Sekhar Sahoo v. State of Orissa, (2002) 10 SCC 743: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1484: AIR 2003 SC 2136.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2002]

18. Judge/Presiding Judge/Court — Role of in rape cases (contd.)

[9338] — S. 376 — Rape cases — Proof in — Duty of court to deal with such cases with utmost sensitivity — Minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the witnesses should not be a ground for throwing out allegations of rape

The courts are expected to show great responsibility while trying an accused on charges of rape. They must deal with such cases with utmost sensitivity. The courts should examine the broader probabilities of a case and not get swayed by minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the witnesses, which are not of a fatal nature to throw out allegations of rape. This is all the more important because of late crime against women in general and rape in particular is on the increase. It is an irony that while we are celebrating woman's rights in all spheres, we show little or no concern for her honour. It is a sad reflection and it must be emphasised that the courts must deal with rape cases in particular with utmost sensitivity and appreciate the evidence in the totality of the background of the entire case and not in isolation. State of A.P. v. Gangula Satya Murthy, (1997) 1 SCC 272: 1997 SCC (Cri) 325: AIR 1997 SC 1588: 1997 Cri LJ 774.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1996]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on [9339] — S. 376 — Rape on child — Unmerited acquittals, particularly in crimes against child encourage the criminals — Court must be sensitive while dealing with such cases. State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-1994]

[9340] — S. 376 — Rape trial — Duty of court, while evaluating evidence of victim, outlined — Keeping of Indian society's belief and value systems in mind, while examining evidence of prosecutrix — Need by courts for, emphasised

The important thing that the court has to bear in mind is that what is lost by a rape victim is face. The victim loses value as a person. Indian society is a conservative society and, therefore, a woman and more so a young unmarried woman will not put her reputation in peril by alleging falsely about forcible sexual assault. In examining the evidence of the prosecutrix, the courts must be alive to the conditions prevalent in the Indian society and must not be swayed by beliefs in other countries. The courts must be sensitive and responsive to the plight of the female victim of sexual assault. Society's belief and value systems need to be kept uppermost in mind, as rape is the worst form of women's oppression. A forcible sexual assault brings in humiliation, feeling of disgust, tremendous embarrassment, sense of shame, trauma and lifelong emotional scar to a victim and it is, therefore, most unlikely of a woman, and more so by a young woman, roping in somebody falsely in the crime of rape. The stigma that attaches to the victim of rape in Indian society ordinarily rules out the levelling of false accusations. An Indian woman traditionally will not concoct an untruthful story and bring charges of rape for the purpose of blackmail, hatred, spite or revenge. (Paras 26 to 28). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728, relied on.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

[9341] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Territorial jurisdiction — Kidnapping and rape forming part of same transaction — Trial court continuing proceedings for kidnapping but dropping charge for rape, on ground of lack of territorial jurisdiction — Held, impermissible — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 228 and 220 (Para 4). Parshotam Lal v. State of Punjab, (2010) 1 SCC 65.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2009]

[9342] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Bar on Court Martial's jurisdiction to try the offence of rape, held, not applicable to the offence of attempting to commit rape — Provisions of Sch. I to CrPC in respect of Ss. 511 and 376 IPC could not be invoked to reach a different conclusion as the question of Court Martial's jurisdiction to try an offence has to be adjudged from the provisions of the Army Act itself and not with reference to CrPC — CrPC, 1973, S. 26(a)(ii) & (iii) and Sch. I — Army Act, 1950 — S. 70 (Para 2). Madan Lal v. Union of India, (2002) 10 SCC 185.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-9-1999]

State v. Jaikaran Singh, AIR 1955 NUC 1721 (All), overruled

19. Juvenile/Child accused

[9343] — S. 376 — Juvenile delinquents — Appropriate sentence when convicted for rape — Background, social circumstances, etc. must be considered — Putting the child under parental control rather than in an approved school considered. Satto v. State of U.P., (1979) 2 SCC 628: 1979 SCC (Cri) 534: AIR 1979 SC 1519: 1979 Cri LJ 943: (1979) 16 ACC 264: 1979 ALJ 904.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer[1] and R.S. Pathak[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1979]

[9344] — Ss. 376 and 82, 83 — Juvenile delinquent — Need for reformatory approach in awarding punishment — Accused aged 13 committing rape on child of 2 years — Sentence reduced to one year's rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs 2000 imposed — Fine if realised to be paid to victim's mother. Kakoo v. State of H.P., (1976) 2 SCC 215: 1976 SCC (Cri) 270: AIR 1976 SC 1991: 1976 Cri LJ 1545.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-1976]

[9345] — S. 376 r/w S. 511 — Sentencing of juvenile — Appellant aged 16 years 5 months and 19 days on date of occurrence — Hence held, was a juvenile, and thus, could not be compelled to undergo sentence of RI as imposed by trial court and affirmed by High Court — Setting aside sentence, appellant directed to be produced before Juvenile Justice Board for passing appropriate sentence in consonance with 2000 Act — Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act, 2000, Ss. 2(k), 2(l), 7-A, 20 and 64 (as amended by Act 33 of 2006 w.e.f. 22-8-2006) (Paras 13 to 15). Daya Nand v. State of Haryana, (2011) 2 SCC 224.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-2011]

Hari Ram v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 13 SCC 211: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 987; Dharambir v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 5 SCC 344: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1274; Mohan Mali v. State of M.P., (2010) 6 SCC 669: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 208, followed

Pratap Singh v. State of Jharkhand, (2005) 3 SCC 551: 2005 SCC (Cri) 742, held, distinguished/not applicable

20. Medical Jurisprudence/Evidence

Synopsis

(a) Age of prosecutrix or accused 631
(b) DNA test 637
(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof 638
(d) Medical/Expert opinion 651
(e) Medical examination of prosecutrix 651
(f) Medical examination of accused 651
(g) Medico-legal report/Doctor 651
(h) Time of rape 652
(i) Medical evidence of sex/rape 653

(a) Age of prosecutrix or accused

See also 'B.6. Rape of minor/Statutory rape', above

[9346] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Age — Parameters for determination of — Stated — On facts, held, as rightly found by courts below prosecutrix was a minor at time of alleged occurrence (Paras 27 to 30 and 38). Vijay v. State of M.P., (2010) 8 SCC 191: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2010]

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, 23rd Edn., relied on [9347] — Ss. 375, 376 and 366 — Rape — Age — Victim if minor on date of incident — Inference from date of marriage of parents and birth of siblings — On facts, held, as per evidence of victim's parents, they got married only 20 years prior to the date of incident — Victim had two elder sisters M and S — Eldest M was born one-and-a-half years after marriage of her parents and S was one-and-a-half years younger to M — Victim was younger to S by about one-and-a-half years — Hence, on the date of incident, age of victim was less than 16 years — Being parents of victim, they were the most natural and reliable witnesses on this point — There was no reason to disbelieve them — Also, PW 2 (the doctor) examined victim radiologically (after about one-and-a-half years from abduction and rape) and opined that her age could be between 14 and 17½ years as on the date of examination — Hence, concurrent finding of victim being a minor, upheld (Paras 5, 7, 11 and 12). Fateh Chand v. State of Haryana, (2009) 15 SCC 543: AIR 2009 SC 2729: (2009) 81 AIC 216 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 3942.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

[9348] — Ss. 375, 376 and 366 — Rape — Age of prosecutrix — Determination of — Materials to be relied on — Date of birth as recorded in the birth register of the Municipal Corporation and the register of the hospital where the prosecutrix was born, was 29-11-1964 (in which case the prosecutrix was below sixteen years of age on the date the offence was committed), while the date of birth recorded in the school-leaving certificate was 29-6-1963 (in which case she was above sixteen years on the date the offence was committed) — Submission by accused that since these certificates were capable of two opinions, the one in his favour should be accepted, and since the sexual intercourse was consensual, unless it is established that the prosecutrix was below 16 years of age, he was not liable to be punished in view of definition of "rape" under S. 375 clause sixthly — Held, this submission deserves outright rejection — Date of birth of prosecutrix is no more in controversy in view of the concurrent findings of the trial court and the High Court that it was 29-11-1964, and evidence of her parents which is corroborated by contemporaneous documents produced by the prosecution — In case of determination of birth date, the best evidence is that of parents — Normally, the age recorded in the school certificate is considered to be the correct determination of age, provided the parents furnish correct age of the ward at the time of admission and it is authenticated — But in the instant case, the school-leaving certificate relied on by the accused is not authentic and none had been examined to prove it — Besides, in the cross-examination her father had clarified that the date recorded in school-leaving certificate was incorrect — Very often parents furnish incorrect date of birth to school authorities to make up age in order to secure admission for their children — Moreover, medical opinion of the doctor who conducted ossification test that the prosecutrix was 18-19 years of age not binding as against the ocular evidence — The two unimpeachable documents produced by the prosecution (birth register of the Corporation and register of the hospital where prosecutrix was born), corroborated by statements of her parents in all material particulars, clearly establish that prosecutrix was born on 29-11-1964, and her consent, if any, was immaterial under clause sixthly of S. 375 (Paras 10, 11, 12, 17, 18, 20 and 22). Vishnu v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 1 SCC 283: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 217: AIR 2006 SC 508: (2006) 37 AIC 310 (SC): 2006 Cri LJ 303.

20.(a) Age of prosecutrix or accused (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2005]

Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728, relied on [9349] — S. 375 Sixthly — Rape — Whether prosecutrix was under 16 years of age at the time of the incident — Proof of age of prosecutrix — School transfer certificate issued by Headmaster of the primary/secondary school produced in support after commencement of trial — Date of birth mentioned therein was as declared by prosecutrix's father but father in his evidence not stating anything about the age — No explanation forthcoming why investigating officer did not obtain the certificate in the course of investigation and why certificate was not produced by her father — Certificate was produced by a clerk in court (mujeeb) but he could not explain who applied for it and how he came in possession of it — An advocate's clerk also examined to prove the certificate but he too had no knowledge about its issuance nor had he seen it earlier and he had met the Headmaster about 10 or 15 years back — Thus evidence of these two witnesses did not throw any light on the authenticity and genuineness of the certificate — Original birth register was not before the court and the certificate had not come from proper custody — Held, the certificate must be excluded from consideration — On the other hand, assessment of medical officer being that age of the girl was 16-17 years, defence was entitled to rely on higher side of the age and as such the girl would be more than 16 years when the alleged offence had taken place (Paras 7 to 11). Deelip Singh v. State of Bihar, (2005) 1 SCC 88: 2005 SCC (Cri) 253: AIR 2005 SC 203: (2005) 2 Mah LJ 147.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-2004]

[9350] — Ss. 375 Sixthly and 376 — Age of prosecutrix — Determination of — Medical evidence based on various tests showing that the prosecutrix was of 18 to 20 years — Entry in school register made on the basis of information given by her parents showing her age to be below 16 years — Prosecutrix stating that her age could extend to 16 or 17 years also — Held, evidence regarding age doubtful and not very convincing. State of Karnataka v. Sureshbabu Puk Raj Porral, (1994) 1 SCC 468: 1994 SCC (Cri) 435: AIR 1994 SC 966: 1994 Cri LJ 1216.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-1993]

[9351] — S. 376 — Age of girl — Proof of — Court or jury should base its conclusions upon all the facts and circumstance disclosed by the physical features and the oral evidence available

On the point of the age of the girl the only conclusive piece of evidence may be the birth certificate, but, unfortunately, in this country such a document is not ordinarily available. The court or jury has to base its conclusions upon all the facts and circumstances disclosed on examining all the physical features of the person whose age is in question, in conjunction with such oral testimony as may be available. Sidheswar Ganguly v. State of W.B., AIR 1958 SC 143: 1958 SCR 749: 1958 Cri LJ 273, 276, 27.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Sinha and J.L. Kapur, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-1957]

[9352] — S. 376 — Age of prosecutrix — Determination of — Determined by a doctor — Adding of two years to — Rule regarding, if any — Held, there is no such rule, much less an absolute one, that two years have to be added to age determined by a doctor — Herein, doctor, on basis of her x-ray as well as physical examination, opined that prosecutrix was of 17 years — Trial court, on consideration of entire evidence, recorded a categorical finding that prosecutrix was about 17½ years of age at time of occurrence — However, High Court conjectured that age of prosecutrix could be even 19 years, done by adding two years to age opined by doctor — Held, view of trial court regarding age of prosecutrix was right — High Court erred in observing as aforesaid. State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

State of Karnataka v. Bantara Sudhakara, (2008) 11 SCC 38: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 955, relied on [9353] — S. 376 — Evidence as to age — Entries in school register — Certified copies from school registers and statements of incumbent and her father regarding date of birth, held, amounted to evidence under Evidence Act — Entries in school registers made ante litem motam. Mohd. Ikram Hussain v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 1625, 1631: (1964) 5 SCR 86: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 590: (1964) All Cri R 252.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M. Hidayatullah and K.C. Das Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-1963]

[9354] — S. 376 — Prosecutrix never subjected to sexual intercourse without her consent — Age, on reconsideration of the evidence, held not proved to be below 16 years at the material time — Copy of school certificate from a private school not reliable — Medical evidence found contradictory — Prosecutrix herself wrote her age in the panchnama immediately after the occurrence as 19 years — Conviction set aside. Lalta Prasad v. State of M.P., (1979) 4 SCC 193: 1979 SCC (Cri) 954: AIR 1979 SC 1276: 1979 Cri LJ 867.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1979]

[9355] — S. 376 — Rape — Age — When relevant — Determination of age — School certificate — Probative value — Entry in primary school register not produced and proved — Not possible to ascertain who had given date of birth of prosecutrix as 13-2-1975 at time of initial admission — Prosecutrix cannot be held to be a major — Further held, if prosecution establishes that there was no consent, issue of majority becomes irrelevant (Paras 26 to 29 and 20 to 25)

The entry made in the official record by an official or person authorised in performance of an official duty is admissible under Section 35 of the Evidence Act but the party may still ask the court/authority to examine its probative value. The authenticity of the entry would depend as to on whose instruction/information such entry stood recorded and what was his source of information. Thus, entry in school register/certificate requires to be proved in accordance with law. Standard of proof for the same remains as in any other civil and criminal case. (Para 28)

There is nothing on record to corroborate the date of birth of the prosecutrix recorded in the school register. It is not possible to ascertain as to who was the person who had given her date of birth as 13-2-1975 at the time of initial admission in the primary school. More so, it cannot be ascertained as who was the person who had recorded her date of birth in the primary school register. More so, the entry in respect of the date of birth of the prosecutrix in the primary school register has not been produced and proved before the trial court. Thus, in view of the above, it cannot be held with certainty that the prosecutrix was a major. Be that as it may, the issue of majority becomes irrelevant if the prosecution successfully establishes that it was not a consent case. (Para 29). Satpal Singh v. State of Haryana, (2010) 8 SCC 714: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1081: (2010) 93 AIC 50 (SC): 2010 Cri LJ 4283.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2010]

State of Bihar v. Radha Krishna Singh, (1983) 3 SCC 118; Ram Prasad Sharma v. State of Bihar, (1969) 2 SCC 359; Ram Murti v. State of Haryana, (1970) 3 SCC 21: 1970 SCC (Cri) 371; Dayaram v. Dawalatshah, (1971) 1 SCC 358; Harpal Singh v. State of H.P., (1981) 1 SCC 560: 1981 SCC (Cri) 208; Ravinder Singh Gorkhi v. State of U.P., (2006) 5 SCC 584: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 632; Babloo Pasi v. State of Jharkhand, (2008) 13 SCC 133: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 266; Desh Raj v. Bodh Raj, (2008) 2 SCC 186; Ram Suresh Singh v. Prabhat Singh, (2009) 6 SCC 681: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1194; Mohd. Ikram Hussain v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 1625: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 590; Santenu Mitra v. State of W.B., (1998) 5 SCC 697: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1381; Durga Singh v. Tholu, AIR 1963 SC 361; Birad Mal Singhvi v. Anand Purohit, 1988 Supp SCC 604; Brij Mohan Singh v. Priya Brat Narain Sinha, AIR 1965 SC 282; Vishnu v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 1 SCC 283: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 217, relied on [9356] — S. 376 — Rape — Age of minor victim — Doctor on basis of x-rays of victim opining that age of victim appeared to be 13 years with a possible variation of 3 years — Held, trial court rightly rejected contention of respondent alleging that therefore she was older than 13 years — No reasons could be found to disbelieve victim's evidence (Para 14). State of M.P. v. Balu, (2005) 1 SCC 108: 2005 SCC (Cri) 270: AIR 2005 SC 222: 2005 Cri LJ 335: (2005) 25 AIC 369 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-2004]

20.(a) Age of prosecutrix or accused (contd.)

[9357] — S. 376 — Rape — Age of prosecutrix — Determination of — Materials that may be relied upon — *In the present case, date of birth certificate of the prosecutrix produced and the person issuing the same examined — Relying on the decision in*Lekhram case, (2006) 5 SCC 736, held, findings of trial court that victim girl was minor did not warrant interference — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 35 and 45 (Paras 11 and 13). Arjun Singh v. State of H.P., (2009) 4 SCC 18: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 33: AIR 2009 SC 1568: (2009) 75 AIC 19 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 1332.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2009]

Vishnu v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 1 SCC 283: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 217; State of Chhattisgarh v. Lekhram, (2006) 5 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 66; Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551, relied on

Halsbury's Statutes of England and Wales, 4th Edn., Vol. 12; Encyclopaedia of Crime and Justice, Vol. 4, p. 1356; Stephen's Criminal Law, 9th Edn., p. 262; 1 Hon. 6, 1a, 9 Edw. 4, 26 a (Hale PC 628), cited

[9358] — S. 376 — Rape — Age of prosecutrix — Proof — Entry in school register showing date of birth of prosecutrix to be below 16 years of age at the time of the occurrence — Held, such entry admissible in evidence — It may not be conclusive but has evidentiary value — On facts, as the same was amply corroborated by oral testimony of Headmaster and a teacher of the school, and father of the prosecutrix, prosecution proved its case — Hence defence that accused had sexual intercourse with consent of prosecutrix was of no consequence — Trial court rightly convicted accused-respondent under S. 376

The respondent was working in the house of the father of the prosecutrix. The prosecutrix was married in 1985. After performance of gauna ceremony she came back to her parents' place from her in-laws' house. The respondent was alleged to have induced her to leave the village along with him in the night intervening between February 25 and 26, 1986. A first information report was lodged. On demand of proof of age of the prosecutrix by the officer in-charge of the police station, the father of the prosecutrix filed a certificate as per school register. Before the trial court prosecution adduced evidence showing that as on 25-2-1986, the prosecutrix was a minor. The Headmaster of the Primary Govt. School stated on oath that while taking admission, her mother disclosed about the date of birth on the basis of which the same was recorded in the school register as 25-12-1970. The Assistant Teacher of the school proved that the entries in the school register relating to the date of birth of the prosecutrix had been written by him as certified by her mother. According to the father of the prosecutrix his eldest daughter was born in 1966 and the second daughter was born in 1968 and the prosecutrix was born on 25-12-1970. The prosecutrix admitted that she was the third child of her parents and two of her sisters are elder to her. The trial court found that the entry in the school register showing the date of birth of the prosecutrix to be 25-12-1970 was proved and as such on the date of occurrence she was a minor. The trial court proceeded on the basis that having regard to the age of the prosecutrix the stand of the defence that the accused had sexual intercourse with her with consent was of little importance. It opined that the respondent having not disputed that he had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix, the charge of rape under Section 376 IPC was proved. However, taking a lenient view of the matter, the respondent was sentenced to undergo 3 years' rigorous imprisonment. In appeal, the High Court reversed the judgment of the trial court on the premise that entries made in a school register was not conclusive evidence as regards the date of birth of the prosecutrix. The sole question before the Supreme Court was whether the State brought enough materials to prove that the prosecutrix was a minor as on the date of the occurrence.

Allowing the State's appeal,

Held :

A register maintained in a school is admissible in evidence to prove date of birth of the person concerned in terms of Section 35 of the Evidence Act. Such dates of births are recorded in the school register by the authorities in discharge of their public duty. It may be true that an entry in the school register is not conclusive but it has evidentiary value. Such evidentiary value of a school register is corroborated by oral evidence in this case as the same was recorded on the basis of the statement of the mother of the prosecutrix. (Paras 12 and 13)

Only because the father of the prosecutrix could not state about the date of birth of his other children, the same, by itself, would not mean that he had been deposing falsely. He, in answer to the queries made by the counsel for the parties, categorically stated about the year in which his other children were born. His statement in this behalf appears to be consistent and if the said statements were corroborative of the entries made in the register in the school, there was no reason as to why the High Court should have disbelieved the same. (Para 14)

The prosecutrix took admission in the year 1977. She was, therefore, about 6-7 years old at that time. She was admitted in Class I. Even by the village standard, she took admission in the school a bit late. She was married in the year 1985 when she was evidently a minor. She stayed in her in-laws' place for some time and after the "gauna" ceremony, she came back. The materials on record as regards the age of the prosecutrix were, therefore, required to be considered in the aforementioned backdrop. (Para 13)

It must, therefore, be held that the High Court committed a serious error in passing the impugned judgment. It cannot, therefore, be sustained. It is set aside accordingly. (Para 14). State of Chhattisgarh v. Lekhram, (2006) 5 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 66: AIR 2006 SC 1746: 2006 Cri LJ 2139.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2006]

[9359] — S. 376 — Rape — Age of prosecutrix — Proof — Rejection of documentary evidence produced by Headmaster of school (PW 16) by High Court — Consent — Examination of question of, in absence of any plea — Propriety — A-1 and A-2 alleged to have raped PW 1 and PW 2 respectively when they had gone to collect their blouses from A-2 who was a tailor — Held, so far as the reasonings of the High Court are concerned, for rejecting the documentary evidence they border on absurdity — All types of surmises and conjectures have been arrived at — High Court discarded evidence of PW 16 on the ground that the date of birth may not have been recorded on the basis of any medical certificate or other documentary evidence — It further recorded a finding that the two certificates may not relate to the victims though it specifically recorded that there was no such challenge raised by the accused — High Court's conclusions in this regard are not only fallacious but contrary to the evidence — Additionally, merely because the doctor's evidence showed that the victims belong to the age group of 14 to 16, to conclude that two years' age has to be added to the upper age-limit was without any foundation — Moreover, High Court though accepting that there was sexual intercourse, rejecting the plea of false implication and examining the question of consent in spite of the fact that accused had not taken the stand that there was any consent — On the contrary, they pleaded that they were falsely implicated — Judgment of High Court unsustainable and set aside (Paras 2, 3, 8, 11, 12 and 13). State of Karnataka v. Bantara Sudhakara, (2008) 11 SCC 38: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 955.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-7-2008]

State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: 2005 SCC (Cri) 327, considered and relied on [9360] — Ss. 376, 363 and 366 — Date of birth — Proof — Matters to be considered — Respondent-accused alleged to have kidnapped the prosecutrix and also to have had sexual intercourse with her at various places he took her to — Her date of birth as recorded in official documents was 4-6-1976 and incident of kidnapping occurring on 21-4-1991 — As such she was aged 14 years 10 months and 17 days at the time of incident — Her father also stating that she was 14 years old — However, High Court acquitting the accused holding that there was consent and the girl was more than 16 years — It doing so by concluding that (i) medical evidence showed that the girl was aged above 14 years but below 16 years with an error margin of one year, and hence official documents were of no consequence; (ii) it rejecting the school records which were stated to be based on horoscope because horoscope was not produced; (iii) it discarding the documentary evidence even when the headmaster of school had deposed and produced the records on ground that entry in the school register was not in the handwriting of headmaster and he could not have deposed about the date of birth — Held, there was no basis for the High Court to conclude that the entry cannot be taken to be above suspicion — High Court abruptly concluded that normally for various reasons the guardians do understate the age of their children at the time of admission in the school without any material or basis for coming to such conclusion — High Court in the absence of any evidence to the contrary should not have come to hold that the date of birth of the prosecutrix was not established and the school leaving certificate and the school register are not conclusive — Moreover, no question was put to the victim in cross-examination about the date of birth — Further, there being no requirement that at the time of admission documents are to be produced as regards the age of the student finding of High Court that no document was produced at the time of admission and a horoscope was purportedly produced, erroneous — Practically, there was no analysis of the evidence on record and abrupt conclusions, mostly based on surmises, were arrived at — Hence, inevitable conclusion is that the judgment of the High Court is unsustainable, deserves to be set aside (Paras 9 to 14). State of Maharashtra v. Gajanan, (2008) 8 SCC 38: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 418: 2008 Cri LJ 3549.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-7-2008]

20.(a) Age of prosecutrix or accused (contd.)

[9361] — Ss. 376, 363 and 366-A — Rape, kidnapping and procuration of minor girl — Age of minor — Benefit of doubt — When available — Prosecution failing to prove age of prosecutrix — Prosecutrix found as being habitual to sex and her secondary sexual characteristics well developed (as per clinical report of PW 1) — Appellant-accused frequently visiting prosecutrix's house — Prosecutrix in love with appellant, never resisting being repeatedly deflowered by him — Allegation that prosecutrix under threat accompanied appellant on a bicycle to another village where she was raped by appellant and then brought back home — Non-performance of tests for proving age of prosecutrix prescribed by the doctor, held, is a serious flaw in prosecution version — In such circumstances, held, a close and careful examination of age of prosecutrix is imperative, which if not proved, accused is entitled to benefit of doubt, as in present case

The appellant was convicted by the trial court under Sections 363, 366-A and 376 IPC. The appellant belonged to the same caste and gotra of the prosecutrix and he was visiting the house of the prosecutrix frequently. The finding of the High Court is that the prosecutrix fell in love with the appellant. The High Court also found that she did not ever resist her being repeatedly deflowered by the appellant.

The appellant submitted before the court that he was falsely implicated. No defence evidence was adduced on behalf of the appellant. Admittedly, no test identification parade was conducted in this case. The trial court on the basis of evidence on record came to the conclusion that the appellant kidnapped a minor girl and induced her to go to Village Kalka Madlya and committed rape on her and convicted the appellant. The High Court also found that the offences under Sections 363, 366-A and 376 IPC are proved against the appellant. The appellant aggrieved by the impugned judgment preferred this appeal on various grounds.

Allowing the appeal of the accused,

Held :

The short question in this appeal was as to whether the prosecutrix was a minor. It is clearly borne out from the evidence on record that the appellant belonged to the same caste and gotra of the prosecutrix and was a frequent visitor to the house of the prosecutrix. There was a love affair between them and the court also observed that she did not ever resist her being repeatedly deflowered by the appellant. (Paras 24 and 23)

PW 1, who had clinically examined the prosecutrix, found that her secondary sex characters were well developed. PW 1, after clinical examination of the prosecutrix, categorically observed that possibility cannot be ruled out that the prosecutrix was habitual to sex. In her report, PW 1 also stated that keeping in view the clinical examination, the possibility of rape cannot be ruled out. PW 2 made medico-legal examination of the appellant and found that he had the ability to perform sexual intercourse. In this background, close and careful determination of the age of the prosecutrix is imperative. (Paras 24, 7 and 23)

In a criminal case, the conviction of the appellant cannot be based on an approximate date which is not supported by any record. It would be quite unsafe to base conviction on an approximate date. PW 8, the father of the prosecutrix also could not give the correct date of birth of the prosecutrix. PW 8 stated that he was giving an approximate date without any basis or record. (Para 26)

The failure of getting the prosecutrix examined from the dental surgeon or the radiologist despite the fact that she was referred to them by PW 1 is a serious flaw in the prosecution version. It is not a rule that all these tests must be performed in all cases, but in the instant case, in the absence of primary evidence, reports of the dental surgeon and the radiologist would have helped in arriving at the conclusion regarding the age of the prosecutrix. (Para 24)

The prosecution also failed to produce any admission form of the school which would have been primary evidence regarding the age of the prosecutrix. The school leaving certificate produced by the prosecution was also procured six days after the incident and three days after the arrest of the appellant. As per that certificate also, she joined the school in the middle of the session and left the school in the middle of the session. The attendance in the school of 100 days is also not reliable. The prosecutrix was admitted in the school by A, her brother. A was not examined. The alleged school leaving certificate on the basis of which the age was entered in the school was not produced. (Para 25)

On consideration of the totality of the facts and circumstances of this case, it would be unsafe to convict the appellant when there are so many infirmities, holes and lacunae in the prosecution version. The appellant is clearly entitled to the benefit of doubt and consequently the appeal filed by the appellant deserves to be allowed. The appellant is directed to be released forthwith, if not required in any case. (Para 27). Sunil v. State of Haryana, (2010) 1 SCC 742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2009]

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, referred to

[9362] — Ss. 376 & 375 and 366 — Rape — Age of prosecutrix/victim — Medical evidence showing age of girl to be between 17 and 19 yrs — X-ray report giving approximate age to be between 17 and 18 yrs — Transfer certificate of a government school showing age not having been duly proved by witnesses who signed it — Held, prosecution failed to prove that girl was a minor, at relevant date — There is no satisfactory evidence to indicate that she was a minor — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 45 and 35

The prosecution has failed to prove that the girl was a minor, at the relevant date. The High Court without examining the factual and legal issues unnecessarily rushed to the conclusion that the girl was a minor at the time of the alleged abduction. There is no satisfactory evidence to indicate that she was a minor. (Paras 47 and 49)

The expert evidence does not rule out the possibility of the girl being a major. PW 13 who conducted the medical examination, opined that the age of the victim was between 17 to 19 years. He clearly stated that a medical examination would only point out the age approximately with a variation of two years. (Paras 47, 46 and 8)

PW 8, the x-ray expert (Radiologist) clearly stated that medical evidence can only fix the age approximately and this may vary from individual to individual. PW 8 gave the victim's age as above 17 years and below 18 years. (Paras 44, 45 and 8). Alamelu v. State, (2011) 2 SCC 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2011]

Jaya Mala v. Govt. of J&K, (1982) 2 SCC 538: 1982 SCC (Cri) 502; Birad Mal Singhvi v. Anand Purohit, 1988 Supp SCC 604; Narbada Devi Gupta v. Birendra Kumar Jaiswal, (2003) 8 SCC 745; Ravinder Singh Gorkhi v. State of U.P., (2006) 5 SCC 584: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 632, relied on [9363] — Ss. 376 & 375 and 366 — Rape — Age of prosecutrix/victim — Transfer certificate of a government school — Evidentiary value, stated — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 35

The date of birth mentioned in the transfer certificate would have no evidentiary value unless the person, who made the entry or who gave the date of birth is examined. The Headmaster has not been examined at all. (Paras 47, 40 and 44)

The transfer certificate has been issued by a government school and has been duly signed by the Headmaster. Therefore, it would be admissible in evidence under Section 35 of the Evidence Act, 1872. However, the admissibility of such a document would be of not much evidentiary value to prove the age of the girl in the absence of the material on the basis of which the age was recorded. (Para 40). Alamelu v. State, (2011) 2 SCC 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2011]

[9364] — Ss. 376 and 375 Sixthly — Age of prosecutrix — Evidence regarding — Certificate of Radiologist, entry in admission register of the school in which she was student and certified copy of entry in birth register showing that she was of 15 years at the time of occurrence, adduced — Entry in the birth register, even in absence of officer/Chowkidar who recorded it, held, admissible under S. 35, Evidence Act as it was made by the concerned official in discharge of his official duties — That the prosecutrix was below 16 years at the time of occurrence, held on facts, established — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 35. Harpal Singh v. State of H.P., (1981) 1 SCC 560: 1981 SCC (Cri) 208: AIR 1981 SC 361: 1981 Cri LJ 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1980]

[9365] — Ss. 376 and 506 — Rape — Minor — Age of victim — Proof — School records produced by prosecution — Two documents indicating the age of victim to be 14 years — Held, High Court was not justified in ignoring the evidentiary value of the said documents merely because there was another document produced by the prosecution which did not relate to victim — Hence, on the date of occurrence (28-5-1993) and even when the FIR was lodged (20-11-1993), the victim was about 14 years of age — High Court erred in holding that her age was more than 16 years (Para 14). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

(b) DNA test

See also under Criminal Trial in Vol. 20, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. or Vol. 3 of SC on CrPC and Criminal Trial

[9366] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape trial — DNA test — Expert opinion on DNA profiling — Held, court cannot substitute its own opinion for that of an expert, especially in case of complex subject like DNA profiling — Further held, opinion of two experts from Centre for Cellular & Molecular Biology (CCMB), Hyderabad could not be rejected by trial court by relying on text books, particularly when questions raised by trial court were not put to experts during their deposition — DNA report must be accepted as scientifically accurate and an exact science — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 53-A and 53 — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 45 and 46

20.(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof

The court cannot substitute its own opinion for that of an expert, more particularly in a science such as DNA profiling which is a recent development. Dr. Lalji Singh in his examination-in-chief deposed that he had been involved with the DNA technology ever since the year 1974 and he had returned to India from the UK in 1987 and joined CCMB, Hyderabad and had developed indigenous methods and techniques for DNA fingerprinting which were now being used in this country. The expertise and experience of Dr. Lalji Singh in his field has been recognised by the Supreme Court in Kamalanantha case, (2005) 5 SCC 194. CW 1 Dr. G.V. Rao was a scientist of equal repute and he had in fact conducted the tests under the supervision of Dr. Lalji Singh. It was not even disputed before the Supreme Court during the course of arguments that these two scientists were persons of eminence and that the laboratory in question was also held in the highest esteem in India. (Paras 65 and 66)

The statements of Dr. Lalji Singh and Dr. G.V. Rao reveal that the samples had been tested as per the procedure developed by the laboratory, that the samples were sufficient for the purposes of comparison and that there was no possibility of the samples having been contaminated or tampered with. The two scientists gave very comprehensive statements supported by documents that DNA of the semen stains on the swabs and slides and the underwear of the deceased and the blood samples of the appellant was from a single source and that source was the appellant. (Para 67)

Not a single question was put to PW Dr. Lalji Singh as to the accuracy of the methodology or the procedure followed for DNA profiling. The trial court has referred to a large number of textbooks and has given adverse findings on the accuracy of the tests carried out in the present case. These conclusions cannot be accepted as the court has substituted its own opinion ignoring the complexity of the issue on a highly technical subject, more particularly as the questions raised by the trial court had not been put to the expert witnesses. It would be a dangerous doctrine to lay down that the report of an expert witness could be brushed aside by making reference to some text on that subject without such text being put to the expert. The court cannot usurp the function of an expert. (Para 68)

The trial court was not justified in rejecting the DNA report, as nothing adverse could be pointed out against the two experts who had submitted it. The DNA report must be accepted as scientifically accurate and an exact science. In arriving at its conclusions, the trial court was also influenced by the fact that the semen swabs and slides and the blood samples of the appellant had not been kept in proper custody and had been tampered with. The trial court was in error on this score. (Para 71). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

Bhagwan Das v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1957 SC 589: 1957 Cri LJ 889; Gambhir v. State of Maharashtra, (1982) 2 SCC 351: 1982 SCC (Cri) 431; Kamti Devi v. Poshi Ram, (2001) 5 SCC 311: 2001 SCC (Cri) 892, relied on

(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof

[9367] — S. 375 — Medical evidence — Rape — 10 or 12 years' old virgin girl with hymen intact having been subjected to rape — Injuries are likely to be on the male organ of the culprit — Absence of any such injuries on the male organs of accused — Circumstance points to their innocence

If a girl of 10 or 12 years who is a virgin and whose hymen is intact is subjected to rape by a fully developed man, there are likely to be injuries on the male organ of the man. No injury was, however, detected by the doctor on the male organs of any of the two accused. The absence of such injuries on the male organs of the accused would thus point to their innocence. Rahim Beg v. State of U.P., (1972) 3 SCC 759: 1972 SCC (Cri) 827: AIR 1973 SC 343: 1972 Cri LJ 1260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Shelat and H.R. Khanna, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1972]

[9368] — S. 375 — Rape — Absence of injury — Victim habituated to sexual intercourse — High Court's acquittal of the accused based inter alia on the absence of injury on the prosecutrix, disapproved — Matter remanded to be heard afresh

The medical evidence showed that she was habituated to sexual intercourse and there was no injury on her body. The High Court held the prosecution case highly doubtful and acquitted the accused. The trial court had noticed as to how even in the absence of any external injury an offence could have been committed after analysing the doctor's evidence. The High Court's judgment is practically unreasoned and its approach in dealing with the appeal is rather casual, disclosing non-application of mind. (Paras 8 to 10). State of U.P. v. Pappu, (2005) 3 SCC 594: 2005 SCC (Cri) 780: AIR 2005 SC 1248: 2005 Cri LJ 331.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2004]

[9369] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Examination of accused — External marks on the body of accused — Age of victim and delay as factors — Held, such marks need not be present when the victim was a girl of age of 5 years 6 months — Besides, nearly two days had already passed when medico-legal examination was conducted on the accused in the present case

Examination of the accused revealed the following results:

"The general behaviour of the patient was normal. The mental condition was normal. Bath not taken for the last five days. Urine passed many times. Passing motion normally. No stains were found on the body of the patient, clothing and undergarments. No injury marks were present on genitals. No venereal disease was found. On examination of genitals, pubic hairs were present. Penis normal, prepuce retracted, frenum normal. Testicles were normal. There were following injuries present on his person: Multiple contusions, some of them were pattered on back, buttocks, posteromedial aspect of thigh. Reddish in colour."

The examining doctor also opined that there was nothing to suggest that the accused was not fit to perform sexual intercourse.

Held :

It is true that marks of external injury have not been found on the person of the accused but that by itself does not negate the prosecution case. Modi has opined that even in the case of a child victim being ravished by a grown-up person, it is not necessary that there should always be marks of injuries on the penis in such case. Further, it is to be noted that about two days had elapsed between the time of the incident and medical examination of the accused. Minor injuries, even if caused, might have healed up in the meantime. (Para 15). State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980: AIR 2001 SC 2075.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, 22nd Edn., pp. 502, 509, relied on

Gian Chand v. State of H.P., (1996) 2 Crimes 213 (HP), reversed

[9370] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Examination of victim — External marks on victim's body — Age of victim — Held, such external marks need not be present on the body of a child who is incapable of offering any resistance

Absence of external marks of violence on the body of the victim does not necessarily mean that rape did not take place. In case of children who are incapable of offering any resistance external marks of violence may not be found. (Para 15). State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980: AIR 2001 SC 2075.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, 22nd Edn., pp. 502, 509, relied on

Gian Chand v. State of H.P., (1996) 2 Crimes 213 (HP), reversed

[9371] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Genital examination — "Hymen torn; irregular edges" — Suggestion made by the defence that such kind of wound could be caused by fall — Rejected on the facts of this case

Medico-legal examination of the victim revealed the following results — "Local exam — No external injury; On retracting the labia — erythema seen; Hymen torn — irregular edges; Posterior vaginal wall tear about 0.5 cm in length; No blood clot seen; No evidence of healing, no pus seen — foul smell; Tenderness. No sperms were seen."

Held :

The suggestion made in the cross-examination of doctor who examined prosecutrix that injury of the nature found on her hymen, could be caused by a fall, does not lead anywhere. Firstly, no such suggestion was made to prosecutrix or her mother during cross-examination. Secondly, a girl or her mother would not implicate the accused in a rape case if the injury was otherwise caused by a fall. There is nothing to draw such an inference not even a suggestion, to be found on record. (Para 15). State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980: AIR 2001 SC 2075.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

[9372] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Injuries on a rape victim — Relevance of, when victim, a grown up, aged about 20 to 23 years and mother of two children — Victim did not suffer from any injury — Doctor opining that for commission of offence of rape, under the circumstances, proof of injury is not mandatory, held, acceptable

The prosecutrix, a coolie, was gang raped while on her way back from a movie at about 10.00 p.m. on 20-11-1994. Her brother, P who was slapped, ran for help and when he returned with other villagers, found her sister lying unconscious and naked. FIR was lodged at about 7.00 p.m. on 21-11-1994 after the victim regained her consciousness.

20.(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof (contd.)

The conviction of six accused persons under Section 376(2)(g) IPC was upheld by the High Court.

Allowing the appeal of Accused 4 to 6 and dismissing the appeal of Accused 1 to 3,

Held :

There may be some inconsistency with regard to recovery of the clothes or sending the same for chemical examination, but the findings are sufficient to prove the common intention on the part of Accused 1 to 3. The very fact that they came on cycles and dashed with the cycle of P (PW 7), would clearly show that they had a common intention to commit the offence. They not only gathered and obstructed her from proceeding towards her residence with her brother on the bicycle but also deliberately made her and her brother to fall down from the cycle. The prosecutrix was then physically removed to a secluded place and at least three of them took part in committing the offence of rape on her one by one. The evidence of PW 6 to the aforementioned extent is cogent and convincing and has been corroborated by PW 7 who not only is a witness to the events which took place immediately prior to the actual occurrence of rape but also a witness to the scene of occurrence where he found his sister lying naked in an unconscious state. Material objects were found to have semen stains. The accused were also tested as regards proof of potency and the doctors who examined them categorically came to the conclusion that they were not incapable of committing sexual intercourse. (Paras 24 and 23)

Indisputably, the prosecutrix did not suffer any injury. For the purpose of proving commission of the offence of rape, however, the same was not necessary as she was a grown-up girl aged between 20 to 23 years as opined by the doctor. She was, furthermore, mother of two children. (Para 14). Viswanathan v. State, (2008) 5 SCC 354: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 593: AIR 2008 SC 2222.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2008]

[9373] — Ss. 375, 376 and 366 — Rape — Consent — Absence of injuries — Inference — Appreciation of evidence — Victim suffering from throat pain — Appellant-accused, by misrepresenting victim to take her to doctor, instead took her to different places — After it grew dark, appellant took her to a lonely place and committed forcible sexual intercourse with her — Appellant contending that act committed with consent of victim — Tenability — Held, categorical, clear and unequivocal deposition of victim that appellant-accused committed forcible sexual intercourse with her — Circumstances pointed out by accused neither individually nor collectively leading to any plausible inference that sexual intercourse by him was done with victim's tacit consent — Circumstances pointed out by accused neither sufficient nor justify discarding of evidence of victim — Nothing on record creating any doubt/disbelief or suspicion about evidence of victim — Her allegation in cross-examination that accused had threatened her with a dagger not mentioned in FIR or in S. 161 CrPC statement does not render her evidence unreliable — Moreover, in such circumstances, victim not expected to put any resistance lest to endanger her life — Therefore, absence of injuries on person of victim does not lead to an inference that she consented for sexual intercourse with accused — Hence, no interference with the conviction called for

It admits of no doubt that the accused had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix on the date and place of occurrence. The core area of debate is whether such act was committed with the consent of the prosecutrix or not. (Para 9)

The prosecutrix in her deposition has been categorical, clear and unequivocal that the accused committed forcible sexual intercourse with her. It is true that in her cross-examination she stated that the accused had threatened her with a dagger before Jablu when she refused to go with him and this aspect was neither stated in her statement under Section 161 CrPC nor in the FIR but does this contradiction make her evidence unreliable. (Para 10)

The circumstances which have been pointed out by the accused neither individually nor collectively lead to any plausible inference that the sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix by the accused was done with her tacit consent and the circumstances pointed out are neither sufficient nor do they justify discarding the evidence of the prosecutrix. There is nothing on record that creates any doubt/disbelief or a suspicion about the evidence of the prosecutrix. In a case, such as this, where the prosecutrix was misrepresented by the accused that he would show her to his cousin (a doctor) as she was suffering from some throat pain and she accompanied him but the accused took her to other places and when it became dark, took her to a lonely place and committed sexual intercourse, the prosecutrix was not expected to put any resistance lest her life would have been in danger. In the facts and circumstances, the absence of injuries on the person of the prosecutrix does not lead to an inference that she consented for sexual intercourse with the accused. The young girl became victim of lust of the accused who was more than double her age and yielded to sexual intercourse against her will. (Paras 11 and 20)

The judgment of the High Court affirming the judgment of the trial court convicting the accused under Sections 366 and 376 IPC does not suffer from any legal flaw. The sentence awarded to the appellant does not call for any interference. The appeal having no merit must fail. (Para 21). Rajinder v. State of H.P., (2009) 16 SCC 69: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 156: AIR 2009 SC 3022: 2009 Cri LJ 4133: (2009) 80 AIC 165 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898, followed

Pratap Misra v. State of Orissa, (1977) 3 SCC 41: 1977 SCC (Cri) 447; Sadashiv Ramrao Hadbe v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 10 SCC 92: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 161; Narayan v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 6 SCC 465: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 198; Radhu v. State of M.P., (2007) 12 SCC 57: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 207, distinguished [9374] — Ss. 375, 376 and 366 — Rape — Injuries on victim — Absence of — Case of taking away victim fraudulently and subjecting her to rape by appellant-accused and forcing her to indulge in prostitution by coercion — On facts, held, issue of not having physical injury marks of any nature on the body of victim is irrelevant and not worth taking into consideration for the simple reason that accused had raped victim immediately after taking her away to J city — She was examined after one-and-a-half years from the date of abduction and rape — She had been forced to indulge in prostitution during this period — Therefore, victim had become habitual to sexual intercourse — In such a fact situation, question of having any physical injury marks would not arise (Para 15). Fateh Chand v. State of Haryana, (2009) 15 SCC 543: AIR 2009 SC 2729: (2009) 81 AIC 216 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 3942.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

[9375] — Ss. 375 & 376 and 417 — Rape — Consent — Inference regarding — Prosecutrix admitting absence of a major injury — Effect — Promise of marriage to secure consent before rape — Offence of cheating if made out — Corroboration of testimony of prosecutrix — Offence committed on three/four different occasions — First forcibly, when prosecutrix declined to marry appellant-accused — Later, on appellant promising to marry prosecutrix — Report by prosecutrix to family members and police only after appellant refused to marry her — On refusal by police to lodge FIR, prosecutrix filing petition under S. 154(3) CrPC — Appellant convicted by trial court under Ss. 376 and 417 IPC — Held, no inference of consent of prosecutrix can be drawn — Consistent version of prosecutrix against accused was acceptable — Evidence of prosecution witnesses had also remained unchallenged — There was no suggestion as to any love affair between the two — Also no reason to falsely implicate appellant — Considering that medical examination of prosecutrix was held six months after the incident and medical officer had confirmed the sexual intercourse, absence of a major injury, held, lost its significance — Appellant's conviction upheld under S. 376 — However, further held, promise of marriage on which prosecutrix had succumbed, did not amount to cheating by itself — Conviction under S. 417, quashed (Paras 12 to 14, 22, 23 and 26)

The evidence about the cheating is of slipshod nature and not believable. It is also self-effacing. After all, the first act of the sexual intercourse was without the consent and the accused had thereby committed rape. However, the version that he gave a marriage promise would really go against the prosecution whereby it would mean that the subsequent acts were done with the consent of the girl on account of the promise of marriage. But this can not be the approach. If the promise of marriage was given and the girl had succumbed on that account, this by itself may not amount to cheating. Besides this, the girl has very specifically stated that even subsequently she was ravished against her wishes. Therefore, the theory of promise of marriage and the consent for sexual intercourse will wither away. The accused is therefore acquitted of the offence under Section 417 IPC. (Para 26). Zindar Ali Sheikh v. State of W.B., (2009) 3 SCC 761: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 737: AIR 2009 SC 1467: 2009 Cri LJ 1324: (2009) 2 CHN 19 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 941 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2009]

[9376] — S. 376 — Absence of extensive injuries on person of the prosecutrix — Version of prosecutrix cannot be described as false on that ground. State of Maharashtra v. Priya Sharan Maharaj, (1997) 4 SCC 393: 1997 SCC (Cri) 584: AIR 1997 SC 2041: 1997 Cri LJ 2248.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1997]

Modi: "Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology", referred to

20.(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof (contd.)

[9377] — S. 376 — Absence of injuries on the back of the prosecutrix — Held, not fatal especially when the number of accused attacking her were four in number — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114-A

It cannot be said that whenever resistance is offered there must be some injury on the body of the victim. The appellants were four in number and the prosecutrix being a girl of 19/20 years of age, she was not expected to offer such resistance as would cause injuries to her body. It is also not correct to say that there was no injury at all. It has been earlier noticed that as per the medical report she had red abrasions on her right breast. In the circumstances the contention of the appellants is rejected. Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, (1987) 2 SCC 27: 1987 SCC (Cri) 249: AIR 1987 SC 1080: 1987 Cri LJ 971.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.L. Oza and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-1987]

[9378] — S. 376 — Age — Determination of — Rape — Medical evidence — On the basis of physical features, doctor opining that age of prosecutrix must be between 13 and 14 years — Senior Medical Officer (Dental) on examination taking the view that age of prosecutrix was about 13 years — Medical Officer-cum-Radiologist on X-ray examination stating that the probable age of prosecutrix must be within 14 to 16 years — Held, finding of the Sessions Court that prosecutrix was above the age of 16 years was based on faulty reasons and unsupported by evidence

The verdict of not guilty had been entered by the Sessions Judge mainly based on two grounds that the prosecutrix was aged above sixteen years and if at all there was any sexual act, it must have been with her consent. Both these findings are erroneous and incorrect. (Para 11)

As regards the age of the prosecutrix the opinion of the doctors who had examined her was more strengthened by the family history which showed that she was born in the year 1979. Therefore, in all probability, the age of the prosecutrix at the time of the occurrence was about fourteen years. The certificate of the Medical Officer-cum-Radiologist also gives only the probable age of the prosecutrix. Therefore, the finding of the Sessions Judge that the prosecutrix was above the age of sixteen is based on faulty reasons and is unsupported by evidence. (Para 12). State of H.P. v. Mango Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331: AIR 2000 SC 2798.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2000]

[9379] — S. 376 — Child rape — Appreciation of evidence — Medical evidence — Doctor PW 11 after examining the prosecutrix externally referring her to Family Incharge Hospital where she was examined internally by a lady doctor — In the injury report, prepared in the handwriting of PW 11, reports of the lady doctor and the pathologist incorporated and PW 11 opining that possibility of doing intercourse cannot be ruled out — Held, though ideally the lady doctor could have been examined or her absence explained but that would not destroy the prosecution case, which otherwise stood proved

The evidence of the doctor, PW 11 is clear and specific. He was the author of the report. Though ideally the lady doctor could have been examined or her absence explained but that does not destroy the prosecution case, which otherwise stands proved. The High Court was clearly in error in coming to the conclusion that in the absence of evidence of the lady doctor there was no support from any medical evidence. She had reported to PW 11, who categorically stated that in his opinion, on examination, something had been penetrated in the vagina of the prosecutrix and that intercourse was done with the girl i.e. the possibility of doing intercourse cannot be ruled out. For no valid reason the High Court discarded the evidence of the doctor. (Para 16). State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

[9380] — S. 376 — Child rape — Rape on child of 8 years — Proof of — Injuries on the prosecutrix not always essential to prove the charge of rape

There is no force in the contention that if there was any forcible sexual intercourse, it would have resulted in some injuries upon the prosecutrix. Presence of injuries are not always a sine qua non to prove a charge of rape. It has to be kept in mind that the case under consideration is one of rape on a girl child aged eight years and not on a grown-up woman. (Para 18). State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

Joseph v. State of Kerala, (2000) 5 SCC 197: 2000 SCC (Cri) 926, distinguished

[9381] — S. 376 — Consent — Inference of — Absence of any marks of violence on the body of accused on examination after three days of the incident, held, not conclusive — The same, if any, would have been obliterated and not noticeable to the Medical Officer who examined him (Para 13). State of H.P. v. Mango Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331: AIR 2000 SC 2798.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2000]

[9382] — S. 376 — Doctors not finding injuries on prosecutrix due to one-and-half months delay in medical examination (duly explained) — Locating injuries of sexual assault after said delay, held, is difficult. Santhosh Moolya v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 5 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-2010]

[9383] — S. 376 — Finding by medical examination of torn hymen and bruise around it held, sufficient — Absence of swelling, redness or inflammation not fatal. Mange v. State of Haryana, (1979) 4 SCC 349: 1979 SCC (Cri) 985: AIR 1979 SC 1194: 1979 Cri LJ 939.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-1979]

[9384] — S. 376 — Injuries — Absence of — Inference — Held, would merely suggest want of violent resistance on part of prosecutrix and not consensus — Prosecutrix was forcibly caught, threatened at knife-point and thereafter gang raped — Non-resistance because of fear in such circumstances not unnatural (Paras 25, 26 and 46). Vijay v. State of M.P., (2010) 8 SCC 191: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2010]

Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793; Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185, followed [9385] — S. 376 — Medical proof of forcible and brutal rape — Microbiological examination — Presence of spermatozoa, bloodstains in vaginal smear — Both hands of deceased were tied — Laceration of vaginal outlet on the posterior wall establishes and confirms violent sexual intercourse — Marks of injuries present on lips, chest, nostril, breast, elbow and wrist — Abrasions over the front of right shoulder and over the right side at the back of the neck of appellant indicated that the same could have been caused due to resistance and strengthens prosecution case of forced sexual intercourse with victim against her wishes — Held, apart from causing death of the victim, evidence also points to commission of rape of deceased by appellant (Paras 42, 76 and 77). B.A. Umesh v. State of Karnataka, (2011) 3 SCC 85.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2011]

[9386] — S. 376 — No injuries on a married woman habituated to sex, reiterated, is not a ground to reverse conviction for rape if otherwise established

The plea that no marks of injuries were found either on the person of the accused or the person of the prosecutrix does not lead to any inference that the accused has not committed forcible sexual intercourse on the prosecutrix. (Para 22)

The discrepancies were negligible in nature and rightly rejected by the courts below. It was argued that the doctors PWs 7 and 8 did not notice any injury on the private parts of PWs 1 and 2. It is relevant to note that due to threat from A-1 and A-2, coupled with illiteracy and poverty, the two victims were not taken to the doctor immediately after the incident but they were taken after a month and 14 days. In such circumstances, as rightly observed by the trial court and the High Court, it is unlikely that any sign of sexual intercourse will be visible by examining the private parts of the victims. (Paras 20 and 21)

Added to it, PW 1 happens to be a married woman and having children which indicates that she is accustomed to sexual intercourse and in view of the same, it would be difficult to expect the doctor, who examined after quite sometime, to indicate the sign of sexual intercourse. (Para 22). Santhosh Moolya v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 5 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-2010]

[9387] — S. 376 — Rape — Absence of any injury on private parts of rape victim — Effect on prosecution case, if any — Held, herein, PW 2 (doctor) found that victim (a married lady) was used to sexual intercourse, hence, absence of injury on her private parts, not significant (Para 17). Ram Singh v. State of H.P., (2010) 2 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2010]

[9388] — S. 376 — Rape — Absence of injuries on rape victim — Effect on prosecution case, if any — Held, much importance cannot be given to absence of injuries on prosecutrix, because it is not the inevitable rule that in absence of injuries, prosecution must necessarily fail to establish its case — Even in absence of any injuries on person of victim, held, with other evidence on record, prosecution is able to establish that offence was committed (Para 15). Ram Singh v. State of H.P., (2010) 2 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2010]

20.(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof (contd.)

[9389] — S. 376 — Rape — Age of minor victim — Where evidence indicated some discrepancy as regards age of victim and ossification or other pathological test not carried out, finding of Sessions Court on the issue relying on the statement of the mother, not interfered with by Supreme Court — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 45 (Para 16). Kamal Kishore v. State of H.P., (2000) 4 SCC 502: 2000 SCC (Cri) 833: AIR 2000 SC 1920: 2000 Cri LJ 2292.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, Doraiswamy Raju and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-2000]

[9390] — S. 376 — Rape — Appreciation of sole testimony of prosecutrix — If and when corroboration essential — Absence of injuries on private parts — Effect

Rapist not only violates the victim's privacy and personal integrity, but inevitably causes serious psychological as well as physical harm in the process. Rape is not merely assault — it is often destructive of the whole personality of the victim. The murderer destroys the physical body of his victim. Rapist degrades the very soul of the helpless female. (Para 1)

In the context of Indian culture, a woman — victim of sexual aggression — would rather suffer silently than to falsely implicate somebody. Any statement of rape is an extremely humiliating experience for a woman and until she is a victim of sex crime, she would not blame anyone but the real culprit. While appreciating the evidence of the prosecutrix, the courts must always keep in mind that no self-respecting woman would put her honour at stake by falsely alleging commission of rape on her and therefore, ordinarily a look for corroboration of her testimony is unnecessary and uncalled for. But for high improbability in the prosecution case, the conviction in the case of sex crime may be based on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix. It has been rightly said that corroborative evidence is not an imperative component of judicial credence in every case of rape nor the absence of injuries on the private parts of the victim can be construed as evidence of consent. (Para 19). Rajinder v. State of H.P., (2009) 16 SCC 69.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Radhu v. State of M.P., (2007) 12 SCC 57: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 207; State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898, followed [9391] — S. 376 — Rape — Injuries on prosecutrix — Absence of — When not sufficient to discredit her evidence — Held, although PW 5 (doctor) did not find any injury on external or internal part of body of prosecutrix and opined that prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse, that does not make testimony of prosecutrix unreliable — Herein, prosecutrix was recovered almost after three weeks and obviously signs of forcible intercourse would not persist for that long a period — It is wrong to assume that in all cases of intercourse with women against will or without consent, there would be some injury on external or internal parts of victim — Prosecutrix clearly deposed that she was not in a position to put up any struggle, as she was taken away from her village by two adult males wielding firearm — Absence of injuries on person of prosecutrix is not sufficient to discredit her evidence as she was a helpless victim — She did not and could not inform neighbours, where she was kept, due to fear (Para 32). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

Prakash Singh v. Union of India, (2006) 8 SCC 1: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 417, relied on.

[9392] — S. 376 — Rape — Injuries on the prosecutrix — Absence of injuries on a married woman habituated to sex and having two children, held, cannot rule out rape

The mere fact that no injuries were found on the private parts of her body cannot be the ground to hold that she was not subjected to any sexual assault. It has to be noted that the victim is a married and grown-up lady and blessed with two children and in such circumstances the absence of injuries on her private parts is not of much significance. PW 8 doctor could not confirm rape because the victim was habituated to sexual intercourse. The entire prosecution story cannot be disbelieved based on that singular assertion. (Para 22). Utpal Das v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 493.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2010]

[9393] — S. 376 — Rape — Irregular linear contusion on both the breasts of the prosecutrix being 3 to 4 in number, reddish in colour is suggestive of force being used on her while she was subjected to the sexual assault. Narayanamma v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 5 SCC 728: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1573.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1994]

[9394] — S. 376 — Rape — Medical examination of victim — Absence of visible injury — Effect — Victim examined by doctor after about 3 weeks — In such circumstances, held, the effect of the act on the physical form was practically obliterated — Hence, absence of visible injury, held, of no consequence (Para 12). State of Punjab v. Ramdev Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 421: 2004 SCC (Cri) 307: AIR 2004 SC 1290.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2003]

State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898, relied on [9395] — S. 376 — Rape — Non-rupture of hymen or absence of injury on victim's private parts — Held, does not belie her testimony as she nowhere stated that she bled per vagina and her statement remained virtually unchallenged in cross-examination — To constitute rape penetration, however slight, is sufficient — Prosecutrix subjected to sexual intercourse in a standing posture indicating absence of any injury on her private parts — Opinion of doctor that no rape was committed cannot throw out an otherwise cogent and trustworthy evidence of the prosecutrix — Besides such opinion was based on "no reasons" — On facts, corroboration of testimony of prosecutrix by medical evidence was not essential — In any case, her evidence was amply corroborated by her mother and father whom she immediately informed about the occurrence — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 45 and 8 Ill. (j). Ranjit Hazarika v. State of Assam, (1998) 8 SCC 635: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1725.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-1996]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, followed

[9396] — S. 376 — Rape — Proof — Medical evidence — State of hymen — Inference from — Necessary considerations — Injuries on labia majora and elsewhere on the body of victim — Relevance of

In examination of genital organs, state of hymen offers the most reliable clue. While examining the hymen certain anatomical characteristics should be remembered before assigning any significance to the findings. The shape and the texture of the hymen is variable. This variation sometimes permits penetration without injury. This is possible because of the peculiar shape of the orifice or increased elasticity. On the other hand, sometimes the hymen may be more firm, less elastic and gets stretched and lacerated earlier. Thus a relatively less forceful penetration may not give rise to injuries ordinarily possible with a forceful attempt. The anatomical feature with regard to hymen which merits consideration is its anatomical situation. Next to hymen in positive importance, but more than that in frequency, are the injuries on labia majora. These, viz. labia majora, are the first to be encountered by the male organ. They are subjected to blunt forceful blows, depending on the vigour and force used by the accused and counteracted by the victim. Further, examination of the female for marks of injuries elsewhere on the body forms a very important piece of evidence. (Para 7). Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266: AIR 2004 SC 1497: 2004 Cri LJ 1399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2004]

[9397] — S. 376 — Rape — Proof — Presence of injury on the body of victim, held, is not a sine qua non to prove a charge of rape — Incident took place on 31-10-1993 — Medical examination on 5-11-1993 — Medical opinion that any abrasion or marks of violence would be visible for twenty-four hours and thereafter the same may disappear — Rupture of hymen of PW 1 which took place about one year prior to the occurrence, held, explained as to why no visible injury was found on her private parts — Victim was made to lay on dried-up cotton plants at the place of occurrence — Hence, absence of any visible injury on her back, held, quite natural — Presence of semen on cloth of victim corroborated her evidence — Plea of false implication not acceptable as motive suggested by defence was imaginative — Prosecution case established — Conviction upheld (Paras 16, 17, 22, 23, 25, 26, 29, 30 and 33)

Injury on the body of the person of the victim is not a sine qua non to prove a charge of rape. Absence of injury having regard to overwhelming ocular evidence cannot, thus, be the sole criterion for coming to a conclusion that no such offence had taken place. (Para 26). Dastagir Sab v. State of Karnataka, (2004) 3 SCC 106: 2004 SCC (Cri) 678: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 694: (2004) 3 MPLJ 154.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-1-2004]

Narayanamma (Kum) v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 5 SCC 728: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1573; Rafiq v. State of U.P., (1980) 4 SCC 262: 1980 SCC (Cri) 947: AIR 1981 SC 559; Sk. Zakir v. State of Bihar, (1983) 4 SCC 10: 1983 SCC (Cri) 761: AIR 1983 SC 911; Pramod Mahto v. State of Bihar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 672: 1990 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 1475; State of Rajasthan v. Shri Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781: AIR 1992 SC 2004, relied on

20.(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof (contd.)

[9398] — S. 376 — Rape — Proof — Rape and murder — Injuries absent — Presence of semen and spermatozoa found on examination of vaginal smear — Held on facts, rape not proved — Semen also detected on one of the underskirts found on the body of the victim — Though accused-appellant found to be potent but no stains of blood or semen found on the dhoti of the appellant — No injuries found on the vagina/private parts of the victim

If there had been any forcible sexual intercourse, the victim must have made some strong resistance being a grown-up lady and in the process, some injuries would have been found on the vagina/private parts of the body or some other parts indicative of any such use of force and it would be too much to assume that there would have been no injuries whatsoever on the body, on this account. Though injuries on the body is not always a must or sine qua non to prove a charge of rape, having regard to the case of the prosecution that the victim had been subjected to brutal rape and forced sexual intercourse, this aspect of the matter cannot be completely lost sight of. The deceased was stated to be of about 26 years of age, when she died and she is the sister of the wife of the appellant. It is not as though they were shown earlier to be on inimical terms. Anything possible might have happened and the facts found proved do not irresistibly lead to the only conclusion of the guilt of the appellant in respect of an offence under Section 376 IPC. Consequently, appellant can be given benefit of doubt and acquitted of the offence under Section 376 IPC, and the conviction recorded and sentence imposed by the High Court upon the appellant on this account is set aside. (Para 15). Joseph v. State of Kerala, (2000) 5 SCC 197: 2000 SCC (Cri) 926: AIR 2000 SC 1608: 2000 Cri LJ 2467.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, Doraiswamy Raju and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2000]

[9399] — S. 376 — Rape — Proof and corroboration of — Absence of injuries on private parts of prosecutrix — Effect — Rape of a married woman in the bus by the driver and conductor of the bus, alleged — No reason for the prosecutrix to falsely implicate the accused as they were strangers — Testimony of prosecutrix corroborated by testimonies of two constables (PWs) who were on patrolling duty near the bus stand — PW 1 though declared hostile, part of his testimony corroborating the prosecution version — Though no injuries found on the private parts of the prosecutrix, injuries found on front portion of her body and hands — Held, mere fact that no injuries were found on her private parts, held, cannot be a ground to hold that no rape was committed upon her or that the entire prosecution story is false — Prosecutrix was a married grown-up lady and absence of injuries on her private parts was not of much significance — Appellant rightly convicted under S. 376(2)(g) (Paras 2, 11 and 13). Santosh Kumar v. State of M.P., (2006) 10 SCC 595: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 28: AIR 2006 SC 3098: 2006 Cri LJ 4594.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-8-2006]

Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598, relied on [9400] — S. 376 — Rape and murder — Absence of semen or spermatozoa in vaginal swab collected from dead body of the deceased — Held, by itself would not disprove sexual molestation when post-mortem report indicated bruising of tissues on right side of vagina 2 x 1 x ½ cm in reddish blue colour and bruising 1 x ½ x ½ cm over the anterior lip of the cervix — This feature is consistent with the victim offering resistance against forcible intercourse. State of T.N. v. Suresh, (1998) 2 SCC 372: AIR 1998 SC 1044.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-1997]

[9401] — S. 376 — Rape by forcibly laying the prosecutrix on matted jowar crop — Absence of injuries on the back of the prosecutrix would be of no consequence even if the field was having stones on the surface. Narayanamma v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 5 SCC 728: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1573.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1994]

[9402] — S. 376 — Rape of a married woman of 45 years, mother of two children of 17 years and 16 years — Victim sustaining injuries to external genitals and reddish fluid found to be purging through the vagina as a result of laceration on posterior wall of vagina 1½" from cervix measuring 1/3" x ½" mucosal deep with swelling and ante mortem blood clot — According to medical opinion injuries showing sexual assault of a very violent nature by more than one person inasmuch as a woman of 45 years who had given birth to two children being accustomed to sexual intercourse would not suffer such injuries due to simple sexual assault — Blood group of stains of semen found on the bedsheet of the bedroom where the victim was sleeping found to be the same as those of the accused persons and different from that of victim's husband — Held, charge under S. 376 against the accused proved by circumstantial evidence and medical evidence — Although in the post-mortem certificate the doctor did not express any opinion about the sexual assault and it was only in the statement given in court that he spoke about the sexual assault but what the doctor had stated in court was on the basis of the notes of the post-mortem and the injuries already noted in the post-mortem certificate and hence this cannot be said to be an afterthought. Ronny v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 3 SCC 625: 1998 SCC (Cri) 859: AIR 1998 SC 1251.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-1998]

[9403] — S. 376 — Rape of a minor girl — Two pin-head abrasions found on the genitals of accused — Doctor opining that though as a result of forcible sexual intercourse such abrasion could be possible but there was no sign of the accused having sexual intercourse within one hour of his medical examination — That the accused aged 57 years was not used to sexual intercourse or that he had not an intercourse on the day of occurrence with someone else not established — Presence of blood in nail clippings and on the underpants explained by accused — Held, circumstance of abrasions on the genital, though raises suspicion but not conclusive of guilt of the accused when main circumstances of last seen together and recovery of the dead body at the instance of the accused could not be established. Jaharlal Das v. State of Orissa, (1991) 3 SCC 27: 1991 SCC (Cri) 527: AIR 1991 SC 1388: (1991) 2 Crimes 268: (1991) 72 CLT 298.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-1991]

[9404] — S. 376 — Rape of minor girl aged 7/8 years — Testimony of prosecutrix alone, if reliable, whether sufficient to convict the accused without seeking further corroboration — Injury on male organ of accused if necessary — On facts, convincing and trustworthy testimony of the prosecutrix corroborated by medical evidence and testimony of other PWs existing — Doctor who examined the prosecutrix finding her hymen ruptured, slight bleeding coming out of the vaginal edges, presence of blood clots and external genitals tender and red and vagina admitting one finger with difficulty which got smeared with blood — Shawl on which, according to the prosecution, she was made to lie while committing the rape, found by the doctor to be having some mud and blood stains — Doctor opining that prosecutrix had been subjected to sexual intercourse — Doctor who examined accused-respondent finding him potent and capable of sexual intercourse — Father of the prosecutrix and other PWs deposing to have seen the respondent running from the place of occurrence carrying with him his underwear — Held, trial court rightly convicted the respondent under S. 376 and High Court erred in acquitting him on the basis of conjectures and surmises — Circumstances such as absence of spermatozoa on the vaginal slide and absence of injuries on the male organ not always fatal to the prosecution case — These circumstances should be considered in the light of the peculiar factual set-up of the case

There is no legal compulsion to look for corroboration of the evidence of the prosecutrix before recording an order of conviction. Evidence has to be weighed and not counted. Conviction can be recorded on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix, if her evidence inspires confidence and there is absence of circumstances which militate her veracity. In the present case the evidence of the prosecutrix is found to be reliable and trustworthy. No corroboration was required to be looked for, though enough was available on the record. The medical evidence provided sufficient corroboration.

No inference can be drawn against the prosecution from the fact that only two blood stains had been found on the shawl by the Chemical Examiner. The doctor had found the presence of blood stains and mud on the shawl and had opined that the bleeding from the edges of the vagina was slight and that some amount of clotted blood was also present. The prosecutrix was a girl of tender age and on account of the rape committed on her, there was bleeding from her vagina but in the circumstances it cannot be expected that the shawl should have got "drenched with blood" as if the large blood arteries had been cut.

The absence of spermatozoa cannot be a circumstance against the prosecution case. The prosecution case itself was that on being surprised while the respondent was in the act of committing sexual intercourse on the prosecutrix, he ran away carrying his underwear. The absence of spermatozoa under the circumstances could not be said to be a circumstance in favour of the respondent at all.

There is no inflexible axiom of law which lays down that the absence of injuries on the male organ of the accused would always be fatal to the prosecution case and would discredit the evidence of the prosecutrix, otherwise found to be reliable. The presence of injuries on the male organ may lend support to the prosecution case, but their absence is not always fatal. Every case has to be approached with realistic diversity based on peculiar facts and circumstances of that case. The doctor who had examined the respondent had found him to be capable of sexual intercourse and according to his opinion the absence of injury on his male organ was not suggestive of the fact that he had not indulged in sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix, then of tender years of age. His evidence was not at all challenged on this aspect by the defence.

20.(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof (contd.)

The judgment of the High Court was based more on surmises and conjectures than on proper appreciation of evidence. Court must be sensitive to the serious crime committed against human dignity. Courts must be wary, circumspect and slow to interfere with reasonable and proper findings based on appreciation of evidence as recorded by the lower courts, before upsetting the same and acquitting an accused involved in the commission of heinous offence of rape of hapless girl child. State of H.P. v. Raghubir Singh, (1993) 2 SCC 622: 1993 SCC (Cri) 674: 1993 (2) ALT (Cri) 286: (1993) 2 Crimes 887.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-1993]

Rahim Beg v. State of U.P., (1972) 3 SCC 759: 1972 SCC (Cri) 827, distinguished and limited

[9405] — Ss. 376, 120-B, 342 and 506 — Rape allegedly committed by eight persons twice in the compartment of a running train and thereafter prosecutrix allegedly pushed out of the train — Absence of injury on the person of the prosecutrix, except a small incised wound and some minor superficial injuries, improbabilising the prosecution version — No shout raised by the prosecutrix — Inconsistency between version given in the FIR and evidence given in the court — Held, in the circumstances of the case, possibility of the prosecutrix going with the accused persons willingly cannot be ruled out — Acquittal upheld. State of Maharashtra v. Abdul Hafiz Faroki, 1998 SCC (Cri) 1481: AIR 1998 SC 2382.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-1998]

[9406] — S. 376 or S. 354 — Accused charged under S. 376 — Absence of injury on victim — Whether offence committed coming under purview of S. 354 — Absence of injury on the private parts of the prosecutrix — From a reading of the evidence of the prosecutrix, held, it is clear that the accused outraged the modesty but had not raped her — In her statement she loosely described his act as "fondling" — Offence is one under S. 354 IPC — Sentence reduced to that already undergone

The prosecutrix filed a report that on the preceding day in the morning, at about 9.00 or 9.30 a.m. when she went to the fields the accused all of a sudden came and caught hold of her and raped her. When she tried to resist, accused P gave a blow on her eye and threatened to kill her, if she made any sound. When she again cried for help, her aunt-in-law (PW 2) came and challenged him. Upon this, accused P fled away from the place of occurrence. The medical examination of the prosecutrix was conducted by the doctor at 2.00 p.m. The trial court convicted the accused under Section 376 of the Penal Code, 1860 imposing a sentence of 7 years' imprisonment. In appeal a Single Judge of the High Court upheld the conviction under Section 376 IPC.

Disposing the appeal in terms below,

Held :

There was no unexplained delay in lodging the FIR. So far as absence of injury on the private parts of the prosecutrix is concerned, admittedly, she was a married lady. But on a close reading of the evidence of the prosecutrix, it is clear that the accused outraged the modesty but had not raped her. The prosecutrix has not stated specifically about the act, but has loosely described as "fondling". So far as the enmity with the aunt of L (PW 4), the husband of the prosecutrix is concerned it is unnatural that a married lady belonging to the rural areas would falsely implicate the accused with whom she or her husband had no enmity. (Para 8)

After careful consideration of the evidence, the trial court and the High Court have found the accused guilty. But the offence is under Section 354 IPC. The conviction of the accused is altered from Section 376 IPC to Section 354 IPC. The accused has undergone nearly two years of sentence. The occurrence is of 1987. Custodial sentence shall be the period already undergone. Directed that the appellant be released forthwith unless required in custody in connection with any other case. (Paras 10 and 11). Premiya v. State of Rajasthan, (2008) 10 SCC 81: (2008) 70 AIC 45 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-2008]

State of Punjab v. Major Singh, AIR 1967 SC 63, relied on [9407] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — Age of victim — Prosecutrix abducted and forcibly subjected to sexual intercourse by the accused persons without her consent and against her will — Question of age of the victim not relevant — However, on facts, evidence of father and mother of the victim that she was below 16 years of age on the date of incident is fully corroborated by medical evidence and school leaving certificate. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

[9408] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape — Ingredients — Hymen of victim remaining intact, hence submission that charge of rape under S. 376 as defined in S. 375 not made out — Held on facts, victim was a very young girl of six years of age and it is quite likely that full penetration did not take place as the accused was a grown-up person of over 20 years of age — However, injuries clearly indicate that rape, as defined in S. 375, did take place (Paras 15, 16 and 11). Rajendra Datta Zarekar v. State of Goa, (2007) 14 SCC 560: AIR 2008 SC 572: 2008 Cri LJ 710.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2007]

Santosh Kumar v. State of M.P., (2006) 10 SCC 595: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 28, considered and relied on

Modi's Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, 21st Edn., at p. 369; Parikh's Textbook of Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, cited [9409] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape — Proof — Medical evidence — Habituated to sexual intercourse — Medical evidence showing absence of any injury on the body or any sign of semen on private parts of prosecutrix — Neither were her clothes torn nor was there presence of hair of accused on private parts of prosecutrix — Doctor after examining the prosecutrix deposed that prosecutrix was habituated to sexual intercourse — Held, accused entitled to benefit of doubt. Bibhishan v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 390: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 163: 2008 Cri LJ 721.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2007]

[9410] — Ss. 376 and 376(2)(f) — Rape on a girl of eight years — Absence of injury on private parts of accused — Held, will not be of much help to accused as he was medically examined four days after the incident in question

The accused-respondent herein alleged to have committed rape on a girl of eight years. The father of the victim was out of station on the date of occurrence i.e. 6-3-1990. When he came back to home on 7-3-1990, he was told about the incident in question. The father decided that the accused should be first traced and taken to the police station and thereafter they should lodge a complaint. On finding the accused on 10-3-1990 the parents of the victim went to the police station and lodged a complaint in respect of the said incident. The trial court found the accused guilty of the offence charged and sentenced him to undergo RI for 10 years. In appeal, the High Court set aside the said conviction and sentence. The High Court found that the delay in lodging the complaint was fatal to the prosecution case. It held that it was not safe to rely on the evidence of the victim (PW 2) to base a conviction because there was some discrepancy as to the act of penetration while committing rape in the evidence of the victim and the evidence of the doctor. Relying on a reply given by the doctor to a suggestion made by the defence that the injury suffered by a PW 2 could also be suffered by a hard and blunt object, the High Court inferred that the injury on the victim could have been suffered by her by falling on some such hard and blunt object. Since there was no injury on the private parts of the accused, the High Court inferred that the accused could not have committed rape on the minor without hurting himself on his private parts. In regard to the evidence of PW 2, the High Court was of the opinion that she being a child witness, it was possible that she could have been tutored.

Restoring the conviction recorded by the trial court but reducing the sentence,

Held :

It is now well established that if the court is satisfied from the evidence of the victim a conviction can be solely based on such evidence without looking for further corroboration. Same can be done because the prosecutrix is no more treated as an accomplice in the crime. (Para 6)

The doctor stated that the injuries suffered by PW 2 could not have been self-inflicted. There was blood on her private parts, the hymen was torn and medial side of the labia minora was inflamed. This was even after 4 days of the incident. The mere fact that the doctor replied to a suggestion made in the cross-examination that such injuries could be suffered by the victim by falling on a hard and blunt substance, by itself, would not suffice to reject the evidence of PW 2 who had no enmity whatsoever to implicate the respondent. The suggestion which has come in the form of Section 313 CrPC statement merely says that there was some enmity between the parents of the accused and those of the victim. Neither the nature of enmity nor gravity of the same has been stated, therefore, that explanation would be of no assistance to the accused to establish the fact that he has been falsely implicated. The factum of injury suffered by PW 2 and the opinion of the doctor that such injury could have been caused by sexual intercourse and the victim having not been habituated to earlier sexual intercourse itself goes to show that the injury suffered by the victim was one that could have been caused only by an act of rape as alleged by the prosecution. Even in identification of the accused by the victim there is no doubt because he was known to the victim. (Para 6)

20.(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof (contd.)

Though there has been some delay in filing the complaint, the same has been explained by the mother of the victim. The fact that the father was out of station on the date of occurrence is not disputed. In such circumstances since it is a minor who was violated, the possibility of there being hesitation on the part of the mother to lodge a complaint cannot be overruled. Even otherwise, the mere factum of delay in filing complaint in regard to an offence of this nature by itself would not be fatal so as to vitiate the prosecution case. (Para 7). State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699: 2004 Cri LJ 2109.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

[9411] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Not possible for medical examination to prove the number of persons who committed the rape — Extent of injuries and medical report can however support the allegation that more than one person was involved

It was contended on behalf of the appellants that as it does not transpire from the medical report as to the number of persons who had committed rape on the prosecutrix, the conviction of the appellants is illegal and should be set aside.

Held :

On medical examination it is not possible to say about the number of persons committing rape on a girl and, accordingly, in her report the doctor has not expressed any opinion in that regard. The evidence of the prosecutrix that all the appellants had committed rape on her is not inconsistent with the medical report. In the circumstances there is justification for the finding of the High Court that the medical examination and the evidence show the involvement of more than one person in the act of rape. Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, (1987) 2 SCC 27: 1987 SCC (Cri) 249: AIR 1987 SC 1080: 1987 Cri LJ 971.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.L. Oza and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-1987]

[9412] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape of married lady — Absence of injuries, held, not consequential when gang rape otherwise established (Para 14). Sohan Singh v. State of Bihar, (2010) 1 SCC 68.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2009]

[9413] — S. 376 r/w Ss. 302 and 511 — Rape and murder alleged — Improbable prosecution case — Unreliable dying declaration — Both deceased and accused-appellant found lying in a pool of blood in appellant's room having suffered serious injuries — Deceased found totally naked and underclothes of both the deceased and appellant found in the same room — Appellant and deceased had love affair and deceased had gone to appellant's place alone — Deceased taken to hospital by her brother (PW 5) where she was found dead — Complaint given by PW 5 to police which formed the basis of formal FIR — In the complaint PW 5, after stating that deceased had told him that appellant had tried to rape her and on her refusal he had stripped and stabbed her, adding his own assessment that deceased died due to deep head injuries caused by appellant and that appellant had thereafter tried to kill himself — Last words in the complaint that appellant had also tried to commit suicide by stabbing himself in the stomach appeared to have been inserted later — But on the basis of medical evidence serious nature of injuries found on appellant cannot be said to be self-inflicted — Having regard to facts and circumstances of the case, held, the uncorroborated alleged oral dying declaration was unreliable — Prosecution case of rape and murder of deceased by appellant appears to be improbable — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32

In the absence of explanation as to the serious nature of injuries sustained by the appellant giving rise to serious doubt as to the very genesis of the incident, the last portion of the statement in the complaint of PW 5 (wherein he had said that the deceased died due to deep head injuries caused by the appellant, who also tried to kill himself by stabbing in the stomach) appears to have been inserted after deliberation and consultation. This insertion probabilises the defence version that the appellant and the deceased were in love. The very fact that the deceased was totally naked and the underclothes of both the deceased and the appellant were found in the same room probabilises the theory of intercourse by consent and negatives the story of rape. The story that the appellant tried to kill himself by jumping from the upper floor cannot also be accepted. That apart, in the earliest version given in the report given to the police by PW 5, there is no mention about the appellant jumping from the upper floor. In view of the injuries found on the deceased and the defence taken by the appellant that she died on the spot and in the absence of any other evidence except the statement of PW 5, it is difficult to accept that the deceased was alive or at any rate she was in a position to make the statement to PW 5 as sought to be made out. The theory that the appellant tried to kill himself does not appear to be probable as both PW 4 and PW 5 admitted that the deceased and the appellant knew each other; the deceased voluntarily went to the house of the appellant to say goodbye, since she was going back to her country. In this background it appears improbable that the appellant forcefully tried to rape the deceased. It appears that both the appellant and the deceased may have been in a compromising position and were surprised and attacked by an assailant. Since the injuries found on the appellant could not be said to be self-inflicted, his defence that he sustained injuries at the hands of an unknown person when he tried to save the deceased, appears to be probable. It was enough to show that the defence was probable in the given circumstances. In this case the defence statement is probabilised by the surrounding circumstances and the evidence brought on record. The so-called dying declaration does not appear to be in the words of the deceased. It does not inspire confidence. There was considerable delay in registering the FIR and the explanation given for the delay is not convincing. Further, except the interested statement of PW 5 there is no other evidence to corroborate the dying declaration. Having regard to all these infirmities, improbabilities and contradictions found in the case, it is unsafe to act upon the said dying declaration. (Paras 7 to 9). Ronald Kiprono Ramkat v. State of Haryana, (2001) 6 SCC 423: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1034: AIR 2001 SC 2488.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-2001]

(d) Medical/Expert opinion

[9414] — S. 376 r/w S. 34 — Rape — Medical evidence — Doctor's statement that there was profuse bleeding which rendered any definite opinion difficult — Effect of — Held, was of no consequence in view of the unimpeached evidence of the victim (Para 9). Sri Narayan Saha v. State of Tripura, (2004) 7 SCC 775.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2004]

(e) Medical examination of prosecutrix

[9415] — S. 376 — Rape — Medical examination after 3 months — Held, cannot be expected to corroborate forcible intercourse (Paras 3 and 8). Dildar Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 10 SCC 531: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2006 SC 3084: 2006 Cri LJ 3914.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

(f) Medical examination of accused

[9416] — S. 376 — Examination of the accused — Examination of smegma loses all importance after 24 hours of the performance of the alleged sexual intercourse. S.P. Kohli (Dr.) v. High Court of P&H, (1979) 1 SCC 212: 1979 SCC (Cri) 252: AIR 1978 SC 1753: 1978 Cri LJ 1804: (1978) 15 ACC 381: 1979 MLJ (Cri) 378.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Jaswant Singh, P.S. Kailasam and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-9-1978]

(g) Medico-legal report/Doctor

[9417] — S. 376 — Rape — Medical evidence — Value of — Non-examination of doctor and non-production of doctor's report — Effect — Held, the same is not fatal to prosecution case if statements of prosecutrix and other prosecution witnesses inspire confidence — Hence, where prosecution evidence was found reliable, High Court totally erred in acquitting the accused by giving him benefit of doubt simply because of non-examination of doctor by prosecution (Paras 14 and 15). State of M.P. v. Dayal Sahu, (2005) 8 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1988: AIR 2005 SC 3570: 2005 Cri LJ 4375.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2005]

Sk. Zakir v. State of Bihar, (1983) 4 SCC 10: 1983 SCC (Cri) 761; Ranjit Hazarika v. State of Assam, (1998) 8 SCC 635: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1725, relied on

[9418] — S. 376 — Rape — Refusal of govt. hospital doctors, particularly in rural areas, to conduct medical examination of rape victims unless they are referred by police deprecated

The Supreme Court placed on record its disapproval of the refusal of some government hospital doctors, particularly in rural areas, where hospitals are few and far between, to conduct any medical examination of a rape victim unless the case of rape is referred to them by the police. Such a refusal to conduct the medical examination necessarily results in a delay in the ultimate examination of the victim, by which time the evidence of the rape may have been washed away by the complainant herself or be otherwise lost. It is expected that the appellant State will ensure that such a situation does not recur in future. (Para 18). State of Karnataka v. Manjanna, (2000) 6 SCC 188: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1031: AIR 2000 SC 2231: 2000 Cri LJ 3471.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and D.P. Wadhwa and Ruma Pal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-2000]

(h) Time of rape

[9419] — S. 376 — Period elapsed after alleged rape, held, cannot be accurately determined by medical examination — Medical jurisprudence not an exact science. Pratap Misra v. State of Orissa, (1977) 3 SCC 41: 1977 SCC (Cri) 447: AIR 1977 SC 1307: 1977 Cri LJ 817.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-1977]

[9420] — S. 376 — Rape — Time of alleged occurrence — Medical evidence — Incident alleged to have occurred on 15-3-2000, while prosecutrix was medically examined on 17-3-2000 — As against suggestion of accused that sexual act would have taken place more than one week prior to 17-3-2000, doctor while accepting the same also stating that there was possibility of recent intercourse i.e. within a week from 17-3-2000 because there was redness on margin of hymen — High Court holding that when the doctor herself was unclear about actual date of alleged rape, medical report could not be relied upon, and hence, acquitting respondent-accused — Held, fact that prosecutrix was subjected to rape on 15-3-2000 was proved and established from testimony of prosecutrix, medical report and the doctor — Doctor had specifically stated that hymenal appearance could not rule out recent coitus — Hence held, it was proved and established beyond reasonable doubt that prosecutrix was subjected to rape on 15-3-2000 as alleged (Para 13). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2009) 16 SCC 697.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

[9421] — Ss. 376 and 342 — Rape of a minor — Appreciation of evidence — Conviction restored — Non-reliance on medical report since time of occurrence not determined — Doctor who examined prosecutrix finding signs of recent sexual act but also accepting suggestion of accused that intercourse could have taken one week prior to her examination — Prosecutrix telling the doctor that accused had also sexually molested her one year prior to the alleged occurrence — Doctor finding hymen absent but categorically stating that prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted one finger only — Medical report, thus, corroborated by prosecutrix that she was earlier also raped by same accused — High Court acquitting the accused holding that when the doctor herself was unclear about the actual date of alleged rape, medical report could not be relied upon — While doing so, High Court ignoring the fact that doctor had also stated that there was possibility of recent intercourse i.e. within a week of her examination — Held, High Court appreciated the evidence erroneously by ignoring cogent and credible evidence of PWs 3, 4 and 5, which was further corroborated by medical evidence — Hence, impugned judgment acquitting accused set aside, and that of trial court convicting him under Ss. 376 & 342 restored

Facts:

On 15-3-2000, when parents of the prosecutrix had gone to visit her maternal uncle, her elder sister PW 4 had gone to the jungle to fetch leaves for goats, the accused is alleged to have taken the prosecutrix (minor) to his home, bolted the door of the room from inside, switched on the TV, gagged, and raped her. Thereafter he gave her Rs 5 and some "shakkar". Prosecutrix narrated the incident to PW 4. Her parents were informed about the occurrence on 16-3-2000 on their return. PW 4 also handed over to PW 5 (mother) currency note of Rs 5 given to her by the prosecutrix.

The trial court convicted the accused under Ss. 376 and 342 and sentenced him to RI for 7 years and fine of Rs 2000, and RI for 1 year respectively. The High Court acquitted the accused in appeal filed thereagainst. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above.

Held :

It was clearly proved and established that prosecutrix was a minor on the date of occurrence. Prosecutrix was examined on 17-3-2000 and she told the doctor that she had been sexually molested by accused about a year back. On examining her the doctor found signs of recent sexual act, as there was small reddened area over the left upper margin of hymen. In the cross-examination, the doctor has categorically stated that the prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted only one finger. The doctor, however, admitted that absence of hymen proves that she had been used to sexual intercourse earlier. (Paras 10 and 11)

The aforesaid medical report of the doctor is corroborated by the statement made by the prosecutrix that she was earlier also raped by the same accused. As against the suggestion of the accused that the sexual intercourse as alleged would have taken place more than one week prior to 17-3-2000, the doctor while accepting the same also stated that there can be a possibility of recent sexual intercourse i.e. within a week from 17-3-2000, which cannot be ruled out because of the redness on the margin of hymen. (Para 12)

The High Court mainly relied upon the opinion of the doctor holding that the doctor herself was unclear about the actual date of the alleged rape, and therefore, the said medical report could not be relied upon. While doing so, the High Court ignored the fact that the doctor had also stated that there can be a possibility of recent sexual intercourse i.e. within a week from 17-3-2000. The alleged rape was in fact committed within a week from 17-3-2000 i.e. on 15-3-2000. The fact that the prosecutrix was subjected to rape on 15-3-2000 is proved and established from the statement of the prosecutrix, medical report and the statement of the doctor (PW 8), who had examined the prosecutrix. The doctor had also stated that hymenal appearance cannot rule out recent coitus. Therefore, it is also proved and established beyond doubt that the prosecutrix was subjected to rape on 15-3-2000. (Para 13)

Further, prosecutrix had categorically stated that it was the accused who had raped her, and her statement was corroborated by PWs 4 and 5. (Para 14)

Submission that there is no other independent witness to support the aforesaid allegation is also baseless. In case of this nature when the prosecutrix, who was a minor girl on the date of incident, has come forward and stated that she was raped by the accused and her testimony could not be shaken in the cross-examination, we have no reason to disbelieve her for no girl would ever lie on a vital issue of this nature. Even her sister and mother also stated as to what was reported by the prosecutrix herself immediately after the alleged occurrence. Besides, there was PW 6 who though turned hostile at one stage of her examination, admitted that PW 5 had come to her house along with her daughter and narrated the incident to her. (Paras 15 and 16)

Submission by the respondent-accused that the prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse since her hymen was absent also liable to be rejected because the prosecutrix has stated that the accused himself had earlier raped her about a year back. It is also disclosed from the medical report that the prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse as the doctor herself stated that the prosecutrix was not used to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted only one finger. She has explained that there was redness over the margin of hymen and on the basis of this redness, the possibility of recent sexual intercourse could not be ruled out. As the testimony of the prosecutrix, her sister and mother has not been shaken in the cross-examination, the statement of the doctor appears to be a plausible and convincing version. (Para 17)

Further submission of accused that evidence of PWs 3 and 4 should not be relied upon because they were child witnesses and tutored by their parents and police, is unacceptable. Testimonies of PWs 3 and 4 as regards the alleged occurrence was firm and convincing. There was no reason as to why a child of her age would falsely implicate the accused. Besides, it is settled position in law that conviction under Section 376 on sole testimony of a rape victim can be maintained if her evidence is found credible and convincing. (Paras 18 and 19)

Evidence of PWs 3 and 4 was found cogent, credible and uninfluenced by any tutoring. The High Court erroneously appreciated the evidence by ignoring credible evidence of two child witnesses statement of their mother, which was further corroborated by medical evidence. Hence, judgment of the High Court set aside and that of the trial court restored. (Paras 22 to 24). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2009) 16 SCC 697.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210; Mohd. Kalam v. State of Bihar, (2008) 7 SCC 257: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 27, followed

Mohd. Kalam v. State of Bihar, (2008) 7 SCC 257: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 27, applied

State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210, considered and relied on

(i) Medical evidence of sex/rape

See also 'C.20.(c) Injuries on prosecutrix or absence thereof', above

[9422] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Appreciation of evidence — Absence of hymen — Whether indicative of habitual intercourse — Submission by respondent-accused that prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse since her hymen was absent — Held, prosecutrix had stated that accused had raped her about a year back — Besides, the doctor had also stated that prosecutrix was not habitual to intercourse because her vagina admitted only one finger — Hence, submission rejected (Para 17). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2009) 16 SCC 697.

20.(i) Medical evidence of sex/rape (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

[9423] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Appreciation of evidence — Medical evidence — Semen stains on vaginal swabs and salwar — Held, at best, is evidence of commission of sexual intercourse but not of rape (Para 11). Tameezuddin v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2009) 15 SCC 566.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2009]

[9424] — S. 376 — Rape — Appreciation of evidence — Proof of sexual intercourse — Based on FSL report and the report of serologist PW 8 (doctor) finding presence of semen in vaginal swab of prosecutrix, held, is sufficient proof of recent sexual intercourse

The medical report cannot be held to be supporting the case of defence. Based on the FSL report and the report of serologist (Ext. 7) PW 8 doctor found that semen was present in the vaginal swab of the victim and there was sufficient proof of recent sexual intercourse. (Para 21). Utpal Das v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 493.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2010]

[9425] — S. 376 — Rape — Medical evidence — Clothes of prosecutrix found to be stained with human blood and semen — Semen group tallied with that of the accused — Absence of semen or spermatozoa in vaginal smear and slides, which the doctor had taken about 24 hours after the incident not fatal — Absence of smegma around the glans penis and frenum tortuous and edematous — Inferences

The report of the Assistant Chemical Analyser shows that the clothes of the prosecutrix were stained with human blood and semen. The semen found on one of her garments and on the bed-sheet attached from the room was of group A which was the group of the respondent. Of course, the other articles, viz., the mattress and the underwear of the respondent bore no stains. On the contrary the find of semen lends corroboration, if corroboration is at all needed to the version of the prosecutrix. The possibility of the semen stains being of the husband of the prosecutrix is ruled out as his group was found to be 'B' and not 'A'. In the circumstances the absence of semen or spermatozoa in the vaginal smear and slides, cannot cast doubts on the creditworthiness of the prosecutrix. The doctor had the vaginal smear and the slides almost after 24 hours. The witness says that spermatozoa can be found if the woman is examined within 12 hours after intercourse, thereafter they may be found between 48 and 72 hours but in dead form. The prosecutrix may have washed herself by then. Therefore absence of spermatozoa cannot discredit her evidence.

The absence of marks of physical violence on the prosecutrix is not surprising. According to her the respondent had slapped her and threatened her with dire consequences when she tried to resist him. Since she was examined almost 24 hours after the event it would be too much to expect slap marks on her person. While the version of the prosecutrix is that she had tried to resist him, the respondent being a strong man was able to overpower her and take her by force. Besides, he was a man in authority in police uniform. The prosecutrix was alone and helpless. In the circumstances the resistance would be considerably dampened. The evidence of the doctor who examined the respondent reveals that he had noticed (i) absence of smegma around the glans penis and (ii) the frenum tortuous and edematous, indicative of the respondent having had sexual intercourse within the preceding 24 hours, although the witness could not hazard a definite opinion. Therefore, the non-committal opinion of this witness cannot be said to run counter to the evidence of the prosecutrix. It may be that the evidence as to resistance may have been overstated, a tendency which is generally noticed in such cases arising out of a fear of being misunderstood by the society. That is not to say that she was in any way a consenting party. She was the victim of brute force and the lust of the respondent. State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210: AIR 1990 SC 658: 1990 Cri LJ 889.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1990]

[9426] — S. 376 — Rape — Medical evidence — Absence of spermatozoa on vaginal smear — Does not falsify the version of the prosecutrix — Penetration does not necessarily lead to the discovery of spermatozoa — Its absence may be due to various other factors such as faulty taking of smear, its preservation, quality of semen, etc. — On facts, it was not elicited from the prosecutrix of any if the two persons had reached orgasm emitting semen in her private parts

With regard to the vaginal smear examination the doctor stated that no spermatozoa was seen on it, and the absence of sperms has been viewed against the version of the prosecutrix. It was never elicited from the prosecutrix as to whether the two persons who committed rape on her had reached orgasm emitting semen in her private parts. No presumption can be made that penetration of penis in the private parts of a rape victim must necessarily lead to the discovery of spermatozoa. It is a question of detail and has to be put to test by cross-examination. Otherwise also there may be various other factors which may negative the presence of spermatozoa such as faulty taking of the smear, its preservation, quality of semen etc. The absence of spermatozoa prima facie could not be allowed to tell against the version of the prosecutrix. Narayanamma v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 5 SCC 728: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1573.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1994]

[9427] — S. 376 — Rape — Medical evidence — Proof — Absence of dead or mobile spermatozoa in the vagina or in the cervix of the prosecutrix, held, not a conclusive proof of her not being subjected to forcible sexual intercourse

The High Court erred in holding that the prosecutrix had not been subjected to forcible sexual intercourse or the prosecution had failed to prove the case against Respondent 1 also. The High Court's conclusion that absence of dead or mobile spermatozoa either in the vagina or in the cervix of the prosecutrix rules out the possibility of the prosecutrix having been subjected to sexual intercourse, is not referable to any evidence on record. The presence of spermatozoa, dead or alive, would differ from person to person and its positive presence depends upon various circumstances. Otherwise also the presence or absence of spermatozoa is ascertained for the purposes of corroboration of the statement of the prosecutrix. If the prosecutrix is believed to be a truthful witness in her deposition, no further corroboration may be insisted upon. Corroboration is admittedly only a rule of prudence. (Paras 5 and 6). State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147: AIR 1999 SC 3916: 2000 Cri LJ 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-1999]

State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, followed

[9428] — S. 376 — Rape — Medical evidence — Rape on minor girl aged 14 years — Statement of the doctor that hymen of the prosecutrix was ruptured and admitted two fingers — Held, this cannot be viewed as if the prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse

According to the doctor hymen of the prosecutrix was ruptured, admitted two fingers, bled on touch, was reddish in colour, and was painful and tender. On this basis, the doctor opined that these were signs of rape. The ability of admission of two fingers and the hymen being ruptured was viewed by the High Court as if the prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse. When the doctor had opined that the hymen was ruptured, she did not qualify her statement that it stood ruptured as of old or carried an old tear. With clear objective in view, the doctor must be presumed to have noticed the hymen as freshly ruptured, as otherwise, the doctor would not have described it in that fashion to be bleeding, tender and painful. The factum of admission of two fingers could not be held adverse to the prosecutrix for it would depend upon the size of the fingers inserted. When medical experts try to opine about the medical condition of a woman used to sexual intercourse, it is described as admission of two fingers easily, but here the doctor qualified her statement by saying that it was painful and bleeding on touch. These conditions obviously related to the hymen. The doctor was thus clear in her opinion that rape had been committed on the prosecutrix. Narayanamma v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 5 SCC 728: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1573.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1994]

[9429] — S. 376 — Rape — Proof — Rape and murder — Injuries absent — Presence of semen and spermatozoa found on examination of vaginal smear — Held on facts, rape not proved — Semen also detected on one of the underskirts found on the body of the victim — Though accused-appellant found to be potent but no stains of blood or semen found on the dhoti of the appellant — No injuries found on the vagina/private parts of the victim

If there had been any forcible sexual intercourse, the victim must have made some strong resistance being a grown-up lady and in the process, some injuries would have been found on the vagina/private parts of the body or some other parts indicative of any such use of force and it would be too much to assume that there would have been no injuries whatsoever on the body, on this account. Though injuries on the body is not always a must or sine qua non to prove a charge of rape, having regard to the case of the prosecution that the victim had been subjected to brutal rape and forced sexual intercourse, this aspect of the matter cannot be completely lost sight of. The deceased was stated to be of about 26 years of age, when she died and she is the sister of the wife of the appellant. It is not as though they were shown earlier to be on inimical terms. Anything possible might have happened and the facts found proved do not irresistibly lead to the only conclusion of the guilt of the appellant in respect of an offence under Section 376 IPC. Consequently, appellant can be given benefit of doubt and acquitted of the offence under Section 376 IPC, and the conviction recorded and sentence imposed by the High Court upon the appellant on this account is set aside. (Para 15). Joseph v. State of Kerala, (2000) 5 SCC 197: 2000 SCC (Cri) 926: AIR 2000 SC 1608: 2000 Cri LJ 2467.

20.(i) Medical evidence of sex/rape (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, Doraiswamy Raju and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2000]

[9430] — S. 376 — Rape and murder — Absence of semen or spermatozoa in vaginal swab collected from dead body of the deceased — Held, by itself would not disprove sexual molestation when post-mortem report indicated bruising of tissues on right side of vagina 2 x 1 x ½ cm in reddish blue colour and bruising 1 x ½ x ½ cm over the anterior lip of the cervix — This feature is consistent with the victim offering resistance against forcible intercourse. State of T.N. v. Suresh, (1998) 2 SCC 372: AIR 1998 SC 1044.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-1997]

[9431] — S. 376 — Semen stains found on the langot of accused aged 22 — No evidence how old the stains were — The semen stain could exist for a number of reasons and cannot necessarily connect the accused with the offence of rape. Rahim Beg v. State of U.P., (1972) 3 SCC 759: 1972 SCC (Cri) 827: AIR 1973 SC 343: 1972 Cri LJ 1260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Shelat and H.R. Khanna, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1972]

[9432] — Ss. 376 and 342 — Rape of a minor — Appreciation of evidence — Conviction restored — Non-reliance on medical report since time of occurrence not determined — Doctor who examined prosecutrix finding signs of recent sexual act but also accepting suggestion of accused that intercourse could have taken one week prior to her examination — Prosecutrix telling the doctor that accused had also sexually molested her one year prior to the alleged occurrence — Doctor finding hymen absent but categorically stating that prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted one finger only — Medical report, thus, corroborated by prosecutrix that she was earlier also raped by same accused — High Court acquitting the accused holding that when the doctor herself was unclear about the actual date of alleged rape, medical report could not be relied upon — While doing so, High Court ignoring the fact that doctor had also stated that there was possibility of recent intercourse i.e. within a week of her examination — Held, High Court appreciated the evidence erroneously by ignoring cogent and credible evidence of PWs 3, 4 and 5, which was further corroborated by medical evidence — Hence, impugned judgment acquitting accused set aside, and that of trial court convicting him under Ss. 376 & 342 restored

Facts:

On 15-3-2000, when parents of the prosecutrix had gone to visit her maternal uncle, her elder sister PW 4 had gone to the jungle to fetch leaves for goats, the accused is alleged to have taken the prosecutrix (minor) to his home, bolted the door of the room from inside, switched on the TV, gagged, and raped her. Thereafter he gave her Rs 5 and some "shakkar". Prosecutrix narrated the incident to PW 4. Her parents were informed about the occurrence on 16-3-2000 on their return. PW 4 also handed over to PW 5 (mother) currency note of Rs 5 given to her by the prosecutrix.

The trial court convicted the accused under Ss. 376 and 342 and sentenced him to RI for 7 years and fine of Rs 2000, and RI for 1 year respectively. The High Court acquitted the accused in appeal filed thereagainst. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above.

Held :

It was clearly proved and established that prosecutrix was a minor on the date of occurrence. Prosecutrix was examined on 17-3-2000 and she told the doctor that she had been sexually molested by accused about a year back. On examining her the doctor found signs of recent sexual act, as there was small reddened area over the left upper margin of hymen. In the cross-examination, the doctor has categorically stated that the prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted only one finger. The doctor, however, admitted that absence of hymen proves that she had been used to sexual intercourse earlier. (Paras 10 and 11)

The aforesaid medical report of the doctor is corroborated by the statement made by the prosecutrix that she was earlier also raped by the same accused. As against the suggestion of the accused that the sexual intercourse as alleged would have taken place more than one week prior to 17-3-2000, the doctor while accepting the same also stated that there can be a possibility of recent sexual intercourse i.e. within a week from 17-3-2000, which cannot be ruled out because of the redness on the margin of hymen. (Para 12)

The High Court mainly relied upon the opinion of the doctor holding that the doctor herself was unclear about the actual date of the alleged rape, and therefore, the said medical report could not be relied upon. While doing so, the High Court ignored the fact that the doctor had also stated that there can be a possibility of recent sexual intercourse i.e. within a week from 17-3-2000. The alleged rape was in fact committed within a week from 17-3-2000 i.e. on 15-3-2000. The fact that the prosecutrix was subjected to rape on 15-3-2000 is proved and established from the statement of the prosecutrix, medical report and the statement of the doctor (PW 8), who had examined the prosecutrix. The doctor had also stated that hymenal appearance cannot rule out recent coitus. Therefore, it is also proved and established beyond doubt that the prosecutrix was subjected to rape on 15-3-2000. (Para 13)

Further, prosecutrix had categorically stated that it was the accused who had raped her, and her statement was corroborated by PWs 4 and 5. (Para 14)

Submission that there is no other independent witness to support the aforesaid allegation is also baseless. In case of this nature when the prosecutrix, who was a minor girl on the date of incident, has come forward and stated that she was raped by the accused and her testimony could not be shaken in the cross-examination, we have no reason to disbelieve her for no girl would ever lie on a vital issue of this nature. Even her sister and mother also stated as to what was reported by the prosecutrix herself immediately after the alleged occurrence. Besides, there was PW 6 who though turned hostile at one stage of her examination, admitted that PW 5 had come to her house along with her daughter and narrated the incident to her. (Paras 15 and 16)

Submission by the respondent-accused that the prosecutrix was habitual to sexual intercourse since her hymen was absent also liable to be rejected because the prosecutrix has stated that the accused himself had earlier raped her about a year back. It is also disclosed from the medical report that the prosecutrix was not habitual to sexual intercourse as the doctor herself stated that the prosecutrix was not used to sexual intercourse because her vagina admitted only one finger. She has explained that there was redness over the margin of hymen and on the basis of this redness, the possibility of recent sexual intercourse could not be ruled out. As the testimony of the prosecutrix, her sister and mother has not been shaken in the cross-examination, the statement of the doctor appears to be a plausible and convincing version. (Para 17)

Further submission of accused that evidence of PWs 3 and 4 should not be relied upon because they were child witnesses and tutored by their parents and police, is unacceptable. Testimonies of PWs 3 and 4 as regards the alleged occurrence was firm and convincing. There was no reason as to why a child of her age would falsely implicate the accused. Besides, it is settled position in law that conviction under Section 376 on sole testimony of a rape victim can be maintained if her evidence is found credible and convincing. (Paras 18 and 19)

Evidence of PWs 3 and 4 was found cogent, credible and uninfluenced by any tutoring. The High Court erroneously appreciated the evidence by ignoring credible evidence of two child witnesses statement of their mother, which was further corroborated by medical evidence. Hence, judgment of the High Court set aside and that of the trial court restored. (Paras 22 to 24). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2009) 16 SCC 697.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210; Mohd. Kalam v. State of Bihar, (2008) 7 SCC 257: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 27, followed

Mohd. Kalam v. State of Bihar, (2008) 7 SCC 257: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 27, applied

State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210, considered and relied on

[9433] — Ss. 376 and 354 — Sexual assault or indecent assault — Victim aged about 5 years — Doctor finding the hymen completely torn, laceration on all sides of vagina and fresh bleeding — Evidence of lady doctor showing that a finger could be easily inserted inside the private part — Held, the victim was subjected to sexual assault and not merely indecent assault — Merely because the injuries found on the private part of the victim could also be caused by an instrument like a piece of glass cannot lead to the conclusion that she was not raped unless there is material to support such a conclusion

The victim girl was brought to the hospital in a semi-conscious state and her general condition was poor. On external examination of the girl the doctor found that the hymen was completely torn and there was laceration on all sides of vagina. The doctor noticed that there was fresh bleeding in her private part. On internal examination the doctor found that a finger could easily be inserted in her private part and bloodstained discharge was coming out. Thus from the medical evidence it is clear that the girl was not only subjected to an indecent assault but there was sexual activity and the girl was subjected to sexual assault, otherwise the doctor would not have found the hymen completely torn, laceration on all sides of the vagina and fresh bleeding. According to the evidence of lady doctor a finger could be easily inserted inside the private part of the victim which otherwise was not possible in the case of a child aged 5 years because according to the Medical Jurisprudence by Modi, 21st Edn., p. 376, in a girl under 14 years of age the vaginal orifice is usually so small that it will hardly allow the passage of the little finger through her hymen. In the present case if the girl aged 5 years was not subjected to sexual intercourse the finger could not have been easily inserted in her private part as observed by the lady doctor.

20.(i) Medical evidence of sex/rape (contd.)

Simply because the injuries found on the private part of the girl could also be caused in several other ways than the sexual assault on the victim cannot lead to the conclusion that the injuries on her private part were not sustained by commission of the rape but by some other instrument in the absence of any material to support such a conclusion. In the present case though the doctor deposed that the injuries could also be caused by instrument like piece of glass but there were neither circumstances nor any material to conclude or even to suggest that the victim had sustained the injuries by any piece of glass. No piece of glass was found at or near the place of occurrence. On the contrary there is positive and convincing evidence showing that there was sexual assault on the girl and the finding that she was subjected to indecent assault is absolutely incorrect. State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-1994]

[9434] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape on minor girl (aged 11 to 12 years) — Absence of spermatozoa — Girl profusely bleeding — Leaves on which blood was wiped and swab, found from place of occurrence, along with blood-stained salwar sent to Chemical Analyzer and Serologist — According to report no spermatozoa found on the materials sent for examination — Held, mere absence of spermatozoa cannot cast a doubt on correctness of prosecution case. Prithi Chand v. State of H.P., (1989) 1 SCC 432: 1989 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 702: (1989) 1 SCR 123: 1989 Cri LJ 841.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-1989]

[9435] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape on minor girl (aged 11 or 12 years) — Penetration — Proof of

It was argued that having regard to the girl's age and the fact that her vagina admitted one finger with difficulty, it is not possible to believe that there was penetration.

Held :

In the absence of penetration there would not be absence of hymen with the edges torn and profuse bleeding from the vagina staining the salwar. Merely because the doctor found that the vagina admitted one finger with difficulty, it cannot be inferred that there was no penetration as the muscles must have contracted by then. The accused-appellant, a robust man must have penetrated the vagina. Prithi Chand v. State of H.P., (1989) 1 SCC 432: 1989 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 702: (1989) 1 SCR 123: 1989 Cri LJ 841.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-1989]

[9436] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Attempt to commit rape — Proof and corroboration — Presence of semen/human spermatozoa on salwar — Chemical Examiner reporting that chemical and miscroscopical tests of the seized salwar of the prosecutrix revealed the presence of semen/human spermatozoa — Even in absence of proof that the said spermatozoa was that of the accused, such a report, held, a strong corroborative piece of evidence — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 45. Madan Lal v. State of J&K, (1997) 7 SCC 677: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1151: AIR 1998 SC 386.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-1997]

[9437] — Ss. 376/511 & 323 — Attempt to rape — Medical evidence — Presence of "smegma on the dorsal side of posterior 1/4th glans" of accused — Negates the case of recent intercourse — Victim's hymen and fourchette found intact, no bleeding or dried blood mark, no discharge, no swelling found — Both accused and victim medically examined within seven hours of the occurrence — On microscopic examination of vaginal smear and urethral smear, no semen or spermatozoa found — Witness deposing that on hearing cries when he went to side of the road he found accused raising his underwear and on seeing him he ran away and the victim said that the accused spoiled her — Held, circumstances attending the case, evidence of PWs coupled with medical evidence established attempt of rape and causing simple hurt — Hence accused liable to be convicted under Ss. 376/511 and 323 and sentenced to 5 years' RI and 4 months' imprisonment

The offence committed by accused-respondent is only an attempt of rape on the medical evidence which does not clinchingly establish the proof of rape as required by law. The presence of smegma was inconsistent with a recent intercourse. It would take about 24 hours to accumulate if the smegma is rubbed off during intercourse.

On the assessment and evaluation of the evidence, it must, therefore, be held that the respondent has made himself liable to be punished under S. 376 read with S. 511 IPC. Therefore, the respondent is convicted thereunder and is sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for five years. The conviction record by the High Court under S. 323 IPC and the sentence of four months' imprisonment is retained. State of Karnataka v. Mahabaleshwar Gourya Naik, 1992 Supp (3) SCC 179: 1993 SCC (Cri) 180: AIR 1992 SC 2043: (1992) 2 Crimes 654.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M.M. Punchhi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-1992]

Parikh's Textbook of Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, page 439, relied on

21. Practice and Procedure

[9438] — S. 376 — Rape — Plea of consensual sex raised for the first time under Art. 136, held, not maintainable (Para 23). Utpal Das v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 493.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2010]

22. Proof

Synopsis

(a) Generally 659
(b) Corroboration 660
(c) Laboratory Test 661
(d) Recovery of crime/incriminating material/other articles 661
(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act 662

(a) Generally

[9439] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Burden of proof — Burden is on the prosecution to prove each and every ingredient of the offence, absence of consent being one of them — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 101 (Para 21). Uday v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 4 SCC 46: 2003 SCC (Cri) 775: AIR 2003 SC 1639: 2003 Cri LJ 1539.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-2003]

[9440] — S. 375 Thirdly — Rape by a policeman in police station — Onus on the prosecution to establish ingredients of the offence — Passive consent or submission out of fear by the prosecutrix — Circumstantial evidence regarding — Held, offence not established — Charge against companion policeman under S. 354 for fondling the private parts of the prosecutrix also fails

The onus is always on the prosecution to prove affirmatively each ingredient of the offence it seeks to establish and such onus never shifts. It was, therefore, incumbent on it to make out that all the ingredients of S. 375 were present in the case. For the proposition that the requisite consent was lacking in the present case reliance on behalf of the State can be placed only on clause Thirdly so that it would have to be shown that the girl had been put in fear of death or hurt and that that was the reason for her consent. In the absence of such a finding, the alleged fear would not vitiate the consent. Further, for circumstantial evidence to be used in order to prove an ingredient of an offence, it has to be such that it leads to no reasonable inference other than that of guilt. The fear which clause Thirdly of S. 375 speaks of is negatived by the circumstance that the girl is said to have been taken away by the accused policeman right from amongst her near and dear ones at a point of time when they were all leaving the police station together and were crossing the entrance gate. The circumstantial evidence available, therefore, is not only capable of being construed in a way different from that adopted by the High Court but actually derogates in no uncertain measure from the inference drawn by it.

Moreover, no marks of injury were found on the person of the girl after the incident and their absence goes a long way to indicate that the alleged intercourse was a peaceful affair, and that the story of a stiff resistance having been put up by the girl is all false. It is further clear that the averments on the part of the girl that she had been shouting loudly for help are untrue.

Thus the sexual intercourse in question is not proved to amount to rape and no offence is brought home to the appellant.

As regards another policeman who was alleged to have fondled the private parts of the girl, the girl's version could not be believed in view of the shifting positions taken by her in this regard. Further the circumstance that this policeman was present at the time of occurrence is not inculpatory and is capable of more explanations than one. Tukaram v. State of Maharashtra, (1979) 2 SCC 143: 1979 SCC (Cri) 381: AIR 1979 SC 185: 1978 Cri LJ 1864: (1979) 16 ACC 7.

22.(a) Generally (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Jaswant Singh, P.S. Kailasam and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1978]

See comments at (1974) 4 SCC (Jour) 17

[9441] — S. 376 — Even if factum of rape is established beyond reasonable doubt, the accused cannot be convicted unless there is reliable and acceptable evidence to come to a conclusion that it was the accused who committed the rape. Prahlad Singh v. State of M.P., (1997) 8 SCC 515: AIR 1997 SC 3442: 1997 Cri LJ 4078.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-1997]

[9442] — S. 376 — Rape — Considerations while deciding guilt of accused in rape case — Held, statement of prosecutrix must be given primary consideration, but, at the same time, broad principle that prosecution has to prove its case beyond reasonable doubt applies equally to a case of rape and there can be no presumption that a prosecutrix would always tell the entire story truthfully (Para 11). Abbas Ahmad Choudhary v. State of Assam, (2010) 12 SCC 115: 2010 Cri LJ 2060.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-2009]

[9443] — S. 376 — Rape cases — Proof in — Duty of court to deal with such cases with utmost sensitivity — Minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the witnesses should not be a ground for throwing out allegations of rape

The courts are expected to show great responsibility while trying an accused on charges of rape. They must deal with such cases with utmost sensitivity. The courts should examine the broader probabilities of a case and not get swayed by minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the witnesses, which are not of a fatal nature to throw out allegations of rape. This is all the more important because of late crime against women in general and rape in particular is on the increase. It is an irony that while we are celebrating woman's rights in all spheres, we show little or no concern for her honour. It is a sad reflection and it must be emphasised that the courts must deal with rape cases in particular with utmost sensitivity and appreciate the evidence in the totality of the background of the entire case and not in isolation. State of A.P. v. Gangula Satya Murthy, (1997) 1 SCC 272: 1997 SCC (Cri) 325: AIR 1997 SC 1588: 1997 Cri LJ 774.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1996]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on

(b) Corroboration

[9444] — Ss. 376, 354 and 342 — Corroboration to the testimony of the victim of sexual offences — When required — Held, except corroboration by medical evidence, if available, no other corroborating evidence required, if the victim's testimony is otherwise believable — On facts, held, testimony of the prosecutrix (minor girls of 10-12 years age) reliable and hence conviction under Ss. 376 read with 511, 354, and 342 upheld

If the evidence of the victim does not suffer from any basic infirmity, and the 'probabilities factor' does not render it unworthy of credence, as a general rule, corroboration cannot be insisted upon, except from the medical evidence, where, having regard to the circumstances of the case, medical evidence can be expected to be forthcoming. This rule is subject to the qualification that corroboration may be insisted upon when a woman having attained majority is found in a compromising position and there is a likelihood of her having levelled such an accusation on account of the instinct of self-preservation; or when the 'probabilities factor' is found to be out of tune.

Corroboration of the victim of the sexual offence may be considered essential to establish the offence in the backdrop of the social ecology of the western world. But it is wholly unnecessary to import the said concept on a turnkey basis and to transplant it on the Indian soil regardless of the altogether different atmosphere, attitudes, mores, responses of the Indian Society, and its profile. Rarely will a girl or a woman in India make false allegations of sexual assault due to various psycho-social factors. And when in the face of those factors the crime is brought to light there is a built-in assurance that the charge is genuine rather than fabricated.

On principle the testimony of a victim of sexual assault stands on par with the testimony of an injured witness. Just like the testimony of the injured witness, that of the victim of sex offence is entitled to great weight. But unlike the case of physical assault, corroboration in the form of eyewitness account of an independent witness cannot be expected in sex offences, having regard to the very nature of the offence. Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728: AIR 1983 SC 753: 1983 Cri LJ 1096.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and M.P. Thakkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-5-1983]

(c) Laboratory Test

[9445] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Genuineness of swabs and slides in rape and murder case — Malkhana register — Credibility of entries made therein — Entries relating to vaginal swabs and slides appeared to have been missed initially but subsequently made by incharge of malkhana — There was plausible explanation for omission — Initially, articles mentioned on first page of post-mortem examination report were entered in the register and then it was noticed that some more articles (swabs and slides) were mentioned on third page of report — Malkhana incharge, in his evidence, denying theory of interpolation — Even otherwise, there was evidence on record that swabs and slides were received in malkhana from hospital in a sealed jar and were delivered in the same condition to Centre for Cellular & Molecular Biology (CCMB), Hyderabad, for DNA profiling of accused — No suggestion made during cross-examination of doctors and police officials that seals of jar were tampered with — Held, genuineness of samples could not be doubted in such circumstances

PW 47, Constable Rajinder Singh of CBI, who was the incharge of the malkhana on the day in question deposed that there was no mention that swabs and slides were contained in a glass jar, but the fact that the entries had been interpolated has been emphatically denied by him. These items had been taken by Inspector Shekhawat from the malkhana on 31-1-1996 in a sealed condition and in a glass jar and handed over to CCMB, Hyderabad in an identical condition. PW 49, Dr. Lalji Singh from CCMB deposed on oath that all the aforesaid items along with several others had been received in a sealed condition as his organisation did not accept any item which was without a seal. He further stated that along with samples he had received the sample seals which had been affixed on the bundle of clothes and the bottle carrying vaginal swabs and slides. (Para 58)

The vaginal swabs and slides find mention on the third page of the post-mortem report whereas the other items taken from the dead body are on internal p. 1. This raises the possibility that the Head Constable had, at the initial stage, missed the articles on p. 3 and thereafter rectified the mistake. No adverse inference against the prosecution can be drawn with regard to the retention of the items in the malkhana. No suggestion was put either to the doctors or to DSP Ohri or to Sub-Inspector Shekhawat that the seals of the aforesaid articles had been tampered with. (Para 59). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

(d) Recovery of crime/incriminating material/other articles

[9446] — S. 376 — Rape — Evidence of recovery of stained underwear of accused — Held, by itself cannot support case of rape against the accused

Since the identification of accused itself was doubtful, recovery of underwear at their instance becomes meaningless. It is somewhat difficult to believe that the accused had themselves provided the evidence of having committed rape soon after the incident, and even more surprising, that some of them had done so three days after the incident. Besides, recovery of the stained underwear is a factor which, by itself, cannot support a case of rape against the accused. (Para 21). Raju v. State of M.P., (2008) 15 SCC 133: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 751: AIR 2009 SC 858: (2009) 74 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2008]

[9447] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Murder and rape — Recovery of underwear stained with blood (Group B) and semen on information given by accused — But the same not produced and exhibited in court — Nothing to show that the same was of the accused — No evidence to show as to what was the blood group of the accused and therefore, possibility of blood on the underwear being of the accused himself not ruled out — Number and extent of spread of stains also not known — Held, recovery of stained underwear was not an incriminating circumstance

In the present case the age of the accused was about 21 years at the time of the incident. On his arrest he was subjected to medical examination and found to be a potent and capable person. Presence of semen stain on underwear, assuming that the underwear belonged to the accused, though there is no evidence adduced in this regard, is not by itself an incriminating piece of evidence connecting the accused with the crime in question. So also the discovery of Group B bloodstain on the underwear cannot be treated as an incriminating piece of evidence against the accused connecting him with the crime because there is no evidence that the underwear belonged to the accused and further the possibility of the underwear being stained with the blood of the person to whom it belonged, or the accused if he was wearing it has not been ruled out. (Para 19). Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256.

22.(d) Recovery of crime/incriminating material/ other articles (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2001]

Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 2 SCC 35: 1981 SCC (Cri) 315, relied on

[9448] — Ss. 376, 457 and 380 — Recovery of torch at the instance of accused — In the absence of any identifying mark on it, on facts, was doubtful — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 27

PW 3 (witness who was examined to prove the seizure of the torch and the disclosure statements) denies the fact that a torch was recovered pursuant to a disclosure statement made by accused-appellant J. He asserted that the torch was recovered from the room of the prosecutrix. Moreover, the prosecutrix herself admitted that such torches are sold in the market. In the absence of any identifying mark on the torch, it is difficult to place much reliance on the recovery of the torch. (Para 22). Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185: AIR 2003 SC 3365.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2003]

[9449] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Underwear handed over by the accused to the investigating officer were found by the chemical examiner to be stained with semen — Underwear produced by some of the accused on the next day of occurrence, while others producing them three days later — Held, it is somewhat difficult to believe that the accused had themselves provided the evidence of having committed rape soon after the incident, and even more surprising, that some of them had done so three days after the incident — Recovery of the stained underwear is a factor which, by itself, cannot support a case of rape against the accused (Para 21). Raju v. State of M.P., (2008) 15 SCC 133: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 751: AIR 2009 SC 858: (2009) 74 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2008]

Raja Ram v. State of M.P., (1994) 2 SCC 568: 1994 SCC (Cri) 573; Arokia Thomas v. State of T.N., (2006) 10 SCC 542: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 140; Suresh Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2003) 4 SCC 128: 2003 SCC (Cri) 801, followed

(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act

See also C.4.(d) Credibility of prosecutrix/ witness',

'C.8. Conduct of accused, prosecutrix, witnesses, etc.', and

'C.11. Conviction on sole testimony of prosecutrix', above

[9450] — S. 375 — Rape — Evidence — Testimony of prosecutrix — Conviction on the sole basis of — Sustainability

It is now a well-settled principle of law that conviction can be founded on the testimony of the prosecutrix alone unless there are compelling reasons for seeking corroboration. The evidence of a prosecutrix is more reliable than that of an injured witness. The testimony of the victim of sexual assault is vital, unless there are compelling reasons which necessitate looking for corroboration of her statement. The courts should find no difficulty in acting on the testimony of a victim of sexual assault alone to convict an accused where her testimony inspires confidence and is found to be reliable. It is also a well-settled principle of law that corroboration as a condition for judicial reliance on the testimony of the prosecutrix is not a requirement of law but a guidance of prudence under the given circumstances. Minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix should not be a ground for throwing out an otherwise reliable prosecution case. (Paras 5 and 15 to 20). State of H.P. v. Asha Ram, (2005) 13 SCC 766: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 296: AIR 2006 SC 381: 2006 Cri LJ 139.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2005]

Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728; Rafiq v. State of U.P., (1980) 4 SCC 262: 1980 SCC (Cri) 947; Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598; Ranjit Hazarika v. State of Assam, (1998) 8 SCC 635: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1725; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898, considered and relied on

[9451] — S. 375 — Rape — Evidence — Testimony of prosecutrix — Should be appreciated on the basis of probabilities like testimony of any other witness and conviction can be based solely on such testimony — But if court finds it difficult to accept her testimony, it may seek assurance to her testimony, which may be short of corroboration, from other evidence

A prosecutrix complaining of having been a victim of the offence of rape is not an accomplice after the crime. There is no rule of law that her testimony cannot be acted without corroboration in material particulars. Her testimony has to be appreciated on the principle of probabilities just as the testimony of any other witness; a high degree of probability having been shown to exist in view of the subject-matter being a criminal charge. However, if the court of facts may find it difficult to accept the version of the prosecutrix on its face value, it may search for evidence, direct or circumstantial, which would lend assurance to her testimony. Assurance, short of corroboration as understood in the context of an accomplice would do. (Para 11). State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898: AIR 2000 SC 1812: 2000 Cri LJ 2205.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

State of Punjab v. Gurmeet Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 SCR 377: 1952 Cri LJ 547; Sidheswar Ganguly v. State of W.B., AIR 1958 SC 143: 1958 Cri LJ 273; Madho Ram v. State of U.P., (1973) 1 SCC 533: 1973 SCC (Cri) 417; State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598; State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781; Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; Bodhisattwa Gautam v. Subhra Chakraborty, (1996) 1 SCC 490: 1996 SCC (Cri) 133, relied on

[9452] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Appreciation of evidence — Evidence of victim appearing probable — Insistence on corroborative evidence by accused — Impermissibility of — Held, an accused cannot cling to a fossil formula and insist on corroborative evidence, even if taken as a whole, the case spoken to by the victim strikes a judicial mind as probable — Judicial response to human rights cannot be blunted by legal jugglery

Challenge in this appeal is to the judgment rendered by Single Judge High Court reducing the custodial sentence of respondent to 3½ years instead of 7 years as was imposed by the trial court. The respondent was convicted for an offence punishable under Section 376 IPC. Before the trial court, the prosecution had placed reliance on the evidence of the victim and the medical evidence. The victim (PW 1) was aged less than 12 years at the time of incident. Conviction was reduced to 3½ years, since the High Court felt that in view of certain special reasons the custodial sentence was to be reduced to 3½ years.

In support of the appeal, counsel for the State submitted that in a heinous crime like rape the High Court was not justified in reducing the sentence by referring to certain circumstances which are not only irrelevant but also cannot constitute special reasons warranting reduction in sentence.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It needs no emphasis that the physical scar may heal up, but the mental scar will always remain. When a woman is ravished, what is inflicted is not merely physical injury but the deep sense of some deathless shame. An accused cannot cling to a fossil formula and insist on corroborative evidence, even if taken as a whole, the case spoken to by the victim strikes a judicial mind as probable. Judicial response to human rights cannot be blunted by legal jugglery. (Para 6). State of Karnataka v. Raju, (2007) 11 SCC 490: AIR 2007 SC 3225: (2007) 58 AIC 39 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 4700.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2007]

[9453] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Conviction — On the sole basis of testimony of the prosecutrix — Sustainability — Held, is sustainable where the court is convinced about the truthfulness of the prosecutrix and there exist no circumstances which cast a shadow of doubt over her veracity — On facts held, the prosecutrix did not appear to be a witness of sterling quality on whose sole testimony a conviction could be sustained — She tried to conceal facts from the court, deviated from the case narrated in the FIR and her explanation about inordinate delay in lodging FIR was unsatisfactory — Hence, appellants entitled to benefit of doubt (Paras 23 and 25). Ramdas v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 2 SCC 170: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 546: AIR 2007 SC 155: (2007) 49 AIC 418 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2006]

[9454] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Corroboration of evidence of prosecutrix — Whether mandatory — Rape of minor aged 12 years — Taking judicial note of (1) social repercussions, (2) backward looking Indian society (3) dangers of being ostracised and survival difficulties, and (4) the resultant psychology of an Indian girl or woman (especially an unmarried girl) to admit rape without rape actually having been committed, held, evidence of prosecutrix stands on equal footing with that of injured witness and if her evidence inspires confidence, corroboration is not necessary

In a case of rape, the testimony of a prosecutrix stands on a par with that of an injured witness. It is really not necessary to insist for corroboration if the evidence of the prosecutrix inspires confidence and appears to be credible. Corroboration is not the sine qua non for conviction in a rape case. No doubt, it is true that the doctor who initially conducted the medical examination of the prosecutrix, did not appear on behalf of the prosecution to depose. But, that alone is not sufficient to discard the prosecution story. (Paras 18 and 16)

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

In Indian society any girl or woman would not make such allegations against a person as she is fully aware of the repercussions flowing therefrom. If she is found to be false, she would be looked at by the society with contempt throughout her life. For an unmarried girl, it will be difficult to find a suitable groom. Therefore, unless an offence has really been committed, a girl or a woman would be extremely reluctant even to admit that any such incident had taken place which is likely to reflect on her chastity. She would also be conscious of the danger of being ostracised by the society. It would indeed be difficult for her to survive in Indian society which is, of course, not as forward-looking as the western countries are. (Para 17)

Looking from any angle, the appeal has no merit nor substance. It is proved beyond any shadow of doubt that the appellant had committed offence of rape on the minor girl and had completely ravished her. Even without the examination of the doctor, the evidence of the prosecutrix stands fully corroborated by the evidence of PW 3 Sub-Inspector of the police station who had virtually caught the appellant red-handed during commission of rape. Thus, even if the doctor had not been examined it would not throw or completely discard the prosecution story. The evidence of the prosecution witnesses is fully trustworthy and there is no reason to doubt genuineness thereof. (Paras 25 and 18)

In the present case, there is consistency in the evidence of the prosecutrix, which stands corroborated by the evidence of PW 3. He had no axe to grind against the appellant. In this case, the version of the prosecutrix right from lodging of the FIR, till her examination by the doctor and till she deposed in court, had been absolutely consistent. Not only this, to corroborate further, the evidence of PW 3 is also on record who had caught the appellant red-handed which fully establishes that it was the appellant who had committed offence of rape. (Para 24)

PW 1 prosecutrix had initially not supported the prosecution case and was declared hostile. But later when confronted with her statement recorded under Section 161 CrPC, she categorically deposed that the appellant removed her underwear, laid on her, put his male organ into her private part and was moving up and down. According to her, he committed bad act with her. PW 1 also proved her FIR recorded on 14-10-1988. When PW 1 was sent for medical examination, she again narrated rape on her by the appellant before the medical officer which finds place in her medical report. (Paras 9 and 12)

Whatever little lacunae was there in the prosecution story, have been cured in his cross-examination of PW 3 (IO). PW 3 (IO) corroborating the statement of PW 1 deposed that the accused and the prosecutrix were found to be in a compromising position and were naked below the waist, that the appellant was lying on the prosecutrix and was indulging in sexual intercourse and he had seen the incident in the light of the vehicle in which he was travelling and that thereafter they put on their clothes, were brought to police station and FIR was lodged. According to PW 3, the autorickshaw of the accused in which he had kidnapped PW 1 was seized on the same day and he was apprehended on the next day. (Paras 10 to 12)

Even the slightest penetration is sufficient to make out an offence of rape and depth of penetration is immaterial. It was contended on behalf of the appellant that since hymen of the prosecutrix was found to be intact, it cannot be said that an offence of rape was committed on her by the appellant. This contention cannot be accepted as the offence of rape has been defined in Section 375 IPC. The medical report recorded that the hymen of the prosecutrix was intact, that her private part admitted only the tip of little finger with difficulty and that no intercourse was done with her. (Paras 19 to 22 and 8). Wahid Khan v. State of M.P., (2010) 2 SCC 9.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2009]

Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 Cri LJ 547, relied on

Radhu v. State of M.P., (2007) 12 SCC 57: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 207, distinguished

Modi: Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, 22nd Edn., p. 495; Parikh: Textbook of Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, relied on [9455] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix — Held, though evidence of prosecutrix must be given predominant consideration, but to hold that this evidence has to be accepted even if the story is improbable and belies logic, would be doing violence to the very principles which govern the appreciation of evidence in a criminal matter — On facts held, some supporting evidence was essential for prosecution's case in view of fallacies in prosecution version (Paras 9 and 10). Tameezuddin v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2009) 15 SCC 566.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2009]

[9456] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix — Corroboration of — Appellant alleged to have raped the complainant (PW 2) when she was alone in the house and later assaulted her husband who went to appellant's house to protest — Prosecutrix was an illiterate woman belonging to the lowest rung of society — Her testimony found credible by the trial court and the High Court — Held, there was no reason for her to make false allegations against the appellant — Despite lodging a complaint of "rape and assault", no action was taken by the police (as well as by the SP to whom a separate report was made) as regards offence of rape — Hence, there is substance in the complaint of the complainant and her husband that the police were siding with the appellant and a serious charge of rape levelled against him was not even recorded by the police constable who came to the hospital — Conviction and sentence upheld (Paras 6 to 9). Shrawan v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 13 SCC 191: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 677: (2006) 45 AIC 59 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2006]

[9457] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape trial — Conviction on the basis of sole testimony of prosecutrix — Held, conviction can be based on prosecutrix's testimony corroborated by medical evidence and other circumstances such as report of chemical examination, if available evidence is otherwise trustworthy

It is now well-settled that conviction for an offence of rape can be based on the sole testimony of prosecutrix corroborated by medical evidence and other circumstances such as the report of chemical examination etc., if the same is found to be natural, trustworthy and worth being relied on. (Para 14). State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980: AIR 2001 SC 2075.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

[9458] — Ss. 375 & 376 and 366 — Rape — Corroboration of prosecutrix's evidence — Sufficiency of — Conviction confirmed — Medical corroboration, when not mandatory — Lacunae in prosecution case when not material — Rape of minor aged 12 years — Lacunae in prosecution that: (1) prosecutrix initially turning hostile, (2) doctor examining prosecutrix was not examined (meaning prosecution story not being corroborated by medical examination), and (3) examination report of doctor reporting that hymen of prosecutrix was intact — On the other hand prosecutrix though initially turning hostile giving credible and consistent statement in FIR, in S. 161 CrPC statement, before medical officer and in S. 164 CrPC statement — PW 3, IO catching the accused red-handed during rape and also recovering autorickshaw in which prosecutrix was kidnapped the same day, thereby fully corroborating statement of PW 1 (prosecutrix) — PW 3 having no past enmity with accused — Prosecutrix categorically deposing that appellant-accused removed her underwear, laid on her, put his male organ into her private part and was moving up and down — According to prosecutrix, accused committed "bad act" with her — Effect — On facts, held, offence of rape has been proved from all angles, despite the hymen being found intact — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 161, 154 and 164 (Paras 19 to 22 and 8). Wahid Khan v. State of M.P., (2010) 2 SCC 9.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2009]

Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 Cri LJ 547, relied on [9459] — Ss. 375, 376 and 366 — Rape — Proof and corroboration of — Testimony of prosecutrix — Conviction on the sole basis of — Permissibility — Prosecutrix alleging that on the pretext of taking her to the hospital, accused took her to a room inside the hotel and after threatening her, ravished her sexually — Accused though denying the charges not able to explain as to how he had been falsely implicated — Testimony of prosecutrix quite natural, inspiring confidence and meriting acceptance — Held, a clear case of rape, as defined under S. 375 clause thirdly has been established against the accused — Further held, conviction can be sustained on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix, if it inspires confidence — Bombay Children Act, 1948 (71 of 1948), S. 57 (Para 25). Vishnu v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 1 SCC 283: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 217: AIR 2006 SC 508: (2006) 37 AIC 310 (SC): 2006 Cri LJ 303.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2005]

[9460] — Ss. 375, 376 and 450 — Rape — Conviction on (sole) testimony of prosecutrix — Permissibility — Appellant-accused alleged to have raped the prosecutrix when she was alone in her hut which was situated in a field — It was also alleged that when she was knocked down, bangles

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

on her right hand had broken — Pieces of broken bangles found at the place of occurrence — Stains found on one of the underwears of accused — Submission that uncorroborated version of prosecutrix should not have been relied upon by trial court as well as High Court to convict accused under S. 450 and S. 376(1) and sentenced accused to five years' and seven years' RI respectively — Reiterating the principles enunciated by Supreme Court in its various decisions as regards sustainability of conviction on the sole testimony of prosecutrix and considering the relevant case law, held, impugned judgment and sentence imposed therein warrants no interference — Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, S. 3(1)(xii) (Paras 2 to 6 and 11 to 14). Moti Lal v. State of M.P., (2008) 11 SCC 20: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 950: 2008 Cri LJ 3543.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-7-2008]

[9461] — S. 375 Fifthly — Conviction under, upheld in view of testimony of prosecutrix which stood corroborated by that of her father as well as of the doctor who had examined her — That after the occurrence the prosecutrix had been living in the house of the accused and had given birth to a child, if established, could be taken into account in fixing quantum of punishment — But in the absence of any evidence in that regard, sentence of five years' RI upheld. Bishnudayal v. State of Bihar, 1980 Supp SCC 358: 1981 SCC (Cri) 283: AIR 1981 SC 39: 1980 Cri LJ 1297.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-1980]

[9462] — S. 376 — Appreciation of evidence — That conviction can be based on sole testimony of the prosecutrix, reiterated

The conviction for offence under Section 376 IPC can be based on the sole testimony of a rape victim. However, after carefully scanning and scrutinising the evidence of the parents of the prosecutrix, her brother, the prosecutrix herself and the doctor (PW 11), the same is found to be trustworthy, convincing and reliable. (Para 15). State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980, relied on [9463] — S. 376 — Conviction can be based on the sole testimony of an eyewitness though in this case his testimony stood corroborated by the blood-stains on the clothes of dumb and deaf prosecutrix aged 13 and the medical evidence — Non-examination of prosecutrix hence not fatal. Mange v. State of Haryana, (1979) 4 SCC 349: 1979 SCC (Cri) 985: AIR 1979 SC 1194: 1979 Cri LJ 939.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-1979]

[9464] — S. 376 — Conviction on (sole) testimony of prosecutrix — Case law considered and discussed (Para 11). S. Ramakrishna v. State, (2009) 1 SCC 133: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 487: AIR 2009 SC 885: (2008) 71 AIC 66 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2008]

State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; Narayan Saha v. State of Tripura, (2004) 7 SCC 775: 2005 SCC (Cri) 410, followed

[9465] — S. 376 — Conviction upheld on the ground that testimony of prosecutrix stood corroborated by the medical report and her father's testimony — Police abandoning case of rape on ground of complaint being not genuine — Report of Chemical Examiner on vaginal swabs for semen withheld by police — Held, in such circumstances, at the trial based on private complaint by the prosecutrix, defence cannot rely on non-prosecution by the police — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 157(1) Proviso (b), 156 and 169

It is curious that in spite of the statements of the girl and her father and the medical report, the police was not satisfied even prima facie as to the truth of the allegations against the appellants. The police officers including the Superintendent of Police, did not even consider it their duty to produce before the court the report of examination by the Chemical Examiner of the vaginal swabs of the prosecutrix as to the presence of semen and spermatozoa. There is no explanation why such a very important and vital evidence has been withheld from the court. In the circumstances, no importance whatsoever should be given to the fact that the police was not satisfied about the genuineness of the prosecution case. Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, (1987) 2 SCC 27: 1987 SCC (Cri) 249: AIR 1987 SC 1080: 1987 Cri LJ 971.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.L. Oza and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-1987]

[9466] — S. 376 — Evidence of prosecutrix, if corroborated by circumstances of the case, held, would be sufficient to found conviction under, without any further substantial corroboration of her evidence — Circumstantial factors to be considered

A girl below 16 years was sleeping in the night out-side her house in the company of her mother and other children when the accused-appellant along with another person carried her away to a nearby godown under intimidation, raped her and then put her back in the cot from where she was removed. In the morning her mother saw blood on the daughter's salwar and on enquiry the victim complainingly narrated the last night's incident. An FIR was lodged which was followed by investigation and charge-sheet and ultimately conviction of the appellant under S. 376, Indian Penal Code.

Held :

The court must bear in mind human psychology and behavioural probability when assessing the testimonial potency of the victim's version. The inherent bashfulness, the innocent naivete and the feminine tendency to conceal the outrage of masculine sexual aggression are factors which are relevant to improbabilise the hypothesis of false implication. The injury on the person of the victim, especially her private parts, has corroborative value. Her complaint to her parents and the presence of blood on her clothes are also testimony which warrant credence. More than all, it baffles belief in human nature that a girl sleeping with her mother and other children in the open will come by blood on her garments and injury in her private parts unless she has been subjected to the torture of rape. To forsake these vital considerations and go by obsolescent demands for substantial corroboration is to sacrifice commonsense in favour of an artificial concoction called 'judicial' probability.

That the trial Court has acquitted the remaining accused is no ground for claiming acquittal of the appellant. Krishan Lal v. State of Haryana, (1980) 3 SCC 159: 1980 SCC (Cri) 667: AIR 1980 SC 1252: 1980 Cri LJ 926: (1980) 6 ALR 310.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-4-1980]

[9467] — S. 376 — Evidence of rape victim — If a person in authority such as a police officer is accused of rape, evidence of the prosecutrix should be judged in the backdrop of the particular fact situation in which she was placed — Absence of resistance by prosecutrix to be viewed in the context of the sense of awe attached to the authority and her helplessness — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114-A

The infrastructure of our criminal investigation system recognises and protects the right of a woman to decent and dignified treatment at the hands of the investigating agency. This is evident from the proviso to sub-section (2) of S. 47, sub-section (2) of S. 53 and proviso to S. 160 of the Code. If a police officer misuses his authority and power while dealing with a young helpless girl aged about 19 or 20 years, her conduct and behaviour must be judged in the backdrop of the situation in which she was placed. The purpose and setting, the person and his position, the misuse or abuse of office and the despair of the victim which led to her surrender are all relevant factors which must be present in the mind of the court while evaluating the conduct evidence of the prosecutrix. A person in authority, such as a police officer, carries with him the awe of office which is bound to condition the behaviour of his victim. The court must not be oblivious of the emotional turmoil and the psychological injury that a prosecutrix suffers on being molested or raped. A woman who is subjected to sex violence would always be slow and hesitant about disclosing her plight. The court must, therefore, evaluate her evidence in the above background.

In this case though the version of the prosecutrix is that she had tried to resist the accused respondent that the respondent being a strong man was able to overpower her and take her by force. Besides, he was a man in authority in police uniform. The prosecutrix was alone and helpless. In the circumstances the resistance would be considerably dampened. State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210: AIR 1990 SC 658: 1990 Cri LJ 889.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1990]

[9468] — S. 376 — Evidence of rape victim — Standard of proof required — If she does not lack understanding, ordinarily her evidence must be accepted without requiring further corroboration and conviction can be founded on that basis — Her evidence must receive the same weight as attached to an injured witness — Generally an Indian woman would not make false allegation of rape against any person

A prosecutrix of a sex offence cannot be put on par with an accomplice. She is in fact a victim of the crime. She is undoubtedly a competent witness under S. 118. Ordinarily the evidence of a prosecutrix must carry the same weight as is attached to an injured person who is a victim of violence, unless there are special circumstances which call for greater caution, in which case it would be safe to act on her testimony if there is independent evidence lending assurance to her accusation. If the Court keeps it in mind that it is dealing with the evidence of a person who is interested in the outcome of the charge levelled by her and feels satisfied that it can act on the evidence of the prosecutrix, there is no rule of law or practice incorporated in the Evidence Act similar to illustration (b) to S. 114 which requires it to look for corroboration. If for some reason the court is hesitant to place implicit reliance on the testimony of the prosecutrix it may look for evidence which may lend assurance to her testimony short of corroboration required in the case of an accomplice. The nature of evidence required to lend assurance to the testimony of the prosecutrix must necessarily depend on the facts and circumstances of each case. But if a prosecutrix is an adult and of full understanding the court is entitled to base a conviction on her evidence unless the same is shown to be infirm and not trustworthy. If the totality of the circumstances appearing on the record of the case disclose that the prosecutrix does not have a strong motive to falsely involve the person charged, the court should ordinarily have no hesitation in accepting her evidence. Therefore, ordinarily the evidence of a prosecutrix who does not lack understanding must be accepted. To insist on corroboration except in the rarest of rare cases is to equate a woman who is a victim of the lust of another with an accomplice to a crime and thereby insult womanhood. The standard of proof to be expected by the court in such cases must take into account the fact that such crimes are generally committed on the sly and very rarely direct evidence of a person other than the prosecutrix is available. Ordinarily an Indian woman would be most reluctant to level false accusation of rape involving her own reputation unless she has a very strong bias or reason to do so.

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

In the present case although the prosecutrix and her husband had reason to be annoyed with the conduct of the accused-respondent of dragging out the prosecutrix at dead of night, the reason was not strong enough for her husband to involve her and soil her reputation nor for her to do so. An Indian woman attaches maximum importance to her chastity and would not easily be a party to any move which would jeopardise her reputation and lower her in the esteem of others. There are, therefore, no such strong circumstances which would make the court view her evidence with suspicion.

Nothing much can be made out from the fact that after the accused-respondent had misbehaved with the prosecutrix in the police station and had molested her she did not complain about the same to other police officers. Ordinarily an Indian woman is ashamed to speak about such violations of her person, more so to total strangers about whose response she is not sure. Also there was no point in her speaking to her parents who had disowned her. State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210: AIR 1990 SC 658: 1990 Cri LJ 889. Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1990]

Followed in S. Ramakrishna v. State, (2009) 1 SCC 133

[9469] — S. 376 — Need for corroboration of testimony of prosecutrix and presence of injury on her person, held, depends on the facts and circumstances of each case — Inferences regarding rape can be drawn from circumstantial evidence — Ordinarily conviction can be founded on the basis of testimony of the prosecutrix supported by totality of the facts and circumstances of the case — On facts, special leave refused against the conviction and sentence of seven years' RI

A middle-aged bal sewika in a village welfare organisation was raped by the appellant around 2.30 a.m. when she was sleeping in a girls' school. The next day the victim related the incident to the mukhya sewika of the village which ultimately resulted in conviction of the appellant basing substantially on the testimony of the victim. A sentence of seven years' RI was awarded to the appellant by the trial Court. The High Court confirmed the conviction and sentence.

Held :

Corroboration as a condition for judicial reliance on the testimony of a prosecutrix is not a matter of law, but a guidance of prudence under given circumstances. Indeed, from place to place, from age to age, from varying life-styles and behavioural complexes, inferences from a given set of facts, oral and circumstantial, may have to be drawn not with dead uniformity but realistic diversity lest rigidity in the shape of rule of law in this area be introduced through a new type of precedential tyranny. The same observation holds good regarding the presence or absence of injuries on the person of the aggressor or the aggressed.

When rapists are revelling in their promiscuous pursuits and half of humankind — womankind — is protesting against its hapless lot, when no woman of honour will accuse another of rape since she sacrifices thereby what is dearest to her, the court cannot cling to a fossil formula and insist on corroborative testimony, even if, taken as a whole, the case spoken to by the victim strikes a judicial mind as probable. Hardly a sensitized judge who sees the conspectus of circumstances in its totality rejects the testimony of a rape victim unless there are very strong circumstances militating against its veracity. In the absence of any such circumstances confirmation of conviction by courts below must, therefore, be a matter of course.

The 7-year sentence of rigorous imprisonment awarded was justly merited, having regard to the circumstances. Rape for a woman is deathless shame and must be dealt with as the gravest crime against human dignity. Rafiq v. State of U.P., (1980) 4 SCC 262: 1980 SCC (Cri) 947: AIR 1981 SC 559: 1980 Cri LJ 1344: 1981 ALJ 139.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-8-1980]

[9470] — S. 376 — Prosecutrix regarded as accomplice — Rule of corroboration now a rule of law — Nature and extent of corroboration necessary explained — Previous statement of the prosecutrix in the nature of complaint to another person admissible in corroboration — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 8(j), Illustration and 157

To begin with a woman who has been raped is not an accomplice. If she was ravished she is the victim of an outrage. If she consented there is no offence unless she is a married woman, in which case questions of adultery may arise. But adultery presupposes consent and so is not on the same footing as rape. In the case of a girl who is below the age of consent, her consent will not matter so far as the offence of rape is concerned, but if she consented her testimony will naturally be as suspect as that of an accomplice. So also in the case of unnatural offence. But in all these cases a large volume of case-law has grown up which treats the evidence of the complainant somewhat along the same lines as accomplice evidence though often for widely differing reasons and the position now reached is that the rule about corroboration has hardened into one of law.

As a matter of law conviction without corroboration would not be improper. But in view of the rule of practice prevalent at common law the Judge should give some indication in his judgment that he has had this rule of caution in mind and should proceed to give reasons for considering it unnecessary to require corroboration on the facts of the particular case before him and show why he considers it safe to convict without corroboration in that particular case.

Hence, the rule, which according to the cases has hardened into one of law, is not that corroboration is essential before there can be a conviction but that the necessity of corroboration, as a matter of prudence, except where the circumstances make it safe to dispense with it, must be present to the mind of the Judge, and in jury cases, must find place in the charge, before a conviction without corroboration can be sustained.

Regarding the nature and extent of corroboration necessary, it would be impossible, indeed it would be dangerous, to formulate the kind of evidence which should, or would, be regarded as corroboration. Its nature and extent must necessarily vary with the circumstances of each case and also according to the particular circumstances of the offence charged.

The rules are, however, clear to the extent that:

Firstly, it is not necessary that there should be independent confirmation of every material circumstance in the sense that the independent evidence in the case, apart from the testimony of the complainant or the accomplice, should in itself be sufficient to sustain conviction.

Secondly, the independent evidence must not only make it safe to believe that the crime was committed but must in some way reasonably connect or tend to connect the accused with it by confirming in some material particular the testimony of the accomplice or complainant that the accused committed the crime. This does not mean that the corroboration as to identity must extend to all the circumstances necessary to identify the accused with the offence. Again, all that is necessary is that there should be independent evidence which will make it reasonably safe to believe the witness's story that the accused was the one, or among those, who committed the offence.

Thirdly, the corroboration must come from independent sources and thus ordinarily the testimony of one accomplice would not be sufficient to corroborate that of another. But of course the circumstances may be such as to make it safe to dispense with the necessity of corroboration and in those special circumstances a conviction so based would not be illegal.

Fourthly, the corroboration need not be direct evidence that the accused committed the crime. It is sufficient if it is merely circumstantial evidence of his connection with the crime.

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

The previous statement of the prosecutrix in the nature of complaint made to her mother or someone else is admissible as evidence as indeed provided by the illustration to S. 8*(j)* of the Evidence Act. Such evidence can be used for the purposes of corroboration if it satisfies the conditions of S. 157, Evidence Act, in being contemporaneous to event, etc. The weight to be attached to such evidence is another matter.

Mother of the prosecutrix to whom she complained can be regarded as an 'independent' witness for corroboration. It may be that all mothers may not be sufficiently independent to fulfil the requirements of the corroboration rule but there is no legal bar to exclude them from its operation merely on the ground of their relationship. Independent merely means independent of source which are likely to be tainted. In the absence of enmity against the accused there is no reason why she should implicate him falsely.

On facts, a statement made by a girl of 8 years, four hours after the event to her mother at the first available opportunity is admissible. Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 SCR 377: 1952 Cri LJ 547, 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Fazl Ali and Vivian Bose, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1951]

King v. Baskerville, (1916) 2 KB 658, followed

Followed in AIR 1958 SC 143: 1958 Cri LJ 273, 276; (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793*

[9471] — S. 376 — Rape — Allegedly committed in bajra field when prosecutrix had gone out to village well at 3 p.m. — Proof — Primary evidence of prosecutrix corroborated by her grandmother who deposed that she had been attracted to the place of the incident when prosecutrix shouted for help and had also seen the accused running away after having committed the assault — After prosecutrix narrated the incident to her parents on reaching home with bruise and scratch marks all over her body, FIR lodged without delay and she was sent for medical examination — Medical report revealed fresh marks and indications of sexual intercourse which had occurred within 24 hours — Bajra field found to have been trampled upon — Ocular evidence further corroborated by the fact that police officer had picked up a torn piece of underwear from the site which matched with the underwear that the prosecutrix had been wearing — Held, accused rightly convicted under S. 376 by trial court but wrongly acquitted by High Court — But having regard to the plea that the incident had occurred way back in 1994 and some mitigation therefore in the quantum of sentence was called for especially as the High Court had found that no case had been made out against the accused, sentence of 10 years' RI imposed by trial court reduced to 7 years' RI. State of Rajasthan v. Munshi, (2007) 12 SCC 759.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

[9472] — S. 376 — Rape — Appreciation of sole testimony of prosecutrix — If and when corroboration essential — Absence of injuries on private parts — Effect

Rapist not only violates the victim's privacy and personal integrity, but inevitably causes serious psychological as well as physical harm in the process. Rape is not merely assault-it is often destructive of the whole personality of the victim. The murderer destroys the physical body of his victim. Rapist degrades the very soul of the helpless female. (Para 1)

In the context of Indian culture, a woman-victim of sexual aggression-would rather suffer silently than to falsely implicate somebody. Any statement of rape is an extremely humiliating experience for a woman and until she is a victim of sex crime, she would not blame anyone but the real culprit. While appreciating the evidence of the prosecutrix, the courts must always keep in mind that no self-respecting woman would put her honour at stake by falsely alleging commission of rape on her and therefore, ordinarily a look for corroboration of her testimony is unnecessary and uncalled for. But for high improbability in the prosecution case, the conviction in the case of sex crime may be based on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix. It has been rightly said that corroborative evidence is not an imperative component of judicial credence in every case of rape nor the absence of injuries on the private parts of the victim can be construed as evidence of consent. (Para 19). Rajinder v. State of H.P., (2009) 16 SCC 69.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Radhu v. State of M.P., (2007) 12 SCC 57: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 207; State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898, followed

[9473] — S. 376 — Rape — Conviction can be based on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix without any corroboration if her testimony is otherwise worthy of credence — However, corroboration by medical evidence can be insisted upon where such evidence is forthcoming

Even in cases wherein there is lack of oral corroboration to that of a prosecutrix, a conviction can be safely recorded, provided the evidence of the victim does not suffer from any basic infirmity, and the 'probabilities factor' does not render it unworthy of credence. As a general rule, corroboration cannot be insisted upon, except from the medical evidence, where, having regard to the circumstances of the case, medical evidence can be expected to be forthcoming. Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1992]

[9474] — S. 376 — Rape — Conviction on sole testimony of prosecutrix — When sustainable — In a case of rape, particularly if prosecutrix is illiterate and uneducated, her statements, held, have to be accepted in toto without further corroboration — Further, in present case, cogent, reliable, convincing and trustworthy statements of prosecutrices, held, were acceptable

The trial Judge convicted A-1 and A-2 under Sections 376 and 506 Part II IPC for allegedly taking the two victim sisters in an auto and raping them after taking them in a wrong direction. The High Court by the impugned order dismissed the appeal against their conviction.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

In a case of rape, particularly if the victims are illiterate and uneducated, their statements have to be accepted in toto without further corroboration. Any statement of rape is an extremely humiliating experience for a woman and until she is a victim of sex crime, she would not blame anyone but the real culprit. While appreciating the evidence of the prosecutrix, the courts must always keep in mind that no self-respecting woman would put her honour at stake by falsely alleging commission of rape on her and, therefore, ordinarily a look for corroboration of her testimony is unnecessary and uncalled for. (Paras 15 and 17)

There is no reason to disbelieve the statement of the victims PWs 1 and 2 (prosecutrices). On the other hand, their oral testimony which is found to be cogent, reliable, convincing and trustworthy has to be accepted. Further, both the courts have rightly accepted the statements of the prosecutrices. (Para 23)

The evidence of prosecutrices cannot be rejected as unacceptable. Though there was a delay of 42 days in lodging the complaint to the police, PWs 1 and 2, in their evidence, explained that all their family members including themselves are uneducated, there are no male members in their family for their assistance and they settled in the present village to eke out their livelihood. They were working in quarry owned by PW 4 and while returning from their workplace by force A-1 and A-2 committed rape of PWs 1 and 2. PW 14 (mother of PWs 1 and 2) also corroborated them about their illiteracy and fear due to the threat call of A-1 and A-2. All these material aspects were duly considered by the trial court and accepted by the High Court. (Paras 15 and 19). Santhosh Moolya v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 5 SCC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-2010]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Rajinder v. Sate of H.P., (2009) 16 SCC 69: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 156; Sohan Singh v. State of Bihar, (2010) 1 SCC 68: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 452, relied on

[9475] — S. 376 — Rape — Conviction on the basis of the sole testimony of the prosecutrix — Held, permissible provided the evidence of the prosecutrix inspires confidence and appears to be natural and truthful — In the instant case, the evidence of the prosecutrix was not of such quality — No other evidence on record which could even lend some assurance, short of corroboration that the prosecutrix was making a truthful statement — Hence, the judgment of High Court acquitting the accused, upheld

The prosecutrix was working as a domestic helper in five flats including the flat of accused-Respondent 1. According to the prosecution, on the date of the incident, when the prosecutrix went into the bedroom of Respondent 1 to sweep the room, Respondent 1 switched off the light of the bedroom and caught hold of her and raped her despite her protests. The trial court convicted Respondent 1 under Sections 376 and 342 IPC. But, the High Court in appeal reversed the judgment passed by the trial court.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The evidence of the prosecutrix does not inspire confidence. The occurrence took place at about 12.30 p.m. on a Sunday. The High Court has observed that on a Sunday, if the prosecutrix had raised an alarm it would have been heard by many persons who would have immediately come to her rescue, particularly in such a society where Respondent 1 resided. On a Sunday most of the residents are at home at about 12.30 p.m. and, therefore, it was surprising that no one heard the cries of the appellant when she was raped by Respondent 1. Thereafter also the conduct of the prosecutrix is rather surprising. She was loitering in the locality till about 2.30 p.m. i.e. for about 2 hours after the incident. She again went to the flat of Respondent 1 on the second floor after having come down immediately after the occurrence. The reason given by her is that she wanted to return the keys to Respondent 1. At one stage she stated that she had decided to hand over the keys to one of the neighbours, but actually she did not hand over the keys to anyone. When she went up to the flat of Respondent 1 she met PW 2 and his wife. But she did not tell them about the incident. She then came back home and went to sleep. In the evening when her husband came she did not report the incident to him. At night, as usual, she cooked food for the family and went to sleep. Next morning she came to the society and attended to her routine work. Admittedly, she worked in four flats on that day but she did not report the matter to anyone. Later in the afternoon she went to the house of her brother. It is there for the first time that she reported the matter to her sister-in-law who has not been examined. Only thereafter they went to the police station and lodged the report at about 3.00 p.m. (Para 18)

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

So far as the first information report is concerned, the prosecutrix stated that she and her brothers B and S thought over the incident and thereafter went to lodge the complaint. She first stated that S had written down the report, then she changed her version stating that S had not written but had signed on the complaint. Again she said that while in the house nothing was written, and S had signed in the police chowki. Then again she corrected herself by saying, in the police chowki no one signed but he had signed on the FIR at Vartaknagar Police Station. (Para 10)

The medical evidence or the report of the Chemical Analyst do not support the case of the prosecution. That obviously is on account of the fact that the clothes had been washed and the appellant had taken a bath twice after the occurrence. In the cross-examination, the prosecutrix asserted that she was determined to lodge a complaint. She also knew that taking a bath would cause disappearance of the evidence of rape, but still she took a bath because she was feeling dirty. (Paras 17 and 20)

The evidence of PW 2, occupant of the neighbouring flat, does not support the case of the prosecution. This witness was declared hostile. Further, PW 5 (constable) was examined to prove that at about 7.00 a.m. on 27-4-1992 Respondent 1 had come to Gandhinagar Police Chowki to find out if any occurrence had been reported. The evidence of this witness is of no significance and also appears to be untrue. It appears that the only fact which was sought to be proved through this witness was not stated by him in his statement recorded in the course of investigation. (Paras 12 and 16)

It is true that the conviction of an accused on the basis of the testimony of the prosecutrix alone is permissible, but that is in a case where the evidence of the prosecutrix inspires confidence and appears to be natural and truthful. The evidence of the prosecutrix in this case is not of such quality, and there is no other evidence on record which may even lend some assurance, short of corroboration that she is making a truthful statement. Thus, the view taken by the High Court is a possible, reasonable view of the evidence on record and, therefore, warrants no interference. (Para 21). Vimal Suresh Kamble v. Chaluverapinake Apal S.P., (2003) 3 SCC 175: 2003 SCC (Cri) 596: AIR 2003 SC 818: 2003 Cri LJ 910.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-2003]

[9476] — S. 376 — Rape — Conviction on the basis of testimony of prosecutrix — Held, conviction can be based on the testimony of prosecutrix — If court is not satisfied with her version, it can seek other evidence, direct or circumstantial, by way of assurance

A prosecutrix complaining of having been a victim of the offence of rape is not an accomplice after the crime. There is no rule of law that her testimony cannot be acted upon without corroboration in material particulars. She stands at a higher pedestal than an injured witness. In the latter case, there is injury on the physical form, while in the former it is both physical as well as psychological and emotional. However, if the court of facts finds it difficult to accept the version of the prosecutrix on its face value, it may search for evidence, direct or circumstantial, which would lend assurance to her testimony. Assurance, short of corroboration as understood in the context of an accomplice, would do. (Para 12). State of U.P. v. Pappu, (2005) 3 SCC 594: 2005 SCC (Cri) 780: AIR 2005 SC 1248: 2005 Cri LJ 331.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2004]

[9477] — S. 376 — Rape — Conviction on the basis of the testimony of the prosecutrix alone — Permissibility — Corroboration of her testimony — Necessity of — Held, once the statement of the prosecutrix inspires confidence and the same is accepted by the court, conviction can be based only on the solitary evidence of the prosecutrix — No corroboration of her testimony is required unless there are compelling reasons which necessitate the same — In this view, where evidence of prosecutrix and other prosecution witnesses was found reliable, held, High Court totally erred in acquitting the accused merely on ground of non-examination of doctor by prosecution (Paras 14 and 15). State of M.P. v. Dayal Sahu, (2005) 8 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1988: AIR 2005 SC 3570: 2005 Cri LJ 4375.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2005]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Sk. Zakir v. State of Bihar, (1983) 4 SCC 10: 1983 SCC (Cri) 761; Ranjit Hazarika v. State of Assam, (1998) 8 SCC 635: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1725; State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898, relied on [9478] — S. 376 — Rape — Conviction reversed — Sole testimony of prosecutrix — When enough to base conviction — Test for — Case of appellant that he had gone to house of prosecutrix to recover his cow and in a quarrel that followed, both had received injuries and that he was thereafter falsely implicated in a case of rape — As per prosecutrix, she had caused injuries to appellant during time of rape and thereafter, appellant had caused her three minor injuries as well — However, PWs 2 and 3 (son and relative of prosecutrix, respectively), who had reached place of incident soon after alleged rape, declared hostile and did not support prosecutrix — Even her husband, who accompanied her to police station to lodge report, did not come into witness box — Doctor who conducted her medical examination, also unable to confirm factum of rape — Held, though evidence of prosecutrix is liable to be believed save in exceptional circumstances, but to hold that a prosecutrix must be believed irrespective of improbabilities in her story, is unacceptable — Test always is as to whether the given story prima facie inspires confidence — Present matter is indeed an exceptional one — Herein, story given by prosecutrix does not inspire confidence — Hence, appellant's conviction, reversed (Paras 9 to 11). Dinesh Jaiswal v. State of M.P., (2010) 3 SCC 232.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-2010]

[9479] — S. 376 — Rape — Delay in lodging complaint — Case solely based on evidence of prosecutrix — Complaint made by prosecutrix seven months after the alleged commission of rape on her by appellant — At the time of filing the complaint prosecutrix was carrying child of seven months — Prosecutrix explained that initially she had not protested in view of appellant's promise to marry her but on appellant's refusal to her proposal for marriage at the stage of her seven months' pregnancy, she filed the complaint — Held, prosecutrix having waited for seven months for filing FIR, in absence of any other supporting evidence it would be unsafe to convict appellant wholly on the basis of testimony of the prosecutrix

In cases where the sole testimony of the prosecutrix is available, it is very dangerous to convict the accused, specially when the prosecutrix could venture to wait for seven months for filing the FIR for rape. This leaves the accused totally defenceless. Had the prosecutrix lodged the complaint soon after the incident, there would have been some supporting evidence like the medical report or any other injury on the body of the prosecutrix so as to show the sign of rape. If the prosecutrix has willingly submitted herself to sexual intercourse and waited for seven months for filing the FIR it will be very hazardous to convict on such sole oral testimony. Moreover, no DNA test was conducted to find out whether the child was born out of the said incident of rape and that the appellant-accused was responsible for the said child. In the face of lack of any other evidence, it is unsafe to convict the accused. Therefore, the view taken by the trial court and the Single Judge of the High Court in convicting the appellant-accused under Section 376 IPC cannot be sustained. (Para 5). Vijayan v. State of Kerala, (2008) 14 SCC 763: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 585.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-7-2008]

[9480] — S. 376 — Rape — Evidence — Conviction can be based on the testimony of prosecutrix alone, without insisting on corroboration if the same inspires confidence — Accused having dominion or control over prosecutrix physically, mentally and spiritually and many of them believed him to be God — In the circumstances held, there was no reason why prosecutrix should depose falsely against the accused — On facts, testimony of the prosecutrix reliable and also corroborated by medical and other contemporaneous evidence — Hence conviction rightly based on evidence of the prosecutrix

The prosecutrix is not an accomplice. The evidence of a victim of sexual assault, if inspires confidence, conviction can be founded on her testimony alone unless there are compelling reasons for seeking corroboration. Her evidence is more reliable than that of an injured witness. In a case of sexual assault corroboration as a condition for judicial reliance is not a requirement of law but a guidance of prudence. (Para 34). Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2005 SC 2132.

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2005]

[9481] — S. 376 — Rape — Evidence and proof — Rape of a married woman, a labourer, by another labourer — Failure of the prosecution to examine independent witnesses who could have corroborated the testimony of the prosecutrix — Recovery of semen-stained chaddi of the accused not proved — Presence of semen stains on the petticoat and in the vagina of the prosecutrix lending assurance to her accusation — Held, in the circumstances of the case, defective investigation by the police cannot be a ground for acquitting the accused — Mere delay in lodging FIR does not raise the inference that the complaint was false — Indian women are slow and hesitant to complain of such assault — Rape having been committed on a pile of sand, absence of injury on her person inconsequential

The prosecutrix, a labourer, was working in a factory along with another labourer C. The appellant and his companion came to the factory premises and asked C to fetch tea and on his departure the appellant lifted her bodily and took her inside the machine room and committed rape. After the appellant had satisfied his lust and before his companion could take his turn the prosecutrix ran away and met R, a female co-labourer, and narrated to her the incident. Thereafter she searched for her husband, a rickshaw-puller, and lodged the FIR. The witnesses C and the female co-labourer were not examined by the prosecution. Recovery or seizure of chaddi of the accused which contained semen stains was also not proved. Both the courts below convicted the appellant. Dismissing the special leave appeal

Held :

In cases of defective investigation the court has to be circumspect in evaluating the evidence but it would not be right in acquitting an accused person solely on account of the defect; to do so would tantamount to playing into the hands of the investigating officer if the investigation is designedly defective. Any investigating officer, in fairness to the prosecutrix as well as the accused, would have recorded the statements of the two witnesses and would have drawn up a proper seizure-memo in regard to the 'chaddi'. But the accused cannot be acquitted solely on that ground. (Para 5)

Merely because the complaint was lodged less than promptly does not raise the inference that the complaint was false. The reluctance to go to the police is because of society's attitude towards such women; it casts doubt and shame upon her rather than comfort and sympathise with her. Therefore, delay in lodging complaints in such cases does not necessarily indicate that her version is false. The possibility of tutoring is ruled out because the evidence does not show that her husband knew the appellant and his companion before the incident. (Para 7)

In the instant case the prosecutrix, a victim of the crime, had absolutely no reason whatsoever to falsely involve the appellant nor did her husband have any reason to do so or tutor his wife to involve the appellant. The prosecutrix is a poor labourer who was toiling to earn her livelihood to augment the family income. She was working in the factory since the last few days only and the appellant and his companion, taking advantage of the situation, drove away C by asking him to fetch tea and after he left the appellant violated her person. The finding of semen stains on the petticoat and in the vagina lend assurance to the story narrated by the prosecutrix. The submission that there was delay in lodging the complaint has to be stated to be rejected for the simple reason that immediately after the incident she had to go in search of her husband who was a rickshaw-puller, narrate to him the incident, go down to the police station and then lodge the complaint. She has explained the absence of injuries by stating that she was laid on minute sand which was lying on the floor and, therefore, there were no marks of injury. Therefore, taking an overall view of the matter it must be held that the courts below rightly placed reliance on the testimony of the prosecutrix and convicted the appellant. (Para 8). Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977: AIR 1995 SC 2472.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and S.C. Sen, J. [Date of decision: 11-8-1995]

[9482] — S. 376 — Rape — Evidence of prosecutrix corroborated by medical and other evidence — Absence of consent on the part of the prosecutrix — In the circumstances and on facts, held, accused liable for offence under S. 376

The accused aged 17 years at the relevant time was the brother-in-law of the prosecutrix's father. According to the prosecution, when on 17-4-1993 the prosecutrix, who was 2-3 years younger to the accused entered her father's house to get the plough, the accused followed her and when she reached the cowshed, she was caught by the accused from behind. The prosecutrix tried to extricate herself from him but she was overpowered by the accused and was made to lie on the floor of the cowshed. The accused then untied the knot of her salwar and pulled it down and thereafter, committed sexual act. According to the prosecutrix, she resisted the accused by scratching him with her nails. There was bleeding from her private parts. The prosecutrix returned home immediately and told her father about the incident. Her father went to the Pradhan of the Gram Panchayat of the area who, in turn, advised him to lodge a complaint with the police. He reported the matter to the police. As the prosecutrix was having severe pain and discomfort, she did not accompany her father to the police station. Police visited the place of occurrence and recovered a bloodstained piece of cloth. The salwar and kameez worn by the prosecutrix at the time of the occurrence were also recovered. The piece of cloth recovered from the place of the occurrence and the kameez worn by the prosecutrix were found to be stained with blood and on serological test found to have blood of A+ve group. Even though there were some bloodstains on the salwar, the grouping could not be made. The undergarments worn by the accused during the relevant time were also recovered and subjected to chemical examination and they neither contained blood nor spermatozoa. In the course of investigation, the police collected a family history book which indicated the age of the prosecutrix and the accused. The prosecutrix was subjected to medical examination. The doctor found no marks of violence over the breasts, nipples, cheeks and lips and on the external genitals, perineum, abdomen, chest, back, limbs, neck and face. The doctor also found no marks of injury over vulva. Hymen was found intact with a small laceration at 6 o'clock position. Clotted blood was seen at vaginal orifice, which admitted tip of the finger with great difficulty. The doctor observed "it was difficult to say whether intercourse has taken place or not. Vaginal swab slide was prepared and got examined microscopically ... under which no dead or alive sperms were seen. Her blood group was A+ve". The doctor after taking note of the physical features stated that the prosecutrix must be of the age between 13 to 14 years. The Senior Medical Officer (Dental) also supported this version. The accused was examined on 20-4-1993. The Sessions Court acquitted the accused taking the view that the prosecutrix must have been above the age of 16 years and the evidence as a whole indicated that there was consent on the part of the prosecutrix to have the sexual act. The High Court did not interfere with the findings of the Sessions Court. Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

The verdict of not guilty had been entered by the Sessions Judge mainly based on two grounds that the prosecutrix was aged above sixteen years and if at all there was any sexual act, it must have been with her consent. Both these findings are erroneous and incorrect. (Para 11)

The medical certificate indicates that there was laceration of the hymen at 6 o'clock position and clotting of blood was seen at the vaginal orifice. This item of medical evidence is to be appreciated in the background of the oral evidence given by the prosecutrix. She deposed that the accused pulled down her salwar and had sexual act with her. It is not known whether these clothes were washed before they were subjected to chemical examination. A piece of cloth which was recovered from the place of occurrence and the wearing apparel worn by the prosecutrix were stained with blood. The Sessions Judge made a casual observation that these bloodstains might have been caused due to the menstruation of the prosecutrix. The doctor stated that she had no history of menstruation and there was no suggestion also on the part of the accused as to whether the prosecutrix sustained injury on account of any other violent act. (Para 15)

In view of the evidence of the prosecutrix, which is corroborated by medical evidence and other items of evidence and in the absence of any consent on the part of the prosecutrix, it is clearly established that the accused had committed rape on the prosecutrix and is liable for the offence punishable under Section 376 IPC. The offence of rape being a serious one, the case should have received careful attention and the Sessions Judge and the High Court should have shown greater sensitivity to these type of cases. The evidence should have been appreciated on broader probabilities and they should not have been carried away by insignificant contradictions. (Para 16). State of H.P. v. Mango Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331: AIR 2000 SC 2798.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2000]

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

[9483] — S. 376 — Rape — Evidence of victim — Corroboration of, held, is not a sine qua non for conviction — Accused cannot cling to a fossil formula and insist on corroborative evidence even if taken as a whole the case spoken to by the victim strikes a judicial mind as probable

The physical scar may heal up, but the mental scar will always remain. When a woman is ravished, what is inflicted is not merely physical injury but the deep sense of some deathless shame. In the Indian setting, refusal to act on the testimony of the victim of sexual assault in the absence of corroboration as a rule, is adding insult to injury. A girl or a woman in the tradition bound non-permissive society of India would be extremely reluctant even to admit that any incident which is likely to reflect on her chastity had ever occurred. She would be conscious of the danger of being ostracised by the society and when in the face of these factors the crime is brought to light, there is inbuilt assurance that the charge is genuine rather than fabricated. Just as a witness who has sustained an injury, which is not shown or believed to be self-inflicted, is the best witness in the sense that he is least likely to exculpate the real offender, the evidence of a victim of sexual offence is entitled to great weight, notwithstanding the absence of corroboration. (Paras 9 and 11). Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 1267: 2006 Cri LJ 1679: (2006) 1 KLT 1006.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2006]

Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, 1952 SCR 377: AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 Cri LJ 547, relied on

[9484] — S. 376 — Rape — It is a crime against the entire society — Plight of the rape victims in the present legal system despite making the rule of corroboration of prosecutrix not always necessary and introduction of S. 114-A in Evidence Act highlighted and reform suggested

Rape is thus not only a crime against the person of a woman (victim), it is a crime against the entire society. It destroys the entire psychology of a woman and pushes her into deep emotional crisis. It is only by her sheer will-power that she rehabilitates herself in the society which, on coming to know of the rape, looks down upon her in derision and contempt. Rape is, therefore, the most hated crime. It is a crime against basic human rights and is also violative of the victim's most cherished of the fundamental rights, namely, the Right to Life contained in Article 21. "Right to Life" does not merely mean animal existence but means something more, namely, the right to live with human dignity. Right to Life would, therefore, include all those aspects of life which go to make a life meaningful, complete and worth living. Bodhisattwa Gautam v. Subhra Chakraborty, (1996) 1 SCC 490: 1996 SCC (Cri) 133: AIR 1996 SC 922: (1996) 1 AndhLT (Cri) 252.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-1995]

Francis Coralie Mullin v. Administrator, Union Territory of Delhi, (1981) 1 SCC 608: 1981 SCC (Cri) 212; State of Maharashtra v. Chandrabhan Tale, (1983) 3 SCC 387: 1983 SCC (Cri) 667: 1983 SCC (L&S) 391; Olga Tellis v. Bombay Municipal Corpn., (1985) 3 SCC 545; Delhi Transport Corpn. v. DTC Mazdoor Congress, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 600: 1991 SCC (L&S) 1213, relied on

[9485] — S. 376 — Rape — Proof and corroboration of — Appellant doctor alleged to have raped prosecutrix, a patient visiting his clinic — Sessions Court as well as the High Court convicting the appellant relying on the testimony of prosecutrix — Held, though in rape cases conviction on the sole testimony of prosecutrix is sustainable (provided it inspires confidence), but in the instant case version given by the prosecutrix is unsupported by medical evidence and the surrounding circumstances belie the case set up by her — There were many persons in the clinic and it is highly improbable that the appellant would have sexually assaulted her when they were present in the near vicinity — It is also highly improbable that the prosecutrix could not make any noise or get out of the room without being assaulted by the doctor as she was an able-bodied person of 20 years of age with ordinary physique — Absence of injuries on the body improbabilise the prosecution version — Moreover, there was absence of spermatozoa in the vaginal swab of the prosecutrix — Presence of semen on the undergarments of the appellant as also on her petticoat and sari not sufficient by itself to prove the offence though may cause some suspicion on the conduct of the appellant — Further, the doctor who examined the appellant on the same day negatived sexual intercourse on the basis of scientific evidence — No injury found on the body or the private parts of the prosecutrix — Doctor who examined her unable to give any opinion about the alleged sexual intercourse — Held, appellant entitled to benefit of doubt — Conviction and sentence set aside

It is true that in a rape case the accused could be convicted on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix, if it is capable of inspiring confidence in the mind of the court. If the version given by the prosecutrix is unsupported by any medical evidence or the whole surrounding circumstances are highly improbable and belie the case set up by the prosecutrix, the court shall not act on the solitary evidence of the prosecutrix. The courts shall be extremely careful in accepting the sole testimony of the prosecutrix when the entire case is improbable and unlikely to happen. (Para 9)

In the present case there were so many persons in the clinic and it is highly improbable that the appellant would have made a sexual assault on the patient who came for examination when large number of persons were present in the near vicinity. It is also highly improbable that the prosecutrix could not make any noise or get out of the room without being assaulted by the doctor as she was an able-bodied person of 20 years of age with ordinary physique. The absence of injuries on the body improbabilise the prosecution version. (Para 10)

Besides the absence of spermatozoa in the vaginal swab of the prosecutrix casts a serious doubt on the prosecution evidence. (Paras 7 and 13)

Moreover, the appellant also was medically examined on the same day by PW 10 who stated that smegma was present around the corona glandis. He further deposed that his examination negatived sexual intercourse and for collection of smegma around corona glandis a period of 24 hours is required. This scientific evidence also does not support the prosecution. Had there been a vigorous sexual act as alleged by the prosecutrix there could not have been the presence of smegma on his private part. (Para 8)

It is true that the petticoat [Ed.: of the prosecutrix] and the underwear allegedly worn by the appellant had some semen but that by itself is not sufficient to treat that the appellant had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix. That would only cause some suspicion on the conduct of the appellant but not sufficient to prove the case, as alleged by the prosecution. (Para 12)

On a consideration of the entire evidence in this case, there is a serious doubt regarding the sexual intercourse allegedly committed by the appellant on the prosecutrix. The appellant is entitled to the benefit of doubt. (Para 14). Sadashiv Ramrao Hadbe v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 10 SCC 92: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 161.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-2006]

[9486] — S. 376 — Rape — Prosecutrix an unmarried girl coming from weaker section of society — Her words believed by the courts below — No interference by the Supreme Court called for. Dagdulal v. State of M.P., 1995 Cri LJ 3639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-1994]

[9487] — S. 376 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix — Corroborating evidence not essential she is not an accomplice or in the category of a child witness — Some evidence which lends assurance to her accusation sufficient

A woman who is a victim of sexual assault is not an accomplice to the crime but is a victim of another person's lust and therefore her evidence need not be tested with the same amount of suspicion as that of an accomplice. She is not in the category of a child witness or an accomplice and therefore the rule of prudence that her evidence must be corroborated in material particulars has no application; at the most the court may look for some evidence which lends assurance. (Para 7). Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977: AIR 1995 SC 2472.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and S.C. Sen, J. [Date of decision: 11-8-1995]

State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210, applied

Followed in S. Ramakrishna v. State, (2009) 1 SCC 133

[9488] — S. 376 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix — Credibility — Prosecutrix being forcibly taken away from PW 6's rickshaw and raped by two appellants — Prosecutrix meticulously narrating same sequence of events as stated in FIR — No reasons suggested for false tutoring of prosecutrix by police — Rather prosecutrix's evidence fully corroborated by PWs 6 and 1 — On facts, such evidence of prosecutrix, held, credible

In Exhibit P-9 (report) the prosecutrix (PW 14) alleged that at about 8.00 p.m. when she was going in a rickshaw, the appellant-accused surrounded the rickshaw and told the rickshaw-puller (PW 6) to divert the destination and they forcibly took her to a nearby house and raped her one after another. She was prevented from raising her voice as they threatened her to kill with a knife. Thereafter, the accused took her to a nearby tea stall and locked her inside it. That after about 15/20 minutes PWs 1, 2 and others came there and rescued her. Next day morning PW 1, PW 2 and others who rescued her came along with the accused where she identified the appellants as the ones who had committed rape on her.

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

The High Court by the impugned order reversed the acquittal of the appellants and convicted them under Section 376 IPC and sentenced them to suffer rigorous imprisonment for five years and to pay a fine of Rs 2000, in default of payment of fine to further undergo two months' rigorous imprisonment.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

There is no reason whatsoever to disbelieve the evidence of prosecutrix who meticulously narrated the sequence of events as to what transpired on that fateful day from 8.00 p.m. onwards till her lodging the first information report on the next day. The prosecutrix more or less reiterated the same facts in her evidence as stated in the FIR. (Paras 17 and 14)

There are no material contradictions in the evidence of prosecutrix (PW 14) and PW 6 (rickshaw-puller) so as to disbelieve their evidence. The version of PW 14 receives complete corroboration from the evidence of PW 6. (Para 20)

There is no reason to disbelieve the statement of PW 6 (rickshaw-puller) who is totally an uninterested witness. PW 6 also deposed that he identified two of the appellant-accused. There is practically nothing suggested to PW 6 in the cross-examination. (Para 19)

There is nothing to disbelieve the version given by PW 1 which supports the prosecution's case. PW 1 in his evidence narrated as to what PW 6 (rickshaw-puller) told him within a short time of the incident on the fateful night. That all of them searched for the girl and ultimately found the girl in a nearby tea stall where she was locked inside. (Para 18)

The only suggestion made to the prosecutrix (PW 14) is that she was tutored by the police at the thana and she had set up a false story to implicate the appellants in the case. However no reasons were suggested for such false implication. (Para 17)

The High Court rightly observed that the victim made no mistake in identifying the two appellants, and that, based on the evidence of PW 1, PW 6 and the victim (PW 14) herself, it is satisfactorily proved that the two appellants were actually the persons who committed rape on the victim on that fateful day on 28-4-1984. (Para 24). Utpal Das v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 493.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2010]

[9489] — S. 376 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix — Credibility of — Prosecutrix having no animosity against accused, nor having any reason to falsely implicate the accused, nor deposing at the behest of any person who was inimically disposed towards accused — Part of the testimony of prosecutrix corroborated by other witnesses — Held, at least at the stage of grant of anticipatory bail to accused, evidence of the prosecutrix can be accepted

A case of this nature should be allowed to be fully investigated. Once a criminal case is set in motion by lodging an information in regard to the commission of the offence in terms of Section 154 CrPC, it may not always be held to be imperative that all the accused persons must be named in the first information report. It has not been denied nor disputed that the prosecutrix does not bear any animosity against the respondents. There is no reason for her to falsely implicate them. It is also not a case that she did so at the behest of some other person, who may be inimically disposed towards the respondents. The prosecution has disclosed the manner in which she was being taken from place to place which finds some corroboration from the testimonies of the other witnesses and, thus, it can safely be concluded that at least at this stage her evidence should not be rejected outrightly. (Para 30). State of Maharashtra v. Mohd. Sajid Husain Mohd. S. Husain, (2008) 1 SCC 213: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 176: AIR 2008 SC 155.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-2007]

[9490] — S. 376 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix — Evidentiary value — Though believable on a par with that of an injured witness, held, her testimony cannot always be presumed to be gospel truth — Possibility of exaggeration or embellishment or false implication, where several persons are accused, cannot be ruled out — Plausibility of immoral past of prosecutrix, based on evidence, can be considered

Ordinarily the evidence of a prosecutrix should not be suspected and should be believed, more so as her statement has to be evaluated on a par with that of an injured witness and if the evidence is reliable, no corroboration is necessary. But at the same time they cannot be universally and mechanically applied to the facts of every case of sexual assault which comes before the court. It cannot be lost sight of that rape causes the greatest distress and humiliation to the victim but at the same time a false allegation of rape can cause equal distress, humiliation and damage to the accused as well. The accused must also be protected against the possibility of false implication, particularly where a large number of accused are involved. It must, further, be borne in mind that the broad principle is that an injured witness was present at the time when the incident happened and that ordinarily such a witness would not tell a lie as to the actual assailants, but there is no presumption or any basis for assuming that the statement of such a witness is always correct or without any embellishment or exaggeration. To the same effect is the presumption under S. 114-A, Evidence Act, 1872 which is extremely restricted in its applicability. Insofar as allegations of rape are concerned, the evidence of a prosecutrix must be examined as that of an injured witness whose presence at the spot is probable but it can never be presumed that her statement should, without exception, be taken as the gospel truth. Additionally, her statement can, at best, be adjudged on the principle that ordinarily no injured witness would tell a lie or implicate a person falsely. (Paras 10 to 12). Raju v. State of M.P., (2008) 15 SCC 133: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 751: AIR 2009 SC 858: (2009) 74 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2008]

[9491] — S. 376 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix — Evidentiary value of — Corroboration when not required — Reiterated, a woman who is victim of sexual assault is not an accomplice to the crime — Her evidence cannot be tested with suspicion as that of an accomplice — As a matter of fact, evidence of prosecutrix is similar to evidence of injured complainant or witness — Testimony of prosecutrix, if found to be reliable, by itself, may be sufficient to convict the culprit and no corroboration of her evidence is necessary — In prosecutions for rape, the law does not require corroboration — Evidence of prosecutrix alone may sustain a conviction — It is only by way of abundant caution that court may look for some corroboration so as to satisfy its conscience and rule out any false accusations — Reasons why a woman in India is unlikely to falsely allege sexual assault against herself, discussed (Paras 22 to 25 and 26 to 28). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Vijay v. State of M.P., (2010) 8 SCC 191: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 639, relied on [9492] — S. 376 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix — Reliability — Held, can be acted upon without corroboration in material particulars — However, if the court of facts finds it difficult to accept the version of the prosecutrix on its face value, it may search for evidence, direct or circumstantial, which would lend assurance to her testimony — Assurance, short of corroboration, as understood in the context of an accomplice would do (Para 14). State of Punjab v. Ramdev Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 421: 2004 SCC (Cri) 307: AIR 2004 SC 1290.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2003]

[9493] — S. 376 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix — Reliability

It is settled law that the victim of sexual assault is not treated as accomplice and as such, her evidence does not require corroboration from any other evidence including the evidence of a doctor. In a given case even if the doctor who examined the victim does not find sign of rape, it is no ground to disbelieve the sole testimony of the prosecutrix. In normal course a victim of sexual assault does not like to disclose such offence even before her family members much less before public or before the police. In the instant case the suggestion given on behalf of the defence that the victim has falsely implicated the accused does not appeal to reasoning. There was no apparent reason for a married woman to falsely implicate the accused after scathing her own prestige and honour. (Para 13)

The courts while dealing with such cases should examine the broader probabilities of a case and not get swayed by minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix, which are not of a fatal nature, to throw out an otherwise reliable prosecution case. If evidence of the prosecutrix inspires confidence, it must be relied upon without seeking corroboration of her statement in material particulars. If for some reason the court finds it difficult to place implicit reliance on her testimony, it may look for evidence which may lend assurance to her testimony, short of corroboration required in the case of an accomplice. The testimony of the prosecutrix must be appreciated in the background of the entire case and the trial court must be alive to its responsibility and be sensitive while dealing with cases involving sexual molestation. If a prosecutrix is an adult and of full understanding the court is entitled to base a conviction on her evidence unless the same is shown to be infirm and not trustworthy. If the totality of the circumstances appearing on the record of the case

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

discloses that the prosecutrix does not have a strong motive to falsely involve the person charged, the court should ordinarily have no hesitation in accepting her evidence. (Paras 14 and 15)

A prosecutrix of a sex offence cannot be put on a par with an accomplice. She is in fact a victim of the crime. The Evidence Act nowhere says that her evidence cannot be accepted unless it is corroborated in material particulars. She is undoubtedly a competent witness under Section 118 and her evidence must receive the same weight as is attached to an injured in cases of physical violence. The same degree of care and caution must attach in the evaluation of her evidence as in the case of an injured complainant or witness and no more. What is necessary is that the court must be conscious of the fact that it is dealing with the evidence of a person who is interested in the outcome of the charge levelled by her. (Para 15). Om Prakash v. State of U.P., (2006) 9 SCC 787: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 401: AIR 2006 SC 2214: 2006 Cri LJ 2913: (2006) 4 All LJ 575.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-2006]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210, relied on [9494] — S. 376 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix supported by medical evidence and other convincing evidence — Merely because the prosecutrix was simple enough to repose confidence in accused persons and stayed with them in a room in a hotel it cannot be held that she was a consenting party

The offence of rape has been established against both the accused persons and the case of the prosecution so far as the offence of rape is concerned should not be disbelieved. If the prosecutrix was little careful in not placing reliance on unknown young persons in staying in a room in a hotel, she would not have suffered the misfortune but simply because she was simple enough to repose confidence in two young men, the prosecution case should not be disbelieved particularly when convincing evidences about the commission of offence of rape were adduced. The medical evidence supports the testimony of the prosecutrix that she was raped in the previous night. The doctor has found that her hymen was ruptured recently and was bleeding. Some injuries on her private parts were also noted by the doctor. Admittedly, the accused and the prosecutrix shared one room and it is nobody's case that besides the prosecutrix and accused persons, any other person stayed in the room. Raju v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 1 SCC 453: 1994 SCC (Cri) 538: AIR 1994 SC 222: 1994 Cri LJ 248: (1994) 2 BLJR 1059: (1994) 1 Crimes 156: (1994) 31 ACC 152.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-1993]

[9495] — S. 376 — Rape — Testimony of victim — Conviction solely on the basis of, without further corroboration — Held, permissible if the court is satisfied from the evidence of the victim (Para 6). State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699: 2004 Cri LJ 2109.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

[9496] — S. 376 — Rape — Testimony of the victim — Evidentiary value — Corroboration if and when necessary — Explained — In absence of any ulterior motive for falsely implicating the accused (Respondent 1 herein), the testimony of the victim of rape (prosecutrix), corroborated by medical evidence, held, reliable — That the prosecutrix was a widow aged 55 years having two grown-up children, was a circumstance to be taken note of

The prosecutrix, a 55-year-old widow who was the mother of two grown-up children, was while coming back to her house after attending the marriage of a relation, criminally assaulted and subjected to forcible intercourse by the respondents. The first information report was submitted by her on the next day against the respondents. She was medically examined and her torn salwar was sent for chemical analysis. On medical examination various injuries were found on her person. The doctor was of the opinion that they reflected the signs of a struggle. The trial court convicted the accused persons under Sections 376(2)(g) and 323 IPC and sentenced them to undergo rigorous imprisonment for five years and to pay a fine of Rs 5000 each under Section 376 IPC and six months' rigorous imprisonment under Section 323 with a fine of Rs 500 each. The High Court reversed that decision. It acquitted Respondent 2 on the ground that his identity could not be established by the prosecution at the trial. It further held that the case against Respondent 1 was not proved beyond doubt as the medical evidence and the finding showed that no dead or alive spermatozoa was seen. Another circumstance which weighed with the High Court was that the sealing of the salwar was not properly established. Moreover, before the Supreme Court the respondent attempted to point out some discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix and other witnesses for discrediting the prosecution version. One of such discrepancies was that the prosecutrix had stated the place of occurrence to be 20 feet away from the road while in the FIR the place of occurrence was mentioned as the road. Upholding the acquittal of Respondent 2 but setting aside the acquittal of Respondent 1 and restoring his conviction by the trial court,

Held:

The identity of Respondent 2 was, admittedly, not established during the investigation and it is not clear as to how the said respondent was put on trial along with Respondent 1. Hence, Respondent 2 could not have been put on trial and held guilty. (Para 4)

However, the High Court erred in holding that the prosecutrix had not been subjected to forcible sexual intercourse or the prosecution had failed to prove the case against Respondent 1 also. The High Court's conclusion that absence of dead or mobile spermatozoa either in the vagina or in the cervix of the prosecutrix rules out the possibility of the prosecutrix having been subjected to sexual intercourse, is not referable to any evidence on record. The presence of spermatozoa, dead or alive, would differ from person to person and its positive presence depends upon various circumstances. Otherwise also the presence or absence of spermatozoa is ascertained for the purposes of corroboration of the statement of the prosecutrix. If the prosecutrix is believed to be a truthful witness in her deposition, no further corroboration may be insisted upon. Corroboration is admittedly only a rule of prudence. (Paras 5 and 6)

It is not denied that the seized salwar had stains of blood and semen on it. The mere fact that some different marks were noted on the sealed packet was by itself no ground to discard the otherwise reliable evidence of the prosecutrix. The High Court has completely ignored the medical evidence specifying the injuries on the person of the prosecutrix which proved and established the struggle and resistance shown by her at the time of commission of the offence of rape. The injuries noted by the doctor were sufficient to lend corroboration to the testimony of the prosecutrix particularly when no motive is attributed to her for falsely involving Respondent 1 in the commission of the crime. The prosecutrix, in her cross-examination, had denied even the suggestion that the injuries sustained by her were sustained while cutting grass in the jungle. She also denied that she was a liquor addict. The fact that the prosecutrix was a widow of about 55 years of age having two grown-up children was a circumstance to be taken note of for the purposes of satisfying the Court that there was no ulterior motive of roping the accused in the commission of crime. (Para 6). State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147: AIR 1999 SC 3916: 2000 Cri LJ 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-1999]

State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, followed [9497] — S. 376 — Rape — Testimony of victim — Reliability — Held, can be acted upon without corroboration in material particulars — However, if the court of facts finds it difficult to accept the version of the victim on its face value, it may search for evidence, direct or circumstantial, which would lend assurance to her testimony — Assurance, short of corroboration, as understood in the context of an accomplice, would suffice (Para 21). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

[9498] — S. 376 — Rape — Woman or girl raped is not an accomplice — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 133 (Para 11). Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551: AIR 2003 SC 4684.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2003]

[9499] — S. 376 — Rape of a widow — Conviction can be based on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix — Corroboration from independent source or circumstances can however be sought if considered necessary — Evidence of prosecutrix, a widow and mother of three, in the instant case found reliable and also corroborated by evidence of other witnesses — Fact that High Court upheld conviction of the accused-respondent under S. 450 having found that he had trespassed into the room of the prosecutrix at midnight, itself corroborates version of the prosecutrix — Non-production of medical examiner's report, though may deprive prosecution of corroborative evidence, but held, in such case medical evidence may not significantly improve the case of prosecution or defence particularly when prosecutrix was examined several days after the occurrence — Held, respondent liable to be convicted under S. 376 and sentenced to undergo seven years' rigorous imprisonment and fine of Rs 1000 with default stipulation

It is not the law that in every case version of the prosecutrix must be corroborated in material particulars by independent evidence on record. It all depends on the quality of the evidence of the prosecutrix. If the court is satisfied that the evidence of prosecutrix is free from blemish and is implicitly reliable, then on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix, the conviction can be recorded. In appropriate cases, the court may look for corroboration from independent source or from the circumstances of the case before recording an order of conviction. In this case evidence of the prosecutrix is free from any blemish. Moreover, the High Court affirmed the finding that in the middle of the night the respondent had trespassed into the room of the prosecutrix and upheld his conviction under Section 450 IPC. That itself strongly supports the case of the prosecution and corroborates the version of the prosecutrix. In a case of this nature, one would not expect the medical evidence to significantly improve the case of prosecution or the defence, particularly when the prosecutrix was examined after several days of the occurrence, and she was the mother of three children. So far as the report of the chemical examiner is concerned, since the prosecution did not produce the report, the prosecution is deprived of any corroborative evidence which the report may have provided. However, the other evidence adduced by the prosecution, in fact, provides the necessary corroboration, even if that was considered necessary. The High Court on a clear misreading of the evidence on record, acquitted the respondent of the charge under Section 376 IPC while upholding his conviction under Section 450 IPC. Therefore, the order of acquittal passed by the High Court is set aside so far as it relates to offence under Section 376 IPC and the respondent is sentenced to undergo seven years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs 1000, and in default of payment of fine, to undergo one-month rigorous imprisonment. (Paras 15, 14 and 16). State of Rajasthan v. Biram Lal, (2005) 10 SCC 714: AIR 2005 SC 2327: 2005 Cri LJ 2561.

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2005]

[9500] — S. 376 — Rape of minor girl aged 7/8 years — Testimony of prosecutrix alone, if reliable, whether sufficient to convict the accused without seeking further corroboration — Injury on male organ of accused if necessary — On facts, convincing and trustworthy testimony of the prosecutrix corroborated by medical evidence and testimony of other PWs existing — Doctor who examined the prosecutrix finding her hymen ruptured, slight bleeding coming out of the vaginal edges, presence of blood clots and external genitals tender and red and vagina admitting one finger with difficulty which got smeared with blood — Shawl on which, according to the prosecution, she was made to lie while committing the rape, found by the doctor to be having some mud and blood stains — Doctor opining that prosecutrix had been subjected to sexual intercourse — Doctor who examined accused-respondent finding him potent and capable of sexual intercourse — Father of the prosecutrix and other PWs deposing to have seen the respondent running from the place of occurrence carrying with him his underwear — Held, trial court rightly convicted the respondent under S. 376 and High Court erred in acquitting him on the basis of conjectures and surmises — Circumstances such as absence of spermatozoa on the vaginal slide and absence of injuries on the male organ not always fatal to the prosecution case — These circumstances should be considered in the light of the peculiar factual set-up of the case

There is no legal compulsion to look for corroboration of the evidence of the prosecutrix before recording an order of conviction. Evidence has to be weighed and not counted. Conviction can be recorded on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix, if her evidence inspires confidence and there is absence of circumstances which militate her veracity. In the present case the evidence of the prosecutrix is found to be reliable and trustworthy. No corroboration was required to be looked for, though enough was available on the record. The medical evidence provided sufficient corroboration.

No inference can be drawn against the prosecution from the fact that only two blood stains had been found on the shawl by the Chemical Examiner. The doctor had found the presence of blood stains and mud on the shawl and had opined that the bleeding from the edges of the vagina was slight and that some amount of clotted blood was also present. The prosecutrix was a girl of tender age and on account of the rape committed on her, there was bleeding from her vagina but in the circumstances it cannot be expected that the shawl should have got "drenched with blood" as if the large blood arteries had been cut.

The absence of spermatozoa cannot be a circumstance against the prosecution case. The prosecution case itself was that on being surprised while the respondent was in the act of committing sexual intercourse on the prosecutrix, he ran away carrying his underwear. The absence of spermatozoa under the circumstances could not be said to be a circumstance in favour of the respondent at all.

There is no inflexible axiom of law which lays down that the absence of injuries on the male organ of the accused would always be fatal to the prosecution case and would discredit the evidence of the prosecutrix, otherwise found to be reliable. The presence of injuries on the male organ may lend support to the prosecution case, but their absence is not always fatal. Every case has to be approached with realistic diversity based on peculiar facts and circumstances of that case. The doctor who had examined the respondent had found him to be capable of sexual intercourse and according to his opinion the absence of injury on his male organ was not suggestive of the fact that he had not indulged in sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix, then of tender years of age. His evidence was not at all challenged on this aspect by the defence.

The judgment of the High Court was based more on surmises and conjectures than on proper appreciation of evidence. Court must be sensitive to the serious crime committed against human dignity. Courts must be wary, circumspect and slow to interfere with reasonable and proper findings based on appreciation of evidence as recorded by the lower courts, before upsetting the same and acquitting an accused involved in the commission of heinous offence of rape of hapless girl child. State of H.P. v. Raghubir Singh, (1993) 2 SCC 622: 1993 SCC (Cri) 674: 1993 (2) ALT (Cri) 286: (1993) 2 Crimes 887.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-1993]

Rahim Beg v. State of U.P., (1972) 3 SCC 759: 1972 SCC (Cri) 827, distinguished and limited

[9501] — S. 376 — Rape on minor girl — Conviction can be based solely on the evidence of prosecutrix if her evidence is reliable and truthful — Prosecutrix giving vivid account of how she was subjected to sexual harassment and intercourse on several occasions even in presence of accused's wife — Her testimony corroborated by medical evidence indicating that hymen of the victim was ruptured and she was ravished — Having regard to the testimony of the prosecutrix, and of the neighbour to whom the prosecutrix had narrated the incident whereafter the matter was reported to the police and of the doctor who had examined the prosecutrix and of another doctor who had examined the accused, held, the prosecutrix had truthfully narrated the entire episode and there was no reason why it can be said that she tried to foist a false case on the accused — In the circumstances, the view that it is not possible for a man to commit rape in presence of his wife cannot be accepted — High Court erred in acquitting accused of charge under S. 376 (Para 2). State of Sikkim v. Padam Lall Pradhan, (2000) 10 SCC 112.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-1999]

[9502] — S. 376 — Rape victim — Held, is not treated as an accomplice, but could only be characterised as injured witness (Para 18). Sudhansu Sekhar Sahoo v. State of Orissa, (2002) 10 SCC 743: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1484: AIR 2003 SC 2136.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2002]

[9503] — S. 376 — Rule of corroboration of statement by prosecutrix — Nature — Held, a rule of prudence and not of law — Corroboration not absolutely essential — Without corroboration conviction depends on facts and circumstances of each case. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793: AIR 1972 SC 2661: (1973) 2 SCR 197: 1973 Cri LJ 179.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1972]

Explained in 1980 SCC (Cri) 667: (1980) 3 SCC 159

[9504] — S. 376 — Sole testimony of prosecutrix suffering from infirmity — Reliability of — Held, it is well settled that the sole testimony of the prosecutrix could be acted upon and made the basis of conviction without being corroborated in material particulars — However, the rule about the admissibility of corroboration should not be ignored by the courts in sexual offences — In view of the infirmities present in the sole testimony of the prosecutrix, which was contradicted by the medical evidence as well as by the version given by PW 3 (aunt) to whom the prosecutrix narrated the incident soon after the commission of rape, held, implicit reliance could not be placed upon her sole testimony — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114-A

It is well settled that the prosecutrix in a sexual offence is not an accomplice and there is no rule of law that her testimony cannot be acted upon and made the basis of conviction unless corroborated in material particulars. However, the rule about the admissibility of corroboration should be present to the mind of the Judge. (Para 12)

In the instant case, the age of the prosecutrix was around 16 years, and therefore, she was not just a child who would have surrendered herself to a forced sexual assault without offering any resistance whatsoever. Hence, on facts of the case, the "probabilities factor" operates against the prosecutrix. (Para 14)

Further, the testimony of the prosecutrix has been contradicted by the medical evidence as well as by the version of her maternal aunt (PW 3) to whom she narrated the entire incident soon after its commission. According to the medical opinion, the prosecutrix was used to sexual intercourse. The presence of bloodstains on the clothes of the prosecutrix, as stated by her, was also not confirmed by the report of the Forensic Science Laboratory or by the doctors who examined her. (Paras 14 and 3)

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

Thus, the prosecution case rests solely on the testimony of the prosecutrix and the medical evidence given in the case does not lend any positive corroboration to the testimony of the prosecutrix. Therefore, in view of the aforesaid contradictions, it is difficult to accept the truthfulness of the version of the prosecutrix of the sexual assault so as to convict the appellants. (Paras 8 and 14)

On the question of consent, though presumption under Section 114-A, Evidence Act, 1872 was raised, no finding was being recorded that prosecutrix was a willing party. (Para 14)

Hence, the appellants are entitled to be acquitted of the charges framed against them. (Para 15). Dilip v. State of M.P., (2001) 9 SCC 452: AIR 2001 SC 3049.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2001]

State of H.P. v. Gian Chand, (2001) 6 SCC 71: 2001 SCC (Cri) 980; Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on [9505] — S. 376 — Statement of a prosecutrix in a case under S. 376, Penal Code — Held, not in the nature of the statement of an accomplice — Rule of prudence requires that her statement should be corroborated before a conviction can be based on it — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 133 and 114, Ill.(b)

A girl who is a victim of an outrageous act is, generally speaking, not an accomplice though the rule of prudence requires that the evidence of a prosecutrix should be corroborated before a conviction can be based upon it. If the jury had been apprised of the necessity, ordinarily speaking, of corroboration of the evidence of the prosecutrix, it is for the jury to decide whether or not it will convict on the uncorroborated testimony of a prosecutrix in the particular circumstances of the case before it. In other words, insistence on corroboration is advisable but is not compulsory in the eyes of the law. It is well established that the nature and extent of corroboration necessary, vary with the circumstances of the case. The nature of corroborative evidence should be such as to lend assurance that the evidence of the prosecutrix can be safely acted upon. Sidheswar Ganguly v. State of W.B., AIR 1958 SC 143: 1958 SCR 749: 1958 Cri LJ 273.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Sinha and J.L. Kapur, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-1957]

[9506] — S. 376 — Testimony of prosecutrix — Imprecision in — Effect — Station/education of prosecutrix — Relevance — Imprecise allegation as to rape before medical officer, alleging only that she had been "assaulted" — Though factum of rape clearly disclosed elsewhere — Effect (Para 23). Zindar Ali Sheikh v. State of W.B., (2009) 3 SCC 761: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 737: AIR 2009 SC 1467: 2009 Cri LJ 1324: (2009) 2 CHN 19 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 941 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2009]

[9507] — S. 376 — Testimony of prosecutrix, a grown up married woman — Corroboration of factum of rape may be sought from an independent evidence and that of the details may be sought from direct and circumstantial evidence — Tribal woman labour alleging rape on her by accused-appellant — Incident narrated to husband immediately after the occurrence — Police having refused to record the information, complaint lodged in court by her — Some of the witnesses named in the complaint not supporting prosecution case — Medical examination not done — Even then testimony of the prosecutrix, as corroborated by her husband under S. 157, Evidence Act as also other witnesses, held, sufficient, in the circumstances of the case, to found conviction of the accused under S. 376

Even though the victim of rape cannot be treated as an accomplice, her evidence is treated almost like that of an accomplice requiring corroboration. The judge trying the case must indicate in the course of the judgment that he had the rule of corroboration in his mind when he prepared the judgment and if in a given case the judge finds that there is no need for such corroboration he should give reasons for dispensing with the necessity for such corroboration. But if a conviction is based on the evidence of a prosecutrix without any corroboration it will not be illegal on that sole ground. In the case of a grown up and married woman it is always safe to insist on such corroboration. Wherever corroboration is necessary it should be from an independent source but it is not necessary that every part of the evidence of the victim should be confirmed in every detail by independent evidence. Such corroboration can be sought from either direct evidence or circumstantial evidence or from both. Sk. Zakir v. State of Bihar, (1983) 4 SCC 10: 1983 SCC (Cri) 761: AIR 1983 SC 911: 1983 Cri LJ 1285.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: E.S. Venkataramiah and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-6-1983]

But see Rafiq v. State of U.P., (1980) 4 SCC 262: 1980 SCC (Cri) 947; Bharwada B. Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 581 and Krishan Lal v. State of Haryana, (1980) 3 SCC 159: 1980 SCC (Cri) 667, where the Court pointed out irrelevance of insisting on corroboration if the testimony of the prosecutrix was otherwise reliable [9508] — S. 376 — Victim of rape — Held, is not an accomplice — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 133 (Para 21). State of H.P. v. Shree Kant Shekari, (2004) 8 SCC 153: AIR 2004 SC 4404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2004]

[9509] — S. 376 — Victim of rape — Held, is not an accomplice in the crime — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 133 (Para 6). State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699: 2004 Cri LJ 2109.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

[9510] — S. 376 — Victim of rape — Held, is not an accomplice — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 133

It is well settled that a prosecutrix complaining of having been a victim of the offence of rape is not an accomplice after the crime. There is no rule of law that her testimony cannot be acted upon without corroboration in material particulars. She stands on a higher pedestal than an injured witness. In the latter case, there is injury on the physical form, while in the former, it is both physical as well as psychological and emotional. However, if the court of facts finds it difficult to accept the version of the prosecutrix on its face value, it may search for evidence, direct or circumstantial, which would lend assurance to her testimony. Assurance, short of corroboration, as understood in the context of an accomplice would do. (Para 14). State of Punjab v. Ramdev Singh, (2004) 1 SCC 421: 2004 SCC (Cri) 307: AIR 2004 SC 1290.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2003]

[9511] — S. 376 — Victim of rape, held, is not an accomplice — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 133

A woman or a girl who is raped is not an accomplice. Corroboration is not a sine qua non for conviction in a rape case. An accused cannot cling to a fossil formula and insist on corroborative evidence, even if taken as a whole, the case spoken to by the victim strikes a judicial mind as probable. Judicial response to human rights cannot be blunted by legal jugglery. (Paras 11 and 9). Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 1267: 2006 Cri LJ 1679: (2006) 1 KLT 1006.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2006]

[9512] — S. 376 — Victim of rape, held, is not an accomplice — Her testimony can be acted upon without corroboration in material particulars — However, if it is difficult to accept the version of the victim on its face value, the court may search for evidence, direct or circumstantial, which would lend assurance to her testimony — Assurance, short of corroboration as understood in the context of an accomplice, held, would suffice — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 133 and 114 Ill. (b)

It is well settled that a prosecutrix complaining of having been a victim of the offence of rape is not an accomplice after the crime. There is no rule of law that her testimony cannot be acted upon without corroboration in material particulars. She stands on a higher pedestal than an injured witness. In the latter case, there is injury on the physical form, while in the former it is both physical as well as psychological and emotional. However, if the court of facts finds it difficult to accept the version of the prosecutrix on its face value, it may search for evidence, direct or circumstantial, which would lend assurance to her testimony. Assurance, short of corroboration as understood in the context of an accomplice, would suffice. (Para 5). Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2004) 4 SCC 379: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266: AIR 2004 SC 1497: 2004 Cri LJ 1399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2004]

[9513] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — Case of kidnapping and rape — Minor contradictions and omissions in testimony of prosecutrix — Prosecutrix being illiterate and rustic young woman — Evidence consistent in material aspects — Held, prosecutrix being illiterate and rustic young woman, some contradictions and omissions were natural, as her recollection, observance, memory and narration of chain of events may not be precise — Conviction restored (Para 29). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Prakash Singh v. Union of India, (2006) 8 SCC 1: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 417, relied on

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

[9514] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — Evidence of a victim of sexual assault — Corroboration not necessary — Conviction can be founded on her testimony alone unless there are compelling reasons for seeking corroboration — Court may look for some assurance of her statement to satisfy its judicial conscience — Her evidence is more reliable than that of an injured witness — She is not an accomplice — On facts, even though no corroboration is required yet there is sufficient corroboration from the medical evidence and report of the chemical examiner

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

The testimony of the victim of sexual assault is vital and unless there are compelling reasons which necessitate looking for corroboration of her statement, the courts should find no difficulty in acting on the testimony of a victim of sexual assault alone to convict an accused where her testimony inspires confidence and is found to be reliable. Seeking corroboration of her statement before relying upon the same, as a rule, in such cases amounts to adding insult to injury. Why should the evidence of a girl or a woman who complains of rape or sexual molestation, be viewed with doubt, disbelief or suspicion? The court while appreciating the evidence of a prosecutrix may look for some assurance of her statement to satisfy its judicial conscience, since she is a witness who is interested in the outcome of the charge levelled by her, but there is no requirement of law to insist upon corroboration of her statement to base conviction of an accused. The evidence of a victim of sexual assault stands almost on a par with the evidence of an injured witness and to an extent is even more reliable. Just as a witness who has sustained some injury in the occurrence, which is not found to be self-inflicted, is considered to be a good witness in the sense that he is least likely to shield the real culprit, the evidence of a victim of a sexual offence is entitled to great weight, absence of corroboration notwithstanding. Corroborative evidence is not an imperative component of judicial credence in every case of rape. Corroboration as a condition for judicial reliance on the testimony of the prosecutrix is not a requirement of law but a guidance of prudence under given circumstances. It must not be overlooked that a woman or a girl subjected to sexual assault is not an accomplice to the crime but is a victim of another person's lust and it is improper and undesirable to test her evidence with a certain amount of suspicion, treating her as if she were an accomplice. Inferences have to be drawn from a given set of facts and circumstances with realistic diversity and not dead uniformity lest that type of rigidity in the shape of rule of law is introduced through a new form of testimonial tyranny making justice a casualty. Courts cannot cling to a fossil formula and insist upon corroboration even if, taken as a whole, the case spoken of by the victim of sex crime strikes the judicial mind as probable. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

[9515] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Medical evidence not corroborating the alleged forced sexual inter- course — Conviction based solely on oral evidence of prosecutrix and her subsequent conduct, upheld — Medical examination of prosecutrix not disclosing evidence of sexual intercourse — No injury marks on accused or prosecutrix — But oral testimony of prosecutrix found to be cogent, reliable, convincing and trustworthy as her evidence stood corroborated by other PWs and narration of events in the FIR — No interference with conviction called for — Appellant alleged to have raped prosecutrix in coffee estate — She unequivocally and clearly stating that while she was returning to worksite carrying meals for her mother the accused had suddenly come from behind, held her body with force and then dragged her to some distance in the coffee estate in spite of her resistance and request to the accused to release her — After committing rape accused fleeing away from place of occurrence — She narrating the incident to her mother and was so traumatised by the event and fear of being disgraced/humiliated, that she jumped into a water tank with intention to commit suicide — However, she was rescued by PWs 4 and 5 to whom she narrated the reason for taking the extreme step — She also narrated the incident to PW 6 who was the Manager of coffee estate, and on his advice lodged an FIR — Testimony of prosecutrix not shaken on material aspect — Suggestion by accused that a false case had been lodged against him because of enmity between his family members and the prosecutrix's family not found acceptable — Further, defence by accused that prosecutrix was a consenting party as she did not resist and no injuries were found on her body or on the accused, was unfounded and baseless and falsified by subsequent conduct of prosecutrix — Evidence of prosecutrix found trustworthy and fully corroborated by other PWs and narration of events in FIR — Though the report of the gynaecologist pertaining to medical examination of prosecutrix disclosed no evidence of sexual intercourse, yet even in the absence of any corroboration of medical evidence, the oral testimony of the prosecutrix, which is found to be cogent, reliable, convincing and trustworthy has to be accepted — Though undergarments of the accused and the victim did not contain any seminal stains, but the same cannot be given any importance because the underwear of the accused was taken into possession by the police on the next day of the incident when he was arrested and no evidence brought on record to show that the accused handed over the same underwear to the police, which he was wearing on the day of incident — Pos- sibility of absence of seminal stains on petticoat of the prosecutrix which she was wearing at the time of the incident, could not be ruled out due to the fact that the petticoat got drenched in the water and the seminal stains might have been washed away –- On such independent analysis of the oral and documentary evidence on record by Supreme Court, held, the conviction and sentence of 7 years' RI awarded by the trial court and confirmed by the High Court called for no interference (Paras 2, 11, 12, 13, 17, 18, 19 and 20). B.C. Deva v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 12 SCC 122: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 253.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-2007]

[9516] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Presumption against allegations of consensual sex in case of alleged rape — Held, whereas Ss. 113-A and 113-B inserted in the Evidence Act by same amendment raise a clear presumption in favour of the prosecution but no similar presumption with respect to rape is visualised as the presumption under S. 114-A is extremely restricted in its applicability — As far as allegations of rape are concerned, the evidence of a prosecutrix must be examined as that of an injured witness whose presence at the spot is probable but it can never be presumed that her statement should, without exception, be taken as the gospel truth — Additionally, her statement can, at best, be adjudged on the principle that ordinarily no injured witness would tell a lie or implicate a person falsely — On facts, allegations of gang rape made by prosecutrix found not proved and hence, benefit of doubt granted to appellant-accused — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 114-A, 113-A and 113-B (Para 12). Raju v. State of M.P., (2008) 15 SCC 133: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 751: AIR 2009 SC 858: (2009) 74 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2008]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Ranjit Hazarika v. State of Assam, (1998) 8 SCC 635: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1725, considered

[9517] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix — Credibility and need for corroboration of — On facts, conviction improper — Prosecution alleging that when prosecutrix was on her way to a shop to purchase some groceries G (Accused 1) invited her to her house, and when she entered then G's son R (Accused 1) dragged her inside the room, confined her there for the whole night, gagged her mouth with a piece of cloth, and sexually assaulted her by inserting his penis in her vagina twice — In the instant case, evidence of prosecutrix was full of discrepancies and did not inspire confidence — Moreover, glaring discrepancies were also found in the evidence of her mother (PW 4) and father (PW 7) — Two persons who were allegedly informed about the incident not examined and consequently there was no corroboration — Medical evidence also not corroborating case of sexual intercourse or rape — Minor injuries found on her body, by themselves not sufficient to establish rape, wrongful confinement or hurt, where evidence of prosecutrix was not found trustworthy and there was no corroboration — Failure by defence to prove motive for false implication, inconsequential, since prosecution miserably failed to prove the charges — Impugned order set aside and acquittal of accused directed (Paras 2, 12, 13 and 16). Radhu v. State of M.P., (2007) 12 SCC 57: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 207: 2007 Cri LJ 4704.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2007]

[9518] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Rape of girl of above 16 years age — Whether she was a consenting party — Evidence of the prosecutrix that she was forcibly subjected to sexual intercourse should normally be believed unless there is material leading to an inference of her consent — Absence of marks of external injuries on the person of the prosecutrix by itself not sufficient to draw an inference of consent of the prosecutrix — Having regard to the fact that the prosecutrix was a teenaged girl while accused was an able-bodied youth along with other facts, held, testimony of the prosecutrix that she was subjected to rape was credible

The prosecutrix, a teenaged girl was living in a village with her father, mother and a younger sister. The family resided in a lonely hutment situated in a field. On 1-10-1993 at about 12 noon, the prosecutrix was alone in her hut busy washing clothes at a water pump. NK, the accused-respondent was known to the prosecutrix since before. He came to her and initially asked for water which she provided in a lota. Then the accused asked for a knife on the pretext that it was needed for peeling cucumber. The accused was gaining time to ascertain if the prosecutrix was alone. No sooner the prosecutrix turned her back unmindful of what lay ahead, her hand was caught hold of by the accused and twisted behind her back. The accused pushed her to a bhitian, a secluded place. She was thrown on the ground. The accused put his knee on her chest so as to overpower her. Her shouting was throttled by the accused who placed his palm on her mouth and later covered her mouth by a towel pressed against her lips. She was then raped. Blood oozed out from her private parts. Having finished his act the accused left her alone and took to his heels. The prosecutrix was weeping. She narrated the incident to a woman and to her father in quick succession. The statement of the father of the prosecutrix corroborates her in all material particulars. The victim accompanied by her father wanted to go to the police station and lodge the first information report of the incident but they were prevented from doing so by several village people belonging to the community of the accused who also proposed that the matter be settled within the village by convening a panchayat. However, the report of the incident was lodged on 5-10-1993 at 11.20 a.m. The offence was registered and investigation commenced. According to the doctor, he had found the hymen ruptured in multiple radial tears, the edges of which showed healing at most of the places and mild tenderness. The prosecutrix was not used to sexual intercourse. Pieces of broken bangles were found at the place of the incident and seized. The Forensic Science Laboratory has found (vide report Ex. P-9) presence of human semen on the lehenga seized from the prosecutrix. The trial court found the incident, as alleged, proved. In the opinion of the learned trial Judge the testimony of the prosecutrix inspired confidence. It was corroborated by the medical evidence as also by the testimony of her father. The prosecutrix was held to be 15 years of age on the date of the incident. Though there was delay in lodging the FIR but it was satisfactorily explained. Accordingly, the accused-respondent was found guilty of the offence punishable under Section 376 IPC and sentenced to undergo seven years' rigorous imprisonment with a fine of Rs 2000 and to a further simple imprisonment of one year and nine months in default of payment of fine. The High Court in an appeal preferred by the accused-respondent, held that the prosecutrix was not proved beyond reasonable doubt to be below 16 years of age. In the opinion of the High Court though the factum of the accused-respondent having committed sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix was proved but the absence of injuries on the person of the prosecutrix was a material fact not excluding the possibility of the prosecutrix having been a consenting party. The delay in lodging the FIR was not satisfactorily explained. The delay coupled with the non-examination of the woman to whom the incident was first narrated by the prosecutrix immediately after the occurrence rendered the prosecution case doubtful. Mainly on this reasoning the High Court allowed the appeal and acquitted the accused respondent. The questions arising for consideration before the Supreme Court were: whether the prosecution story, as alleged, inspires confidence of the court on the evidence adduced? Whether the prosecutrix, is a witness worthy of reliance? Whether the testimony of a prosecutrix who has been a victim of rape stands in need of corroboration and, if so, whether such corroboration is available in the facts of the present case? What was the age of the prosecutrix? Whether she was a consenting party to the crime? Whether there was unexplained delay in lodging the FIR? Allowing the appeal,

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

Held :

For the offence of rape as defined in Section 375 of the Indian Penal Code, the sexual intercourse should have been against the will of the woman or without her consent. Consent is immaterial in certain circumstances covered by clauses thirdly to sixthly, the last one being when the woman is under 16 years of age. If she be of 16 years of age or above, her consent cannot be presumed; an inference as to consent can be drawn if only based on evidence or probabilities of the case. The victim of rape stating on oath that she was forcibly subjected to sexual intercourse or that the act was done without her consent, has to be believed and accepted like any other testimony unless there is material available to draw an inference as to her consent or else the testimony of prosecutrix be such as would be inherently improbable. The absence of visible marks of injuries on the person of the prosecutrix on the date of her medical examination would not necessarily mean that she had not suffered any injuries or that she had offered no resistance at the time of commission of the crime. Absence of injuries on the person of the prosecutrix is not necessarily an evidence of falsity of the allegation or an evidence of consent on the part of the prosecutrix. It will all depend on the facts and circumstances of each case. (Paras 19 and 18)

In the present case, the prosecutrix had just crossed the age of 16 years. The perpetrator of the crime was an able-bodied youth bustling with energy and determined to fulfil his lust armed with a knife in his hand and having succeeded in forcefully removing the victim to a secluded place where there was none around to help the prosecutrix in her defence. The injuries which the prosecutrix suffered or might have suffered in defending herself and offering resistance to the accused were abrasions or bruises which would heal up in the ordinary course of nature within 2 to 3 days of the incident. The prosecutrix clearly stated that she was subjected to sexual intercourse forcibly by the accused. She was not a consenting party. She offered resistance to the best of her ability but she succumbed and fell victim to the force employed by the accused. (Paras 18 and 19)

The statement of the father of the prosecutrix is admissible in evidence and relevant under Section 157 as her former statement corroborating her testimony as also under Section 8 of the Evidence Act as evidence of her conduct. The testimony of the father of the prosecutrix was trustworthy and unembellished. The prosecutrix and her father had both been subjected to lengthy cross-examination. The trial court found both the witnesses reliable. There is no reason to disbelieve their testimony. A father would not ordinarily subscribe to a false story of sexual assault involving his own daughter and thereby putting at stake the reputation of the family and jeopardizing the married life of the daughter. The testimony of the prosecutrix's father was reliable and lent support to the narration of the incident by the prosecutrix. No reason had been proved, nor even suggested during cross-examination of any of the witnesses why the prosecutrix or any member of her family would falsely implicate the accused roping him in a false charge of rape. It is not possible to draw an inference as to consent against the prosecutrix and to hold that she was a willing party to the sexual assault made by the accused. Upon an evaluation of the evidence available on record it must be held that the prosecutrix is a witness of truth. Her testimony inspires confidence. Other evidence available on record lends assurance to her testimony. The trial court had rightly held that sexual assault amounting to rape was committed on her by the accused-respondent. In spite of her having not been proved to be under 16 years of age the High Court was not justified in holding her to be a consenting party to the sexual assault on her. Therefore, the High Court has committed a clear error of law in interfering with the judgment of the trial court regarding proof of guilt of the accused. (Paras 19 and 20). State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898: AIR 2000 SC 1812: 2000 Cri LJ 2205.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

State of Punjab v. Gurmeet Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 SCR 377: 1952 Cri LJ 547; Sidheswar Ganguly v. State of W.B., AIR 1958 SC 143: 1958 Cri LJ 273; Madho Ram v. State of U.P., (1973) 1 SCC 533: 1973 SCC (Cri) 417; State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598; State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781; Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; Bodhisattwa Gautam v. Subhra Chakraborty, (1996) 1 SCC 490: 1996 SCC (Cri) 133; Sk. Zakir v. State of Bihar, (1983) 4 SCC 10: 1983 SCC (Cri) 76; Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, (1987) 2 SCC 27: 1987 SCC (Cri) 249; Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977, relied on

[9519] — Ss. 376 & 375 and 366 — Rape — Conviction on sole testimony of prosecutrix — Sustainability — Even though prosecutrix had several opportunities to protest and raise an alarm, she did not do so — Conviction on sole testimony of prosecutrix, on facts, held, is not sustainable — Her behaviour of not complaining to anybody at any of the stages after being allegedly abducted is wholly unnatural — Therefore, High Court recording conviction on basis of her sole testimony set aside

It is true that corroboration is not the sine qua non for a conviction in a rape case and conviction can be recorded on the sole, uncorroborated testimony of a victim, but the evidence of the victim must not suffer from any basic infirmities or improbabilities which render it unworthy of credence. However, the evidence of PW 2 (the victim) does not satisfy the test. (Paras 51 and 53)

The High Court erroneously concluded that the victim girl had not willingly gone with A-1. The conclusion could only be recorded by ignoring the entire evidence with regard to the conduct of the girl from the time of the alleged abduction till the time of the alleged recovery. The abducted girl did not make any complain or raise a cry or protest on various occasions when she had the opportunity to do so. Even PW 5, in whose house A-1 and PW 2 stayed thought that they were newly married couple. PW 2 did not complaint to PW 5 or any other residents in the locality. Her behaviour of not complaining to anybody at any of the stages after being allegedly abducted would be wholly unnatural. (Paras 53 and 54). Alamelu v. State, (2011) 2 SCC 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2011]

Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 Cri LJ 547: 1952 SCR 377, distinguished [9520] — Ss. 376 to 376-D — Sexual offences — Prosecutrix, held, is not an accomplice in such offences (Para 12). Dilip v. State of M.P., (2001) 9 SCC 452: AIR 2001 SC 3049.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2001]

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

[9521] — Ss. 376 to 376-D — Sexual offence — Sole testimony of the victim — Held, can be a basis for conviction provided it is safe, reliable and worthy of acceptance reasonable to assume that no woman would falsely implicate a person in sexual offence as the honour and prestige of that woman also would be at stake — However, evidence of the prosecution should be cogent and convincing and if there is any supporting material likely to be available, then the rule of prudence requires that evidence of the victim may be supported by such corroborative material (Paras 11 and 18). Sudhansu Sekhar Sahoo v. State of Orissa, (2002) 10 SCC 743: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1484: AIR 2003 SC 2136.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2002]

Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, (1987) 2 SCC 27: 1987 SCC (Cri) 249; Rafiq v. State of U.P., (1980) 4 SCC 262: 1980 SCC (Cri) 947; Krishan Lal v. State of Haryana, (1980) 3 SCC 159: 1980 SCC (Cri) 667; State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147; State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898, relied on [9522] — Ss. 376 and 392 — Rape — Proof and corroboration of — Testimony of prosecutrix — Reliability — Prosecutrix alleging that while she was selling chillies, accused-appellant came in a tractor and offered to get her chillies sold at his brother's shop in his village and accordingly two sacks of chillies were kept in the trolley "with the help of persons already sitting in the trolley" — However, appellant first raped her near "lambool" trees, then at "seriya", and finally in a shed — He thereafter snatched Rs 1000 and gold tops from her and ran away — She took shelter in PW 6's house at night, and in morning went to PW 7 (Sarpanch), reported the incident and lodged FIR — Persons already sitting in the trolley when prosecutrix first entered therein not examined — PW 6 nowhere stating that prosecutrix revealed anything about the alleged incident to her — She also denied the factum that prosecutrix was weeping at the relevant time — Fact that prosecutrix boarded the tractor even after she was first raped and travelled happily need consideration — Moreover, she never raised any hue or cry while passing through number of villages in the tractor — In FIR she stated that the accused committed rape on her thrice but in the evidence she stated that the accused committed rape on her only twice — Medical evidence showing that no injuries were found either on her body or private parts, and that she was habitual to sexual intercourse — Evidence of prosecutrix found full of contradictions, without corroboration from any witness — Held, though evidence of prosecutrix can alone sustain conviction of the accused, but in the instant case her evidence is so artificial that it cannot be accepted — Conviction and sentences imposed upon the appellant for offences punishable under Ss. 376 and 392 IPC set aside (Paras 15, 12, 11, 7, 8 and 9). Narayan v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 6 SCC 465: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 198: 2007 Cri LJ 2733: (2007) 53 AIC 35 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-2007]

[9523] — Ss. 376 and 451 — Rape of young married woman by a relative — Testimony of the prosecutrix, in absence of any strong reason to falsely implicate the accused, acceptable — Reliable testimony of other natural witnesses and medical evidence corroborating the version of the prosecutrix — Delay of two days in lodging the FIR not a factor casting doubt on prosecution story in view of the generally known fact that the rape victim or her husband would hesitate to approach the police — On facts held, offence of rape made out and High Court erred in reversing trial court's order of conviction and sentence under Ss. 376 and 451 on trivial grounds

According to the prosecution the husband of the prosecutrix was serving in the Army and had come to the village to celebrate Diwali with his wife and family members. When her husband had gone out and she was preparing to serve fodder to the cattle, the accused came from behind, put one hand on her mouth and the other on her back and tried to push her into the cattle-shed. She resisted him whereupon he threw her on the ground, lifted her ghagra, untied his dhoti and forcibly raped her. The prosecutrix being a strong woman resisted the accused and in the process sustained abrasions on her lumbar region as well as elbow joints. The prosecutrix cried for help and her cries attracted PWs 4 and 7 who saw the accused on the top of the prosecutrix. PW 7 pulled him up with one hand and consoled the prosecutrix who was weeping. She told the PWs that the accused had forcibly violated her person. While the accused was running away PW 5, the husband of the prosecutrix, saw him tying his dhoti from behind. The prosecutrix also narrated the incident to her husband. He was dissuaded by the accused and others from filing a complaint and was threatened with certain consequences if he did so. However, two days later he went with his wife to the police station to lodge the complaint. The doctor who examined the prosecutrix two days after the incident found that her clothes were torn, they carried slightly watery and blood-like discharge stains and there were two teeth marks, on her left breast near the nipple. On internal examination he found both the labia majora and minora and the clitoris swollen and red with slight bleeding discharge and the walls of the vagina tender with slight swelling. He also noticed abrasions on the back at the lumbar region and on both the elbow joints. In his evidence before the court he stated that the vaginal smear on microscopic examination showed 90 per cent of dead sperms and 10 per cent of live sperms. On the basis of these findings he concluded that the duration of the rape could be about 24 to 48 hours. The trial court found the accused guilty under Ss. 376 and 451 IPC and sentenced him to suffer rigorous imprisonment for two years and to pay a fine of Rs 1000, in default to suffer rigorous imprisonment for three months on the first count and sentenced him to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one year and to pay a fine of Rs 5000, in default to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one month on the second count. The substantive sentences were to run concurrently. But on appeal, the High Court reversed the trial court's order of conviction and sentence. Allowing the appeal

Held :

Unless the evidence discloses that the prosecutrix and her husband had strong reasons to falsely implicate the accused, ordinarily the court should have no hesitation in accepting her version regarding the incident. The accused was a distant relative whom the prosecutrix had met for the first time about 5 or 6 years before. Thereafter she had not many occasions to meet him. Her relations with the accused were not strained. The relations of her husband with the accused were also not strained. In the circumstances there was no motive or reason for the prosecutrix or her husband to falsely involve the accused in the commission of a crime which would put her chastity at stake. Her husband had come to celebrate Diwali with his wife and family members and quarrel with anyone, more so a relative, would be farthest from his thought.

The High Court rejected the testimony of the prosecutrix for wholly unacceptable reasons. There is nothing inconceivable about the accused committing rape with the prosecutrix merely because he happens to be a relative of the latter. Merely because the place of occurrence was near a thoroughfare the High Court also erred in doubting that the accused would commit the rape at such place. There is nothing surprising in the conduct of a man who is lust-ridden in behaving in a carefree manner trying to make most of the situation of the prosecutrix being alone and helpless. Moreover PWs 4 and 7 were natural witnesses being neighbours and in the absence of strong reasons to disbelieve their versions, it is not possible to ignore their evidence as has been done by the High Court. Further corroboration is to be found from the evidence of the doctor who examined her. While accepting the High Court's view that the possibility of her having sexual intercourse with her husband cannot be overlooked, it is not possible to believe that when a married woman has sex with her husband in the privacy of their bedroom she would suffer abrasions on her body and the vaginal walls. The abrasions on the vaginal wall and the consequential inflammation of the labia majora as well as minora and the clitoris provide corroborative evidence that someone had forcible sex with her. Maybe the torn clothes were worn once again by the prosecutrix when she and her husband went to lodge the complaint two days later or the police made out such a panchnama. The same can be said about the attachment of the dhoti also. That by itself does not provide strong reason to doubt the prosecution's story regarding the incident. True it is that the complaint was lodged two days later but in Indian society the victims of such a crime ordinarily consult relatives and are hesitant to approach the police since it involves the question of morality and chastity of a married woman. A woman and her relatives have to struggle with several situations before deciding to approach the police, more so when the culprit happens to be related. In such cases, therefore, the delay is understandable and hence merely on that account the prosecution version cannot be doubted. Thus totally wrong approach adopted by the High Court has resulted in miscarriage of justice. Therefore the Supreme Court's interference is called for. State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781: AIR 1992 SC 2004. Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, Kuldip Singh and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-1992]

[9524] — Ss. 376, 457 and 380 — Rape — Evidence of prosecutrix S — Conviction on the basis of, if on facts was proper — Rape alleged to have been committed on S by 5 persons at night in a room where there was no light — FIR lodged 6 days after the incident — For 6 days, S did not narrate the incident to anyone — Four accused, whom S stated to have recognized when they lighted a torch for short duration in her room, named by her in FIR — Out of 5 appellants, only 2 named in FIR — One appellant, though stated by S to be known, not named in FIR — Medical evidence not supporting the prosecution case — Identification for the first time in court — On facts, held, it was incumbent on the prosecution to hold a Test identification parade — Alleged recovery of torch at the instance of appellant J, also doubtful — Held, it was not safe to rely on the testimony of S — Appellants acquitted (Paras 16 to 23). Devinder Singh v. State of H.P., (2003) 11 SCC 488: 2004 SCC (Cri) 185: AIR 2003 SC 3365.

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2003]

[9525] — Ss. 376 and 506 Pt. II — Conviction reversed — Circumstances in which corroboration of evidence of prosecutrix desirable — Appellant alleged to have raped the prosecutrix and threatened her, when she had gone along with her husband, PW 2 to the factory of DW 1 to recover money that was due to him — Alleged that PW 2 had very gracefully told the appellant that everything was forgiven and forgotten but had nevertheless lured him to police station — Held, if such statement had indeed been made by PW 2 there would have been no occasion to even go to police station — Even assuming that appellant was naive and unaware that he was being led deceitfully there, once having reached there he could not have failed to realise his predicament as trappings of a police station are familiar and distinctive, and he had been running a kirana shop in that area, and would, thus, have been aware of location of police station — In such circumstances, some supporting evidence was essential for prosecution's case besides the testimony of prosecutrix — Medical evidence also not supporting allegations of rape — Moreover, persons present in the factory premises when the rape was alleged to have been committed not examined as witnesses though their statements recorded during investigation — Significantly also, the semen found was not co-related to appellant as his blood samples not taken — Lastly, DW 1 deposed that there was no occasion for PW 2 to have come to factory as no payment was due to him on any account, which in fact knocked out the foundations of prosecution story — Hence, impugned judgment unsustainable and set aside (Paras 2, 3, 7 and 10 to 12). Tameezuddin v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2009) 15 SCC 566.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2009]

[9526] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Attempt to commit rape — Proof and corroboration of — Evidence of prosecutrix — Proper mode of assessment of — Veracity of such evidence, held, cannot be examined by picking up one sentence in the cross-examination — The evidence of the prosecutrix in the instant case, read in its entirety, held, rightly accepted by the High Court — More so when there was sufficient corroborative evidence — Hence, conviction under Ss. 376 & 511, upheld

The High Court had reserved the order of acquittal passed by the trial court and convicted the appellant, who was the Headmaster of a Middle School, for the offence of "attempt to commit rape" under Sections 376/511 IPC of the prosecutrix, Mst R, a student of the same school. The prosecutrix had in her statement in cross-examination, made against the appellant allegation of penetration but the doctor, who examined the prosecutrix, stated that there was no mark of violence on any part of the body and on local examination there was no mark of violence on her private parts like the vagina, the hymen was intact and on examination of vaginal smear no living or dead sperm was found on the slide and accordingly she opined that no definite opinion could be given regarding the attempt to sexual intercourse. The appellant contended that the prosecution story was unbelievable inasmuch as if the prosecutrix's statement was that there had been a penetration into the vagina to a depth of quarter of one inch or one inch, the prosecutrix being a young girl of 13 years the hymen could not have been intact. Rejecting this contention,

Held :

The prosecutrix's evidence cannot be examined by picking one sentence in the cross-examination to find out whether she is a truthful witness or not. A reading of the entire evidence of the prosecutrix that the accused had rubbed his penis with the vagina of the prosecutrix and tried to penetrate but could not succeed in penetrating and ultimately got himself discharged and the hot semen fell on the thighs of the prosecutrix. The statement made by the prosecutrix on which appellant relied might have been made on account of the inexperience of the young girl who was being subjected to sexual harassment for the first time and the same cannot be read in isolation bereft of what she stated just previous to the aforesaid statement. The High Court rightly held that her evidence was that of a truthful witness, which gave an account of the incident that had happened to a rustic girl who was traumatised on account of sexual harassment meted out to her by none other than her own school Headmaster.

Apart from the trustworthy evidence of the prosecutrix herself there are several circumstances as found by the High Court which corroborate the prosecutrix's evidence and makes her statement wholly reliable. On the evidence on record the irresistible conclusion is that the prosecution has been able to establish the charge of attempt to commit rape beyond all reasonable doubts and consequently the conviction and sentence passed by the High Court does not call for any interference. Madan Lal v. State of J&K, (1997) 7 SCC 677: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1151: AIR 1998 SC 386.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-1997]

[9527] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Attempts to molest — Judicial enquiry into — Corroboration of the complainant's evidence when not necessary — Enquiry into the alleged offence conducted by District Judge on the Pondicherry Administration's request as directed by the Supreme Court — When such an enquiry was conducted 17 long years after the offence was committed, held, the complainant's allegation ought not to have been rejected merely for want of corroboration — Constitution of India, Art. 136 (Paras 3, 5 and 6). Radha Bai v. UT, Pondicherry, (1995) 4 SCC 141: 1995 SCC (L&S) 942: (1995) 30 ATC 196: AIR 1995 SC 1476.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and K.S. Paripoornan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1995]

[9528] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Evidence of prosecutrix of easy virtue — Merely because woman was of easy virtue her evidence cannot be discarded but has to be cautiously appreciated. State of Maharashtra v. Madhukar Narayan Mardikar, (1991) 1 SCC 57: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1991 SC 207: (1991) 1 LLJ 269: (1991) 1 SLJ 164: (1991) 1 SLR 140.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jagannatha Shetty and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-10-1990]

[9529] — Ss. 376 and 511 — Evidence of prosecutrix of easy virtue — Non-supply of documents — Transcripts supplied instead — Enquiry against Police Inspector on charge of visiting alone in uniform the house of a woman for ravishing her and preparing false documents and making entries in Station Diary to cover the misdeed — Overwhelming evidence, both direct and circumstantial, tendered to establish the charges — Even though original note book of police constable and log book of the police jeep which reached the spot on being summoned by the delinquent Inspector were missing, transcript thereof prepared earlier supplied to the delinquent and hence in the circumstances mere non supply of the original documents would not efface the evidence against him — Merely because the woman was of easy virtue her evidence cannot be discarded but has to be cautiously appreciated — Held, High Court erred in embarking upon a reappreciation of evidence as if it were sitting in appeal against decision of departmental authorities — Its reappreciation was also unsustainable on merits — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 118. State of Maharashtra v. Madhukar Narayan Mardikar, (1991) 1 SCC 57: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1991 SC 207: (1991) 1 LLJ 269: (1991) 1 SLJ 164: (1991) 1 SLR 140.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jagannatha Shetty and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-10-1990]

[9530] — Ss. 376(2)(f) and 511 — Applicability — Evidence of child witness (victim of rape herein), in absence of any corroboration — Admissibility — Consideration of — On facts, appellant allegedly raping victim, aged about 6 years — Trial court and High Court relying on evidence of victim and her mother held appellant guilty of offence punishable under Ss. 376/511 IPC and sentenced him to 10 years' RI and fine with default stipulation — Sustainability — Challenge before Supreme Court that evidence of child witness (victim) should not be accepted particularly in absence of any corroboration and that sentence was harsh — State contending that testimony of child witness, particularly in case of this nature, does not require corroboration, if testimony of victim is credible — Also, that victim had immediately after occurrence told her mother about the incident and, therefore, her evidence was of considerable importance — Held, trial court and High Court found evidence of child witness cogent, credible and having grain of truth — High Court found evidence of victim free from any influence — Therefore, trial court and High Court rightly relied upon evidence of victim — Again, relying on Rameshwar case, AIR 1952 SC 54, reiterated that previous statement of accomplice or complainant is to be treated as corroborative — Hence, High Court rightly held appellant guilty — Since age of victim was 6 years at the time of incident, appropriate conviction would have been under S. 376(2)(f) IPC under which permissible sentence is life sentence with minimum of 10 years — Herein, 5 years' custodial sentence with fine imposed by trial court and maintained by High Court would meet the ends of justice — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 118 and 157 (Paras 1 to 5, 8 and 9). Mohd. Kalam v. State of Bihar, (2008) 7 SCC 257: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 27: 2008 Cri LJ 3194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-6-2008]

Panchhi v. State of U.P., (1998) 7 SCC 177: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1561; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54, relied on

[9531] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Conviction can be founded on evidence of victims

22.(e) Testimony of prosecutrix and also S. 114-A, Evidence Act (contd.)

It was contended that the case against the accused-appellants had been foisted due to communal feelings. Rejecting the contentions

Held :

Even if communal feelings had run high, it is inconceivable that an unmarried girl and two married women would go to the extent of staking their reputation and future in order to falsely set up a case of rape on them for the sake of communal interests. Pramod Mahto v. State of Bihar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 672: 1990 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1989 SC 1475: 1989 Cri LJ 1479.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-1989]

[9532] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Corroboration of evidence of victim not essential — Uncontroverted testimony of the prosecutrix accepted by courts below — Evidence showing that the victim had protested and struggled while she was subjected to forcible sexual assault by accused persons — Held, this evinces absence of consent on the part of the victim in sexual intercourse, apart from the legal presumption under S. 114-A of Evidence Act — Courts below rightly held that the victim was gang raped by the accused-appellants in the absence of her consent and that the defence case was not substantiated by any cogent evidence — Neither High Court in revision nor Supreme Court in appeal by special leave justified in reappraisal of the evidence in the face of the concurrent findings — Hence conviction under S. 376 and sentence of 3 years' RI upheld — CrPC, 1973, S. 401. Gagan Bihari Samal v. State of Orissa, (1991) 3 SCC 562: 1991 SCC (Cri) 893: (1991) 2 GLH 30: (1991) 72 CLT 322: (1991) 28 ACC 435.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S.C. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-7-1991]

[9533] — S. 376(2)(g) r/w S. 34 and S. 114-A, Evidence Act, 1872 — Gang rape — Presumption of non-consensual intercourse — Prosecutrix consistently stating that she had never consented to intercourse and that she was forcibly caught, threatened at knife-point and thereafter subjected to gang rape — No dispute regarding place or alleged occurrence — FIR lodged promptly and accused arrested immediately — No evidence of false implication since accused were unknown to prosecutrix — Discrepancies found in her testimony insignificant considering that she was illiterate rustic village girl — Non-resistance because of fear, held, not unnatural — Consent by prosecutrix, even if assumed she was a major, not established — Hence, conviction of appellant under Ss. 376/34 and sentence of 10 years' RI along with fine of Rs 500, held proper — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114-A (Paras 46, 47, 37 and 38). Vijay v. State of M.P., (2010) 8 SCC 191: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2010]

State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; State of U.P. v. Pappu, (2005) 3 SCC 594: 2005 SCC (Cri) 780; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; State of Orissa v. Thakara Besra, (2002) 9 SCC 86: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1080; State of H.P. v. Raghubir Singh, (1993) 2 SCC 622: 1993 SCC (Cri) 674; Wahid Khan v. State of M.P., (2010) 2 SCC 9: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 1208; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 Cri LJ 547, relied on [9534] — Ss. 376(2)(g)/34 & 366/34 — Kidnapping and gang rape — Conviction can be founded on sole testimony of victim of the rape — Corroboration of her evidence not essential when her evidence otherwise inspires confidence — Prosecutrix having ample opportunity to see and identify the accused in broad daylight — Being a simple village girl, she cannot be expected to falsely implicate innocent persons leaving her own assailants — However, injuries on her private parts, medical evidence of doctor and FIR providing corroboration — Consent of the prosecutrix cannot be inferred from absence of multiple injuries on her private parts as in case of gang rape at the threat of her life she cannot be expected to have given continuous resistance resulting in sustaining numerous injuries — In the circumstances casual and mechanical approach, without regard to human probabilities, and consequent acquittal by High Court resulted in grave miscarriage of justice — Hence conviction and sentence of 3 years' RI recorded by trial court restored. State of Orissa v. Damburu Naiko, (1992) 2 SCC 522: 1992 SCC (Cri) 400: AIR 1992 SC 1161: 1992 Cri LJ 1537: (1992) 73 CLT 715: (1992) 2 Crimes 77.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1992]

[9535] — S. 376 r/w S. 34 — Held, statement of the prosecutrix, if found to be worthy of credence and reliable, requires no corroboration — Court may convict the accused on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix (Paras 9 to 14). Vijay v. State of M.P., (2010) 8 SCC 191: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2010]

[9536] — S. 376 r/w S. 34 — Rape — Testimony of prosecutrix — Reliability — Conviction on the basis thereof — Permissibility — Held, prosecutrix is not an accomplice but a victim of the crime — Her evidence must receive the same weight as is attached to an injured witness — It can be accepted without corroboration if the court, keeping in mind that it is dealing with the evidence of a person who is interested in the outcome of the charge levelled by her, is satisfied that it can act on her evidence — If the court is hesitant to place implicit reliance on the same, it may look for evidence which may lend assurance to her testimony, short of corroboration required in the case of an accomplice — Nature of evidence required to lend assurance would depend on the facts and circumstances of each case — Where prosecutrix is an adult and of full understanding, the court is entitled to base conviction on her evidence unless the same is shown to be infirm and not trustworthy — If the victim does not have a strong motive to falsely involve the person charged, the court should ordinarily have no hesitation in accepting her evidence — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 118, 133 and 114 Ill. (b)

The appellants were convicted under Section 376 read with Section 34 IPC. Before the Supreme Court, they submitted that there was unexplained delay of five days in reporting the matter to the police. Additionally, there was no corroboration to the evidence of the victim. The medical evidence did not lend any assurance to the testimony of the victim.

Dismissing the appeal filed by the accused, the Supreme Court decided as above. Sri Narayan Saha v. State of Tripura, (2004) 7 SCC 775.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2004]

Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977: AIR 1995 SC 2472; State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210, relied on

Followed in S. Ramakrishna v. State, (2009) 1 SCC 133*

[9537] — Ss. 376/34 and 342/34 — Rape — Evidence of victim — Corroboration — Requirement of — Held, corroboration is not the sine qua non for conviction in rape cases — An accused cannot cling to a fossil formula and insist on corroborative evidence, even if taken as a whole, the case spoken to by the victim strikes the judicial mind as probable — Thus, plea raised regarding lack of corroboration in the instant case, held, liable to be rejected

A woman or a girl who is raped is not an accomplice. Corroboration is not the sine qua non for conviction in a rape case. To insist on corroboration except in the rarest of rare cases is to equate one who is a victim of the lust of another with an accomplice to a crime and thereby insult womanhood. It would be adding insult to injury to tell a woman that her claim of rape will not be believed unless it is corroborated in material particulars as in the case of an accomplice to a crime. Why should the evidence of the girl or the woman who complains of rape or sexual molestation be viewed with the aid of spectacles fitted with lenses tinged with doubt, disbelief or suspicion? The plea about lack of corroboration has no substance. (Paras 11 and 12). Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551: AIR 2003 SC 4684.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2003]

Rafiq v. State of U.P., (1980) 4 SCC 262: 1980 SCC (Cri) 947; Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 Cri LJ 547; State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210, relied on

23. Revision

[9538] — Ss. 376, 342 and 506 r/w S. 34 — Revision — Suo motu exercise of power by High Court — Held, does not extend to converting the proceedings initiated in suo motu revision into an appeal against acquittal and convicting the appellants thereunder — High Court should have setting the acquittal aside, sent the matter back for retrial — Setting aside conviction passed by High Court, matter remitted to trial court for disposal in accordance with law — Appellant permitted to apply for bail — CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 397 and 401. Naresh Kumar v. Registrar, High Court of P&H, (2001) 10 SCC 510.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-1998]

[9539] — Ss. 376, 511, 451 and 354 — Revisional powers of High Court — Scope — High Court quashing charges framed against the accused — Held, revisional powers cannot be exercised in a routine and casual manner — Recourse to such powers for quashing the charges can be taken only if there is a legal bar against the continuance of the criminal proceedings or the framing of charge or where no offence is being made out against the accused considering the entire facts stated in the FIR — In revision, the High Court cannot appreciate the evidence in the manner the trial court and the appellate court are required to do — On facts, it was premature for the High Court to have exercised its revisional powers — Trial court to conduct trial and dispose of the matter on merits — CrPC, 1973 — S. 401. Munna Devi v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 9 SCC 631: AIR 2002 SC 107.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2001]

24. Sentence

Synopsis

(a) Generally 696
(b) Premature release/Probation 702
(c) Compensation to rehabilitation of victim/Suit for damages 702
(d) Death Sentence 706
(i) Generally 706
(ii) Death upheld 706
(iii) Commutation to life when warranted 707
(e) Fine and Imprisonment in default 710
(f) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos 711
(i) Generally 711
(ii) Adequate and Special reasons 711
(1) Generally 711
(2) Reasons that may be considered special and adequate 718
(iii) Instances 727
(g) Principles for sentencing 733
(i) Generally 734
(ii) Age/Health state of accused/ Juvenile 734
(iii) Accused marrying prosecutrix 735
(iv) Delay/Pendency in proceedings/ execution of sentence 735
(v) Proportionality 737
(vi) Background/station/education of accused 737
(vii) Other 738
(viii) Sentence reduced 739
(ix) Sentence not reduced/enhanced 740

(a) Generally

See also C.24.(f) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos', and

'C.24.(g)(i) Principles for sentencing — Generally', below

[9540] — S. 376 — Imposition of sentence under — Relevance of reformation theory — Reformation theory — Limits of — Rape — Imposition of punishment for — Held (per Balasubramanyan, J.), in guise of applying said theory courts cannot forget their duty to society and to the victim

The punishments prescribed by the Penal Code reflect the legislative recognition of the social needs, the gravity of the offence concerned, its impact on the society and what the legislature considers as a punishment suitable for the particular offence. It is necessary for the courts to imbibe that legislative wisdom and to respect it. (Para 12)

The rationale for advocating the award of a punishment commensurate with the gravity of the offence and its impact on society, is to ensure that a civilised society does not revert to the days of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth". Not awarding a just punishment might provoke the victim or its relatives to retaliate in kind and that is what exactly is sought to be prevented by the criminal justice system we have adopted. Even in the time of Kautilya, the need for awarding just punishment was recognised. According to Kautilya, "Whoever imposes severe punishment becomes repulsive to people, while he who awards mild punishment becomes contemptible. The ruler just with the rod is honoured. When deserved punishment is given, it endows the subjects with spiritual good, material well-being and pleasures of the senses." This philosophy is woven into our statute and our jurisprudence and it is the duty of those who administer the law to bear this in mind. (Paras 13 and 14)

The punishment must fit the crime and it is the duty of the court to impose a proper punishment depending on the degree of criminality and desirability for imposing such punishment. However, the awarding of inadequate punishments by courts is becoming disturbingly frequent. (Paras 15 and 10)

It is true that reformation as a theory of punishment is in fashion but under the guise of applying such theory, the courts cannot forget their duty to society and to the victim. The court has to consider the plight of the victim in a case involving rape and the social stigma that may follow the victim to the grave and which in most cases, practically ruins all prospects of a normal life for the victim. A court cannot afford to forget these aspects while imposing a punishment on the aggressor. The court has to do justice to society and to the victim on the one hand and to the offender on the other. The proper balance must be taken to have been struck by the legislature. Hence, the legislative wisdom reflected by the statute has to be respected by the court and the permitted departure therefrom made only for compelling and convincing reasons. (Para 17). State of M.P. v. Bala, (2005) 8 SCC 1: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1947: AIR 2005 SC 3567: 2005 Cri LJ 4371.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J.[1] and G.P. Mathur[1] and P.K. Balasubramanyan[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 3-10-2005]

Earabhadrappa v. State of Karnataka, (1983) 2 SCC 330: 1983 SCC (Cri) 447; Rajendra Prasad v. State of U.P., (1979) 3 SCC 646: 1979 SCC (Cri) 749; State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559; V.K. Gupta: Kautilyan Jurisprudence under the head "Nature and Scope of Punishment", relied on [9541] — S. 376 — Inadequacy of sentence — Who may appeal and before which forum — Reduction of sentence of rape convict by High Court — Appeal by National Commission for Women (NCW) contending that reasons given by High Court for reducing the sentence not acceptable — State had not filed appeal — Held, said appeal not maintainable under inherent powers of Supreme Court — No appeal lies from a judgment of a criminal court except as provided by CrPC or by any other law — S. 372 proviso CrPC confers a right only on victim and also does not envisage appeal against inadequate sentence — Appeal challenging quantum of sentence maintainable only under S. 377 CrPC — S. 377 CrPC does not authorise appeal to Supreme Court — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 372 and 377 — National Commission for Women Act, 1990, S. 10 (Paras 8 and 10). National Commission for Women v. State of Delhi, (2010) 12 SCC 599.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-2010]

Pritam Singh v. State, AIR 1950 SC 169: (1950) 51 Cri LJ 1270; P.S.R. Sadhanantham v. Arunachalam, (1980) 3 SCC 141: 1980 SCC (Cri) 649, followed

[9542] — S. 376 — Rape — Sentence — Leniency in, held, is against public interest — Rape of a pregnant woman in the presence of her husband — Sentence of 5 years' RI (though minimum prescribed is 7 years) and fine of Rs 2000 imposed by trial court — Age of accused's parents, his dependent sisters, wife and two young children considered for awarding lesser sentence — Sentence further reduced by High Court to the period of imprisonment already undergone i.e. 46 days considering that accused a coolie and agriculturist was aged 22 years and that long time had elapsed since the occurrence and trial and appeal had kept the accused busy in court — Held, reduction of sentence was not based on any adequate and special reasons but on misplaced sympathy and hence not justified

The High Court was not justified in restricting the sentence to the period already undergone, which is 46 days. The reasons given by the High Court therefor cannot be said to be "adequate and special reasons". There was no scope for awarding sentence lesser than the prescribed minimum and it should have been the highest prescribed. But the trial court awarded sentence of 5 years for reasons, which may not be strictly meeting the requirements of law. Since the State had not questioned the sufficiency of sentence before the High Court, the sentence awarded by the trial court along with the fine imposed is restored. (Paras 15 and 17)

Leniency in matters involving sexual offences is not only undesirable but also against public interest. Such types of offences are to be dealt with severity and with iron hands. Showing leniency in such matters would be really a case of misplaced sympathy. The acts which led to the conviction of the accused are not only shocking but outrageous in their contours. Rape is violation with violence of the private person of the victim, an abominable outrage by all canons. (Paras 15 and 14). State of Karnataka v. Puttaraja, (2004) 1 SCC 475: 2004 SCC (Cri) 300: AIR 2004 SC 433: 2004 Cri LJ 579.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-2003]

State of M.P. v. Ghanshyam Singh, (2003) 8 SCC 13: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1935, relied on

[9543] — S. 376 — Rape — Sentence — Recent trend is to prefer deterrent approach than therapeutic or reformative approach

In the matter of punishment for offence committed by a person, there are many approaches to the problem. On the commission of crime, three types of reactions may generate: the traditional reaction of universal nature which is termed as punitive approach. It regards the criminal as a notoriously dangerous person who must be inflicted severe punishment to protect the society from his criminal assaults. The other approach is the therapeutic approach. It regards the criminal as a sick person requiring treatment, while the third is the preventive approach which seeks to eliminate those conditions from the society which were responsible for crime causation. (Para 13)

Under the punitive approach, the rationalisation of punishment is based on retributive and utilitarian theories. Deterrent theory which is also part of the punitive approach proceeds on the basis that the punishment should act as a deterrent not only to the offender but also to others in the community. (Para 14)

The therapeutic approach aims at curing the criminal tendencies which were the product of a diseased psychology. There may be many factors, including family problems. Therapeutic approach has since been treated as an effective method of punishment which not only satisfies the requirements of law that a criminal should be punished and the punishment prescribed must be meted out to him, but also reforms the criminal through various processes, the most fundamental of which is that in spite of having committed a crime, maybe a heinous crime, he should be treated as a human being entitled to all the basic human rights, human dignity and human sympathy. It was under this theory that the Supreme Court in a stream of decisions, projected the need for prison reforms, the need to acknowledge the vital fact that the prisoner, after being lodged in jail, does not lose his fundamental rights or basic human rights and that he must be treated with compassion and sympathy. (Para 15)

24.(a) Generally (contd.)

Sexual offences, however, constitute an altogether different kind of crime which is the result of a perverse mind. The perversity may result in homosexuality or in the commission of rape. Those who commit rape are psychologically sadistic persons exhibiting this tendency in the rape forcibly committed by them. In some States in the U.S.A., therefore, emphasis was laid on psychotherapic treatment of the offender while he was under detention. Here, in India, statutory provision for psychotherapic treatment during the period of incarceration in the jail is not available, but reformist activities are systematically held at many places with the intention of treating the offender psychologically so that he may not repeat the offence in future and may feel repentant of having committed a dastardly crime. (Paras 16 to 18)

In Phul Singh case (1979) 4 SCC 413 the Supreme Court observed that in case of long incarceration often the remedy aggravates the malady. In that case it was found that the appellant was a young man of 22 years with no criminal antecedents save the offence of rape committed by him. The court thought that given correctional courses through meditational therapy and other measures, his erotic aberrations may wither away, particularly as the appellant had a reasonable prospect of shaping into a balanced person. But, this theory was not followed in later decisions as it was found that in spite of devices having been employed and adopted within the jail premises so as to reform the offenders, there was negligible improvement in the commission of crime. Crime, instead of declining, had increased and, today, it has assumed dangerous proportions. While one person is reformed and moves out of jail, another offender is born. Consequently, in two recent decisions, in Krishnappa and N.K. cases the order of acquittal passed by the High Court was set aside and substituted by an order of conviction by the Supreme Court. (Para 19). T.K. Gopal v. State of Karnataka, (2000) 6 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1037: AIR 2000 SC 1669: 2000 Cri LJ 2286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2000]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316; Bodhisattwa Gautam v. Subhra Chakraborty, (1996) 1 SCC 490: 1996 SCC (Cri) 133, relied on

See also State of M.P. v. Balu, (2005) 1 SCC 108

[9544] — S. 376 — Rape — Sentencing — Quantum of sentence — Relevant factors to be considered — Leniency in sentence — Plea as to — Sustainability — Held, sentence must depend upon the conduct of the accused, the state and age of the victim and the gravity of the criminal act — Socio-economic status, religion, race, caste or creed of the accused or the victim are irrelevant considerations — Crimes of violence upon women need to be severely dealt with — Object of law to protect the society and deter the criminal to be achieved by imposing an appropriate sentence — Court to impose proper sentence commensurate with gravity of crime — In the present case of rape of a minor there are no extenuating or mitigating circumstances available on the record which may justify imposition of any sentence less than the prescribed minimum — Hence, plea for leniency, held, was wholly misplaced

The measure of punishment in a case of rape cannot depend upon the social status of the victim or the accused. It must depend upon the conduct of the accused, the state and age of the sexually assaulted female and the gravity of the criminal act. Crimes of violence upon women need to be severely dealt with. The socio-economic status, religion, race, caste or creed of the accused or the victim are irrelevant considerations in sentencing policy. Protection of society and deterring the criminal is the avowed object of law and that is required to be achieved by imposing an appropriate sentence. The sentencing courts are expected to consider all relevant facts and circumstances bearing on the question of sentence and proceed to impose a sentence commensurate with the gravity of the offence. The courts must hear the loud cry for justice by society in cases of the heinous crime of rape on innocent helpless girls of tender years, as in this case, and respond by imposition of proper sentence. Public abhorrence of the crime needs reflection through imposition of appropriate sentence by the Court. There are no extenuating or mitigating circumstances available on the record which may justify imposition of any sentence less than the prescribed minimum on the respondent. To show mercy in the case of such a heinous crime would be a travesty of justice and the plea for leniency is wholly misplaced. (Para 12). Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 1267: 2006 Cri LJ 1679: (2006) 1 KLT 1006.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2006]

[9545] — S. 376 — Sentence — Appropriate punishment — Father raping his daughter — Physical and emotional trauma of daughter — Shocking and heinous crime and betrayal of trust — When protector becomes violator the offence assumes greater degree of vulnerability, still worse when a father rapes his own daughter — Leniency and sympathy in such cases, held, unwarranted — Sentence of life imprisonment and fine, upheld — CrPC, 1973, S. 386

No sympathy or leniency is called for. It is an unpardonable act. If the protector becomes the violator, the offence assumes a greater degree of vulnerability. Charged of raping his own daughter under his refuge and fortress is worse than the gamekeeper becoming a poacher and treasury guard becoming a robber. He not only delicts the law but, it is a betrayal of trust. The accused's lustful acts have indelible scar not only physically but also emotionally on the victim. There can never be more shocking, depraved and heinous crime than when the father is charged of having raped his own daughter. (Paras 14, 11 and 2). Siriya v. State of M.P., (2008) 8 SCC 72: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 422: AIR 2008 SC 2314.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2008]

[9546] — S. 376 — Sentence — Father raping his own daughter — Trial court on conviction sentencing accused to 5 years' RI and fine of Rs 1000 with default stipulation — Held, ordinarily offence of rape is grave in nature, more so, when perpetrator of the crime is the father against his own daughter and the rarest of the rare case which warrants strong deterrent judicial hand — Hence, while maintaining conviction, sentence of life imprisonment and fine of Rs 25,000 (on realisation to be paid to prosecutrix) imposed

The trial court on conviction sentenced the respondent to 5 years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs 1000 and in default rigorous imprisonment for 3 months. In the instant case the crime committed by the respondent not only delicts the law but it has a deleterious effect on civilised society. Gravity of the crime has to be necessarily assessed from the nature of the crime. A crime may be grave but the nature of the crime may not be so grave. Similarly, a crime may not be so grave but the nature of the crime may be very grave. Ordinarily, the offence of rape is grave by its nature. More so, when the perpetrator of the crime is the father against his own daughter it is more graver and the rarest of rare case, which warrants a strong deterrent judicial hand. Hence, while maintaining conviction recorded by trial court, sentence of imprisonment for life and fine of Rs 25,000 is imposed. The fine amount if realised shall be paid to the prosecutrix. (Paras 22 and 24). State of H.P. v. Asha Ram, (2005) 13 SCC 766: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 296: AIR 2006 SC 381: 2006 Cri LJ 139.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2005]

Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598, followed

[Ed.: A news report appearing on the internet website Indlaw News Detail dated December 15, 2005 says:

"The Supreme Court today decided to re-examine its judgment convicting and sentencing a man to life imprisonment for raping his daughter who retracted her allegations after the pronouncement of the verdict on November 17".

It is to be seen in the future what the outcome is of the review petition.]

[9547] — S. 376 — Sentence — Punishment — Object of — Theory of deterrence — Basis and relevance of, to award of sentence — Sexual offences — Rape — Held, following Krishnappa case, (2000) 4 SCC 75, theory of reformation postulated by Krishna Iyer, J. in Phul Singh case, (1979) 4 SCC 413, had been rejected by the Supreme Court in a series of recent decisions starting with said Krishnappa case — Held, courts are expected to properly operate the sentencing system to impose such sentence for a proved offence, as may serve as a deterrent for commission of like offences by others — Hence sentence of seven years' RI imposed by trial court for commission of rape, which had been reduced by High Court to the period of sentence undergone (ten months), restored — Approach of High Court deprecated in strong terms — Held, sentence of 10 months' imprisonment imposed by High Court is ridiculously low and is not commensurate with the gravity of the rape committed on a minor — High Court exhibited lack of sensitivity towards the victim of rape and society in reducing the substantive sentence in the established facts and circumstances of the case (Paras 19 and 20). State of M.P. v. Balu, (2005) 1 SCC 108: 2005 SCC (Cri) 270: AIR 2005 SC 222: 2005 Cri LJ 335: (2005) 25 AIC 369 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-2004]

State of Karnataka v. Krishnappa, (2000) 4 SCC 75: 2000 SCC (Cri) 755; T.K. Gopal v. State of Karnataka, (2000) 6 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1037; State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898, followed

Phul Singh v. State of Haryana, (1979) 4 SCC 413: 1980 SCC (Cri) 1, held to be not good law

24.(a) Generally (contd.)

[9548] — S. 376 — Unpardonable offence — Morally loathsome, deprave and abhorrent criminal act — Appropriate sentence — Duty of court to protect society from heinous and shocking crimes by passing appropriate sentence, emphasised

Protection of society and stamping out criminal proclivity must be the object of law which must be achieved by imposing appropriate sentence. The case at hand is a sad reflection on the present day society where a most platonic relationship has been soiled by the pervert and degrading act of the father. It shows to what bottomless pit of depravation and lust a person can go down. The custodian of the trust has betrayed the same. The sanctity of father and daughter relationship gets polluted. It is not only a loathsome sin, but also abhorrent. (Paras 13 and 11). Siriya v. State of M.P., (2008) 8 SCC 72: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 422: AIR 2008 SC 2314.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2008]

Shailesh Jasvantbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 2 SCC 359: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 499; State of Karnataka v. Raju, (2007) 11 SCC 490: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 787, relied on

Friedman: Law in Changing Society, cited

[9549] — Ss. 376, 302, 304, 120-B, 354, 312, 343, 201, 506, 109 and 34 — Sentence — Deterrence theory — Offences of committing rape on 13 girls of Ashram by A-1, head of the Ashram, and murder of one person who had dared to disclose the misdeeds of A-1 and systematic abetment by co-accused person — All accused convicted for various offences — Sentences awarded by courts below including life imprisonment — Sentences imposed on A-1 in default of payment of huge fine of Rs 5,10,000 on each count to run separately and consecutively — Having regard to the grave, systematic and organised nature of the offences and its effect on society at large, held, sentences justified — No remission of sentence or amnesty to be allowed

In this case, Accused 1, 2, 4, 6 and 7 have preferred the appeals before the Supreme Court against their conviction and sentence (see para 1) concurrently recorded by the trial court and the High Court. A-3 served out the sentence and A-5 died during the pendency of the appeal before the High Court and his appeal stood abated. Accused 2 is the Secretary of A-1, A-6 is the younger brother of A-1 and A-7 is the adopted son of A-1. The sentence imposed on A-1 on Charges 2 and 6 (see para 1) are to run consecutively. Total fine on A-1 is Rs 61,30,000 (Rs 61,20,000 + Rs 10,000). Sentences imposed on A-1 in default of payment of fine on each count are to run separately and consecutively apart from the sentences of imprisonments. In default of payment of fine, total further sentence to undergo: 32-½ years + 3 months. The sentences imposed on A-2 on Charges 3 and 6 are to run consecutively. Total fine on A-2 Rs 12,500 (Rs 10,000 + Rs 2500). The sentences imposed on A-2 in default of payment of fine are to run consecutively apart from the sentences of imprisonments. The sentence of imprisonment on Charges 3 and 7 are to run concurrently. Fine amount on A-4: Rs 10,000. The sentence of imprisonment imposed in default of payment of fine is to run separately. The sentence of imprisonment imposed on each of these accused on Charges 3 and 7 are to run concurrently. Total fine is Rs 12,500 each (Rs 12,500 x 2 = Rs 25,000). The sentence of imprisonment imposed in default of payment of fine is to run separately and consecutively. Total fine on A-1 to A-7 was Rs 62,07,500. Out of the payment of fine of Rs 61,30,000 collected from A-1, under Section 357(1) CrPC, a compensation of Rs 5,00,000 is to be paid to each of the victim girls (Rs 5,00,000 x 12 = Rs 60,00,000).

Held :

There is no infirmity in the well-merited findings concurrently recorded by the two courts below, which do not warrant the Supreme Court's interference. (Para 77)

The facts of this case, as revealed by the prosecution, shocked the judicial conscience. It illustrates a classic example as to how the insatiable lust for sex of A-1 Swami Premananda leads to the raping of 13 Ashram girls and murder of one person who had dared to disclose the misdeeds of A-1. The Ashram which is supposed to be God's abode turned out to be a devil's workshop. A-1, whom the inmates of the Ashram regarded as God having divine power turned out to be a monster. It is a classic case of betrayal of fatherly and divinely trust of the inmates of the Ashram girls who were mostly orphans and destitutes brought from Sri Lanka, except PWs 4 and 6. This case has more than one rarest of rare cases. It is rare that A-1, supposed to be the incarnation of God and allegedly having divine powers has been alleged of raping 13 of the Ashram girls systematically and murder of one person. It is rare that out of the 62 prosecution witnesses examined none of them turned hostile. It is rare that in an institution like ashram, IO seized amongst other things two new packets of Nirodh contraceptive. (Paras 3 and 38)

Having regard to the amplitude of the gravity of the offence, perpetrated in an organised and systematic manner, the nature of the offence and its deleterious effects not only against the victims, but the civilised society at large, needs to be curbed by a strong judicial hand. Therefore, the sentence and conviction as recorded by the trial court and confirmed by the High Court are confirmed. (Para 78)

The order of the trial court that any remission of sentence or amnesty on any special occasions announced or to be announced either by the Central or the State Government shall not apply to the sentence and imprisonment imposed on all the accused, is also maintained. (Para 78). Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2005 SC 2132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2005]

[9550] — Ss. 376 and 375 — Considerations while awarding sentence — Punishment — Concept of, stated — Duty of the court to impose on the person found guilty, the punishment prescribed by law, emphasised — Factors relevant in determining the quantum of punishment, restated — Further held, cases of sexual crimes against women should be dealt with sternly and severely and a person convicted for rape should be dealt with a heavy hand

X, a married woman, was living with her husband in the respondent's house situate in a village. One noon when she was washing a drum on the respondent's tapri, the respondent caught her from behind and threw her on the ground and committed rape on her. In the evening, she told about the sexual assault to her husband and her mother-in-law. On the next day, X and her husband lodged FIR at the police station. After investigation, charge-sheet was submitted under, inter alia, Section 376 IPC. The accused denied the charge and averred that the husband of the prosecutrix had taken advance money from the employer towards labour charges and since he had no intention to return the said amount, the prosecutrix had falsely implicated the accused. The trial court rejected the said defence, and on evidence held that it was proved beyond reasonable doubt that the accused had committed the offence of rape. Rejecting the respondent's plea for grant of probation, the trial court imposed on him the minimum sentence of seven years' rigorous imprisonment in terms of Section 376(1) and also a fine of Rs 2500.

In an appeal to the High Court, without challenging the conviction, the respondent-accused prayed for mercy and leniency in sentence. The High Court accepted the same. Observing that the accused was an "illiterate agriculturist from rural area" and that a fine of Rs 2500 was also imposed on him, the High Court held that on the facts of the case, the imprisonment for two months and three days which the accused had already undergone could be said to be "just and proper". Accordingly it allowed the appeal partly. The State then filed the present appeal by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant State contended that in view of the minimum sentence prescribed in Section 376(1), IPC, the High Court erred in reducing the sentence and that too when the accused had undergone imprisonment only for two months and three days. That moreover, no "adequate and special reasons" were recorded by the High Court for reducing the sentence.

On the other hand, the respondent-accused supported the High Court's order.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Punishment is the sanction imposed on the offender for the infringement of law committed by him. Once a person is tried for commission of an offence and found guilty by a competent court, it is the duty of the court to impose on him such sentence as is prescribed by law. The award of sentence is consequential on and incidental to conviction. The law does not envisage a person being convicted for an offence without a sentence being imposed therefor. (Para 23)

In the justice-delivery system, sentencing is indeed a difficult and complex question. Every court must be conscious and mindful of proportion between an offence committed and penalty imposed as also its impact on society in general and the victim of the crime in particular. (Para 25)

Sentencing is thus a delicate task which requires skill, talent and consideration of several factors, such as, the nature of offence, circumstances—extenuating or aggravating—in which it was committed, prior criminal record of the offender, if any, age and background of the criminal with reference to education, home life, social adjustment, emotional and mental condition, prospects of his reformation and rehabilitation, etc. All these and similar other considerations can, hopefully and legitimately, tilt the scale on the propriety of sentence. (Para 27)

Moreover, social impact of the crime, particularly where it relates to offences against women, cannot be lost sight of and per se requires exemplary treatment. The courts are, therefore, expected to try and decide cases of sexual crime against women with utmost sensitivity. Such cases need to be dealt with sternly and severely. Once a person is convicted for an offence of rape, he should be treated with a heavy hand. (Paras 28 to 30). State of M.P. v. Babulal, (2008) 1 SCC 234: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2008 SC 582: 2008 Cri LJ 714.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2007]

Halsbury's Laws of England (4th Edn., Vol. 11, Para 482); Salmond on Jurisprudence (2004), p. 94, referred to

B.G. Goswami v. Delhi Admn., (1974) 3 SCC 85: 1973 SCC (Cri) 796; Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1, relied on

(b) Premature release/Probation

[9551] — S. 376(1) — Probation — Refusal to grant probation to the person found guilty of rape — Held, proper — CrPC, 1973, S. 360 — Probation of Offenders Act, 1958, S. 4 (Para 7). State of M.P. v. Babulal, (2008) 1 SCC 234: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2008 SC 582: 2008 Cri LJ 714.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2007]

Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728; State of Rajasthan v. Narayan, (1992) 3 SCC 615: 1992 SCC (Cri) 781, relied on

(c) Compensation to rehabilitation of victim/Suit for damages

[9552] — S. 375 — Gang rape by police of women participating in public rally — Compensation to — Quantum of — Limits on power of High Court when matter at premature stage — Writ petition by Uttarakhand Sangharsh Samity seeking directions to State authorities in connection with confrontation ensued between the agitators and the administration which resulted in death, injuries and molestation of women — High Court directing the State Govt. to pay huge amounts as compensation to the victims and to make fund allotment (in several crores of rupees) for development of Kumaon and Garhwal regions by way of reparation to the people of those regions — Such directions which resulted in great financial burden on the State at the premature stage and which were made without trial, without consideration of evidence, without having regard to financial capacity, resources of the State and legislative mandates involving State funding, held, were in excess of High Court's jurisdiction under Act. 226 and unwarranted and hence liable to be set aside — Constitution of India, Arts. 226 and 19(1)(a), (b), (c) & (d) and 21

A public rally was organised for protesting against a State Government notification pertaining to reservation in educational institutions based on regionwise domicile and to press the demand for a separate State of Uttarakhand comprising certain hilly regions of the State of U.P. and some other areas. The administration took stern measures to resist the protestors' march towards the national capital as the officials claimed to have received secret information that the proposed rallyists were carrying lethal weapons in violation of the prohibitory orders issued by the Government and might create serious law and order situation. The confrontation which ensued resulted in a lot of bloodshed including loss of many lives, infliction of injuries on persons belonging to both sides, outraging the modesty of women ranging to ravishments. An association styling itself as Uttarakhand Sangharsh Samity moved a writ petition in the High Court for directions to be issued to the authorities to meet the consequences of the said confrontation. A Division Bench of the High Court issued certain interim directions, one of which was to the CBI to enquire into the allegations of 'human rights violations'. CBI took up investigation pursuant to the directions and laid charge-sheet against certain officers for offences under Sections 109 and 120-B read with Sections 341 and 342 of the Indian Penal Code. Sanction of the State Government was obtained for launching prosecution in respect of those offences. Some of the accused who were arrayed in the said charge-sheet filed writ petitions before the High Court in challenge to the validity of the sanction order issued by the State Government for prosecuting them. The Division Bench disposed of the first-mentioned writ petition filed by the Samity issuing several directions. It ordered the Government to pay Rs 10 lakhs each to the dependants of all the persons who died in police firing. Rs 10 lakhs each were given to the victims of molestation, Rs fifty thousand each to 398 persons who were detained by the police. The Division Bench also issued the following directions regarding fund allotment for development of certain regions: "Damages and compensation for constitutional wrongs committed subjecting injuries to the class of people of Kumaon and Garhwal for their only fault that they were securing their civil rights on the guarantee already given by the legislature, as discussed in the judgment. The reparation to the people of Kumaon and Garhwal Divisions shall stand related to their population (5,926,146: Kumaon — 2,943,199, Garhwal — 2,982,947) in the equation of a rupee per month per person for a plan period of five years and this compensation shall be invested amongst the population of Kumaon and Garhwal earmarked specifically for a programme for the upliftment of the women; 50 paise of this reparation shall come from the State of Uttar Pradesh and the other 50 paise from the Union of India. This would be in addition to the normal plan allocation which this area would receive as what the Court is suggesting is damages beyond the normal allocation." Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The High Court was not justified in fixing such a huge sum as compensation at a premature stage. The High Court while imposing such a heavy liability on the State has not made any attempt to discuss the relevant questions which are to be answered for fixing the liability of compensation and for quantification of the amount of compensation. Therefore, the direction for payment of compensation is clearly unsustainable and is liable to be vacated. (Para 12)

The magnitude of the financial burden for complying with the direction regarding fund allotment has been approximately estimated as amounting to several crores of rupees. The money has to come out of the State coffers. This is not a case where the High Court was ordering compensation to one individual or even to a limited number of persons dehors its legal liability enjoined by statutory provisions. Major revenue of the State Government is through taxation. But no taxation is possible without legislative sanction. The Government must have other resources to meet the direction. The High Court did not take into account the financial capacity of the State Government, nor its resources for making up the said amount nor the priorities to be honoured by the State Government nor even the legislative mandates involving State funding, while ordering the Government to incur such a huge expenditure of a recurring nature. Judicial creativity has, no doubt, expanded to newer dimensions in the recent past, but that is no justification for using judicial power for imposing such an unbearable burden on the State which in turn would be compelled to extract money out of the common man's coffers to meet such a massive financial burden. Suffice it to say that the above direction cannot stand judicial scrutiny and it is hereby set aside. (Paras 14 to 17) . A.K. Singh v. Uttarakhand Jan Morcha, (1999) 4 SCC 476: 1999 SCC (Cri) 580: AIR 1999 SC 2193.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, D.P. Mohapatra and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-1999]

[9553] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Moulding of punishment — Reduction of custodial sentence — When warranted — High Court finding appellant-accused guilty under clause "Fourthly" of S. 375 — However, taking note of the peculiar facts of the case, more particularly, the knowledge of the complainant about the accused being a married man, reducing the custodial sentence from 7 years to 3 years but enhancing the compensation to Rs 1,00,000 from Rs 10,000 with a direction that in case the compensation amount was not paid, the reduction in sentence would not be given effect to — Complainant becoming aware of appellant's first marriage on 6-3-1994 but lodging report on 19-9-1994 — Explanation given therefor that she delivered a child immediately after learning about the incident on 16-4-1994 and hence could not complain earlier and also that she was totally traumatised on learning about the marriage of the appellant-accused — Held, though explanation was really not satisfactory but in view of the position in law that the accused was really guilty of the offence punishable under S. 376 IPC, the delayed approach of the complainant cannot, in any event, wash away the offence — Reduction of sentence and enhancement of compensation by High Court, supported by sufficient and adequate reasons, calls for no interference (Paras 16 to 18). Bhupinder Singh v. UT, Chandigarh, (2008) 8 SCC 531: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 553: 2008 Cri LJ 3546.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-2008]

[Ed.: An interesting question arises whether on these facts the appellant could have been charged under Sections 493 and 494 IPC, and if so why not.]

[9554] — S. 376 — Compensation — Award of interim compensation during pendency of the proceedings under — Court has jurisdiction to award interim compensation to victim — Complaint under Ss. 312/420/493/496/498-A IPC filed by respondent-victim against appellant for developing sexual relationship with her on false assurance of marriage and later secretly marrying her before God by putting vermilion on her forehead but after having impregnated her twice, compelling her to undergo abortion on both the occasions and ultimately deserting her — Appellant's petition under S. 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint dismissed by High Court — While dismissing the SLP preferred by appellant, held, Supreme Court has jurisdiction to pass order compelling the accused to pay maintenance to the victim during pendency of the criminal case — Accordingly, on being prima facie satisfied about the allegations, appellant's plea that his service having been terminated he may not be burdened with the liability to pay any maintenance, rejected and appellant directed to pay Rs 1000 per month as interim compensation to respondent during pendency of the criminal case — Constitution of India, Arts. 136, 32, 226, 142 and 21

24.(c) Compensation to rehabilitation of victim/Suit for damages (contd.)

The respondent lodged a complaint against the appellant which was registered under Sections 312/420/493/496/498-A IPC. The complaint revealed that there was initially a period of romance between the parties during which the appellant used to visit the house of respondent and on one occasion he told her that he was in love with her and ultimately succeeded, on the basis of his assurances to marry her, in developing sexual relationship with her with the tragic result that the respondent became pregnant. While in that state, she persuaded the appellant to marry her, but he deferred the proposal on the plea that he had to take his parents' permission. He, however, agreed to marry her secretly. Consequently, the appellant took her before the God he worshipped and put vermilion on her forehead and accepted her as his lawful wife. In spite of the secret marriage, he, through his insistence, succeeded in motivating her for an abortion which took place in a clinic. The respondent became pregnant a second time and at the instance of the appellant she had to undergo abortion again in a nursing home where the appellant signed the consent paper by deliberately mentioning a false name. Ultimately the appellant deserted her. The appellant filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint which was dismissed by the High Court. The appellant thereupon approached the Supreme Court by way of SLP. The Supreme Court while dismissing the SLP further took suo motu notice of the facts of the case as narrated in the complaint and issued notice to the appellant as to why he should not be asked to pay reasonable maintenance per month to the respondent during pendency of the prosecution proceedings against him. The appellant put up appearance and filed an affidavit denying the allegations against him and stating that his service having since been terminated and he thus being unemployed no question of burdening him with the liability to pay maintenance could arise. In the circumstances question before the Court was whether any further order could be passed compelling the appellant to pay maintenance to the respondent during the pendency of the criminal case for which the show-cause notice had been issued to him? Disposing of the appeal of the accused

Held :

(1) When the court trying an offence of rape has jurisdiction to award the compensation at the final stage, there is no reason to deny to the court the right to award interim compensation which should also be provided in the scheme for rape victims to be evolved by the Union of India pursuant to directions of the Supreme Court in Delhi Domestic Working Women's Forum case. On the basis of the principles set out in that decision the jurisdiction to pay interim compensation shall be treated to be part of the overall jurisdiction of the courts trying the offences of rape which, is an offence against basic human rights as also the fundamental right of personal liberty and life. Besides, the Supreme Court has the inherent jurisdiction to pass any order it considers fit and proper in the interest of justice or to do complete justice between the parties.

On being prima facie satisfied about the allegations made in the complaint, the matter is disposed of by providing that the appellant shall pay to the respondent a sum of Rs 1000 every month as interim compensation during pendency of the criminal case against him. He shall also be liable to pay arrears of compensation at the same rate from the date on which the complaint was filed till the date of the present decision. However, whatever has been said in this judgment shall not, in any way, affect or prejudice the Magistrate from deciding the complaint on merits on the basis of the evidence as may be tendered before it and in accordance with law.

(2) A woman, in our country, belongs to a class or group of society who are in a disadvantaged position on account of several social barriers and impediments and have, therefore, been the victim of tyranny at the hands of men with whom they, under the Constitution, enjoy equal status. Women also have the right to life and liberty; they also have the right to be respected and treated as equal citizens. Their honour and dignity cannot be touched or violated. They also have the right to lead an honourable and peaceful life. Women, in them, have many personalities combined. They are mother, daughter, sister and wife and not playthings for centre spreads in various magazines, periodicals or newspapers nor can they be exploited for obscene purposes. They must have the liberty, the freedom and, of course, independence to live the roles assigned to them by Nature so that the society may flourish as they alone have the talents and capacity to shape the destiny and character of men anywhere and in every part of the world.

(3) In spite of the decision of the Supreme Court that (depending upon the circumstances of the case) corroboration of the prosecutrix was not necessary, the cases continued to end in acquittal on account of mishandling of the crime by the police and the invocation of the theory of 'consent' by the courts who tried the offence of rape. To overcome this difficulty, the legislature introduced Section 114-A in the Evidence Act. The situation, however, has hardly improved. The fear has to be allayed from the minds of women so that if and when this crime is committed, the victim may promptly report the matter to the police and on a charge-sheet being submitted, the trial may proceed speedily without causing any embarrassment to the prosecutrix who may come in the witness-box without fear psychosis.

(4) The Supreme Court, as the highest Court of the country, has a variety of jurisdiction. Under Article 32 of the Constitution, it has the jurisdiction to enforce the fundamental rights by issuing writs. Fundamental rights can be enforced even against private bodies and individuals. Even the right to approach the Supreme Court for the enforcement of the fundamental rights under Article 32 itself is a fundamental right. The jurisdiction enjoyed by the Supreme Court under Article 32 is very wide as the Supreme Court, while considering a petition for the enforcement of any of the fundamental rights, can declare an Act to be ultra vires or beyond the competence of the legislature and has also the power to award compensation for the violation of the fundamental rights. For the exercise of this jurisdiction, it is not necessary that the person who is the victim of violation of his fundamental right should personally approach the court as the court can itself take cognizance of the matter and proceed suo motu or on a petition of any public-spirited individual. The Supreme Court through its various decisions, has already given new dimensions, meaning and purpose to many of the fundamental rights especially the Right to Freedom and Liberty and Right to Life. The Directive Principles of State Policy have also been raised by the Supreme Court from their static and unenforceable concept to a level as high as that of the fundamental rights. Bodhisattwa Gautam v. Subhra Chakraborty, (1996) 1 SCC 490: 1996 SCC (Cri) 133: AIR 1996 SC 922: (1996) 1 AndhLT (Cri) 252.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-1995]

Delhi Domestic Working Women's Forum v. Union of India, (1995) 1 SCC 14: 1995 SCC (Cri) 7, followed

State of H.P. v. Raghubir Singh, (1993) 2 SCC 622: 1993 SCC (Cri) 674; State of Karnataka v. Mahabaleshwar Gourya Naik, 1992 Supp (3) SCC 179: 1993 SCC (Cri) 180; Rudul Sah v. State of Bihar, (1983) 4 SCC 141: 1983 SCC (Cri) 798; Peoples' Union for Democratic Rights v. Police Commr., Delhi Police Hqrs., (1989) 4 SCC 730: 1990 SCC (Cri) 75, relied on

[Ed.: The present case came by way of an SLP under Article 136.]

[9555] — S. 376 — Compensation to victim of rape — Investigation against police officials alleged to be involved in incident of rape pending — Victim undergoing a lot of physical and mental suffering — Interim compensation of Rs 20,000 directed to be paid to her by State — Leave granted to her to apply to Supreme Court for further compensation, if any, after criminal trial reaches finality at trial stage — Constitution of India, Arts. 32 and 300. P. Rathinam v. Union of India, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 716: 1991 SCC (Cri) 228.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and M.N. Venkatachaliah, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-10-1988]

[9556] — Ss. 376 and 323 — Offence under — Compensation to the victim — Accused, besides imprisonment, sentenced to pay a fine of Rs 5000 and Rs 500 under Ss. 376 and 323 respectively — In case of the amount being recovered, a sum of Rs 4500 directed to be paid to the victim — CrPC, 1973, S. 357(1)(b) (Para 12). State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147: AIR 1999 SC 3916: 2000 Cri LJ 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-1999]

[9557] — S. 376(2)(f) — Award of compensation to victim of offence (rape in this case) to be paid by State — Direction by trial court in respect of — Confirmation of, by High Court in appeal against conviction — Propriety of — Held, it was not open to State to challenge the said part of High Court's order against it in the appeal filed by accused — Hence, the said challenge rejected as meritless — CrPC, 1973, S. 357 (Para 16). Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 1267: 2006 Cri LJ 1679: (2006) 1 KLT 1006.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2006]

[9558] — S. 376-B r/w S. 341 — Compensation and rehabilitation of rape victims — Scheme regarding — Directed to be evolved by National Commission for Women under S. 10 of National Commission for Women Act within six months and thereupon, Union of India directed to examine the same and take necessary steps for its implementation — National Commission for Women Act, 1990, S. 10 (Paras 17 and 18). Delhi Domestic Working Women's Forum v. Union of India, (1995) 1 SCC 14: 1995 SCC (Cri) 7: (1995) 1 BLJR 1.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.N. Venkatachaliah, C.J. and S. Mohan and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-10-1994]

(d) Death Sentence

See also Ss. 299-304 — CULPABLE HOMICIDE AND MURDER, 'D.35.(f)(ii)20. Death Sentence — Rape and murder', in Vol. 2

(i) Generally

[9559] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 302/34 and 201 — Rape and murder — Sentence — Death sentence justified — Rarest of rare cases — Jail officer sending to his quarter a guard and a prisoner to work in the house and in the garden attached thereto, respectively — 16-year-old daughter of the said officer was at that time alone in the quarter and was preparing for her Class 10th examination — Taking advantage of her loneliness, both the guard and the prisoner committing rape on her, strangulating and then stabbing her, removing her cycle and throwing her dead body in septic tank — In such circumstances sentence of death, held, was the only proper punishment — CrPC, 1973, S. 354(3) (Para 36). Molai v. State of M.P., (1999) 9 SCC 581: AIR 2000 SC 177.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.P. Kurdukar, K.T. Thomas and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-1999]

State of M.P. v. Molai, 1999 Cri LJ 2698 (MP), affirmed

(ii) Death upheld

[9560] — Ss. 376(2) and 302 — Rape and murder of minor aged less than six years — If a "rarest of rare case" — Held, rape is one of the most depraved acts — Such iniquitous, flagitious act becomes abominable when the victim is a child — The diabolic act reaches the lowest level of humanity when the rape is followed by brutal murder — Hence, Supreme Court has no hesitation in holding that present case falls in the rarest of rare category and death sentence awarded by trial court was appropriate — Guidelines and tests for imposition of death sentence laid down in — Bachan Singh, (1980) 2 SCC 684 and Machhi Singh, (1983) 3 SCC 470, pp. 471-72 and p. 489, para 38 [set out in para 26 in SCC], applied — Death sentence awarded by trial court restored

The victim, who was not six years old lost her life on account of bestial acts of the respondent who allegedly raped her and thereafter murdered her. The victim had gone to school and did not return at the usual time. On the next morning her dead body was found in a sugarcane field around 6.00 a.m. She was found lying in a dead condition and blood was oozing from her private parts and there were marks of pressing on her neck. PW 7, the doctor conducted the post-mortem around 2.00 p.m. on the same day and opined that death had occurred within the preceding 24 hours.

Three persons claimed to have seen the accused nearby the place of occurrence between 1.00 p.m. to 2.00 p.m. on the date of occurrence. Two of them, namely, PW 3 and PW 5 claimed to have seen the deceased being carried on a bicycle by the accused who was taking the bicycle with the deceased sitting on the handle-bar thereof. PW 2 stated that he had seen the accused in perplexed state around 2.00 p.m. near the place from where the dead body of the deceased was found. Investigation was undertaken. During such investigation, there was recovery of the accused's underwear as also the undergarment the deceased was wearing.

Allowing the appeals and restoring the death sentence awarded by the trial court,

Held :

Rape is one of the most depraved acts. The iniquitous, flagitious act becomes abominable when the victim is a child. The diabolic act reaches the lowest level of humanity when the rape is followed by brutal murder. The Supreme Court has no hesitation in holding that the case at hand falls in the rarest of rare category and death sentence awarded by the trial court was appropriate. The acquittal of the respondent-accused is clearly unsustainable and is set aside. Guidelines and tests for imposition of death sentence laid down in Bachan Singh, (1980) 2 SCC 684 and Machhi Singh, (1983) 3 SCC 470, pp. 471-72 and p. 489, para 38 [set out in para 26 in SCC], applied. (Paras 2, 24, 26 and 31). State of U.P. v. Satish, (2005) 3 SCC 114: 2005 SCC (Cri) 642: AIR 2005 SC 1000: 2005 Cri LJ 1428.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-2005]

Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681, applied

(2004) 1 All Cri R 760 (All), reversed

[Ed.: But in a similar situation (or worse, of abduction as well) other Benches of the Supreme Court in Surendra Pal Shivbalakpal v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 127 and State of Maharashtra v. Mansingh, (2005) 3 SCC 131, have felt defferently and awarded life imprisonment instead. On the other hand, earlier decisions of the Supreme Court in Laxman Naik v. State of Orissa, (1994) 3 SCC 381: 1994 SCC (Cri) 656; Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358; Kamta Tiwari v. State of M.P., (1999) 9 SCC 581 have held death sentence appropriate where rape and murder of a minor girl was involved. Besides deterrence, retribution still survives as an object of punishment [Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358 and Jacabo George (Dr.) v. State of Kerala, (1994) 3 SCC 430: 1994 SCC (Cri) 774] and one may consider looking at the situation intimately from the perspective of John Grisham: A Time to Kill.]

(iii) Commutation to life when warranted

[9561] — Ss. 375 and 300 — Rape and murder of a young girl aged 14 years — Testimony of eye-witnesses suffering from no infirmity — Conviction upheld — Death sentence not justified. Kumudi Lal v. State of U.P., (1999) 4 SCC 108: 1999 SCC (Cri) 491: AIR 1999 SC 1699: 1999 All LJ 1262.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1999]

[9562] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Death sentence — Mitigating circumstances — Rape of a child aged 4½ years and causing her death by inflicting cut injuries on her neck — Body put in a gunny bag with hands and legs tied and left in a pit near a stream — Accused-appellant then aged 24 years and alleged to be in drunken state — Even though he had been in custody no report regarding him made by probationary officer or jail authorities — Appellant having no previous criminal record — Held, it cannot be said that he would be a menace to the society in future — In the circumstances, death sentence commuted to sentence of life imprisonment — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302, 376(2)(f), 377, 363 & 201 (Paras 2 to 5). Rahul v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 10 SCC 322: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1516.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

[9563] — S. 376 — Rape resulting in death — If the rarest of rare cases — Death occurring due to brutal manner of rape (of 7/8-year-old child) — Death sentence if warranted — Brutal rape of a young child aged 7/8 years by the appellant aged 31 years leading to her death due to excessive bleeding — Culpability of the appellant in the heinous crime for all practical purposes established — Death sentence imposed by the trial court, confirmed by the High Court on reference — Death of the victim occurring because of excessive bleeding and not because of any specific overt act on the part of the appellant — Thus, intention of the appellant to kill the deceased not proved — Hence held, imposition of death sentence was not proper — Manner in which the deceased was raped may be brutal but it could have been a momentary lapse on the part of the appellant, seeing a lonely girl at a secluded place — No premeditation for commission of the offence proved — Offence, though, may look heinous, but under no circumstances, can it be said to be the rarest of rare cases — However, considering the brutality with which the offence was committed maximum sentence of RI for life imposed (Paras 21, 22 and 10). Amrit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 12 SCC 79: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 397: AIR 2007 SC 132: 2007 Cri LJ 298.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-2006]

[9564] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Death sentence — When not warranted — No rigid standards and norms can be laid down — Rape of child aged 1½ years by appellant aged 30 years — In the process of committing rape, injuries inflicted on liver, apart from other injuries which resulting in death of the child — Held, case does not fall within the rarest of the rare category — Hence death sentence not justified — CrPC, 1973, S. 354(3)

Regarding the question of laying down standards and norms restricting the area of imposition of death penalty, if by "laying down standards", it is meant that "murder" should be categorised beforehand according to the degrees of its culpability and all the aggravating and mitigating circumstances should be exhaustively and rigidly enumerated so as to exclude all free play of discretion, the argument merits rejection. Such standardisation is well-nigh impossible. Firstly, degree of culpability cannot be measured in each case; secondly, criminal cases cannot be categorised, there being infinite, unpredictable and unforeseeable variations; thirdly, on such categorisation, the sentencing process will cease to be judicial; and fourthly, such standardisation or sentencing discretion is a policy-matter belonging to the legislature beyond the court's function. Only broad guidelines consistent with the policy indicated by the legislature in Section 354(3) can be laid down. (Paras 10 and 12)

In the present case the crime committed is undoubtedly serious and heinous and the conduct of the appellant is reprehensible. It reveals a dirty and perverted mind of a human being who has no control over his carnal desires. But treating the case on the touchstone of the guidelines laid down in Bachan Singh, Machhi Singh and other decisions and balancing the aggravating and mitigating circumstances emerging from the evidence on record, the case cannot be appropriately called one of the rarest of the rare cases. The appellant cannot be said to be such a dangerous person that to spare his life will endanger the community. It cannot be held that the circumstances of the crime are such that there is no alternative but to impose death sentence even after according maximum weightage to the mitigating circumstances in favour of the offender. The case is one in which a humanist approach should be taken in the matter of awarding punishment. Accordingly, the capital sentence imposed against the appellant by the courts below is set aside. Instead the appellant shall suffer rigorous imprisonment for life. (Paras 25 and 26). Mohd. Chaman v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 2 SCC 28: 2001 SCC (Cri) 278: 2001 Cri LJ 725.

24.(d)(iii) Death Sentence - Commutation to life when warranted (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2000]

Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580: AIR 1980 SC 898; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681; Nirmal Singh v. State of Haryana, (1999) 3 SCC 670: 1999 SCC (Cri) 472; Anshad v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 4 SCC 381: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1204, relied on [9565] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder — Death sentence — Mitigating circumstances — Considering that (i) the accused was a young man, (ii) he was a student, (iii) there was no record of any previous heinous crime, and (iv) no evidence that he would be a danger to the society if death penalty is not awarded, held, the instant case did not fall in the category of rarest of the rare cases — Sentence of death altered to life imprisonment (Para 10). Amit v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 8 SCC 93: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1959: AIR 2003 SC 3131: 2003 Cri LJ 3873.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-2003]

[9566] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Rape and murder of a girl aged 7-8 years — Conviction — Punishment — Conviction of appellants on basis of circumstantial evidence — Sustainability of death sentence — Death sentence imposed by the Sessions Judge confirmed by the High Court — Held, if guilt is proved by circumstantial evidence, ordinarily, death penalty would not be awarded — Moreover, Appellant 1 showed his remorse and repentance and accepted his guilt even in his statement under S. 313 CrPC — Hence, instead of extreme death penalty, punishment of RI for life imposed — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 235(2) and 354(3) (Paras 57 to 65). Bishnu Prasad Sinha v. State of Assam, (2007) 11 SCC 467: AIR 2007 SC 848: (2007) 53 AIC 166 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1145.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2007]

State of Rajasthan v. Kheraj Ram, (2003) 8 SCC 224: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1979; State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559; Sahdeo v. State of U.P., (2004) 10 SCC 682: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1873; Raju v. State of Haryana, (2001) 9 SCC 50: 2002 SCC (Cri) 408; Amrit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 12 SCC 79: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 397; Sk. Ishaque v. State of Bihar, (1995) 3 SCC 392: 1995 SCC (Cri) 534; Ronny v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 3 SCC 625: 1998 SCC (Cri) 859; Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681, relied on

[9567] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Sentence — Rape and murder of 6 year old girl — On facts held, not a "rarest of the rare" case — Hence sentence of death commuted to that of life imprisonment

However, in the present case, there is nothing on record to indicate that the appellant was having any criminal record nor can it be said that he will be a grave danger to the society at large. It is true that his act is heinous and requires to be condemned but at the same time it cannot be said that it is the rarest of the rare case where the accused requires to be eliminated from the society. Hence, there is no justifiable reason to impose the death sentence. Therefore, the sentence is modified by commuting the sentence of death to an imprisonment for life. For the offence punishable under Section 376 IPC, he is sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 10 years. Both the sentences to run concurrently. (Paras 8 and 9). Bantu v. State of M.P., (2001) 9 SCC 615: AIR 2002 SC 70.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-2001]

[9568] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Sentence — Rape and murder of girl aged 11 years — Accused had no intention to commit murder of the deceased — When deceased said that she would disclose about the commission of rape to her house, accused on the spur of the moment without any premeditation caused injury on her head by hurling brick which resulted in her death — Accused having no criminal record nor can he be said to be a grave danger to the society at large — Held, it was not a rarest of the rare cases and hence imposition of death sentence not justified — Instead life imprisonment proper. Raju v. State of Haryana, (2001) 9 SCC 50: AIR 2001 SC 2043: 2001 Cri LJ 2580.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2001]

State of Haryana v. Raju, 2000 Cri LJ 2726 (P&H), partly affirmed

[9569] — Ss. 376, 302, 363 & 201 — Child rape — Sentence — Rape and murder of a 3 year old girl — Trial court imposing death sentence but High Court acquitting the accused-respondent — Held, though this case is perilously near the region of "rarest of the rare cases", but as the accused was once acquitted by High Court the extreme penalty need not be imposed, the lesser option being not unquestionably foreclosed — Hence death sentence altered to that of life imprisonment (Para 23) . State of Maharashtra v. Bharat Fakira Dhiwar, (2002) 1 SCC 622: 2002 SCC (Cri) 217: AIR 2002 SC 16: 2002 Cri LJ 218: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 7.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-2001]

[9570] — Ss. 376, 302, 363 and 366 — Rape and murder of child by watchman — Death sentence, held, not warranted in this case — Appellant-accused aged about 27 years was watchman of building where deceased was residing — Death sentence imposed by trial court affirmed by High Court — Difference of opinion amongst Judges of Division Bench of Supreme Court as regards award of capital punishment in Rameshbhai (1) case, (2009) 5 SCC 740 — Possibility of rehabilitation and reformation of young offender — Uncertainty due to nature of circumstantial evidence — Hence held, death sentence cannot be maintained — Considering gravity of offence, behaviour of appellant, and fear and concern such incident generate in ordered society, death sentence commuted to life imprisonment directing that life sentence would extend to full life of appellant subject to any remission/commutation at instance of Government for good and sufficient reasons — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 366, 368, 415, 432 and 433 — Constitution of India, Arts. 72 and 161 (Paras 9 to 12). Rameshbhai Chandubhai Rathod (2) v. State of Gujarat, (2011) 2 SCC 764.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: H.S. Bedi, P. Sathasivam and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2011]

Ramraj v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2010) 1 SCC 573: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 842; Mulla v. State of U.P., (2010) 3 SCC 508: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1150; Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681, relied on

Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358, distinguished on facts

Opinion of A.K. Ganguly, J. in Rameshbhai Chandubhai Rathod (1) v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 5 SCC 740: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 881, affirmed

[9571] — Ss. 376, 363 and 302 — Rape and murder of victim — If a "rarest of rare case" — Award of death penalty by trial court — Held, case not "rarest of the rare" — In facts and circumstances of case, death penalty not justified — Commuted to sentence of life imprisonment (Para 8). State of Maharashtra v. Mansingh, (2005) 3 SCC 131: 2005 SCC (Cri) 657.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-2004]

[9572] — S. 376(2) and 302 — Sentence — Commutation of death sentence — Accused raping and murdering minor after abducting her in middle of the night, while asleep, from her home (after having had an altercation with her mother, brother and uncle, the mother having refused him sexual favours) and throwing body into a pond — Appellant aged 36 years at time of occurrence, impecunious, a migrant labourer and there being no evidence that he had been involved in any other criminal case previously — Held, it could not be said that he would be a menace to society in future, and no materials had been placed on record to draw such a conclusion — This is not a "rarest of rare" case — Death penalty was not warranted — Hence death sentence commuted to life imprisonment

This is not a "rarest of rare case" in which death penalty should be imposed on the appellant. The appellant was aged 36 years at the time of the occurrence and there is no evidence that the appellant had been involved in any other criminal case previously and the appellant was a migrant labourer from U.P. and was living in impecunious circumstances and it cannot be said that he would be a menace to society in future and no materials have been placed on record to draw such a conclusion. The death penalty was not warranted in this case. The conviction of the appellant is confirmed on all the counts, but the sentence of death penalty imposed on him for the offence under Section 302 IPC is commuted to life imprisonment. (Para 13). Surendra Pal Shivbalakpal v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 127: 2005 SCC (Cri) 653: AIR 2004 SC 4862: 2004 Cri LJ 4642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2004]

[Ed.: It is noted in para 9 that the "previous conduct ... would prove that the appellant was prone to do such crime". In this regard see State of U.P. v. Satish, (2005) 3 SCC 114, above.]

[9573] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 302 and 201 r/w S. 34 — Gang rape and murder of child aged 7-8 years — Conviction justified — Sentence to be imposed — Appellants alleged to have lifted the little girl from the waiting room, where she was sleeping along with her parents and younger brother, committed rape and then murdered her — Appellants seen talking in a suspicious manner — No explanation offered by Appellant 2 as regards his stained undergarments/injuries on his face (and which he accepted) — Lock and key of waiting room always in possession of Appellant 1 (chowkidar) — Absence of Appellant 2 from the bus in question, his effort to sleep in another bus leaving his own bus, his absence for about 1 to 1½ hour, and change of his garments during that period, proved — Appellant 1 making voluntary judicial confession wherein the roles played by the appellants were explicitly detailed — Possibility of some other passenger committing the offence ruled out on basis of circumstantial evidence — Held, S. 30 Evidence Act, 1872, can be taken aid of to take into consideration the confessional effect of the statements made by Appellant 1 as against Appellant 2 for arriving at an opinion that by reason thereof involvement of both of them amply stood proved — Judicial confession of Appellant 1, statement of Appellant 2 in his examination under CrPC 1973, S. 313 and other circumstantial evidence, prove the guilt of the appellants beyond reasonable doubt — Death sentence reduced to rigorous life imprisonment

Appellants were charged with and convicted for commission of offences under Sections 376(2)(g), 302 and 201 read with Section 34 of the Penal Code, 1860 for rape and murder of one B (deceased) aged 7-8 years. Deceased along with her parents and younger brother was travelling to Dimapur (State of Nagaland) in a private transport service known as Network Travels from Dharmanagar (Tripura). They reached Guwahati at around 10.30 p.m. on 12-7-2002. There was no connecting bus to Dimapur at that time. Appellant 1 was a night chowkidar of the waiting room of the said Network Travels. He represented that they could stay there for the night and therefore should not have any apprehension in regard to their safety. Their luggage was carried by Appellant 1 to the waiting room. The waiting room had two openings. It was covered by grills. Only the front gate was open, which was kept under lock and key, the key whereof was with Appellant 1. PW 23 (father of the deceased) and the two children slept. However, PW 22 (mother of the deceased) stayed awake. Appellant 1 insisted to her repeatedly that she should go to sleep stating that as the waiting room would be locked, there was nothing for her to worry about. As she had not been sleeping, Appellant 1, allegedly, scolded her to do so. At that time, a bus bearing No. AS 25C 1476 arrived at the said bus-stop. P, Appellant 2 was the "handyman" of the said bus. While the manager, driver and the conductor slept in the said bus, he did not. He was seen talking with Appellant 1.

PW 22 slept for a while and got up when her son cried out. She did not find B and raised hue and cry. They requested Appellant 1 to open the gates of the waiting room. He showed his reluctance at the first instance. He was thereafter told about the missing of the girl. On being so informed, he opined that she might be somewhere else within the room. A search was carried out in the three buses, which were at the bus-stop belonging to the travel agency. Nearabout places as also the railway station were searched. The bathroom situated in the said premises was also searched.

The dead body of B was found in a septic tank on 14-7-2000. FIR was lodged wherein apart from Appellant 1, suspicion was raised about the involvement of driver, PW 26, conductor, PW 25 and the handyman, P Appellant 2 herein of the bus bearing No. AS 25C 1476. The said bus had already left for its destination at about 6.30 in the morning. Even prior thereto, PW 2 was persuaded that the said bus be permitted to leave early for Jorhat, which was declined.

During the course of investigation, Appellant 1 made a confessional statement before the Magistrate under Section 164 CrPC. He gave a vivid description as to how the offence was committed by him and Appellant 2. On basis of circumstantial evidence and judicial confession of Appellant 1, appellants were convicted and sentenced to death by the trial court. Their appeal was dismissed by the High Court. Hence, the present appeal. Bishnu Prasad Sinha v. State of Assam, (2007) 11 SCC 467: AIR 2007 SC 848: (2007) 53 AIC 166 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1145.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2007]

(e) Fine and Imprisonment in default

[9574] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Rape — Quantum of fine — Financial constraints of the appellant-accused — Relief — Rape of a girl less than twelve years — For offence under S. 376, punishment of RI for ten years and fine of Rs 50,000 imposed, while for conviction under S. 366 RI for five years and fine of Rs 5000 imposed — Supreme Court considering the financial status of the appellant and his inability to pay the imposed fine, reducing the same to Rs 5000 for offence under S. 376 and to Rs 500 for offence under S. 366, with default stipulation — Further, suo motu, State Govt. directed to pay Rs 20,000 as ex gratia amount to the mother of the victim (since married), and not to the victim herself, in her own interest, considering the facts as disclosed in the affidavit filed by the Additional Superintendent of Police (Paras 2, 4 and 5). Shyama v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 13 SCC 544.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2004]

(f) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos

Synopsis

(i) Generally 711
(ii) Adequate and Special reasons 711
  (1) Generally 711
  (2) Reasons that may be considered special and adequate 718
(iii) Instances 727

(i) Generally

See also 'C.24.(f)(ii)(1) Adequate and Special reasons — Generally', below

[9575] — S. 376(2) proviso — Mode of construction — Held, it must be considered with relation to the principal matter to which it stands as a proviso, particularly in case of such penal provisions as involved herein [S. 376(2)(f) IPC] (Para 13). Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 1267: 2006 Cri LJ 1679: (2006) 1 KLT 1006.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2006]

(ii) Adequate and Special reasons

(1) Generally

See also C.24.(f)(i) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos — Generally', above, and

'C.24.(f)(ii)(2) Adequate and Special reasons — Reasons that may be considered special and adequate', and

'C.24.(g) Principles for sentencing', below

[9576] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Sentence — Reduction of, to less than the prescribed minimum — Permissibility — Held, on facts, not justified — Ingredients of rape, effect on psyche of victim raped, condition precedent when court can exercise the discretion of reducing sentence under Ss. 376(1) and (2), object and function of criminal law, need for imposition of appropriate sentence and duty and role of courts in this regard, effect on justice system and society on awarding of inadequate sentence, extent of adherence to principle of proportionality while sentencing, requirement for delicately balancing the aggravating and mitigating factors and circumstances in which crime committed, restated — High Court while upholding conviction of respondent-accused under S. 376, reducing sentence to the period already undergone on ground that accused was an illiterate labourer and belonged to ST — Sustainability — Appellant State submitting that reasons indicated did not justify reduction — Tenability — Reiterated, in order to exercise the discretion of reducing sentence under Ss. 376(1) and (2), statutory requirement is that court has to record "adequate and special reasons" in the judgment and not fanciful reasons, which would permit court to impose sentence less than the prescribed minimum — Reason has not only to be adequate but also special — What is adequate and special would depend upon several factors and no straitjacket formula can be indicated — What is applicable to trial courts regarding recording reasons for a departure from minimum sentence is equally applicable to High Court — Therefore, relying on position of law, held, order of High Court was clearly indefensible, hence, set aside — Order of trial court, restored (Paras 5 and 6). State of M.P. v. Basodi, (2009) 12 SCC 318.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, D.K. Jain and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2009]

State of M.P. v. Babbu Barkare, (2005) 5 SCC 413: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1335; State of M.P. v. Babulal, (2008) 1 SCC 234: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 188, followed

Stephen's Criminal Law, 9th Edn., p. 262; Encyclopaedia of Crime and Justice, Vol. 4, p. 1356; Halsbury's Statutes of England and Wales, 4th Edn., Vol. 12; Friedman: Law in Changing Society, cited

[9577] — S. 376 — Imposition of a lesser sentence — Reasons — Court may for adequate and special reasons, impose a lesser sentence — Discretion exercised by a superior court, should not be lightly interfered with — Several factors had been taken into account while imposing a lesser sentence — Held, it would be improper to interfere with High Court's discretion on the quantum of sentence except in extraordinary circumstances — No such circumstances found (Para 16). National Commission For Women v. State of Delhi, (2010) 12 SCC 599.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-2010]

[9578] — S. 376 — Less than minimum statutory sentence — In absence of exceptional circumstances, held, could not be awarded. State of Maharashtra v. Rajendra Jawanmal Gandhi, (1997) 8 SCC 386: AIR 1997 SC 3986.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1997]

[9579] — S. 376 — Rape — Sentence — Discretion of court to award a sentence lesser than the prescribed minimum — Exercise of — Held, cannot be exercised without recording "adequate and special reasons" in respect thereof — The reason

24.(f)(ii)(1) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos - Adequate and Special reasons - Generally (contd.)

has not only to be adequate but also special — What is adequate and special would depend upon several factors — No straitjacket formula can be indicated in this regard — On facts, the only reason indicated by the High Court that the accused belonged to rural areas, held, neither adequate nor special — Hence, order of High Court reducing sentence from seven years' RI to period already undergone i.e. 11 months was clearly unsustainable — Matter remitted to High Court for hearing on question relating to sentence

Both in cases of conviction under sub-sections (1) and (2) of Section 376 IPC the court has the discretion to impose a sentence of imprisonment less than the prescribed minimum for "adequate and special reasons". If the court does not mention such reasons in the judgment there is no scope for awarding a sentence lesser than the prescribed minimum. (Para 20)

Thus, in order to exercise the discretion of reducing the sentence the statutory requirement is that the court has to record "adequate and special reasons" in the judgment and not fanciful reasons which would permit the court to impose a sentence less than the prescribed minimum. The reason has not only to be adequate but also special. What is adequate and special would depend upon several factors and no straitjacket formula can be indicated. What is applicable to trial courts regarding recording reasons for a departure from minimum sentence is equally applicable to the High Court. The only reason indicated by the High Court is that the accused belonged to rural areas. The same can by no stretch of imagination be considered either adequate or special. The requirement in law is cumulative. (Para 21)

The matter is remitted to the High Court to hear the matter only relating to sentence. The High Court shall consider the factors to be placed for consideration and decide the question of sentence keeping in view the principles indicated herein. (Para 23). State of M.P. v. Babbu Barkare, (2005) 5 SCC 413: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1335: AIR 2005 SC 2846: 2005 Cri LJ 3117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2005]

[Ed.: See in this regard (2005) 8 SCC 188.]

[9580] — S. 376 — Reduction of sentence below statutory minimum prescribed under, without giving of "adequate and special reasons" — Impermissibility — High Court while upholding conviction under S. 376, reducing minimum statutory sentence of seven years' RI imposed by trial court to period already undergone, of one year and five months — Impermissibility — Held, Single Judge by cryptic order has reduced the sentence to period already undergone — This order is against the statute, where under S. 376 minimum punishment prescribed is not less than seven years — Matter remanded to High Court for fresh consideration. State of M.P. v. Nandu, (2006) 9 SCC 573: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 111.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2006]

[Ed.: See also State of M.P. v. Bala, (2005) 8 SCC 1 and the string of cases reported after it.]

[9581] — S. 376 proviso — Rape — Adequate and special reasons for imposing sentence less than minimum prescribed (seven years) — Held, the reasons must be adequate as well as special; they cannot be adequate or special disjunctively — A comprehensive list of such reasons cannot be made as they may differ from case to case — Reasons which are general or common to many cases do not come within scope of "special reasons" — Rape of twelve-year-old girl — Accused aged 25 at time of occurrence — High Court reversing acquittal and convicting him, but using discretion under proviso and not awarding minimum seven-year sentence (imposing three years' RI and fine of Rs 10,000 instead) — Held, High Court rightly convicted the accused, but its reasons that since the offence had taken place ten years ago, the accused might have by then "settled in life" did not amount to "adequate and special" reasons under the proviso — Sentence enhanced to seven years' imprisonment

A young girl, S, found to be aged between 12 and 13 by the Sessions Judge and a student of class IV, on 21-5-1989 finished her evening meal and then left her home with the intention of going to her aunt's house, a short distance away. S, daughter of a daily-wage labourer, unfortunately succumbed to the lure of TV and entered the home of the accused to watch a film. While there, the mother of the accused asked S to bring some cooking utensils from the flour mill, adjacent to the house. The mill was run by the accused, aged 25. When S returned with the utensils, the accused followed her to the kitchen, lifted her up and took her back to the flour mill; he dragged her to a side room and raped her. S finally escaped and went to her aunt's home and stayed the night there. S returned home the next morning. Her mother noticed bloodstains on her clothes and asked what had happened. The girl told her. That day the father of S was out at work. The next day, 23-5-1989, the parents and S went to the police station to lodge a complaint. S was medically examined on the same day; the medical report clearly indicated serious injuries to S's genitalia and a swab test showed spermatozoa and semen. The examining doctor testified that the injuries were probably sustained 24-48 hours before the examination.

The Sessions Judge, ultimately acquitted the accused. In appeal, the High Court reversed the acquittal and convicted him under Section 376 IPC. Using its discretion under the proviso, however, the High Court did not impose the minimum seven-year sentence and instead awarded three years' RI and a fine of Rs 10,000. The High Court found that since the offence took place ten years ago, the accused "might have settled in life". Dismissing the accused's appeal against conviction and allowing the State's appeal on the question of sentence,

Held:

As Parliament has disfavoured the sentence to plummet below the minimum limit prescribed, it used the expression "shall not be less than" which is peremptory in tone. The court has, normally, no discretion to award a sentence less than the said minimum. Nonetheless Parliament was not oblivious of certain very exceptional situations and hence to meet such extremely rare contingencies it made a departure from the said strict rule by conferring a discretion on the court subject to two conditions. One is that there should be "adequate and special reasons", and the other is that such reasons should be mentioned in the judgment. (Para 21)

The expression "adequate and special reasons" indicates that it is not enough to have special reasons, nor adequate reasons disjunctively. There should be a conjunction of both for enabling the court to invoke the discretion. Reasons which are general or common in many cases cannot be regarded as special reasons. What the Division Bench of the High Court mentioned (i.e. occurrence took place 10 years ago and the accused might have settled in life) are not special to the accused in this case or to the situations in this case. Such reasons can be noticed in many other cases and hence they cannot be regarded as special reasons. No catalogue can be prescribed for adequacy of reasons nor instances can be cited regarding special reasons, as they may differ from case to case. (Para 22)

The long time lag which elapsed subsequent to the date of offence and the fact that the prosecutrix got married and is well settled in life and that she is now mother of children — all these things which happened during the intervening period, may be factors for consideration by the executive or constitutional authorities if they have to decide whether remission of the sentence can be allowed to the accused. It is made clear that the enhanced sentenced has been imposed on the accused without prejudice to any motion he may make for such remission of the sentence before the authorities concerned. (Para 25). Kamal Kishore v. State of H.P., (2000) 4 SCC 502: 2000 SCC (Cri) 833: AIR 2000 SC 1920: 2000 Cri LJ 2292.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, Doraiswamy Raju and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-2000]

State of Karnataka v. Krishnappa, (2000) 4 SCC 75, followed

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, overruled by implication

[9582] — Ss. 376(1) and 375 (as subs. by Act 43 of 1983) — Sentence — Awarding of sentence less than the minimum prescribed under S. 376(1) — Condition precedent for, held, is recording of reasons — Moreover, such reasons must be both, "adequate" and "special" — Further held, what is "adequate" and "special" would depend on various factors and no straitjacket formula can be laid down for universal application — The mere facts that the accused was an illiterate agriculturist and that a fine of Rs 2500 had been imposed on him could neither be said to be "special" nor "adequate" — High Court erred in taking the said facts into consideration to reduce the minimum statutory sentence awarded by the trial court — Hence, order of trial court restored albeit subject to set-off of the period of sentence already undergone

The proviso to Section 376(1) IPC enjoins the court if it imposes less than the minimum sentence of seven years' rigorous imprisonment on an offender of rape to record "adequate and special reasons" in the judgment. Recording of reasons is, therefore, sine qua non or condition precedent for imposing sentence less than the minimum required by law. Moreover, such reasons must be both (i) "adequate" and (ii) "special". What is "adequate" and "special" would depend upon several factors and no straitjacket formula can be laid down as a rule of law of universal application. (Para 33)

The so-called reasons recorded in the present case by the High Court that: (i) the respondent was an "illiterate agriculturist from rural area" and (ii) fine of Rs 2500 was imposed on him can neither be said to be "special" nor "adequate". On the facts and in the circumstances of the case, the trial court was wholly right and fully justified in awarding rigorous imprisonment for seven years as envisaged by Section 376(1) IPC and there was no earthly reason to interfere with the said order by the High Court. However, the period of sentence already undergone by the respondent-accused will be given set-off. (Paras 34 to 36). State of M.P. v. Babulal, (2008) 1 SCC 234: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2008 SC 582: 2008 Cri LJ 714.

24.(f)(ii)(1) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos - Adequate and Special reasons - Generally (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2007]

The 84th Report of the Law Commission, referred to [9583] — Ss. 376(1) proviso and 375 — Rape — Sentence — "Adequate and special reasons" — Recording of — Necessity — High Court without indicating any reasons reducing the sentence passed against respondent-accused to 5 years' RI from 10 years as imposed by trial court — Minimum statutory sentence prescribed is 7 years unless special and adequate reasons are recorded for imposing lesser punishment — Judgment of High Court therefore set aside and 7 years' RI imposed

The requirement in law as to adequate and special reasons is cumulative. The High Court has not recorded any reason, much less any adequate and special reasons for reducing the sentence. The High Court was, therefore, not justified in reducing the sentence below the prescribed minimum. (Para 11). State of Rajasthan v. Gajendra Singh, (2008) 12 SCC 720.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2008]

Stephen's Criminal Law, 9th Edn., p. 262; Encyclopaedia of Crime and Justice, Vol. 4, p. 1356; Halsbury's Statutes of England and Wales, 4th Edn., Vol. 12; Friedman: Law in Changing Society; Hale PC 628, cited

[9584] — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos — Award of sentence below the statutory minimum — Need for recording "adequate and special reasons" — Nature of the requirement — "Adequate and special reasons" — What are — Held, said requirement of law is cumulative in that the reasons must not only be adequate but also special — What is adequate and special would depend upon several factors and no straitjacket formula can be laid down — If court does not mention such reasons in the judgment there is no scope for awarding a sentence lesser than the prescribed minimum — In present case accused convicted of raping six-year-old girl, under S. 376(2)(f) — Held, reasons given by High Court for reducing sentence from statutory minimum of 10 years' RI to five years' RI, that accused was of young age and belonged to a Scheduled Tribe, can by no stretch of imagination be considered adequate or special — Sentence imposed by trial court of 10 years' RI, restored — Approach of High Court deprecated

A six-year-old child was subjected to sexual abuse by the respondent. The trial court found the respondent guilty of the offence punishable under Section 372(2)(f) IPC. The respondent was sentenced to undergo 10 years' RI with a fine of Rs 500 with default stipulation. In the appeal filed before the High Court the accused did not question the conviction, but prayed for reduction in sentence. The High Court reduced the sentence for the offence punishable under Section 376(2)(f) IPC to 5 years, while maintaining the sentence in respect of other offences. The only ground indicated by the High Court to reduce the sentence was the young age of the accused and he being a member of the Scheduled Tribe.

The questions that arose before the Supreme Court were the proper sentence and acceptability of reasons which weighed with the High Court for reducing the sentence.

Allowing the appeal and restoring the minimum mandatory statutory sentence imposed by the trial court, the Supreme Court

Held :

Both, in cases of sub-sections (1) and (2) of Section 376 the court has the discretion to impose a sentence of imprisonment less than the prescribed minimum for "adequate and special reasons". If the court does not mention such reasons in the judgment there is no scope for awarding a sentence lesser than the prescribed minimum. In order to exercise the discretion of reducing the sentence, the statutory requirement is that the court has to record "adequate and special reasons" in the judgment and not fanciful reasons which would permit the court to impose a sentence less than the prescribed minimum. The reason has not only to be adequate but also special. What is adequate and special would depend upon several factors and no straitjacket formula can be indicated. (Paras 17 and 18)

What is applicable to the trial courts regarding recording reasons for a departure from minimum sentence is equally applicable to the High Court. The only reason indicated by the High Court in the present case is the young age of the accused and the fact that he belongs to a Scheduled Tribe. The same can by no stretch of imagination be considered either adequate or special. The requirement in law is cumulative. (Para 18)

It is to be noted that the victim in the instant case is a child who was about 6 years of age at the time of commission of offence. Section 376(2) IPC provides for a more stringent punishment when the victim is under 12 years of age. In the instant case, the High Court was clearly in error in reducing the sentence without recording any adequate and special reason in imposing a lesser sentence. (Paras 19 and 20). State of M.P. v. Santosh Kumar, (2006) 6 SCC 1: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 2648.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-7-2006]

Mahesh v. State of M.P., (1987) 3 SCC 80: 1987 SCC (Cri) 379; Sevaka Perumal v. State of T.N., (1991) 3 SCC 471: 1991 SCC (Cri) 724; Dennis Councle McGautha v. State of California, 402 US 183: 28 L Ed 2d 711 (1971); Jashubha Bharatsinh Gohil v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 4 SCC 353: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1193; Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220: 1994 SCC (Cri) 358; Ravji v. State of Rajasthan, (1996) 2 SCC 175: 1996 SCC (Cri) 225; State of M.P. v. Babbu Barkare, (2005) 5 SCC 413: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1335, followed

[Ed.: See also State of M.P. v. Bala, (2005) 8 SCC 1 and the string of cases reported after it.]

[9585] — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos — Reduction of sentence below the statutory minimum — Need for recording "adequate and special reasons" — Applicability to High Court — Held, what is applicable to trial courts regarding recording of reasons for a departure from minimum statutory sentence is equally applicable to High Court in reducing the sentence in appeal — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 374(2) and 386

What is applicable to the trial courts regarding recording reasons for a departure from minimum sentence is equally applicable to the High Court. The only reason indicated by the High Court in the present case is the young age of the accused and the fact that he belongs to a Scheduled Tribe. The same can by no stretch of imagination be considered either adequate or special. The requirement in law is cumulative. (Para 18). State of M.P. v. Santosh Kumar, (2006) 6 SCC 1: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 2648.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-7-2006]

[9586] — Ss. 376(1) proviso & (2) proviso — Discretion to impose sentence less than prescribed minimum under — Extent — Requirement of mentioning of "adequate and special reasons" — Mandatory nature of — Applicability to High Courts — Held, if court does not mention "adequate and special reasons" for prescribing a sentence less than the statutory minimum prescribed in Ss. 376(1) and (2), there is no scope for awarding such a sentence — Requirement is to record "adequate and special reasons", not fanciful reasons — Reason has not only to be adequate, but also special, the requirement being cumulative in nature — What is adequate and special would depend upon several factors and no straitjacket formula can be indicated — These principles are equally applicable to High Courts — Only reasons indicated by High Court for reducing the sentence of imprisonment of seven years' RI imposed by trial court under S. 376(1), to period already undergone (three years and six months in case of one of the co-accused, and two months in case of the other) is the lapse of time and that accused belonged to rural areas — The same can by no stretch of imagination be considered either adequate or special — Hence sentences restored to those imposed by trial court (Paras 19 to 21). State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559: AIR 2005 SC 682: 2005 Cri LJ 913.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2005]

Applied in State of Punjab v. Rakesh Kumar, (2008) 12 SCC 33; State of Rajasthan v. Gajendra Singh, (2008) 12 SCC 720

[9587] — Ss. 376(1) and (2) provisos thereto — Rape — Sentence — Heinousness of crime — Minimum sentence to be imposed under Ss. 376(1) and (2) — Power under said provisos when to be exercised — Held, the minimum sentence under S. 376(1) is seven years' RI and under S. 376(2) is ten years' RI — It cannot be reduced below those periods without assigning of "adequate and special reasons", as provided for in the provisos to Ss. 376(1) and (2) — Hence, while upholding the conviction under either S. 376(1) or (2), High Court was wholly unjustified in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, which in every case was less than five years — Matters remanded to High Court for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Makhmal Khan, (2005) 8 SCC 8: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1954: 2005 Cri LJ 4363.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-2005]

[9588] — S. 376(2) and proviso thereto — Rape — Heinousness of crime — Minimum sentence to be imposed under S. 376(2) — Power under said proviso when to be exercised — Held (per curiam), the minimum sentence under S. 376(2) is ten years' RI — It cannot be reduced below that period without assigning of "adequate and special reasons", as provided for in S. 376(2) proviso — Hence, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(2)(g), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of barely nine-and-a-half months — Held (per Balasubramanyan, J.), to view rape, once it is proved, lightly, is itself an affront to society — Though the award of maximum punishment may depend on circumstances of the case, award of the minimum punishment, generally, is imperative — Power under provisos to Ss. 376(1) & (2) is not to be used indiscriminately or routinely and is to be used sparingly and only in cases where special facts and circumstances justify reduction — The reasons must be relevant to exercise of such discretion vested in the court and must be set out clearly and cogently — Mere existence of discretion by itself does not justify its exercise — Long pendency of criminal trial or offer of rapist to marry the victim or age of offender are not relevant or adequate reasons — Plight of victim to be kept in mind by courts while imposing sentence under S. 376

24.(f)(ii)(1) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos - Adequate and Special reasons - Generally (contd.)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Per G.P. Mathur, J. (for Lahoti, C.J. and himself)

In the category of cases covered under Section 376(2), the sentence cannot be less than 10 years but which may be for life and shall also be liable to fine. Section 376(2) proviso empowers the court to award a sentence of less than 10 years for adequate and special reasons to be mentioned in the judgment. (Para 6)

The High Court while upholding the conviction of the accused under Section 376(2)(g) reduced the sentence to the period already undergone which is nearly 9½ months. The High Court in the impugned order has awarded a sentence which is not only grossly inadequate but is also contrary to the express provision of law. The High Court has not assigned any satisfactory reason much less adequate and special reasons for reducing the sentence to a term which is far below the prescribed minimum. Therefore, the sentence awarded by the High Court is clearly illegal. (Paras 4 and 6)

That apart, the High Court has written a very short and cryptic judgment. To say the least, the appeal has been disposed of in a most unsatisfactory manner exhibiting complete non-application of mind. There is absolutely no consideration of the evidence adduced by the parties. (Para 7)

Since the judgment of the High Court is not in accordance with law, the same is set aside and the matter is remitted back to the High Court for a fresh consideration of the appeal. (Para 9)

Per P.K. Balasubramanyan, J. (concurring)

The punishments prescribed by the Penal Code reflect the legislative recognition of the social needs, the gravity of the offence concerned, its impact on the society and what the legislature considers as a punishment suitable for the particular offence. It is necessary for the courts to imbibe that legislative wisdom and to respect it. (Para 12)

The rationale for advocating the award of a punishment commensurate with the gravity of the offence and its impact on society, is to ensure that a civilised society does not revert to the days of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth". Not awarding a just punishment might provoke the victim or its relatives to retaliate in kind and that is what exactly is sought to be prevented by the criminal justice system we have adopted. Even in the time of Kautilya, the need for awarding just punishment was recognised. According to Kautilya, "Whoever imposes severe punishment becomes repulsive to people, while he who awards mild punishment becomes contemptible. The ruler just with the rod is honoured. When deserved punishment is given, it endows the subjects with spiritual good, material well-being and pleasures of the senses." This philosophy is woven into our statute and our jurisprudence and it is the duty of those who administer the law to bear this in mind. (Paras 13 and 14)

The punishment must fit the crime and it is the duty of the court to impose a proper punishment depending on the degree of criminality and desirability for imposing such punishment. However, the awarding of inadequate punishments by courts is becoming disturbingly frequent. (Paras 15 and 10)

The crime here is rape. It is a particularly heinous crime, a crime against society, a crime against human dignity, one that reduces a man to an animal. The penal statute has prescribed a maximum and a minimum punishment for an offence under Section 376 IPC. To view such an offence once it is proved, lightly, is itself an affront to society. Though the award of maximum punishment may depend on the circumstances of the case, the award of the minimum punishment, generally, is imperative. (Para 11)

The provisos to Sections 376(1) and 376(2) IPC give the power to the court to award a sentence lesser than the minimum for adequate and special reasons. The power under the proviso is not to be used indiscriminately or routinely. It is to be used sparingly and only in cases where special facts and circumstances justify a reduction. The reasons must be relevant to the exercise of such discretion vested in the court. The reasons must be set out clearly and cogently. The mere existence of a discretion by itself does not justify its exercise. The long pendency of the criminal trial or the offer of the rapist to marry the victim are not relevant reasons. Nor is the age of the offender by itself an adequate reason. (Para 11)

It is true that reformation as a theory of punishment is in fashion but under the guise of applying such theory, the courts cannot forget their duty to society and to the victim. The court has to consider the plight of the victim in a case involving rape and the social stigma that may follow the victim to the grave and which in most cases, practically ruins all prospects of a normal life for the victim. A court cannot afford to forget these aspects while imposing a punishment on the aggressor. The court has to do justice to society and to the victim on the one hand and to the offender on the other. The proper balance must be taken to have been struck by the legislature. Hence, the legislative wisdom reflected by the statute has to be respected by the court and the permitted departure therefrom made only for compelling and convincing reasons. (Para 17). State of M.P. v. Bala, (2005) 8 SCC 1: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1947: AIR 2005 SC 3567: 2005 Cri LJ 4371.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J.[1] and G.P. Mathur[1] and P.K. Balasubramanyan[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 3-10-2005]

Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641; Earabhadrappa v. State of Karnataka, (1983) 2 SCC 330: 1983 SCC (Cri) 447; Rajendra Prasad v. State of U.P., (1979) 3 SCC 646: 1979 SCC (Cri) 749; State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559; V.K. Gupta: Kautilyan Jurisprudence under the head "Nature and Scope of Punishment", relied on

[9589] — Ss. 376(2) proviso & 376(2)(f) — Applicability of proviso to S. 376(2) — Rape on child below 12 years of age — Imposition of sentence below the prescribed minimum of 10 years — Impermissibility — Held, normal sentence in such case is not less than 10 years — Courts are obliged to respect the legislative mandate in this regard — Recourse to the aforesaid proviso can be had only for "special and adequate reasons" and not in a casual manner — Whether there exist any "special and adequate reasons" would depend upon a variety of factors and the peculiar facts and circumstances of each case — No hard-and-fast rule of universal application can be laid down in this respect

The legislative mandate to impose a sentence, for the offence of rape on a girl under 12 years of age, for a term which shall not be less than 10 years, but which may extend to life and also to fine reflects the intent of stringency in sentence. The proviso to Section 376(2) IPC, of course, lays down that the court may, for adequate and special reasons to be mentioned in the judgment, impose sentence of imprisonment of either description for a term of less than 10 years. Thus, the normal sentence in a case where rape is committed on a child below 12 years of age, is not less than 10 years' RI, though in exceptional cases "for special and adequate reasons" sentence of less than 10 years' RI can also be awarded. It is a fundamental rule of construction that a proviso must be considered with relation to the principal matter to which it stands as a proviso particularly in such like penal provisions. The courts are obliged to respect the legislative mandate in the matter of awarding of sentence in all such cases. Recourse to the proviso can be had only for "special and adequate reasons" and not in a casual manner. Whether there exist any "special and adequate reasons" would depend upon a variety of factors and the peculiar facts and circumstances of each case. No hard and fast rule can be laid down in that behalf of universal application. (Para 13). Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 1267: 2006 Cri LJ 1679: (2006) 1 KLT 1006.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2006]

[Ed.: See also State of M.P. v. Bala, (2005) 8 SCC 1, State of M.P. v. Makhmal Khan, (2005) 8 SCC 8, State of M.P. v. Sheshrao, (2005) 8 SCC 11(1); State of M.P. v. Rajesh, (2005) 8 SCC 11(2); State of M.P. v. Veerendra Singh, (2005) 8 SCC 11(3); State of M.P. v. Dayanand Dohar, (2005) 8 SCC 12(1); State of M.P. v. Gauri Shankar, (2005) 8 SCC 12(2); State of M.P. v. Govind, (2005) 8 SCC 12(3); State of M.P. v. Parasram, (2005) 8 SCC 13(1); State of M.P. v. Mahesh Bhoomia, (2005) 8 SCC 13(2); State of M.P. v. Mulli, (2005) 8 SCC 13(3); State of M.P. v. Rakesh, (2005) 8 SCC 13(4); State of M.P. v. Killu, (2005) 8 SCC 14(1); State of M.P. v. Vilru, (2005) 8 SCC 14(2).]

[9590] — Ss. 376(2)(f) — Rape — Sentence — Reduction of — Sustainability — In the present case, High Court reducing custodial sentence of respondent to 3½ years instead of 7 years as was imposed by trial court — Admittedly, the victim was 10 years of age at the time of commission of offence — Hence, present case was covered by S. 376(2)(f) IPC — Minimum punishment under S. 376(2)(f) is 10 years, provided that for "adequate and special reasons" mentioned in the judgment a sentence of less then 10 years can be imposed — Held, on facts, in the absence of any reason which could have been treated as "special and adequate reason", reduction of sentence by High Court, unsustainable —

24.(f)(ii)(2) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos - Adequate and Special reasons - Reasons that may be considered special and adequate

Trial court should have imposed sentence of 10 years in terms of S. 376(2)(f) — But, as the State had also not questioned the inadequacy of sentence on that ground, the sentence of 7 years as imposed by the trial court is restored — High Court's order reducing the sentence, set aside

It is to be noted that in sub-section (2) of Section 376 IPC more stringent punishment can be awarded taking into account the special features indicated in the said sub-section. The present case is covered by Section 376(2)(f) IPC i.e. when rape is committed on a woman when she is under 12 years of age. Admittedly, in the case at hand the victim was 10 years of age at the time of commission of offence. Unfortunately this aspect appears to have been lost sight of by both the trial court and the High Court and the State has also not questioned the inadequacy of sentence on that ground. (Paras 7 and 5)

The minimum punishment under Section 376(2) IPC is 10 years but the proviso provides that for "adequate and special reasons" mentioned in the judgment a sentence of less then 10 years can be imposed. But, considering the legal position and in the absence of any reason which could have been treated as "special and adequate reason" reduction of sentence as done by the High Court is clearly unsustainable. The trial court should have imposed sentence of 10 years in terms of Section 376(2)(f) IPC. But the State has not questioned the sentence as imposed; the sentence as imposed by the trial court is restored. The High Court's order reducing the sentence is set aside. (Paras 5 and 10). State of Karnataka v. Raju, (2007) 11 SCC 490: AIR 2007 SC 3225: (2007) 58 AIC 39 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 4700.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2007]

Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1; Shailesh Jasvantbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 2 SCC 359: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 499, relied on

(2) Reasons that may be considered special and adequate

See also C.24.(f)(ii)(1) Adequate and Special reasons — Generally', above

[9591] — S. 375 Fifthly — Conviction under, upheld in view of testimony of prosecutrix which stood corroborated by that of her father as well as of the doctor who had examined her — That after the occurrence the prosecutrix had been living in the house of the accused and had given birth to a child, if established, could be taken into account in fixing quantum of punishment — But in the absence of any evidence in that regard, sentence of five years' RI upheld. Bishnudayal v. State of Bihar, 1980 Supp SCC 358: 1981 SCC (Cri) 283: AIR 1981 SC 39: 1980 Cri LJ 1297.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-1980]

[9592] — S. 376 — Child rape — Sentence — Mitigating factors if applicable — Rape on child aged 8 years by accused-respondent then aged 18 years — Sentence of 7 years' RI imposed by trial court — High Court erroneously acquitting the accused — 13 years elapsed and accused already undergone 3 years' sentence — On the basis of these facts, plea taken on behalf of the accused that the Court should take a sympathetic view — Held, plea cannot be accepted — Accused should undergo remaining part of the sentence

It is not possible to accept the contention on behalf of the respondent that the incident took place about 13 years back and by now the accused has matured and would be around 31 years of age and having already undergone nearly three years of sentence, the same may be treated by the Supreme Court as sufficient punishment to him and, therefore, taking a sympathetic view, the sentence already undergone be imposed. The trial court imposed on the respondent a sentence of seven years' rigorous imprisonment besides fine. Having played with the life of a child, the respondent does not deserve any leniency and for him sympathy on the ground sought for will be wholly uncalled for. The respondent deserves to undergo the remaining part of the sentence awarded by the trial court. (Para 20). State of Rajasthan v. Om Prakash, (2002) 5 SCC 745: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1210: AIR 2002 SC 2235: 2002 Cri LJ 2951.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2002]

[9593] — S. 376 — Four years' RI for raping cousin's wife — Accused of 22 years of age with no past criminal antecedent — Victim and her family forgiving the accused — Taking an overall view of the familial and criminal factors involved, the societal proneness to sex, people's abhorrence of released prisoners and the fact that a long incarceration would make the young accused a hardened criminal, sentence reduced to 2 years' RI — Within limits of Prisons Act and Rules, authorities directed to release the accused on parole, furlough, etc. so as to keep alive the family ties for the purpose of his reform. Phul Singh v. State of Haryana, (1979) 4 SCC 413: 1980 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1980 SC 249: 1980 Cri LJ 8.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-1979]

Held to be not good law in State of M.P. v. Balu, (2005) 1 SCC 108

[9594] — S. 376 — Rape — Sentence — Rape of a young girl of 13 years by holding out threats — Marriage of the accused and long lapse of time — Held, accused deserves no leniency in the matter of sentence. State of Haryana v. Jang Bahadur, 1998 SCC (Cri) 693.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-1997]

[9595] — S. 376 — Rape of fourteen-year-old, taking advantage of her being alone at home — High Court reducing sentence of 10 years' RI imposed by trial court to period already undergone, about 5 years and 4 months, on grounds that accused was an illiterate labourer and was only twenty at the time of commission of the rape — Held, said grounds are wholly irrelevant for reducing the sentence, having regard to nature of offence and manner of its commission — Sessions Judge rightly came to the conclusion that accused deserved no leniency — Approach of High Court lacked sensitivity towards the minor victim — Sentence restored to 10 years' RI (Paras 6 and 7). State of M.P. v. Bane Singh, (2005) 12 SCC 367.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-2-2005]

State of M.P. v. Balu, (2005) 1 SCC 108: 2005 SCC (Cri) 270, followed and clarified

[Ed.: See also Urmila (Minor) v. Raju, (2005) 12 SCC 366 and the holding in (2005) 8 SCC 1 and 8]

[9596] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — Leniency in sentence in rape cases — Not called for — Subsequent events, of resettlement of victim and/or rapist not relevant for leniency — Held, rape is a heinous crime and once it is established against a person charged of offence, justice must be done to victim of crime, by awarding suitable punishment to crime-doer — Herein, although incident is of 1989 and prosecutrix had married after incident and A-1 (rapist, respondent-accused) has family of his own and sending A-1 to jail now may disturb his family life, but, none of these factors individually or collectively persuade for a soft option — Hence sentence of 7 years' RI imposed by trial court restored and A-1 directed to be taken into custody to serve out remainder thereof (Para 35). State of U.P. v. Chhotey Lal, (2011) 2 SCC 550.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

State of Karnataka v. Bantara Sudhakara, (2008) 11 SCC 38: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 955, relied on [9597] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Rape of minor — Sentence — Moulding of punishment — Respondent-accused found guilty under Ss. 366 and 376 IPC and sentenced to three years' and seven years' RI respectively, and fine of Rs 500 with default stipulation for each offence imposed by trial court — High Court though confirming the conviction, reducing the sentence to period already undergone — Appellant aged about 19 years while victim was less than 16 years — Evidence showing that accused and victim were in love with each other and victim admitted that she had sexual intercourse with accused because of that — Father of the victim filing an affidavit before High Court stating that since the victim was settled in life a liberal view may be taken — Held, her admission was irrelevant because she was less than 16 years of age — But considering the facts sentence fixed at three years' RI and fine of Rs 10,000 with default stipulation imposed — Out of the deposited amount of Rs 8000 directed to be paid to victim — Parameters relating to imposition of lesser sentence for offence relatable to S. 376 discussed through case law (Paras 2 and 5 to 7). State of Punjab v. Rakesh Kumar, (2008) 12 SCC 33.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-2008]

Iqbal v. State of Kerala, (2007) 12 SCC 724, followed

[9598] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Sentence — Minimum statutory sentence — Deviation from — When impermissible — Rape of minor — Respondent-accused alleged to have taken away the prosecutrix who was a minor but married from the lawful custody of her father, without his consent with the intention of forcing her to have sexual intercourse with him, and committed the offence against her will and without her consent — Trial court convicting him under Ss. 366/376 and sentencing him to 7 years' RI and fine of Rs 500 for each offence with default stipulation — High Court in appeal filed thereagainst reducing the sentence to period already undergone which was 4 years and 2 months observing that "she was a sensible girl having age of 15 years, she did not complain to anybody and lived for several days with the respondent at Chhatarpur" — Fact that she was a minor and subjected to rape and furthermore, according to her testimony she was compelled to live for several days with the respondent at Chhatarpur as he would not listen to her plea of taking her to her father lost sight of by High Court — Medical examination assessing her age to be between 11 to 13 years and rendering an opinion that rape was committed on her and she was not habituated to sexual intercourse — Affidavit affirmed by her stating her age to be 18 years found to have been obtained without her knowing the contents thereof and at the instance of respondent — Held, very fact that she was made to state that her age was 18 years and she was living with the respondent as a wife clearly goes to show the mental trauma which she was undergoing — Contents of the said affidavit were wrongly used for imposing a sentence less than the minimum prescribed sentence considering the same to be mitigating factor — Age of the prosecutrix was assessed between 11 and 13 years, but by way of abundant precaution, the Sessions Judge held her age to be less than 13, but did not award any punishment in terms of S. 376(2)(f) — Minimum statutory sentence was imposed by trial court which should have met the approval of the High Court — It was also not a case where the proviso to S. 376 could be invoked — Hence, judgment of High Court set aside so far as it relates to the quantum of sentence and sentence awarded by trial court restored (Paras 11, 12, 14 and 19 to 22). State of M.P. v. Bablu Natt, (2009) 2 SCC 272: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 713: AIR 2009 SC 1810: (2009) 1 KLJ 686 (SC): (2009) 2 ECrN 504 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 1722.

24.(f)(ii)(2) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos - Adequate and Special reasons - Reasons that may be considered special and adequate (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2008]

State of M.P. v. Bala, (2005) 8 SCC 1: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1947; State of Karnataka v. Raju, (2007) 11 SCC 490: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 787; State of A.P. v. Bodem Sundara Rao, (1995) 6 SCC 230: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1097, considered and relied on [9599] — S. 376 proviso — Rape — Sentence — "Adequate and special reasons" for imposing less than 7 years' imprisonment — High Court, while noticing that the prosecutrix was a consenting party to the act of sexual intercourse and that she had willingly left her parents' house to be with the appellant, finding the prosecutrix to be "not more than 16 years of age" and on that account, upholding the conviction of the appellant — Compromise petition filed by the parties before High Court wherein the prosecutrix stating that she and the accused-appellant belonged to neighbouring villages and she had since got married and did not want the matter to be pursued any further so as to lead a happy and healthy married life with her husband — Held, this amounts to adequate and special reason for the purposes of the proviso — High Court despite noticing the compromise as also the attendant fact that the prosecutrix was a consenting party, erred in taking the view that the sentence to be awarded under S. 376 could not be less than 7 years — In the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, the matter should be now given a quietus particularly when the alleged offence is stated to have taken place almost a decade ago — Therefore, while maintaining the conviction of the appellant under Ss. 363/366 (as recorded by the courts below), sentence should be reduced under the proviso to S. 376 to the period already undergone by the accused. Sukhwinder Singh v. State of Punjab, (2000) 9 SCC 204: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1204.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and S. Rajendra Babu and R.C. Lahoti, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-2-2000]

[9600] — S. 376 proviso — Sentence — Mitigating factor — Accused sentenced to 7 years' RI by trial court — Lower appellate court reducing the sentence to 5 years on the view that the rape was committed not for lust alone but due to the circumstances that the appellant's wife abandoned him on account of PW 1 developing illicit intimacy with appellant's wife — Held, reason given by the trial court was irrelevant for committing rape — Proviso under S. 376 does not give arbitrary discretion to court to reduce the sentence on irrelevant grounds — Enhancing the sentence to 7 years', held, Sessions Judge erred in reducing the sentence to 5 years. Kommarajula Narasaiah v. State of A.P., (2000) 9 SCC 756: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1482.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2000]

State of Karnataka v. Krishnappa, (2000) 4 SCC 75: 2000 SCC (Cri) 755; State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30, relied on [9601] — S. 376 proviso — Sentence — Mitigating factors — Adequate and special reasons — Prosecutrix a consenting party — Having regard to this and other facts and circumstances, accused directed to be sentenced to the period already undergone by him in the interest of justice

As regards the quantum of sentence, the question which arises for consideration is whether a case has been made out to invoke the proviso appended to Section 376 of the Penal Code. The trial court did so. (Para 15)

The prosecutrix was a mature girl. She was married. She spent a few months in her in-laws' place. The respondent was working in her house. They, thus, knew each other for a long time. The prosecution evidently could not prove its case that she was enticed away from the custody of her guardian by the respondent on a false plea that he would marry her. She denied the said suggestion as presumably she was aware that she being married, the question of her marrying the respondent again may not arise. She lived for some time with the respondent in a rented house. Both the courts proceeded on the basis that she was a consenting party. The occurrence took place in the year 1986. The respondent preferred an appeal before the High Court in the year 1987. The same remained pending for about 10 years. The special leave petition was filed by the State 230 days after the prescribed period of limitation for preferring such appeal. The delay in filing the special leave petition, however, was condoned. He is said to have remained in custody for about one-and-a-half years. In the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case and having regard to the fact that both the courts have arrived at the conclusion that she was a consenting party, it may not be proper to send the appellant back to prison. (Para 16)

Therefore, while setting aside the judgment of the High Court and affirming that of the trial court, it must be held that the interest of justice would be met if the respondent is directed to be sentenced to the period already undergone by him. (Para 17). State of Chhattisgarh v. Lekhram, (2006) 5 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 66: AIR 2006 SC 1746: 2006 Cri LJ 2139.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2006]

[9602] — S. 376(1) — Rape — Sentence — "Adequate and special reasons" for reducing sentence of imprisonment to less than seven years — Grounds that accused was either 17 or 19 years of age or that he was an illiterate villager coming from a rural area, were neither "adequate" nor "special" reasons contemplated under S. 376

Allowing the appeal and restoring the sentence of seven years' RI awarded for rape by the trial court,

Held :

Section 376 IPC imposes an obligation on the court convicting the accused of that offence to impose a minimum sentence of 7 years. However, an exception is made for adequate and special reasons to be recorded in the judgment. Thus, the court can impose a sentence of less than 7 years but for good reasons. (Para 16)

None of the reasons mentioned by the High Court can be construed as either adequate or special reasons to reduce the minimum mandatory period of sentence for an offence punishable under Section 376 IPC. The High Court does not seem to have applied its mind to the gravity of the offence. Having found that the respondent has committed rape of a minor, to reduce the sentence on the ground that the accused was either 17 years or 19 years of age or that the accused is an illiterate villager coming from a rural area is neither adequate nor special reason contemplated under Section 376 IPC. The sentence of 10 months' imprisonment for an offence punishable under Section 376 is ridiculously low and is not commensurate with the gravity of the crime. The sympathy shown by the High Court is wholly misplaced and is likely to send wrong signals. In these circumstances the High Court has grossly erred in reducing the sentence imposed by the Sessions Court to a period of 10 months which the respondent had already undergone. The High Court exhibited lack of sensitivity towards the victim of rape and society by reducing the substantive sentence in the established facts and circumstances of the case. The courts are expected to properly operate the sentencing system and to impose such sentence for a proved offence, which may serve as a deterrent for the commission of like offences by others. The respondent is therefore directed to surrender to the authorities and serve out the sentence awarded to him by the trial court. (Paras 18 to 21). State of M.P. v. Balu, (2005) 1 SCC 108: 2005 SCC (Cri) 270: AIR 2005 SC 222: 2005 Cri LJ 335: (2005) 25 AIC 369 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-2004]

State of Karnataka v. Krishnappa, (2000) 4 SCC 75: 2000 SCC (Cri) 755; T.K. Gopal v. State of Karnataka, (2000) 6 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1037; State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898, followed

Phul Singh v. State of Haryana, (1979) 4 SCC 413: 1980 SCC (Cri) 1, held to be not good law

[Ed.: See also the emphatic rulings in (2005) 8 SCC 1 and (2005) 8 SCC 8 etc.]

[9603] — S. 376(1) — Rape — Sentence — Power to impose sentence below the prescribed minimum of seven years — Need for, and what are adequate and special reasons — Held, adequate and special reasons are required to be recorded in the judgment for imposing lesser punishments — Reduction of sentence by High Court from 10 years to 4 years and 8 months on the ground that the accused was an illiterate labourer from rural area, held, not proper — For a heinous crime like rape there cannot be different standards for illiterate labourers from rural areas — Reasons recorded by the High Court not adequate and special within the meaning of S. 376(1) — Sentence imposed by trial court, restored (Paras 3 and 4). State of M.P. v. Bhagwat, (2005) 11 SCC 141.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-4-2005]

24.(f)(ii)(2) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos - Adequate and Special reasons - Reasons that may be considered special and adequate (contd.)

[Ed.: See also a similar recent ruling in State of M.P. v. Babbu Barkare, (2005) 5 SCC 413: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1335 and (2005) 8 SCC 1 and (2005) 8 SCC 8]

[9604] — S. 376(1) (as amended by Act 43 of 1983) — Sentence — Rape on a helpless 13/14 year old girl — Absence of mitigating circumstances on record — Accused deserves deterrent punishment — High Court not justified in reducing the sentence to less than the prescribed minimum without assigning any special and adequate reasons — Merely because the accused would have completed the sentence of imprisonment about 5 years ago is no ground to take a lenient view ignoring the mandate of law — Sentence of 4 years' RI enhanced to 7 years' RI — Accused to be taken in custody to undergo the remaining period of the enhanced sentence

Keeping in view the nature of the offence and the helpless condition in which the prosecutrix a young girl of 13/14 years was placed, the High Court was clearly in error in reducing the sentence imposed upon the respondent and that too without assigning any reasons, much less special and adequate reasons. The High Court appears to have overlooked the mandate of the Legislature as reflected in Section 376(1) IPC. (Para 7)

There are no adequate and special reasons available on the record justifying reduction of sentence. To show mercy in the case of such a heinous crime would be travesty of justice and the plea for leniency is wholly misplaced. (Para 8). State of A.P. v. Bodem Sundara Rao, (1995) 6 SCC 230: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1097: AIR 1996 SC 530.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.S. Paripoornan, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-1995]

[9605] — S. 376(1) proviso — Reduction of sentence below the statutory minimum — Permissibility — Adequate and special reasons — What are — Infirmities/lacunae in prosecution's case — Supreme Court while upholding conviction (leave granted by Supreme Court only on question of sentence) under S. 376, reducing minimum statutory sentence of seven years' RI imposed by trial court and affirmed by High Court, to period of imprisonment already undergone, of about three and a half years — Held, since there was delay of three days in lodging the FIR and doctor who examined victim did not find any confirmatory evidence of rape on victim, in the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, sentence of imprisonment awarded should be reduced to period already undergone. Raj Kumar v. State of Bihar, (2006) 9 SCC 589: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 112.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-1-2006]

[Ed.: See also State of M.P. v. Santosh Kumar, (2006) 6 SCC 1 and State of M.P. v. Bala, (2005) 8 SCC 1 and the string of cases reported after it.]

[9606] — S. 376(1) and proviso thereto — Rape — Mandatory minimum sentence of seven years' RI — Reduction of — When warranted — "Adequate and special reasons" — What are — Marriage and leading of married life by prosecutrix subsequently — Prosecutrix abducted by appellant-accused and then raped — Prosecutrix rescued from accused after twenty days — Sessions Judge convicting accused under S. 376 IPC to minimum sentence of RI for seven years and under S. 366 IPC to RI for five years — High Court on appeal holding that merely on consideration of age of appellant, reduction of the sentence was not warranted — Supreme Court on examination of evidence holding that sufficient evidence was tendered by prosecution to prove guilt of accused — However, since prosecutrix had since been married and was living with her husband, held, having regard to the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, the sentence imposed by the courts below is on the highside — Sentence reduced to three years. Ram Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2006) 4 SCC 347: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 308.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-2006]

[Ed.: See also (2005) 8 SCC 1 and the cases following it.]

[9607] — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos — Reduction of sentence below the statutory minimum prescribed — Need for recording "adequate and special reasons" — "Adequate and special reasons" — What are — In present case accused convicted of gang rape under S. 376(2)(g) — High Court without disturbing conviction reducing sentence to the period already undergone, on grounds that accused had been in custody for long, and were semi-literate agricultural labourers from rural areas — Held, none of the grounds adduced by High Court, taken separately or cumulatively are "adequate and special reasons" for reducing sentence below statutory minimum — This is not a situation where High Court could have reduced the minimum sentence — This is a case of unwarranted sympathy — Sentence of ten years' RI imposed by trial court, restored — Approach of High Court deprecated. State of M.P. v. Jaleel Khan, (2006) 6 SCC 18: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 15.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Srikrishna and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2006]

[Ed.: See also State of M.P. v. Santosh Kumar, (2006) 6 SCC 1 and State of M.P. v. Bala, (2005) 8 SCC 1 and the string of cases reported after it.]

[9608] — S. 376(2) proviso — Award of less than minimum sentence — Conviction of police officials under S. 376 and minimum sentence of 10 years' RI recorded by trial court and confirmed by High Court — Having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case including conduct of the prosecutrix in not disclosing about the incident of rape for five days to anyone, held, accused entitled to sub-minimum sentence of five years. State of Haryana v. Prem Chand, (1990) 1 SCC 249: 1990 SCC (Cri) 93: AIR 1990 SC 538: 1990 Cri LJ 454.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-1989]

[9609] — S. 376(2) proviso — Rape — Sentence — "Adequate and special reasons" for reducing sentence of imprisonment to less than ten years — Whether exist, held, would depend upon relevant facts and circumstances of the case — Rape on a minor girl aged 8 years by a married man aged 49 years — Accused first going to mother of the prosecutrix to get his sexual lust satisfied after knowing that her husband was not in the house and when she escaped he dragging the prosecutrix to a room and committing rape on her — Injuries suffered by the prosecutrix showing the cruel nature of the act — Having regard to these facts, trial court convicting the accused under S. 376 and sentencing him to 10 years' RI and fine of Rs 3000 and in default of payment of the fine a further period of 6 months' RI — But High Court in appeal taking into account the facts that the accused was an illiterate person belonging to SC, was a chronic addict to drinking and had committed the rape in a state of intoxication and had an old mother, wife and children as his dependants, reducing the sentence to 4 years' RI but maintaining the sentence of fine — Held, circumstances relied upon by High Court were neither adequate nor special reasons for reducing the sentence — Trial court had given sufficient and cogent reasons for awarding 10 years' RI

The prosecutrix as well as the accused-respondent belong to Scheduled Caste. While the prosecutrix, then aged 8 years, was playing in the chavani of her house, the respondent, then aged 49 years, went there and after ascertaining from the prosecutrix's mother that her husband was not at home, went inside the house and asked her (prosecutrix's mother) to sleep with him and when she protested, he made obscene gestures and pulled her breasts and on her further protest, the respondent beat her up. She somehow managed to escape. The prosecutrix was also trying to run away when the respondent caught hold of her right hand and dragged her to a room of a house in coolie line where he had forcible sexual intercourse with her. She sustained bleeding injuries on her private parts and was exhausted. The respondent then left the room and locked it from outside. Father of the prosecutrix, had in the meanwhile returned home but when he tried to go there he was assaulted and threatened with dire consequences in case he disclosed about the occurrence to anyone. In the early hours of the morning, the parents of the prosecutrix could go to coolie line and rescue her. The matter was thereafter reported to the police. The prosecutrix was sent for medical examination to the hospital where she was treated. After completion of investigation, challan was filed and the respondent prosecuted. The trial court after critically examining the evidence on record convicted the respondent under Sections 376, 254, 323, 341, 363, 448 and 506 IPC. On the question of sentence for the offence under Section 376 IPC the trial court took into account the facts that the respondent was a married man of 49 years of age having children of his own and the victim of his sexual lust was an innocent helpless girl of 7/8 years of age and that the medical evidence exhibited the cruel nature of the act and the extent of pain and suffering which the victim might have undergone on her genitalia as a result of forcible coitus. The trial court had, therefore, opined that because of the cruel nature of the act, the accused was not entitled to any leniency. The trial court, accordingly, imposed a sentence of 10 years' RI and a fine of Rs 3000 and in default of payment of fine to further undergo 6 months' RI for the offence under Section 376 IPC. It was directed that in the event of recovery of fine, the entire amount shall be paid to the victim, the prosecutrix. However, the High Court, in appeal, on the ground that the accused-respondent was "unsophisticated and illiterate citizen belonging to a weaker section of the society"; that he was "a chronic addict to drinking" and had committed rape on the girl while in a state of "intoxication" and that his family comprising of "an old mother, wife and children" were dependent upon him, held that it was a case "for showing leniency" to the accused in the matter of punishment for the offence under Section 376. Accordingly, the sentence for the offence under Section 376 IPC was reduced from 10 years' RI to 4 years' RI. The sentence of fine together with the default clause was, however, maintained. The conviction and sentence for other offences under IPC were also maintained by the High Court. In the present appeal before the Supreme Court question was whether the High Court was justified in the facts and circumstances of the case in reducing the sentence for the offence under Section 376 IPC? Answering in the negative and allowing the State's appeal,

24.(f)(ii)(2) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos - Adequate and Special reasons - Reasons that may be considered special and adequate (contd.)

Held :

The normal sentence under Section 376(2) in a case where rape is committed on a child below 12 years of age, is not less than 10 years' RI though its proviso says that in exceptional cases "for special and adequate reasons" sentence of less than 10 years' RI can also be awarded. It is a fundamental rule of construction that a proviso must be considered in relation to the principal matter to which it stands as a proviso particularly in such like penal provisions. The courts are obliged to respect the legislative mandate in the matter of awarding of sentence in all such cases. Recourse to the proviso can be had only for "special and adequate reasons" and not in a casual manner. Whether there exist any "special and adequate reasons" would depend upon a variety of factors and the peculiar facts and circumstances of each case. No hard and fast rule can be laid down in that behalf of universal application. (Para 12)

The facts and circumstances relied upon by the High Court for reducing the sentence under Section 376 did not justify recourse to the proviso to Section 376(2) IPC to impose a sentence less than the prescribed minimum. These reasons are neither special nor adequate. The measure of punishment in a case of rape cannot depend upon the social status of the victim or the accused. It must depend upon the conduct of the accused, the state and age of the sexually assaulted female and the gravity of the criminal act. The socio-economic status, religion, race, caste or creed of the accused or the victim are irrelevant considerations in sentencing policy. The approach of the High Court in this case, to say the least, was most casual and inappropriate. There are no good reasons given by the High Court to reduce the sentence, let alone "special or adequate reasons". The High Court exhibited lack of sensitivity towards the victim of rape and the society by reducing the substantive sentence in the established facts and circumstances of the case. It was, in the facts and circumstances of the case, not justified in interfering with the discretion exercised by the trial court. (Paras 18 and 12)

Therefore, while maintaining the conviction of the respondent for an offence under Section 376 IPC besides all other offences, the sentence of 4 years' RI, as imposed by the High Court, is enhanced to 10 years' RI for the said offence. (Para 19). State of Karnataka v. Krishnappa, (2000) 4 SCC 75: 2000 SCC (Cri) 755: AIR 2000 SC 1470: 2000 Cri LJ 1793.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

State of A.P. v. Bodem Sundara Rao, (1995) 6 SCC 230: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1097; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on [9610] — S. 376(2) proviso — Sentence — Police officials (appellants) convicted under S. 376 for committing rape on prosecutrix and awarded minimum sentence of 10 years' RI — Paramour of the prosecutrix also convicted on charge of rape — On appeal High Court finding that the prosecution failed to prove age of the prosecutrix as below 18 years and that she was willingly going around with her paramour and was having sex with him of her free will, acquitted the paramour but confirmed the conviction and sentence imposed on the appellants — Having regard to peculiar facts and circumstances of the case and the promiscuous conduct of the prosecutrix, held, proviso to S. 376(2) can be invoked and a sub-minimum sentence of 5 years' RI would meet the ends of justice — Sentence accordingly reduced. Prem Chand v. State of Haryana, 1989 Supp (1) SCC 286: 1989 SCC (Cri) 418: AIR 1989 SC 937: 1989 Cri LJ 1246.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1989]

[Ed.: For review of this case on question of sentence see (1990) 1 SCC 249.]

[9611] — S. 376(2)(f) — Rape — Sentence — Leniency in — Rape of minor girl aged 10 years — Conviction by trial court to 10 years' imprisonment (the statutory minimum) — Interference with — When permissible — Accused already in custody for 6 years — In appeal High Court reducing sentence to 7 years on the basis that the accused was a young person who was the only breadearner of his family and his children need his supervision — Permissibility — Held, in view of the settled position in law the judgment of the High Court reducing the sentence to 7 years is clearly unsustainable — Sentence of 10 years as imposed by the trial court restored

In view of the settled position in law the judgment of the High Court reducing the sentence to 7 years is clearly unsustainable and is set aside. The sentence of 10 years as imposed by the trial court is restored. (Para 8). State of Rajasthan v. Madan Singh, (2008) 5 SCC 147: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 550: AIR 2008 SC 1292: 2008 Cri LJ 1939.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2008]

[9612] — S. 376(2)(f) — Rape of child aged 1½ years — Sentence of 10 years' RI — Enhancement of, when not called for — Ten years' RI and fine of Rs 1000 awarded by trial court upheld by High Court — Appeal preferred before Supreme Court by the accused from jail — Having regard to the facts of the case, especially the age of the victim, notice issued to appellant to show cause why the sentence of 10 years' RI should not be enhanced to life imprisonment — Mitigating circumstances stated on behalf of the appellant viz. appellant being the sole breadwinner, his family suffering, incident occurred 9 years back and appellant is in custody since the date of the incident; appellant and his family suffered great humiliation in the society; appellant has two daughters aged 16 and 10 years and prospects of their marriage have been marred to a great extent due to his conviction and sentence; and sentence of 10 years' imprisonment would be over within a year and if the Court enhances the sentence at this stage, then his family, particularly his two daughters and their future would be ruined for no fault of theirs — Having regard to the extenuating circumstances, specially the fact that appellant's two daughters have come of age and are to be married, held, the present period of incarceration of the appellant in jail is enough and he should not be made to further suffer the consequences of his bestiality (Paras 9 and 20). T.K. Gopal v. State of Karnataka, (2000) 6 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1037: AIR 2000 SC 1669: 2000 Cri LJ 2286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2000]

[9613] — S. 376(2)(f) — Rape of seven-year-old — Appropriate sentence for — "Adequate and special reasons" — What are — Trial court imposing sentence of three years' RI and fine of Rs 1000 — High Court reducing sentence of imprisonment to six months and directing compensation of Rs 25,000 to be paid to victim, on grounds that offence was 12 years old and victim had already been married — Held, improper — Sentence awarded by trial court restored. Urmila (Minor) v. Raju, (2005) 12 SCC 366.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-1-2005]

[Ed.: See the emphatic holding in (2005) 8 SCC 1 and 8]

[9614] — S. 376(2)(f) — Rape on a girl of eight years — Sentence — Reduction — Accused hardly eighteen years of age at the time of incident — Already served about 6-½ years' imprisonment — Was married and had a family — In such circumstances, sentence of ten years' RI imposed by trial court reduced to seven years' RI (Para 8). State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699: 2004 Cri LJ 2109.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

Distinguished in Rajendra Datta Zarekar v. State of Goa, (2007) 14 SCC 560*

[9615] — S. 376(2)(f) — Sentence — Rape on child below 12 years of age — Life sentence — Plea as to imposition of — Held, for said offence the statutorily provided minimum sentence is 10 years and life imprisonment can be awarded in a given case considering the attendant circumstances — In the present case, neither trial court nor High Court indicated any such circumstance/factor — Hence, sentence reduced from life imprisonment to 10 years

Sexual violence apart from being a dehumanising act is an unlawful intrusion on the right of privacy and sanctity of a female. It is a serious blow to her supreme honour and offends her self-esteem and dignity-it degrades and humiliates the victim and where the victim is a helpless innocent child or a minor, it leaves behind a traumatic experience. A rapist not only causes physical injuries but more indelibly leaves a scar on the most cherished possession of a woman i.e. her dignity, honour, reputation and not the least her chastity. Rape is not only a crime against the person of a woman, it is a crime against the entire society. It destroys the entire psychology of a woman and pushes her into deep emotional crisis. It is a crime against basic human rights, and is also violative of the victim's most cherished fundamental right, namely, the right to life contained in Article 21 of the Constitution. The courts are, therefore, expected to deal with cases of sexual crime against women with utmost sensitivity. Such cases need to be dealt with sternly and severely. A socially sensitised judge is a better statutory armour in cases of crime against women than long clauses of penal provisions, containing complex exceptions and provisos. (Para 6). Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2006 SC 1267: 2006 Cri LJ 1679: (2006) 1 KLT 1006.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2006]

24.(f)(ii)(2) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence—Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos - Adequate and Special reasons - Reasons that may be considered special and adequate (contd.)

[9616] — S. 376(2)(f) proviso — Rape — Sentence — "Adequate and special reasons" must be disclosed by sentencing court for reducing the sentence from the statutory minimum of 10 years' RI — Sentencing court must award the sentence commensurate with the gravity of the offence, having regard to all the relevant facts and circumstances including the demand of the society for justice in case of such heinous crime of rape of innocent helpless children — Trial court convicting the respondent under S. 376 for rape of a minor girl aged 5 years and after taking into account the report of District Probation Officer relating to character, conduct and antecedents of the respondent, it awarding a sentence of 10 years' RI — In appeal, High Court while confirming the conviction, merely stating "having regard to the circumstances of the case, the sentence of 10 years' RI imposed by the Court below is reduced to a period of 5 years' RI" — Held, this amounted to reducing the sentence without assigning any reasons, in a mechanical manner without proper application of mind — High Court was not justified in doing so and was expected to show sensitivity in dealing with such a case — In absence of any extenuating or mitigating circumstances mere long lapse of time and possibility that meanwhile the prosecutrix as also the accused might have got married and settled are not relevant for the Court to reduce the sentence

Normal sentence under Section 376(2) IPC in a case where rape is committed on a child below 12 years of age, is "not less than 10 years' RI", an expression which is pre-emptory in nature. The courts are obliged to respect this legislative mandate when the case falls under Section 376(2). The proviso to Section 376(2) would come into play only when there are "adequate and special reasons" available in a case. Those reasons need to be disclosed in the order/judgment itself so that the appellate forum is in a position to know as to what weighed with the court in awarding a sentence less than the minimum prescribed under the Act. (Para 8)

It is an obligation of the sentencing court to consider all relevant facts and circumstances bearing on the question of sentence and impose a sentence commensurate with the gravity of the offence. The sentencing court must hear the loud cry for justice by the society and more particularly, in cases of heinous crime of rape of innocent helpless children, as in this case, of the victim of crime and respond by imposing a proper sentence. (Para 9)

In the present case the order of the High Court in reducing the sentence from the statutory minimum of 10 years' RI contains no reasons, much less "special or adequate reasons". The sentence has been reduced in a rather mechanical manner without proper application of mind. It appears that the provisions of Section 376(2) IPC were not at all present to the mind of the Court. The Supreme Court has time and again drawn attention of the subordinate courts to the sensitivity which is required of the court to deal with all cases and more particularly in cases involving crime against women. (Para 11)

It is not possible to accept the contention that it being an old case the order of the High Court need not be interfered with. There are no extenuating or mitigating circumstances available on the record which may justify imposition of sentence less than the prescribed minimum on the respondent. To show mercy in a case like this, would be travesty of justice. There are no reasons, much less sufficient and adequate reasons available on the record to impose a lesser sentence than the prescribed minimum. (Para 14)

It is also not possible to accept the contention that because of the long time which has elapsed subsequent to the date of offence and the possibility that the prosecutrix, as also the respondent, may have got married and settled in life during the pendency of these proceedings, fine instead of sentence be imposed. These factors may be relevant for consideration by the executive or constitutional authorities, if they choose to remit the sentence on being so approached. (Para 16). State of A.P. v. Polamala Raju, (2000) 7 SCC 75: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1284: AIR 2000 SC 2854.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-8-2000]

State of A.P. v. Bodem Sundara Rao, (1995) 6 SCC 230: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1097; State of Karnataka v. Krishnappa, (2000) 4 SCC 75: 2000 SCC (Cri) 755; Kamal Kishore v. State of H.P. (2000) 4 SCC 502: 2000 SCC (Cri) 833, relied on

[9617] — Ss. 376(2)(g), 376/34 and 342/34 — Gang rape — Sentence — Awarding sentence lesser than the prescribed minimum — Propriety — Held, court has to record "adequate and special reasons" for exercising the discretion of — No straitjacket formula can be imposed for determining what amounts to "adequate and special" — Reason that appellant had not actually committed the rape, held, could not be a ground to warrant a lesser sentence — Not only was the appellant present, but he was also waiting for his turn — On facts, there was no just or special reason to award a lesser sentence — High Court rightly enhanced the sentence from four years to the prescribed minimum i.e. ten years

Both, in cases of sub-sections (1) and (2) of Section 376 the court has the discretion to impose a sentence of imprisonment less than the prescribed minimum for "adequate and special reasons". If the court does not mention such reasons in the judgment there is no scope for awarding a sentence lesser than the prescribed minimum. (Para 15)

In order to exercise the discretion of reducing the sentence the statutory requirement is that the court has to record "adequate and special reasons" in the judgment and not fanciful reasons which would permit the court to impose a sentence less than the prescribed minimum. The reason has not only to be adequate but special. What is adequate and special would depend upon several factors and no straitjacket formula can be imposed. In the case at hand, the only reason which seems to have weighed with the trial court is that the present accused-appellant had not actually committed the rape. That cannot be a ground to warrant lesser sentence; more so, in view of Explanation 1 to sub-section (2) of Section 376. By operation of a deeming provision a member of a group of persons who have acted in furtherance of their common intention per se attracts the minimum sentence. Section 34 has been applied by both the trial court and the High Court to conclude that rape was committed in furtherance of common intention. Not only was the accused-appellant present, but he was also waiting for his turn, as is evident from the fact that he was in the process of undressing. The evidence in this regard is cogent, credible and trustworthy. Since no other just or special reason was given by the trial court nor could any such be shown as to what were the reasons to warrant a lesser sentence, the High Court was justified in awarding the minimum prescribed sentence. (Para 16). Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551: AIR 2003 SC 4684.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2003]

(iii) Instances

[9618] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Adequacy of sentence under — Respondent accused convicted under S. 376(1) IPC and S. 3(1)(xi) by trial court and sentenced to seven years' RI and one year and six months' RI respectively — High Court reducing sentence to period already undergone, of one year and three months — Held, impermissible — Matter remanded for decision afresh — Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, S. 3(1)(xi). State of M.P. v. Gauri Shankar, (2005) 8 SCC 12(2): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1958 (1).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-10-2005]

[Ed.: Many similar appeals were filed in the Supreme Court by the State of M.P. involving the very same manner of reduction of sentence by Justice N.S. Azad of the M.P. High Court. All such appeals came before the present Bench of three Judges. The leading decision is reported above at (2005) 8 SCC 1.

All the remaining appeals [which are being reported below at pp. 11-14] have been disposed of identically except that in certain appeals besides S. 376 IPC the accused had been convicted of other offences as well, and the period of sentence undergone was also different. Since the text of all the judgments in the connected appeals in other respects is identical to the one reproduced below, they are not being reproduced. The slight difference in the conviction and period of sentence already undergone is detailed in each shortnote given separately below the cause title of each appeal. It is worthy of note that the trial court in each case had awarded the minimum mandatory sentence under S. 376(1) or S. 376(2), as the case may be.]

[9619] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Moulding of punishment — Reduction of custodial sentence — When warranted — High Court finding appellant-accused guilty under clause "Fourthly" of S. 375 — However, taking note of the peculiar facts of the case, more particularly, the knowledge of the complainant about the accused being a married man, reducing the custodial sentence from 7 years to 3 years but enhancing the compensation to Rs 1,00,000 from Rs 10,000 with a direction that in case the compensation amount was not paid, the reduction in sentence would not be given effect to — Complainant becoming aware of appellant's first marriage on 6-3-1994 but lodging report on 19-9-1994 — Explanation given therefor that she delivered a child immediately after learning about the incident on 16-4-1994 and hence could not complain earlier and also that she was totally traumatised on learning about the marriage of the appellant-accused — Held, though explanation was really not satisfactory but in view of the position in law that the accused was really guilty of the offence punishable under S. 376 IPC, the delayed approach of the complainant cannot, in any event, wash away the offence — Reduction of sentence and enhancement of compensation by High Court, supported by sufficient and adequate reasons, calls for no interference (Paras 16 to 18). Bhupinder Singh v. UT, Chandigarh, (2008) 8 SCC 531: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 553: 2008 Cri LJ 3546.

24.(f)(iii) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos - Instances (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-2008]

[Ed.: An interesting question arises whether on these facts the appellant could have been charged under Sections 493 and 494 IPC, and if so why not.]

[9620] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Minor — Punishment — Statutory punishment — Sentence of 10 years' RI and fine of Rs 10,000 awarded by High Court to appellant-accused for raping a girl aged 6 years — Prayer for reduction of sentence by appellant on ground of severity — Held, S. 376(2)(f) IPC specifically provides that where the victim is less than 12 years of age the sentence awarded shall not be less than 10 years but it may be for life and the accused shall also be liable to fine — Though proviso allows discretion to court for adequate and special reasons to be mentioned in the judgment, to impose a lesser sentence but in the instant case the victim was aged about 6 years and hence the case was fully covered by S. 376(2)(f) — No adequate and special reasons discernible for imposing lesser sentence — However, fine of Rs 10,000 found to be excessive and reduced to Rs 1000 (Paras 17 and 18). Rajendra Datta Zarekar v. State of Goa, (2007) 14 SCC 560: AIR 2008 SC 572: 2008 Cri LJ 710.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2007]

State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, (2004) 9 SCC 699, distinguished [9621] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Sentence — Reduction of — Justiciability — Respondent-accused convicted under S. 376 and sentenced to imprisonment for 7 years and fine of Rs 1000 with default stipulation — High Court reducing the sentence to period already undergone which was about 6 months only on ground that accused came from rural area — Held, same by no stretch of imagination can be considered either adequate or special reason — Impugned order set aside and respondent directed to surrender to custody to serve remainder of sentence (Paras 2, 3 and 5 to 8). State of M.P. v. Sk. Shahid, (2009) 12 SCC 715: (2009) 77 AIC 35 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, L.S. Panta and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559, followed

1 Hon. 6, 1a, 9 Edn. 4, 26a (Hale PC 628); Stephen's Criminal Law, 9th Edn., p. 262; Encyclopaedia of Crime and Justice, Vol. 4, p. 1356; Halsbury's Statutes of England and Wales; 4th Edn., Vol. 12; Friedman: Law in Changing Society, cited

[9622] — S. 376 — Adequacy of sentence under — Respondent accused convicted under S. 376(1) IPC and S. 3(1)(xi) by trial court and sentenced to seven years' RI and one year's RI respectively — High Court reducing sentence to period already undergone, of three months — Held, impermissible — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Dayanand Dohar, (2005) 8 SCC 12(1): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1957 (4).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2005]

[9623] — S. 376 — Proportionality of sentence — Sentence should be commensurate with gravity of offence — Relevant factors to be taken into account while determining proper sentence — Held, no formula of a foolproof nature is possible that would provide a reasonable criterion in determining a just and appropriate punishment — Due consideration should be given to facts and circumstances of case, having regard to various factors including nature of offence and manner in which it was executed or committed, motive for the crime, conduct of accused and all other attendant circumstances — Aggravating and mitigating factors should be delicately balanced — Discretion in determination of quantum of punishment is required to be exercised judiciously and judicially — Extent of adherence to principle of proportionality, while sentences were determined in actual practice, discussed — On facts, reduction of sentence of imprisonment of seven years' RI imposed by trial court under S. 376(1), to period already undergone (three years and six months in case of one of the co-accused, and two months in case of the other) by High Court, held, not proper — Sentence imposed by trial court restored — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 28 & 29 (Paras 11 to 13, 19 and 20). State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559: AIR 2005 SC 682: 2005 Cri LJ 913.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2005]

[9624] — S. 376 — Rape of teenaged girl — Sentence — On facts, reduced from 7 years' RI to the period of little less than 2 years of imprisonment already undergone by accused-respondent

The accused was taken into custody by the police on 3-11-1993. He was not allowed bail. During the trial as also during the hearing of the appeal by the High Court he remained in jail. It is only on 11-10-1995 when the High Court acquitted him of the charge that he was released from jail. Thus he had remained in jail for a little less than two years. Taking into consideration the period of remission for which he would have been entitled and the time which has elapsed from the date of commission of the offence, the accused-respondent need not now be sent to jail. It would meet the ends of justice if he is sentenced to undergo imprisonment for the period already undergone by him and to a fine of Rs 2000 with further simple imprisonment of one year and nine months in default of payment of fine as passed by the trial court. The accused-respondent is allowed time till 1-5-2000 for payment of fine. (Para 21). State of Rajasthan v. N.K., (2000) 5 SCC 30: 2000 SCC (Cri) 898: AIR 2000 SC 1812: 2000 Cri LJ 2205.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

[9625] — S. 376 — Reduction of sentence below statutory minimum prescribed under — Permissibility — Supreme Court while upholding conviction under S. 376 reducing minimum statutory sentence of seven years' RI imposed by trial court and affirmed by High Court, to period of imprisonment already undergone, of about four years — Held, in the facts and circumstances of the case, this is a fit case where sentence of imprisonment awarded should be reduced to period already undergone. Ravinder v. State of M.P., (2006) 9 SCC 590: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 349.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2006]

[Ed.: See also State of M.P. v. Santosh Kumar, (2006) 6 SCC 1 and State of M.P. v. Bala, (2005) 8 SCC 1 and the string of cases reported after it.]

[9626] — S. 376 — Sentence — Rape of minor girl — Occurrence prior to December 1982 amendment — Sentence of 5 years' RI imposed by trial court — Enhancement of sentence not sought by State — High Court acquitting the accused — In the circumstances, while reversing the acquittal order, sentence imposed by trial court maintained by Supreme Court in appeal

Though for such an offence a more severe sentence would have been desirable but the ends of justice would be met if the sentence to be imposed on the respondent is confined to five years RI as was awarded by the Sessions Judge for cogent reasons recorded by him. This is for the reason that the State did not seek any enhancement of the sentence by filing an appropriate petition in the High Court or in the Supreme Court and for over a period of seven years, while the case has remained pending here, no notice had been issued to the acquitted respondent to show cause as to why in the event of his acquittal being set aside, a more deterrent sentence, than the one imposed by the Sessions Judge, be not imposed upon him and without putting him on such a notice, the Court cannot enhance the sentence. If the notice were to issue now, it would further delay the disposal of the case and that would not be a proper course to be adopted. The more stringent minimum sentence prescribed for an offence under S. 376 IPC was also incorporated in the Code by an amendment only with effect from December 1982 after the offence in the present case had been committed. State of H.P. v. Raghubir Singh, (1993) 2 SCC 622: 1993 SCC (Cri) 674: 1993 (2) ALT (Cri) 286: (1993) 2 Crimes 887.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-2-1993]

[9627] — S. 376 proviso — Reduction of sentence from the minimum of 7 years to 2½ years by High Court — No adequate and special reasons given therefor — Order reducing the sentence, held, cannot be sustained

In the judgment, the learned Judge has not recorded any adequate or special reasons for reducing the sentence to the period already undergone except for stating that the respondent had remained in custody since the year 1988 and in such cases courts have taken a lenient view. Such a statement does not answer the description of adequate and special reasons which were required to be mentioned in the judgment. It is, therefore, patent that the order reducing the sentence of the respondent is illegal and cannot be sustained. (Para 4). State of Rajasthan v. Kishanlal, (2002) 5 SCC 424: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1149: AIR 2002 SC 2250: 2002 Cri LJ 2963.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-2002]

[9628] — S. 376 and proviso thereto and Ss. 342, 363 and 366 — Rape — Heinousness of crime — Minimum sentence to be imposed under S. 376 — Trial court awarding sentence of eight years' RI — High Court, while upholding conviction reducing sentence to period already undergone, of nearly six years and two months — Held, having regard to facts and circumstances of the case, period already undergone cannot be said to be inadequate or contrary to law. State of M.P. v. Sunil, (2009) 17 SCC 386: AIR 2006 SC 627.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2005]

24.(f)(iii) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos - Instances (contd.)

[9629] — S. 376(1) proviso — Sentence — Accused remaining in custody for 8 months — High Court reducing the sentence to the period already undergone by him on ground that the incident had occurred a decade back — Held, these were not adequate considerations for awarding lesser sentence — Sentence of 5 years' RI imposed by the trial court restored. State of M.P. v. Bhaiyalal, 1997 SCC (Cri) 1074.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Faizan Uddin and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-1997]

[9630] — S. 376(1) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(1), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of nearly one year and three months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Gauri Shankar, (2005) 8 SCC 12(2): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1958 (1).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-10-2005]

[9631] — S. 376(1) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(1), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of nearly seven months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Govind, (2005) 8 SCC 12(3): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1958 (2).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-10-2005]

[9632] — S. 376(1) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(1), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of nearly three years — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Vilru, (2005) 8 SCC 14(2): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1960 (1).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-2005]

[9633] — S. 376(1) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(1), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of one year and four months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Mahesh Bhoomia, (2005) 8 SCC 13(2): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1959 (1).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-2005]

[9634] — S. 376(1) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(1), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of one year and two months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Parasram, (2005) 8 SCC 13(1): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1958 (3): 2005 Cri LJ 4365.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-10-2005]

[9635] — S. 376(1) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(1), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of three months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Dayanand Dohar, (2005) 8 SCC 12(1): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1957 (4).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2005]

[9636] — S. 376(1) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(1), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of two years and four months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Killu, (2005) 8 SCC 14(1): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1959 (4).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-2005]

[9637] — Ss. 376(1) and proviso thereto, 363 and 366 — Minimum sentence under Art. 376 — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(1), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of one year and seven months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Mulli, (2005) 8 SCC 13(3): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1959 (2).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-10-2005]

[9638] — Ss. 376(1) and proviso thereto, 363 and 366 — Trial court imposing sentences of 7 years' RI under Ss. 363 and 376 and ten years' RI under S. 366 — Reduction below statutory minimum by High Court — Sustainability — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction on all counts, in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of nearly two years and four months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Rakesh, (2005) 8 SCC 13(4): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1959 (3): AIR 2005 SC 4319.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2005]

[Ed.: Many similar appeals were filed in the Supreme Court by the State of M.P. involving the very same manner of reduction of sentence by Justice N.S. Azad of the M.P. High Court. All such appeals came before the present Bench of three Judges. The leading decision is reported above at (2005) 8 SCC 1.

All the remaining appeals [which are being reported below at pp. 11-14] have been disposed of identically except that in certain appeals besides S. 376 IPC the accused had been convicted of other offences as well, and the period of sentence undergone was also different. Since the text of all the judgments in the connected appeals in other respects is identical to the one reproduced below, they are not being reproduced. The slight difference in the conviction and period of sentence already undergone is detailed in each shortnote given separately below the cause title of each appeal. It is worthy of note that the trial court in each case had awarded the minimum mandatory sentence under S. 376(1) or S. 376(2), as the case may be.]

[9639] — S. 376(2) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(2)(g), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of nearly four years and eight months for R-1 and four years and three months for R-2 — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Veerendra Singh, (2005) 8 SCC 11(3): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1957 (3).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2005]

[9640] — S. 376(2) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(2)(g), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of nearly one year and eleven months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Sheshrao, (2005) 8 SCC 11(1): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1957 (1): AIR 2005 SC 4417.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2005]

[9641] — S. 376(2) and proviso thereto — Minimum sentence under — Mandatory nature of — Held, High Court was wholly unjustified, while upholding the conviction under S. 376(2)(g), in reducing the sentence to period already undergone, of nearly three years and seven months — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Rajesh, (2005) 8 SCC 11(2): 2005 SCC (Cri) 1957 (2).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2005]

[Ed.: Many similar appeals were filed in the Supreme Court by the State of M.P. involving the very same manner of reduction of sentence by Justice N.S. Azad of the M.P. High Court. All such appeals came before the present Bench of three Judges. The leading decision is reported above at (2005) 8 SCC 1.

All the remaining appeals [which are being reported below at pp. 11-14] have been disposed of identically except that in certain appeals besides S. 376 IPC the accused had been convicted of other offences as well, and the period of sentence undergone was also different. Since the text of all the judgments in the connected appeals in other respects is identical to the one reproduced below, they are not being reproduced. The slight difference in the conviction and period of sentence already undergone is detailed in each shortnote given separately below the cause title of each appeal. It is worthy of note that the trial court in each case had awarded the minimum mandatory sentence under S. 376(1) or S. 376(2), as the case may be.]

[9642] — Ss. 376(2)(c) & 376/106 — Rape of 13 girls of an Ashram by its founder, A-1, systematically abetted by co-accused of the Ashram — Victims being orphans, entirely dependent upon A-1 for their survival, A-1 had dominion/control over them physically, mentally and spiritually — Held, conviction of A-1 under S. 376(2)(c) and sentence of life imprisonment with fine of Rs 5,10,000 on each count justified — Conviction of co-accused under Ss. 376/106 and sentence of life imprisonment (except in case of A-3 who had been awarded RI for the period already undergone with fine of Rs 10,000) justified

In the present case, most of the victim girls were orphans brought from Sri Lanka. A-1 provided them food, clothing and shelter. They were entirely dependent on A-1 for their survival. Once they were thrown out by A-1 they had no alternative place to stay. A-1 had dominion/control over the prosecutrix physically, mentally and spiritually. In fact, many of them believed that A-1 was God to them. It is in these circumstances there is no reason why the prosecutrix should depose falsely against A-1 who was the source of their survival physically, mentally and spiritually, by providing shelter, food and clothes to them. The testimony of the prosecutrix inspires confidence, on the basis of which alone conviction can be safely sustained. Moreover, in the instant case the statements of the prosecutrix are well corroborated by medical and other contemporaneous documents. It is also well-established principle of law that minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix should not be a ground for throwing out an otherwise reliable prosecution case. (Paras 33 and 34). Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2005 SC 2132.

24.(f)(iii) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos - Instances (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2005]

State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on [9643] — S. 376(2)(g) — Gang rape — Sentence warranted — Appellants convicted under Ss. 376 & 366 and sentenced to RI for 10 years and fine of Rs 1000, and RI of 5 years and fine of Rs 1000 respectively — Considering gravity of crime, prayer for reduction of sentence rejected (Paras 1 and 16). Jaswant Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 16 SCC 201: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 243: AIR 2010 SC 894: 2010 Cri LJ 41: (2010) 2 ECrN 305 (SC): (2010) 85 AIC 193 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-2009]

[9644] — Ss. 376 (as amended in 1983)/511 or 354 — Applicable provision — After finding the accused guilty under Ss. 376/511, even in absence of a charge under S. 376 read with S. 511, held, High Court should have convicted him under Ss. 376/511 by invoking S. 222, CrPC and not under S. 354 — Quantum of punishment — Determination of — Keeping in view the objects of 1983 amendment to S. 376, held, no person committing or attempting to commit rape should be allowed to escape punishment — Having found the accused guilty, the quantum of punishment must be decided in accordance with law without being influenced by the press, electronic media or public agitation, as a trial by such agencies is the very antithesis of rule of law — While imposing fine and apportioning the whole or part thereof to the victim, the damage caused to her and even to her family should be taken into consideration — Father of eight-year-old daughter found guilty of attempting rape on a girl aged below twelve years and also found guilty under S. 57 of Bombay Children Act — High Court, however, setting aside the conviction under Ss. 376/511 and instead convicting him under S. 354 IPC and sentencing him to rigorous imprisonment for the period already undergone (only 33 days) and to a fine of Rs 40,000 of which Rs 25,000 was to be apportioned to the complainant (father of the prosecutrix in this case) — High Court upholding the respondent's conviction under S. 57 of the Bombay Act but restricting the sentence thereunder to the period of imprisonment already undergone — Matter coming up before the Supreme Court 11 long years after the incident and by then the fine imposed by the High Court having already been paid by the accused and the complainant having withdrawn his share of the fine — In such circumstances while converting the conviction of the accused from one under S. 354 IPC to that under Ss. 376/511 IPC, held, a sentence of five years' RI and a fine of Rs 40,000 would meet the ends of justice — Conviction and sentence under S. 57 of Bombay Children Act, however, affirmed — CrPC, 1973, S. 222 — Bombay Children Act, 1948 (71 of 1948), S. 57 — Law Commission Reports 42nd, 69th and 84th — Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1983

The accused-respondent was convicted by the trial court for offences under Section 376 of IPC and Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act, 1948 for having committed rape on a girl of eight years of age on 24-9-1986 and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 7 years and to pay fine of Rs 5000 and for offence under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act he was sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one year and to pay a fine of Rs 500. The substantive sentences were ordered to run concurrently. The Bombay High Court upset the conviction under Section 376 IPC and instead convicted him for an offence under Section 354 IPC and sentenced him to suffer rigorous imprisonment which he had already undergone (which was 33 days in all) and to pay fine of Rs 40,000 out of which Rs 25,000 was directed to be paid to the complainant who was the father of the girl. The conviction for the offence under Section

57 of the Bombay Children Act was upheld but the sentence was reduced to the imprisonment already undergone. Cross appeals were filed against the High Court's decision. While the State of Maharashtra filed appeal against the conviction and sentence of the accused by the High Court praying for his conviction under Section 376 IPC and for enhancement of his sentence to a minimum of 10 years, the accused filed appeal against his very conviction and sentence under Section 354 IPC and Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act. On the question of sentence under Sections 376/511, IPC, the accused-respondent contended that when the offence was committed the accused had also a daughter of 8 years of age and that a long time had elapsed since the offence was committed and that in terms of the judgment of the High Court the accused had already deposited Rs 40,000 out of which Rs 25,000 had already been withdrawn by the father of the prosecutrix. It was submitted that if the Court came to the conclusion that the sentence had to be enhanced then only the amount of fine could be raised. Dismissing the respondent's appeal and partly allowing the State's appeal

Held :

The circumstances of the case show that the accused intended to commit rape on the girl. In the commission of that crime, he laid the girl on the seat in the Maruti car and then laid himself over her. He pulled down her knickers and also opened the zip of his pants and took out his male organ. He pressed his male organ on the private parts of the girl. But since he discharged, he could not penetrate and was unable to complete the offence of rape. However, it is clear that he did attempt to commit rape.

The High Court after having come to the conclusion that the accused was guilty of an offence under Sections 376/511 of the IPC could not have convicted the accused for an offence under Section 354 IPC. Section 511 IPC provides punishment for attempting to commit offences punishable with imprisonment for life or other imprisonment. In the instant case since the girl was under 12 years of age and the Sessions Judge having found that offence of rape had been committed could not have awarded sentence of 7 years when the law prescribes minimum sentence of rigorous imprisonment for a term not less than 10 years, unless exceptional circumstances existed. However, the State of the complainant did not come up in appeal in the High Court for enhancement of the sentence. Though there was no charge under Section 376 read with Section 511 IPC, under Section 222 CrPC when a person is charged for an offence he may be convicted of an attempt to commit such offence although the attempt is not separately charged.

The respondent's plea that in case the court took a decision to enhance the sentence the amount of fine could be raised, cannot be accepted. A heinous crime has been committed and the accused must suffer for the consequences. A rapist not only violates the victim's personal integrity but leaves indelible marks on the very soul of the helpless female. The girl of 8 years must have undergone a traumatic experience. Despite the 11 year long lapse of time after the offence, keeping the objects of the 1983 amendment to Section 376 of IPC in view, the law as it exists now and the decisions of the Supreme Court on the question of sentence, the message is loud and clear that no person who commits or attempts to commit rape shall escape punishment.

Considering the whole aspect of the matter, it has to be held that a sentence of five years' rigorous imprisonment and fine of Rs 40,000 will meet the ends of justice. The fine has already been paid, out of that Rs 25,000 has been withdrawn by the father of the girl as per direction of the High Court which is upheld. The conviction of the accused-respondent is converted from one under Section 354 IPC to that under Sections 376/511 IPC and he is sentenced as aforesaid. The conviction and sentence of the accused under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act as ordered by the High Court shall, however, stand. The sentences shall run concurrently. State of Maharashtra v. Rajendra Jawanmal Gandhi, (1997) 8 SCC 386: AIR 1997 SC 3986.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1997]

(g) Principles for sentencing

Synopsis

(i) Generally 734
(ii) Age/Health state of accused/Juvenile 734
(iii) Accused marrying prosecutrix 735
(iv) Delay/Pendency in proceedings/ execution of sentence 735
(v) Proportionality 737
(vi) Background/station/education of accused 737
(vii) Other 738
(viii) Sentence reduced 739
(ix) Sentence not reduced/enhanced 740

(i) Generally

See also 'C.24.(a) Sentence — Generally', and 'C.24.(f) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos', above

[9645] — S. 376 — Rape — Sentence — Courts should impose sentence commensurate with the gravity of the offence having regard to facts and circumstances of the case — Courts should not show any leniency or mercy to persons committing heinous crime of rape on innocent helpless girls — Socio-economic status, race, caste, creed etc. of accused or victim are irrelevant considerations in awarding sentence — Crimes of violence on women should be severely dealt with — Sentence should serve as a deterrent for commission of like offences by others

Protection of society and deterring the criminal is the avowed object of law and that is required to be achieved by imposing an appropriate sentence. The sentencing courts are expected to consider all relevant facts and circumstances bearing on the question of sentence and proceed to impose a sentence commensurate with the gravity of the offence. Courts must hear the loud cry for justice by the society in cases of the heinous crime of rape on innocent helpless girls of tender years, as in this case, and respond by imposition of proper sentence. Public abhorrence of the crime needs reflection through imposition of appropriate sentence by the court. To show mercy in the case of such a heinous crime would be a travesty of justice and the plea for leniency is wholly misplaced. The courts are expected to properly operate the sentencing system and to impose such sentence for a proved offence, which may serve as a deterrent for the commission of like offences by others. Sexual violence apart from being a dehumanising act is an unlawful intrusion of the right to privacy and sanctity of a female. It is a serious blow to her supreme honour and offends her self-esteem and dignity — it degrades and humiliates the victim and where the victim is a helpless innocent child, it leaves behind a traumatic experience. The courts are, therefore, expected to deal with cases of sexual crime against women with utmost sensitivity. Such cases need to be dealt with sternly and severely. A socially sensitised Judge is a better statutory armour in cases of crime against women than long clauses of penal provisions, containing complex exceptions and provisos. (Paras 18, 13, 15 and 16)

Therefore, while maintaining the conviction of the respondent for an offence under Section 376 IPC besides all other offences, the sentence of 4 years' RI, as imposed by the High Court, is enhanced to 10 years' RI for the said offence. (Para 19). State of Karnataka v. Krishnappa, (2000) 4 SCC 75: 2000 SCC (Cri) 755: AIR 2000 SC 1470: 2000 Cri LJ 1793.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

State of A.P. v. Bodem Sundara Rao, (1995) 6 SCC 230: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1097; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on [9646] — S. 376 — Rape — Sentence — Resignation and no resistance by victim in the face of the inevitable not a mitigating circumstance. Nafe Singh v. State of Haryana, (1971) 3 SCC 934: 1972 SCC (Cri) 182.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-1970]

(ii) Age/Health state of accused/Juvenile

See also 'C.24.(f) Minimum sentence/Minimum statutory sentence — Ss. 376(1) & (2) provisos', above

[9647] — S. 376 — Sentence — Mitigating circumstances — Considering very young age of accused persons, circumstances in which offence committed, long lapse of time during which they suffered disrepute and mental agony sentence reduced from 7 years' R.I. to 3 years' R.I.

So far as sentence of 7 years' R.I. on both the accused persons is concerned, it appears that it may not be unlikely that the accused persons at the beginning had a genuine desire to help the prosecutrix in reaching her brother's place quickly. But later on when she agreed to share the same room at night in the hotel the two young men became victims of sexual lust and against the consent and protest of the prosecutrix, committed rape on her. Considering the very young age of the accused persons and considering the circumstances under which there was every likelihood that they could not overcome the fit of passion and lost all sense of decency and morality and ultimately committed the offence of rape and also considering the fact that the incident had taken place long back and during the course of the proceedings up to this Court, both of them had suffered disrepute and mental agony, the ends of justice would be met if both the accused persons are awarded a lesser sentence. The accused persons were, therefore, directed to suffer R.I. for three years. Raju v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 1 SCC 453: 1994 SCC (Cri) 538: AIR 1994 SC 222: 1994 Cri LJ 248: (1994) 2 BLJR 1059: (1994) 1 Crimes 156: (1994) 31 ACC 152.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-1993]

[9648] — S. 376 — Sentence — Rape by accused, 65 years of age on a girl six years' old — Trial Judge awarding three years' rigorous imprisonment and Rs 5000 as fine — Sessions Judge reducing imprisonment to six months and fine to Rs 500 — Held, regarding the beastliness of the crime the short term of imprisonment, in spite of his advanced age, was not improper. Ram Kishan Aggarwala v. State of Orissa, (1976) 2 SCC 177: 1976 SCC (Cri) 244: AIR 1976 SC 1774: 1976 Cri LJ 1376.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud and V.R. Krishna Iyer, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-1976]

[9649] — S. 376 r/w S. 511 — Sentencing of juvenile — Appellant aged 16 years 5 months and 19 days on date of occurrence — Hence held, was a juvenile, and thus, could not be compelled to undergo sentence of RI as imposed by trial court and affirmed by High Court — Setting aside sentence, appellant directed to be produced before Juvenile Justice Board for passing appropriate sentence in consonance with 2000 Act — Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act, 2000, Ss. 2(k), 2(l), 7-A, 20 and 64 (as amended by Act 33 of 2006 w.e.f. 22-8-2006) (Paras 13 to 15). Daya Nand v. State of Haryana, (2011) 2 SCC 224.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-2011]

Hari Ram v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 13 SCC 211: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 987; Dharambir v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 5 SCC 344: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1274; Mohan Mali v. State of M.P., (2010) 6 SCC 669: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 208, followed

Pratap Singh v. State of Jharkhand, (2005) 3 SCC 551: 2005 SCC (Cri) 742, held, distinguished/not applicable

(iii) Accused marrying prosecutrix

[9650] — S. 376 — Sentence — Having regard to the fact that appellant married the prosecutrix sentence reduced to period already undergone. Sultan Singh v. State of M.P., 1990 Supp SCC 635: 1991 SCC (Cri) 160(1).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: E.S. Venkataramiah and N.D. Ojha, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-4-1988]

[9651] — Ss. 376, 147, 323/149, 342, 458 and 366 — Abduction and rape — Conviction justified — Marriage alleged by rapist not proved — Appellants convicted under Ss. 147, 323/149, 342, 458 and 366, while Appellant 1, also additionally convicted under S. 376 — Five accused armed with iron rod and lathis alleged to have abducted the prosecutrix (PW 5) and assaulted PW 2 during the occurrence — It was further alleged that they dressed her in new ornaments and clothes and Appellant 1 raped her on two consecutive nights — Defence of Appellant 1 that since victim was married to him there was no rape as contended, rejected by courts below — No evidence of marriage as claimed brought on record — DW 2 in his cross-examination admitting that Kazi wrote their nikah — But no signature or thumb impression was obtained and Kazi Y who was claimed to have solemnised the nikah was not examined — DW 1 who is claimed to have settled the marriage accepted that same is the procedure for proving the marriage — Thus, factum of marriage not proved — Held, that being so the conviction of Appellant 1 as recorded by trial court and maintained by High Court cannot be faulted — So far as the role played by Appellant 2 is concerned, the same was clearly established by the evidence of injured witnesses PW 2 and PW 4, apart from the evidence of PW 5 (prosecutrix) — Hence, his conviction also sustained — But so far as other appellants were concerned there was no evidence to link them with crime — Hence, their conviction set aside (Paras 8 and 9). Neku Khan v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 11 SCC 86: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1245: AIR 2009 SC 1954: (2009) 1 ECrN 859 (SC): (2009) 75 AIC 132 (SC): (2009) 1 APLJ 41 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-2009]

(iv) Delay/Pendency in proceedings/ execution of sentence

[9652] — S. 376 — Child rape — Rape of 10 year-old-girl — Sentence — Occurrence happened in 1976 when there was no legislative compulsion on court to impose any minimum punishment for rape — Trial court sentencing the respondent to 6 years' RI and fine of Rs 500 — High Court acquitting the respondent — But Supreme Court setting aside the High Court's order of acquittal and restoring conviction passed by trial court — A quarter of a century had elapsed since the occurrence and respondent was in jail for a long period — In the circumstances held, respondent sentenced to 2 years' RI — On completion of the sentence the jail authorities shall release him from jail as he continues to be in jail. State of U.P. v. Munnoo Lal, (2001) 10 SCC 79.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2001]

[9653] — Ss. 376 (as amended in 1983)/511 or 354 — Applicable provision — After finding the accused guilty under Ss. 376/511, even in absence of a charge under S. 376 read with S. 511, held, High Court should have convicted him under Ss. 376/511 by invoking S. 222, CrPC and not under S. 354 — Quantum of punishment — Determination of — Keeping in view the objects of

24.(g)(iv) Principles for sentencing - Delay/Pendency in proceedings/execution of sentence (contd.)

1983 amendment to S. 376, held, no person committing or attempting to commit rape should be allowed to escape punishment — Having found the accused guilty, the quantum of punishment must be decided in accordance with law without being influenced by the press, electronic media or public agitation, as a trial by such agencies is the very antithesis of rule of law — While imposing fine and apportioning the whole or part thereof to the victim, the damage caused to her and even to her family should be taken into consideration — Father of eight-year-old daughter found guilty of attempting rape on a girl aged below twelve years and also found guilty under S. 57 of Bombay Children Act — High Court, however, setting aside the conviction under Ss. 376/511 and instead convicting him under S. 354 IPC and sentencing him to rigorous imprisonment for the period already undergone (only 33 days) and to a fine of Rs 40,000 of which Rs 25,000 was to be apportioned to the complainant (father of the prosecutrix in this case) — High Court upholding the respondent's conviction under S. 57 of the Bombay Act but restricting the sentence thereunder to the period of imprisonment already undergone — Matter coming up before the Supreme Court 11 long years after the incident and by then the fine imposed by the High Court having already been paid by the accused and the complainant having withdrawn his share of the fine — In such circumstances while converting the conviction of the accused from one under S. 354 IPC to that under Ss. 376/511 IPC, held, a sentence of five years' RI and a fine of Rs 40,000 would meet the ends of justice — Conviction and sentence under S. 57 of Bombay Children Act, however, affirmed — CrPC, 1973, S. 222 — Bombay Children Act, 1948 (71 of 1948), S. 57 — Law Commission Reports 42nd, 69th and 84th — Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1983

The accused-respondent was convicted by the trial court for offences under Section 376 of IPC and Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act, 1948 for having committed rape on a girl of eight years of age on 24-9-1986 and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 7 years and to pay fine of Rs 5000 and for offence under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act he was sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one year and to pay a fine of Rs 500. The substantive sentences were ordered to run concurrently. The Bombay High Court upset the conviction under Section 376 IPC and instead convicted him for an offence under Section 354 IPC and sentenced him to suffer rigorous imprisonment which he had already undergone (which was 33 days in all) and to pay fine of Rs 40,000 out of which Rs 25,000 was directed to be paid to the complainant who was the father of the girl. The conviction for the offence under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act was upheld but the sentence was reduced to the imprisonment already undergone. Cross appeals were filed against the High Court's decision. While the State of Maharashtra filed appeal against the conviction and sentence of the accused by the High Court praying for his conviction under Section 376 IPC and for enhancement of his sentence to a minimum of 10 years, the accused filed appeal against his very conviction and sentence under Section 354 IPC and Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act. On the question of sentence under Sections 376/511, IPC, the accused-respondent contended that when the offence was committed the accused had also a daughter of 8 years of age and that a long time had elapsed since the offence was committed and that in terms of the judgment of the High Court the accused had already deposited Rs 40,000 out of which Rs 25,000 had already been withdrawn by the father of the prosecutrix. It was submitted that if the Court came to the conclusion that the sentence had to be enhanced then only the amount of fine could be raised. Dismissing the respondent's appeal and partly allowing the State's appeal

Held :

The circumstances of the case show that the accused intended to commit rape on the girl. In the commission of that crime, he laid the girl on the seat in the Maruti car and then laid himself over her. He pulled down her knickers and also opened the zip of his pants and took out his male organ. He pressed his male organ on the private parts of the girl. But since he discharged, he could not penetrate and was unable to complete the offence of rape. However, it is clear that he did attempt to commit rape.

The High Court after having come to the conclusion that the accused was guilty of an offence under Sections 376/511 of the IPC could not have convicted the accused for an offence under Section 354 IPC. Section 511 IPC provides punishment for attempting to commit offences punishable with imprisonment for life or other imprisonment. In the instant case since the girl was under 12 years of age and the Sessions Judge having found that offence of rape had been committed could not have awarded sentence of 7 years when the law prescribes minimum sentence of rigorous imprisonment for a term not less than 10 years, unless exceptional circumstances existed. However, the State of the complainant did not come up in appeal in the High Court for enhancement of the sentence. Though there was no charge under Section 376 read with Section 511 IPC, under Section 222 CrPC when a person is charged for an offence he may be convicted of an attempt to commit such offence although the attempt is not separately charged.

The respondent's plea that in case the court took a decision to enhance the sentence the amount of fine could be raised, cannot be accepted. A heinous crime has been committed and the accused must suffer for the consequences. A rapist not only violates the victim's personal integrity but leaves indelible marks on the very soul of the helpless female. The girl of 8 years must have undergone a traumatic experience. Despite the 11 year long lapse of time after the offence, keeping the objects of the 1983 amendment to Section 376 of IPC in view, the law as it exists now and the decisions of the Supreme Court on the question of sentence, the message is loud and clear that no person who commits or attempts to commit rape shall escape punishment.

Considering the whole aspect of the matter, it has to be held that a sentence of five years' rigorous imprisonment and fine of Rs 40,000 will meet the ends of justice. The fine has already been paid, out of that Rs 25,000 has been withdrawn by the father of the girl as per direction of the High Court which is upheld. The conviction of the accused-respondent is converted from one under Section 354 IPC to that under Sections 376/511 IPC and he is sentenced as aforesaid. The conviction and sentence of the accused under Section 57 of the Bombay Children Act as ordered by the High Court shall, however, stand. The sentences shall run concurrently. State of Maharashtra v. Rajendra Jawanmal Gandhi, (1997) 8 SCC 386: AIR 1997 SC 3986.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1997]

(v) Proportionality

[9654] — S. 376 — Imposition of "appropriate sentence" — Emphasising need of, object of law as well as duty and role of courts in this regard, stated — Awarding inadequate sentence — Effect of, on justice system and society, explained — Object of sentence being to protect society and deter the criminal, social impact of the crime and effect of sentence on social order are relevant considerations — Court must also keep in view rights of victim of crime and society at large — Sentence should reflect conscience of society and should be stern where it should be — Imposition of meagre sentences on account of lapse of time, as in this case, not permissible (Paras 9, 10 and 14 to 17). State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559: AIR 2005 SC 682: 2005 Cri LJ 913.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2005]

[Ed.: See in this regard (2005) 8 SCC 1 & 8]

[9655] — S. 376 — Proportionality of sentence — Sentence should be commensurate with gravity of offence — Relevant factors to be taken into account while determining proper sentence — Held, no formula of a foolproof nature is possible that would provide a reasonable criterion in determining a just and appropriate punishment — Due consideration should be given to facts and circumstances of case, having regard to various factors including nature of offence and manner in which it was executed or committed, motive for the crime, conduct of accused and all other attendant circumstances — Aggravating and mitigating factors should be delicately balanced — Discretion in determination of quantum of punishment is required to be exercised judiciously and judicially — Extent of adherence to principle of proportionality, while sentences were determined in actual practice, discussed — On facts, reduction of sentence of imprisonment of seven years' RI imposed by trial court under S. 376(1), to period already undergone (three years and six months in case of one of the co-accused, and two months in case of the other) by High Court, held, not proper — Sentence imposed by trial court restored — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 28 & 29 (Paras 11 to 13, 19 and 20). State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559: AIR 2005 SC 682: 2005 Cri LJ 913.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2005]

(vi) Background/station/education of accused

[9656] — S. 376 — Rape — Sentence — Courts should impose sentence commensurate with the gravity of the offence having regard to facts and circumstances of the case — Courts should not show any leniency or mercy to persons committing heinous crime of rape on innocent helpless girls — Socio-economic status, race, caste, creed etc. of accused or victim are irrelevant considerations in awarding sentence — Crimes of violence on women should be severely dealt with — Sentence should serve as a deterrent for commission of like offences by others

24.(g)(vi) Principles for sentencing - Background/station/education of accused (contd.)

Protection of society and deterring the criminal is the avowed object of law and that is required to be achieved by imposing an appropriate sentence. The sentencing courts are expected to consider all relevant facts and circumstances bearing on the question of sentence and proceed to impose a sentence commensurate with the gravity of the offence. Courts must hear the loud cry for justice by the society in cases of the heinous crime of rape on innocent helpless girls of tender years, as in this case, and respond by imposition of proper sentence. Public abhorrence of the crime needs reflection through imposition of appropriate sentence by the court. To show mercy in the case of such a heinous crime would be a travesty of justice and the plea for leniency is wholly misplaced. The courts are expected to properly operate the sentencing system and to impose such sentence for a proved offence, which may serve as a deterrent for the commission of like offences by others. Sexual violence apart from being a dehumanising act is an unlawful intrusion of the right to privacy and sanctity of a female. It is a serious blow to her supreme honour and offends her self-esteem and dignity — it degrades and humiliates the victim and where the victim is a helpless innocent child, it leaves behind a traumatic experience. The courts are, therefore, expected to deal with cases of sexual crime against women with utmost sensitivity. Such cases need to be dealt with sternly and severely. A socially sensitised Judge is a better statutory armour in cases of crime against women than long clauses of penal provisions, containing complex exceptions and provisos. (Paras 18, 13, 15 and 16)

Therefore, while maintaining the conviction of the respondent for an offence under Section 376 IPC besides all other offences, the sentence of 4 years' RI, as imposed by the High Court, is enhanced to 10 years' RI for the said offence. (Para 19). State of Karnataka v. Krishnappa, (2000) 4 SCC 75: 2000 SCC (Cri) 755: AIR 2000 SC 1470: 2000 Cri LJ 1793.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

State of A.P. v. Bodem Sundara Rao, (1995) 6 SCC 230: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1097; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on [9657] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Sentence — Accused guilty of abduction and rape — Accused holding responsible positions of Lambardar and Sarpanch in village — Held, sentence of three years' and four years' R.I. and fine justified. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1972) 2 SCC 749: 1972 SCC (Cri) 793: AIR 1972 SC 2661: (1973) 2 SCR 197: 1973 Cri LJ 179.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1972]

(vii) Other

[9658] — S. 376 — Rape — Sentence — Mitigating factors — Accused and prosecutrix were related and were immature teenagers with an age difference of 2-3 years — No mark of violence found on the body of prosecutrix — Long time elapsed since happening of the incident — Both trial court and High Court had acquitted the accused and after the acquittal by a passage of time the members of the two families must have buried the hatchet — On facts held, a lenient view should be taken as regards the sentence and as such sentence already undergone by the accused would be sufficient to meet the ends of justice

As regards the sentence, a lenient view may be taken for the reason that the prosecutrix and the accused are related. They were both teenagers with an age difference of about 2-3 years. Both were immature and young. Evidence indicates no marks of violence at all on any part of the body of the prosecutrix. The incident happened in 1993. After the acquittal, by the passage of time, the members of the two families must have buried the hatchet, if any, arisen on account of this incident. It was argued that a further order for custodial sentence at this distance of time may cause rupture to social harmony in the village life and may only help to rekindle the flames of anger which have been smouldering for so long between near relatives. Having regard to all these matters, it must be held that the sentence already undergone by the accused would be sufficient to meet the ends of justice. (Para 17). State of H.P. v. Mango Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 224: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331: AIR 2000 SC 2798.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2000]

[9659] — S. 376 — Reduction of sentence — Appellant sentenced to ten years' imprisonment with fine of Rs 5000 — Held, considering that offence was committed six years back and appellant who was also poor, had been under imprisonment for five years, sentence reduced to the period already undergone — Sentence of fine, however, confirmed — Directed to be paid to prosecutrix

(Para 27). Zindar Ali Sheikh v. State of W.B., (2009) 3 SCC 761: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 737: AIR 2009 SC 1467: 2009 Cri LJ 1324: (2009) 2 CHN 19 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 941 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2009]

[9660] — Ss. 376, 363, 366 and 368 — Abduction and rape — Sentence — Mitigating factors — The three respondent accused acquitted by the trial court more than a decade ago and since then not involved in any other offence — They aged between 21-24 years at the time of occurrence and by now all of them and the prosecutrix got married and settled down in life — Held, sentence of 5 years' RI and a fine of Rs 5000 each is appropriate for offence under S. 376 — But, in the circumstances of the case, it is not desirable to award any compensation particularly as no scheme as suggested in Delhi Domestic Working Women's Forum case has been drawn up. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 1996 SC 1393.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1996]

Distinguished in State of M.P. v. Bablu Natt, (2009) 2 SCC 272

But Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. in a later case of State of Karnataka v. Krishnappa, (2000) 4 SCC 75 refused reliance on the above decision by the accused and restored the sentence of 10 years fixed by the trial court for offence under S. 376 IPC See discussion on this aspect in Kamal Kishore v. State of H.P., (2000) 4 SCC 502 at 508

[9661] — Ss. 376 and 366 — Sentence — Rape of a minor girl aged 15 years by a young boy of 17 years of age — Prosecutrix a consenting party — In view of the fact that it was a one-time act and also the young age of the appellant sentence of imprisonment reduced to the period already undergone with a fine of Rs 12,000 to be paid to the prosecutrix as compensation. Jarnail Singh v. State of Punjab, (1998) 8 SCC 629: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1617.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and Sujata V. Manohar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1996]

[9662] — Ss. 376 r/w 511 — Sentence — Mitigating factors — Sentence reduced in the special circumstances of the case

In the present case serious view should have been taken of the crime committed by the appellant by misusing his position as a father of a girl friend of PWs 1 and 2, tricking them into entering the house and taking undue advantage of the situation by subjecting them to sexual harassment. But having regard to the cumulative effect of the special circumstances, viz. the appellant lost his job in view of the conviction recorded by the High Court, he must have suffered great humiliation in the society, the prospects of getting a suitable match for his own daughter have perhaps been marred in view of the stigma in the wake of the finding of guilt recorded against him in the context of such an offence and the incident occurred some seven years back and about six and a half years elapsed since the dismissal of appeal by the High Court, the ends of justice will be satisfied if the substantive sentence imposed by the High Court for the offence under S. 376 read with S. 511 is reduced from one of 2½ year RI to one of 15 months' RI. The other sentences will, however, remain intact. Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728: AIR 1983 SC 753: 1983 Cri LJ 1096.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and M.P. Thakkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-5-1983]

(viii) Sentence reduced

[9663] — S. 376 — Conviction and sentence — On facts held, prosecutrix being not a girl of easy virtue could not have voluntarily allowed the accused to sexually assault her when she ultimately married the other accused within 10-15 days of her elopement — Her silence about non-reporting to the witnesses must be taken to be either because of fear of reprisal or to protect her image — Conviction upheld — Offence being of 1982, prior to prescription of minimum sentence, the sentence reduced to that already undergone. State of A.P. v. P. Narasimha, (1994) 4 SCC 453: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1180.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.M. Sahai and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1994]

[9664] — S. 376/S. 354 — Rape alleged for the first time after eleven days of the occurrence for which no explanation put forth — Effect — Where on the basis of the FIR and the facts as alleged and proved only offence under S. 354 made out, conviction of appellant under S. 376 unsustainable — Sentence of imprisonment for period already undergone i.e. 13 months would serve the ends of justice (Paras 3 and 4). Tejpal v. State of M.P., (2006) 9 SCC 762: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 398.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.N. Agrawal, A.K. Mathur and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2006]

(ix) Sentence not reduced/enhanced

[9665] — S. 376(1) r/w S. 511 and Ss. 324 and 452 — Reduction of sentence — Rape case — Whether, on facts, High Court justified in reducing the sentence to the period undergone, without indicating any reason — Relying on the principles enunciated in Ghanshyam Singh case, (2003) 8 SCC 13 and Babbu Barkare case, (2005) 5 SCC 413, held, High Court's order was unsustainable, hence, set aside (Paras 2, 5 and 8 to 10). State of M.P. v. Pappu, (2008) 16 SCC 758: (2009) 74 AIC 173 (SC): (2008) 3 APLJ 109 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2008]

State of M.P. v. Ghanshyam Singh, (2003) 8 SCC 13: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1935; State of M.P. v. Babbu Barkare, (2005) 5 SCC 413: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1335, relied on [9666] — S. 376(2)(f) — Sentence — Rape of minor girl of 8 years by a medical graduate without rupturing her hymen — Victim now 19 years old still unmarried and suffering the agony of the traumatic experience and shame and under an impression that her future chances for getting married and settling down in a respectable family completely lost — High Court while observing that "the respondent's activities were menace to the neighbours" erroneously convicting the accused under S. 354 showing misplaced sympathy to the accused by imposing a grossly inadequate sentence of only fine of Rs 3000 on the ground that accused was gainfully employed and there was nothing to show that he was indulging in his nefarious activities — Having regard to the seriousness and gravity of the repugnant offence committed by the accused under S. 376, held, justice demands award of sentence of 7 years' RI and fine of Rs 25,000 (in default 1½ years' RI) if realised to be paid to the victim girl. Madan Gopal Kakkad v. Naval Dubey, (1992) 3 SCC 204: 1992 SCC (Cri) 598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1992]

25. Witnesses

[9667] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape — Independent witness — Examination of — Necessity — Submission that apart from PWs 4 and 5 (elder sister and mother of prosecutrix) no other independent witness was examined to support allegations of rape — Held, when a minor girl alleges rape and her testimony is not shaken in cross-examination, there is no reason to disbelieve her as no girl would ever lie on such a vital issue — Besides, her testimony was corroborated by PWs 4 and 5 to whom she had reported the incident immediately after occurrence — Furthermore, on facts held, there was an independent witness PW 6, who though turned hostile at one stage of her examination had admitted that PW 5 had told her that accused had raped her daughter — She also stated that on making enquiries prosecutrix had narrated entire incident to her (Paras 15 and 16). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2009) 16 SCC 697: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 387.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

[9668] — Ss. 375 and 376 — Rape of a minor — Child witness — Testimony — Reliability — Submission that both the prosecutrix and her elder sister were child witnesses and they therefore should not be believed, and that they were tutored by their parents and police — Held, evidence of a child cannot be rejected outrightly and same must be evaluated with great circumspection — In instant case, depositions of PWs 3 and 4 as regards alleged occurrence was found firm and convincing and same could not be said to be influenced by any tutoring — There was no reason as to why a child on her age would falsely implicate the accused for the offence which was indisputably committed on her (Paras 19, 20 and 22 to 24). State of H.P. v. Suresh Kumar, (2009) 16 SCC 697.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-5-2009]

[9669] — Ss. 376 and 302 — Child witness — Examination of — Must be nearabout the date and time of the incident — Rape and murder of a girl aged 5 years — Solitary testimony of a child aged 4 years that while returning home along with the deceased after purchasing a balloon, accused took the deceased inside his house saying that her feet were mudstained — Not clear from her statement whether that happened before the date and time of the incident or on the date on which dead body of deceased was found — How and in what manner investigating officer came to know about this child witness so as to record her statement during investigation also remaining a mystery — Child witness examined by trial court about one year after the incident — On asking a few questions by way of preliminary examination, trial Judge finding that the witness could "answer some of the questions" — Even taking her testimony at its face value, no incriminating inference could be drawn against the accused on that basis so as to connect him with the crime — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 8 and 3. Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2001]

— S. 377 See also Ss. 302, 376(2)(f), 377, 363 and 201

See also Ss. 375 and 377

See also Ss. 376 and 377, etc.

See also Ss. 451 and 377

[9670] — S. 377 — Anal intercourse/Sodomy — Proof of subjection to — Likely medical evidence

When an expert categorically ruled out the commission of an unnatural offence having regard to his expertise, it was obligatory on the part of the prosecution to draw his attention so as to enable him to furnish an explanation. It was contended that lacerations are likely to disappear if the examination is made after two to three days and nature of injuries would also depend upon several factors. PW 3, doctor in his evidence stated that the tissues around the anus are hard and rough. At the time of answering the calls of nature, the extra skin will be expanded. Immediately after it will come to original status. By examination it was found that the boy was not habitually used for anal intercourse. If there is continuous act of intercourse for about a week or even 2, 3 days it can be found out as to whether he had had any intercourse or not. (Paras 30, 29 and 28)

It may be true that absence of medical evidence by itself may not be a crucial factor in all cases, but, the same has to be taken into consideration as a relevant factor when other evidence points towards the innocence of the appellant. It is not a case where only one view was possible. It is a well-settled principle of law that where two views are possible, the High Court would not ordinarily interfere with the judgment of acquittal. (Paras 30 and 38). Gowrishankara Swamigalu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 14 SCC 411: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 813: AIR 2008 SC 2349: (2008) 65 AIC 263 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3042.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

Ejaj Ahmad: Sexual Offences; Modi: Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, referred to [9671] — S. 377 — Appreciation of Evidence — Delay in filing FIR — Effect of — Effect — When material — Delay by itself may not be a ground to disbelieve prosecution case — But where the prosecution case (or main prosecution witness relying on whom conviction is based) itself is doubtful, held, the court may take a serious notice of delay in lodging the FIR — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

Delay in lodging of a first information report although by itself may not be a ground to disbelieve the entire prosecution case, but each case must be judged on its own facts. If the story of the complainant victim, PW 1 is to be accepted at its face value, the court may not take serious notice of delay in lodging the first information report. If PW 1 had returned to school on 3-8-1986 and attempts were made by the appellant immediately thereafter to send for him for repeating the commission of the same offence (of sodomy), there was no reason why the first information report was not lodged immediately. (Paras 17 and 18)

According to PW 4 as also PW 8, PW 1 came back to the house only on the Rakshabandhan day and stayed there for 20 days. He had to be persuaded to return to school. PW 8 came with them. Whereas according to PWs 4 and 8, they came to know about the incident on or about 18-8-1986 and Respondent 2 and his brother having stayed in the house for 20 days, it remains a mystery how first information report could be lodged on 29-8-1986. PW 4, the victim's mother in her deposition completely denied to have made any statement before the police officer on 31-8-1986. The reason is not very far to seek. Her attention was drawn to her previous statements where she had alleged that her son had mentioned about the incidents on 18-8-1986 and left the house on 28-8-1986. (Paras 19, 27 and 25)

It is unlikely that no step would be taken by the guardians when they came to know about the incident. PW 8 (the victim's maternal uncle) was attached to the Mutt. It was he, who was instrumental for admission of the boy in the Mutt. He knew the administrator. He did not meet the appellant to make enquiries. He did not meet the senior Swamiji to lodge a complaint. He did not even meet the administrator. PW 4 was not an illiterate lady. She had studied up to IXth standard. She had been working in a school as an aaya. Her sister is a teacher in a school. (Para 20). Gowrishankara Swamigalu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 14 SCC 411: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 813: AIR 2008 SC 2349: (2008) 65 AIC 263 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3042.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

[9672] — S. 377 — Entitlement of defence to point out improvements in subsequent statements under S. 161 CrPC vis-à-vis FIR — Although statements under S. 161 CrPC were not part of FIR, held, defence is entitled to show improvements vis-à-vis the allegations in the FIR

The subsequent statement may not be a part of the first information report being a statement under Section 161 of the Code; but the defence is entitled to show that improvements have been made therein vis-à-vis the allegations made in the first information report. That there exists some improvement is not in dispute. Immediately, a purported statement was taken after the first information report was lodged. A further statement was recorded that PW 1, the victim complainant had himself written the first information report. But the contents of the first information report clearly demonstrate that the same has been drafted by a person who is well versed in legal language. A bare perusal of the first information report itself shows that it cannot be in the handwriting of a student studying in Class IX i.e. the victim. It was in very good handwriting. It was written systematically. There was no mistake. There was no hesitation in writing. It was absolutely neat and clean. (Para 23). Gowrishankara Swamigalu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 14 SCC 411: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 813: AIR 2008 SC 2349: (2008) 65 AIC 263 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3042.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

[9673] — S. 377 — Expert opinion — Doubts — Duty/Obligation of prosecution — Helping expert with factual information to arrive at correct explanations regarding commission of offence — Expert ruling out commission of unnatural offence under S. 377 IPC — Doubt regarding disappearance of lacerations due to delayed medical examination — Held, it is obligatory on the part of the prosecution to draw the attention of expert to such doubt so as to enable him to furnish an explanation — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 45 — CrPC, 1973, S. 157

When an expert categorically ruled out the commission of an unnatural offence having regard to his expertise, it was obligatory on the part of the prosecution to draw his attention so as to enable him to furnish an explanation. It was contended that lacerations are likely to disappear if the examination is made after two to three days and nature of injuries would also depend upon several factors. PW 3, doctor in his evidence stated that the tissues around the anus are hard and rough. At the time of answering the calls of nature, the extra skin will be expanded. Immediately after it will come to original status. By examination it was found that the boy was not habitually used for anal intercourse. If there is continuous act of intercourse for about a week or even 2, 3 days it can be found out as to whether he had had any intercourse or not. (Paras 30, 29 and 28)

It may be true that absence of medical evidence by itself may not be a crucial factor in all cases, but, the same has to be taken into consideration as a relevant factor when other evidence points towards the innocence of the appellant. It is not a case where only one view was possible. It is a well-settled principle of law that where two views are possible, the High Court would not ordinarily interfere with the judgment of acquittal. (Paras 30 and 38). Gowrishankara Swamigalu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 14 SCC 411: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 813: AIR 2008 SC 2349: (2008) 65 AIC 263 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3042.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

Ejaj Ahmad: Sexual Offences; Modi: Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, referred to [9674] — S. 377 — Inconsistency between circumstantial evidence and prosecution case — Discrepancies in the prosecution case — Reversal of acquittal by High Court — High Court placing reliance only on evidence of the complainant, PW 1 the alleged victim of sodomy — Sustainability. (Paras 34, 17, 31 and 18). Gowrishankara Swamigalu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 14 SCC 411: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 813: AIR 2008 SC 2349: (2008) 65 AIC 263 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3042.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

[9675] — S. 377 — Rule of corroboration of testimony of the victim same as under S. 376. Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 SCR 377: 1952 Cri LJ 547.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Fazl Ali and Vivian Bose, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1951]

[9676] — S. 377 — Sentence — Reduced from three years to 6 months' RI — Factors considered in reducing the sentence stated

Although the absence of any force used by the accused, the notions of permissive society and the legalisation of homosexuality in some countries cannot influence the court while convicting the accused under S. 377, but in judging the depravity of the action for determining the quantum of sentence, all the relevant aspects bearing on the question of nature of offence and quantum of sentence must be kept in view. So considered the substantive sentence of 3 years' RI in the present case must be reduced to 6 months' RI. Fazal Rab Choudhary v. State of Bihar, (1982) 3 SCC 9: 1982 SCC (Cri) 529: AIR 1983 SC 323.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-1982]

[9677] — S. 377 — Unnatural offence — Sentence — Conviction for sodomy — Accused highly educated and cultured but suffering from mental aberration — Sentence reduced to that already undergone. Chitranjan Dass v. State of U.P., (1974) 4 SCC 454: 1974 SCC (Cri) 490: AIR 1974 SC 2352: 1975 Cri LJ 30: 1975 Punj LR (D) 16.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-1973]

[9678] — S. 377 — Unnatural offence — Sodomy — Appreciation of evidence — Alleged human conduct in respect of commission of the offence, whether natural —Act allegedly committed at 8 o'clock in the morning, for a continuous period of seven days, inside the school premises — Appellant-accused Swamiji allegedly calling the victim complainant, PW 1 through PW 2 and G, to office rooms attached with staff and members — Though the office room was partitioned and one part of it was converted into a bedroom, held, it is against natural human conduct that such an act would be committed at 8 o'clock in the morning and that too for a continuous period of seven days — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114

On 18-7-1986 at about 8.30 a.m., the appellant Swamiji in a position of authority in the Mutt school allegedly through PW 2, P and G called the complainant, PW 1 a student of the IXth standard to his office. The office had been partitioned and one part of it had been converted into a bedroom. PW 1 alleged that he was then subjected to unnatural offence by the appellant. His clothes, anus and panche (lungi) got soiled. He allegedly came back to his house with his brother on 28-7-1986. He gave the dirty clothes for washing to his mother. His mother, PW 4 found sticky substances in the lungi. When accosted, he allegedly told her about the indecent behaviour of the appellant. PW 8, B, the maternal uncle of Respondent 2 at that time was also present. The victim was allegedly persuaded to go back to the school. He came back to the school on 3-8-1986. PW 9, S and N were said to have been asked by the appellant to bring him again to the appellant's office. He declined to come. He allegedly made a complaint to the senior Swamiji as regards the incident who assured him of looking thereinto and asked him not to make any complaint, the prestige of the Mutt being involved. However, no action was allegedly taken. PW 1 thereafter lodged a first information report on 29-8-1986 at about 6.30 p.m. The appeal against acquittal and the criminal revision application were taken up together for hearing by the High Court. The High Court by the impugned order convicted the appellant-accused.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The question as to whether the witnesses in criminal cases, irrespective of the nature of offence should be fully relied upon or not, would depend upon the facts of each case. There cannot be any precedent on facts. The entire facts and circumstances of this case must be taken note of. The High Court merely relied upon the evidence of the complainant victim, PW 1. His statements were taken as gospel truth. Only on the basis thereof, all other factors pointing out the discrepancies in the prosecution case were lost sight of. The offence of sodomy was said to have been repeated by the appellant upon Respondent 2 (a student of the Mutt school) for seven days at about the same time. It is wholly unlikely that a student of a school of the Mutt, where compulsorily prayer has to be offered on a clean cloth and as apart from two pairs of lungi and two pairs of school uniforms he did not have anything else, had been putting on the same lungi at least for about seven days while visiting the appellant at his call. From the statements of PW 4, the mother of Respondent 2 it appears that according to PW 1, his mother used to come to the school for washing the clothes once in a week or so. At the same time, soap had been provided to PW 1 for washing his clothes. This conduct on the part of PW 1 throws serious doubt on the whole story. (Paras 34, 17, 31 and 18)

It is against natural human conduct that sodomy would be committed at 8 o'clock in the morning and that too continuously for seven days. The site plan shows that the office of the senior Swamiji is only 5 ft away from the office of the appellant. There was a storeroom and also a room for sitting of the other staff members attached to the room. Even if PW 2 and G had been asked to bring the victim, PW 1 with them, it is against all human conduct that after closing the door they would be asked to be in the room and except seeing the act with their own eyes, for all intent and purport they would know what had been happening in the room. Despite the same, according to PW 2, when they came out of the room, PW 1 was asked about what had happened. He allegedly stated thereabout. According to the complainant, PW 2 and G called him only for the first day and not thereafter. How, then on all the other days, he went to the office room of the appellant in the same way is not explained. PW 2 and G as also PW 9 were not studying with him in the same class. They used to stay on the third floor of the hostel; whereas PW 1 used to stay on the ground floor thereof. (Paras 21 and 22). Gowrishankara Swamigalu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 14 SCC 411: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 813: AIR 2008 SC 2349: (2008) 65 AIC 263 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3042.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

State of Kerala v. Kurissum Moottil Antony, (2007) 1 SCC 627: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 403; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, relied on

B.C. Deva v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 12 SCC 122: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 253, distinguished [9679] — S. 377 — Unnatural offences — Ingredients — Held are: (i) carnal intercourse, and (ii) against order of nature — PWs 1 and 4 stating that A-2 and A-3 used to have sex and fellatio with them and other boys on many occasions — Held, ingredients of S. 377 proved — Conviction restored — Sentence of 6 years' RI and fine of GBP 20,000 on each accused, confirmed (Paras 53 to 56). Childline India Foundation v. Allan John Waters, (2011) 6 SCC 261.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision : 18-3-2011]

Vishal Jeet v. Union of India, (1990) 3 SCC 318: 1990 SCC (Cri) 482, relied on [9680] — Ss. 377, 363, 376 r/w S. 511 — Sodomy, attempt to rape and kidnapping — Conviction justified — Prosecutrix (aged 6 years) lured by appellant (aged between 16-18 years) and taken for a ride on a moped — He attempting to rape her, but having failed, committing intercourse through rectum — Medical report undisputed — Fact that the appellant who was known to the prosecutrix and her family, was identified the next day, even before FIR was lodged, proved — Held, conviction of appellant under Ss. 363, 376/511 and 377 and sentence of RI for 3 years, 5 years and 7 years respectively imposed by trial court and affirmed by the High Court called for no interference (Paras 6, 2, 16 and 10). Jameel v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 11 SCC 420: AIR 2007 SC 971: 2007 Cri LJ 1425: (2007) 51 AIC 753 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2007]

[9681] — Ss. 377, 373, 372, 323 r/w Ss. 109 and 120-B — Testimony of some only of the victims and certain social activists deeply involved in espousing victims' cause — Corroboration — Need for — Allegations of commission of unnatural offences with a number of victim boys — Only two boys (PWs 1 and 4) and two social activists (PWs 2 and 3) examined in court, the latter two being deeply involved in espousing the boys' cause and who deposed as prosecution witnesses as well — Held, further corroboration not required — No variance between examination-in-chief and cross-examination with regard to material particulars of sexual abuse — Omissions found were occasioned because Public Prosecutor had put questions which IO had not — Delay in divulging abuse inconsequential — Though conviction solely on basis of testimonies of PW 2 (social activist and lawyer working for welfare of uncared street children) and PW 3 (retired Principal and member of Monitoring Committee on Juvenile Justice) unsustainable but considering their initiation, work and interviews with children which laid foundation for investigation, their statements cannot be ignored as unacceptable — There was no need for further corroboration since it was not necessary to examine more victims of similar nature — It was also possible that since the boys were provided basic necessities in shelter homes, out of fear and to continue living in same shelter, boys other than PWs 1 and 4 may not have complained — Impugned judgment acquitting accused set aside and conviction and sentence passed by trial court restored — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 5, 6 and 7 (Paras 30 to 52). Childline India Foundation v. Allan John Waters, (2011) 6 SCC 261.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision : 18-3-2011]

State of Kerala v. Kurissum Moottil Antony, (2007) 1 SCC 627: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 403; Rafiq v. State of U.P., (1980) 4 SCC 262: 1980 SCC (Cri) 947; Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 Cri LJ 547; State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551: 2004 SCC (Cri) 31, followed [9682] — Ss. 377, 373, 372, 323 r/w Ss. 109 and 120-B — Unnatural offences against children in shelter homes — Child sex tourism — Offence committed under S. 377 IPC — Corroboration — Whether necessary — Conviction restored — Anchorage Shelters set up by A-3, a British National — A-2 his friend, also a British National and a frequent visitor to the Shelters — Victims PWs 1 and 4 deposing in detail about activities in Anchorage Shelters which indicating criminal conspiracy amongst accused A-1 to A-3 to obtain possession of vulnerable minor street boys and subjecting them to sexual abuse — PWs 1 and 4 stating that A-2 and A-3 had sex and fellatio with them and other boys on many occasions — No sexual activity alleged against A-1 excepting that he used to cane/beat them on flimsy grounds — No variance between examination-in-chief and cross-examination with regard to material particulars of sexual abuse — Omissions found were occasioned because Public Prosecutor had put questions which IO had not — Delay in divulging abuse inconsequential — Though conviction solely on basis of testimonies of PW 2 (social activist and lawyer working for welfare of uncared street children) and PW 3 (retired Principal and member of Monitoring Committee on Juvenile Justice) unsustainable but considering their initiation, work and interviews with children which laid foundation for investigation, their statements cannot be ignored as unacceptable — There was no need for further corroboration since it was not necessary to examine more victims of similar nature — It was also possible that since the boys were provided basic necessities in shelter homes, out of fear and to continue living in same shelter, boys other than PWs 1 and 4 may not have complained — Impugned judgment acquitting accused set aside and conviction and sentence passed by trial court restored: A-1's sentence of 3 years' and A-2 and A-3's sentence of 6 years' RI each, confirmed — Trial Judge directed to ensure recovery and disbursal of compensation amount of GBP 20,000 each from A-2 and A-3 — Juvenile Justice Act, 1986, S. 23 — CrPC, 1973, S. 357. Childline India Foundation v. Allan John Waters, (2011) 6 SCC 261.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision : 18-3-2011]

State of Kerala v. Kurissum Moottil Antony, (2007) 1 SCC 627: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 403; Rafiq v. State of U.P., (1980) 4 SCC 262: 1980 SCC (Cri) 947; Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 3 SCC 217: 1983 SCC (Cri) 728; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54: 1952 Cri LJ 547; State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, (1990) 1 SCC 550: 1990 SCC (Cri) 210; Bhupinder Sharma v. State of H.P., (2003) 8 SCC 551: 2004 SCC (Cri) 31, followed

— S. 378 See also Ss. 390, 378 and 383

[9683] — S. 378 — Accused snatching revolver from member of complainant's party to prevent further bloodshed and surrendering it to the police at the earliest — Held, there was no intent to steal. Mohar Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1980 Supp SCC 655: 1981 SCC (Cri) 552.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, A.D. Koshal and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-1979]

[9684] — S. 378 — Circumstantial evidence — Last seen together and recovery of ornaments — Conviction upheld under Ss. 302 and 379. Nisa Stree v. State of Orissa, AIR 1954 SC 279: 1954 Cri LJ 743.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.C. Mahajan, S.R. Das and N.H. Bhagwati, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-1953]

See more cases under S. 411 and S. 302

[9685] — S. 378 — "Dishonest intention" — What is — 'Theft' under IPC differs from 'larceny' in English law

A person can be said to have dishonest intention if in taking the property it is his intention to cause gain, by unlawful means, of the property to which the person so gaining is not legally entitled or to cause loss, by wrongful means, of property to which the person so losing is legally entitled. It is further clear from the definition that the gain or loss contemplated need not be a total acquisition or a total deprivation but it is enough if it is a temporary retention of property by the person wrongfully gaining or a temporary "keeping out" of property from the person legally entitled. This is clearly brought out in illustration (1) to S. 378, Penal Code, and is uniformly recognised by various decisions of the High Courts which point out that in this respect 'theft' under the Indian Penal Code differs from 'larceny' in English law which contemplated permanent gain or loss. K.N. Mehra v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1957 SC 369: 1957 SCR 623: 1957 Cri LJ 552, 555.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B. Jagannadhadas, Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1957]

Queen-Empress v. Shri Churn Chunge, ILR 22 Cal 1017; and Queen-Empress v. Nagappa, ILR 15 Bom 344, approved

[9686] — S. 378 — 'Dishonestly' — Illegal seizure and impounding of cattle in purported exercise of power under S. 10 of Cattle Trespass Act, 1871 — No wrongful loss to owner of property — Hence does not amount to theft

A person is said to do a thing dishonestly when he does anything with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another person. In the case of illegal seizures and impounding of cattle the person seizing the cattle does not gain anything. He simply takes the cattle to the pound. He does not use them for his purpose. He in fact, exercise no greater dominion over those cattle than that of being in their custody on their journey to the pound. The owner of the cattle, seized illegally suffers no loss, and that therefore the act of illegal seizure of cattle does not cause any wrongful loss to the owner of the cattle. It follows that the person seizing cattle purporting to act under the provisions of the Cattle Trespass Act does not cause any wrongful loss to the owner of the cattle.

An act done in accordance with the provisions of the Act cannot be considered to be a dishonest act, and would not justify the conclusion that the taking of the cattle to the pound amounted to the offence of theft. Ramratan v. State of Bihar, AIR 1965 SC 926: (1965) 1 SCR 293: 1965 BLJR 399: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 18, 22-2.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.K. Sarkar, K.N. Wanchoo and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-1964]

Empress v. Ram Jiwan, 1881 All WN 158 and Dayal v. Emperor, AIR 1943 Oudh 280, 44 Cri LJ 640, approved

[9687] — S. 378 — "Move that property" — Illegal seizure of cattle found trespassing on land — Does not amount to theft

Till the property is moved, no offence of theft can be committed even if the alleged offender had intended to take dishonestly the property out of the possession of any other person without his consent. Mere seizure of cattle found trespassing on land does not amount to moving the cattle. The act of moving the cattle would be subsequent to seizing them. It follows therefore that the seizure of cattle, though illegal, cannot amount to the offence of theft. Ramratan v. State of Bihar, AIR 1965 SC 926: (1965) 1 SCR 293: 1965 BLJR 399: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 18, 22.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.K. Sarkar, K.N. Wanchoo and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-9-1964]

[9688] — S. 378 — Possession of railway property — Accused found moving trolley loaded with railway property — Held, possession proved — Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1966 — S. 3(a). Purna Chandra Sen Gupta v. Supdt. & Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, (1994) 1 SCC 429: 1994 SCC (Cri) 430: (1994) 31 ACC 22.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-1993]

[9689] — S. 378 — Principles for interpretation of — Definition contained in policy — "Burglary" defined in policy as theft preceded by use of force or violence — Theft not so preceded, on facts, if covered by policy — Held, the terms of the policy shall govern the contract between the parties and they have to abide by the definition given therein, and all those expressions appearing in the policy have to be construed as it is and something cannot be added, subtracted or substituted — Parties cannot rely on the definition given in other enactments — Therefore, the definition of burglary in criminal law will be of no avail to the insured, and he is restricted to the definition provided in the insurance policy — Supreme Court however not ordering recovery of compensation already given on orders of Consumer Forums below — Court making suggestion that terms of the policy be suitably amended so that burglary is given a meaning closer to the realities of life, and the common man is not tripped up on technical grounds — Contract Act, 1872, S. 37 — Insurance Act, 1938, S. 46 — Consumer Protection Act, 1986, Ss. 2(1)(o), (g) and (c)(ii)

The respondent took out a policy by the appellant Company against burglary and/or housebreaking. The term "burglary and/or housebreaking" was defined in terms of the policy. During the currency of the policy, the respondent on a visit to a godown covered by the said policy, found that certain goods had been stolen. Thereafter, the respondent raised a claim against the appellant Company under the aforesaid policy for having incurred the aforesaid loss by theft. The appellant Company repudiated the claim of the respondent on the ground that theft was not covered by the insurance policy as no burglary had taken place in the godown by use of force or violence. Thereafter, the respondent approached the Consumer Forum and made a claim for the loss of the said goods. The appellant Company contested the claim and took the stand that the claim was not covered as per the insurance policy. However, the District Forum overruled the objection and held that burglary includes theft and directed the appellant Company to release the claim of the respondent. Since the order of the District Forum was upheld both by the State Commission and the National Commission, the appellant was before the Supreme Court by special leave.

Allowing the appeal but not ordering the recovery of compensation already given,

Held :

It is settled law that terms of the policy shall govern the contract between the parties and they have to abide by the definition given therein and all those expressions appearing in the policy should be interpreted with reference to the terms of policy and not with reference to the definition given in other laws. The terms of the policy have to be construed as it is and something cannot be added or subtracted. Howsoever liberally may the policy be construed liberalism cannot be taken to the extent of substituting the words which are not intended. It is a matter of contract and in terms of the contract the relation of the parties shall abide and it is presumed that when the parties have entered into a contract of insurance with their eyes wide open, they cannot rely on the definition given in other enactments. Therefore, when the definition of the word 'burglary' has been defined in the policy (set out in para 4 herein) then the cause should fall within that definition. Once a party has agreed to a particular definition, he is bound by it and the definition of criminal law will be of no avail. (Paras 9 and 6)

As per the definition of the word 'burglary' in the policy, followed with the reference to violence, it is clear that if any theft is committed it should necessarily be preceded with violence i.e. entry into the premises for committing theft should involve force or violence or threat to insured or to his employees or to the members of his family. Therefore, the element of force and violence is a condition precedent for burglary and housebreaking. The term 'burglary' as defined in the English dictionary means an illegal entry into the building with an intent to commit crime such as theft. But in absence of violence or force the insurer cannot claim indemnification against the insurance company. (Paras 6 and 15)

However, all the three forums have already awarded compensation and the amount has been paid to the respondent, therefore, on the point of equity the payment which has already been made would not liked to be disturbed. However, in view of the legal position stated the orders of the District

Forum, State Commission and the National Commission cannot be upheld. (Para 16)

The terms of the policy as laid down by the insurance company should be suitably amended by the insurance company so as to make it more viable and facilitate the claimants to make their claim. The definition is so stringent in the present case that it gives rise to a difficult situation for the common man to understand that in order to maintain his claim he will have to necessarily show evidence of violence or force. The definition of the word 'burglary' should be given a meaning which is closer to the realities of life. The common man understands that he has taken out the policy against theft. He hardly understands whether it should be preceded with violence or force. (Para 17). United India Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Harchand Rai Chandan Lal, (2004) 8 SCC 644: (2004) 3 KLT 560.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-2004]

[Ed.: See also (2004) 3 SCC 694.]

[9690] — S. 378 — Temporary dispossession or deprivation of property covered — Taking need not be with intention of retaining property permanently

To commit theft one need not take moveable property permanently out of the possession of another with the intention not to return it to him. It would satisfy the definition if he took any moveable property out of the possession of another person though he intended to return it later on.

In the present case the record was in the possession of the Engineering Department under the control of the Chief Engineer. The appellant was the Superintendent in that office; he took the file out of the possession of the said engineer, removed the file from the office and handed it over to another person, and returned it to the office.

Held :

It cannot be disputed that the appellant unauthorizedly took the file from the office and handed it over to another person. He had, therefore, unlawfully taken the file from the department, and for a short time he deprived the Engineering Department of the possession of the said file. The loss need not be caused by a permanent deprivation of property but may be caused even by temporary dispossession, though the person taking it intended to restore it sooner or later. A temporary period of deprivation or dispossession of the property of another causes loss to the other. Pyare Lal Bhargava v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094: 1963 Supp (1) SCR 689: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 178.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam, K. Subba Rao, N. Rajagopala Ayyangar and J.R. Mudholkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-1962]

[9691] — S. 378 — Theft — Movable property in joint possession of husband and wife — Held, husband who is alleged to have taken away articles, cannot be considered to have committed theft

So far as the allegation in regard to criminal breach of trust is concerned, it related to the dowry articles. No allegation has been made that the appellants are guilty of commission of offence punishable under Section 3 and/or 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act. If any dowry has been given, the same would attract the provisions of the special Act in preference to the general statute. Furthermore, if any article is given by way of dowry, the question of entrustment thereof for or on behalf of the bride would not arise. (Para 30)

Allegations made in FIR merely disclose that at the time of leaving the house, the appellants had taken with them certain articles. The said articles ought to be in lawful possession of Respondent 3 (wife). The offence of theft might have been committed. But when they are in joint possession, even no offence of theft would also be made out. (Para 31). Harmanpreet Singh Ahluwalia v. State of Punjab, (2009) 7 SCC 712: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 620: 2009 Cri LJ 3462.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

[9692] — S. 378 — Theft — When occurs — Unless property is in possession of any person other than the accused, question of theft does not arise

The averments in the complaint clearly show that neither the aircrafts nor their engines were ever in the possession of IOC. It is admitted that they were in the possession of NEPC India at all relevant times. The question of NEPC committing theft of something in its own possession does not arise. (Para 19). Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2006 SC 2780: (2006) 2 Guj LH 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

[9693] — S. 378 — Theft of electrical energy is not an offence under Penal Code — It is an offence under Electricity Act — Prosecution in respect of that offence would be incompetent unless instituted at the instance of a person named in S. 50 of Electricity Act, 1910 — Electricity Act, 1910, Ss. 39 and 50. Avtar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1965 SC 666: (1965) 1 SCR 103: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 605.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.K. Sarkar, K.N. Wanchoo and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-8-1964]

AIR 1956 Bom 354: 1956 Cri LJ 701: 1964 (1) Cri LJ 472 (Pat) and AIR 1964 Mad 367: 1964 (2) Cri LJ 303 (FB), overruled

[9694] — Ss. 378 and 23 — "Wrongful gain" and "wrongful loss" — Theft of aircraft — Accused along with another flying an Indian Air Force aircraft and landing inside Pakistan — Held, theft was committed

There can be no reasonable doubt that the taking out of the aircraft by the appellant for the unauthorised flight has in fact given the appellant the temporary use of the aircraft, for his own purpose and has temporarily deprived the owner of the aircraft viz. the Government, of its legitimate use for its purposes, i.e., the use of this aircraft for the Indian Air Force Squadron that day. Such use being unauthorised and against all the regulations of aircraft-flying, was clearly a gain or loss by unlawful means. Further the unlawful aspect is emphasised by the fact that it was for flight to a place in Pakistan. The true position is that all the circumstances of the unauthorised flight justify the conclusion both as to the absence of consent and as to the unlawfulness of the means by which there has been a temporary gain or loss by the use of the aircraft. There has, therefore, been both wrongful gain to the appellant and wrongful loss to the Government.

There is no scope for any doubt in this case, that though the ultimate purpose of the flight was to go to Pakistan, the use of the aircraft for that purpose and the unauthorised and hence unlawful gain of that use to the appellant and the consequent loss to the Government of its legitimate use, can only be considered intentional. This is not by virtue of any presumption but as a legitimate inference from the facts and circumstances of the case. Therefore, the fact proved constitute theft. K.N. Mehra v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1957 SC 369: 1957 SCR 623: 1957 Cri LJ 552, 555.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B. Jagannadhadas, Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1957]

[9695] — Ss. 378 and 379 — Fish taken from tank of another will be theft

Fish in their free state are regarded as ferae naturae but they are said to be in the possession of a person who has possession of any expanse of water such as a tank, where they live but from where they cannot escape. Fishes are also regarded as being in the possession of a person who owns an exclusive right to catch them in a particular spot known as a fishery but only within that spot. There can thus be theft of fish from a tank which belongs to another and is in his possession, if the offender catches them without the consent of the owner and without any bona fide claim of right. Chandi Kumar Das Karmakar v. Abanidhar Roy, AIR 1965 SC 585: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 496.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and M. Hidayatullah and K.C. Das Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-1963]

[9696] — Ss. 378 and 379 — Theft — Ingredients of — Dishonest intention essential — Can be disproved by acting under bona fide claim

The offence of theft consists in the dishonest taking of any moveable property out of the possession of another without his consent. Dishonest intention exists when the person so taking the property intends to cause wrongful gain to himself or wrongful loss to the other. This intention is known as animus furandi and without it the offence of theft is not complete. Chandi Kumar Das Karmakar v. Abanidhar Roy, AIR 1965 SC 585: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 496.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and M. Hidayatullah and K.C. Das Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-1963]

[9697] — Ss. 378 and 379 — Theft — Mens rea necessary — Nature and extent of — Existence of bona fide claim of right, held, good defence to prosecution for theft

The ordinary rule that mens rea may exist even with an honest ignorance of law is sometimes not sufficient for theft. A claim of right in good faith, if reasonable, saves the act of taking from being theft and where such a plea is raised by the accused it is mainly a question of fact whether such belief exists or not.

It is settled law that where a bona fide claim of right exists, it can be a good defence to a prosecution for theft. An act does not amount to theft, unless there be not only no legal right but no appearance or colour of a legal right.

By the expression "colour of a legal right" is meant not a false pretence but a fair pretence, not a complete absence of claim but a bona fide claim, however weak.

In the instant case there was a dispute between the parties which had not till then been decided by the Civil Court. In these circumstances it was not improbable that the appellants considered that they were entitled as the recorded tenants, to catch fish. Catching of fish in the big tank with net was done quite openly. The circumstances bring this case within the rule that where the taking of moveable property is in the assertion of a bona fide claim of right, the act, though it may amount to a civil injury, does not fall within the offence of theft. Chandi Kumar Das Karmakar v. Abanidhar Roy, AIR 1965 SC 585: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 496, 498.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and M. Hidayatullah and K.C. Das Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-1963]

[9698] — Ss. 378 and 379 — Theft — Transfer of possession of the property however transient is an essential ingredient of. State of Maharashtra v. Vishwanath Tukaram Umale, (1979) 4 SCC 23: 1979 SCC (Cri) 893: AIR 1979 SC 1825: 1979 Cri LJ 1193.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, P.N. Shinghal and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-8-1979]

[9699] — Ss. 378, 379 and 143 — Bona fide dispute over land — Held, on facts of the case, by harvesting the standing crop, offence of theft not committed

Where the documents indicate that there was from the very inception a dispute about the land going on between the parties and the possession could have been mere symbolic possession, it is impossible to say that the appellants were not under a bona fide belief that they were entitled to the possession of the land and that being so there was no question of their having trespassed into the said land or formed an unlawful assembly for committing theft. When the entire question of possession and even title was in an extremely fluid state and the question of the respondent's possession on the date of the incident was not beyond controversy, the trial court in these circumstances ought not to have and could not have, on a mere partial view of the evidence, come to a conclusion that the appellants had formed an unlawful assembly and that as members of such unlawful assembly had been guilty of stealing the said crop. Ram Ekbal Rai v. Jaldhari Pandey, (1972) 3 SCC 841: 1973 SCC (Cri) 26: AIR 1972 SC 949: 1972 Cri LJ 584.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Shelat and H.R. Khanna, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-1972]

[9700] — Ss. 378, 379 and 380 — Bona fide claim of right held good defence to prosecution for theft

Where a bona fide claim of right exists, it can be a good defence to a prosecution for theft. An act does not amount to theft, unless there be not only no legal right but no appearance or colour of a legal right. That the goods were taken openly is a good defence. Suvvari Sanyasi Apparao v. Boddepalli Lakshminarayana, AIR 1962 SC 586: 1962 Supp (1) SCR 8: (1962) 1 Cri LJ 518: 1962 All Cri R 177.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, J.L. Kapur and M. Hidayatullah, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1961]

[9701] — Ss. 378 and 383 — Theft and extortion — Distinction between — Held, whereas offence of extortion is carried out by overpowering the will of the owner, in commission of an offence of theft the offender's intention is always to take without that person's consent (Para 12). Dhananjay v. State of Bihar, (2007) 14 SCC 768: (2007) 51 AIC 54 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1440: (2007) 2 KLJ 294 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-2-2007]

[9702] — Ss. 378, 403, 405, 415 and 425 — Petition under S. 482 CrPC for quashing criminal complaint alleging commission of various offences under Penal Code — Disputes arising from breach of contract — Civil remedy available and availed of — Remedy under criminal law — Availability of — Held, the same is not barred if the allegations disclose a criminal offence — Allegations contained in the complaint, taken on their face value, if, on facts, constituted offences under Penal Code — Maintainability of the petition under S. 482 — However, current practice of misuse of criminal process to put undue pressure in civil disputes deprecated — CrPC, 1973, S. 482. Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2006 SC 2780: (2006) 2 Guj LH 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

[9703] — Ss. 378 and 405 — Respondent taking insurance policy for his business in jewellery — On a theft in his business premises, respondent lodging a claim with the appellant — Question whether the loss was covered by the insurance policy — Interpretation of the word "entrusted" as used in the exclusion clause of the policy — High Court held that there was no entrustment on the part of the owner to the customer and that the act of removal of the goods by the customer was nothing but a plain theft — Held, it is not in dispute that the insurance policy covered the risk of theft — However, to bring the case within the exclusion clause it was for the insurer to establish that the case falls within its purview — Here, for concluding whether exclusion clause was attracted or not, loss or damage should have been occasioned, inter alia, by a customer in respect of property entrusted to him — A customer contemplated thereunder must have to be one who would be a man of trust — If a customer is not a man of trust or the property had not been entrusted to him, held, the exclusion clause would not apply — The customer who committed theft of jewellery was an unknown person as stated in the FIR — Thus, held, there was no occasion for the respondent to entrust the jewellery to him — When a customer enters into a jewellery shop, as of necessity, the owner or his agent must allow him to inspect the merchandise, the customer intends to purchase — For the said purpose, possession in the legal sense is not handed over — The owner or his agent does not lose complete control thereover — Transfer of possession of goods is a sine qua non for entrustment which was not done — Hence, the view taken by High Court was correct — Contract Act, 1872, S. 37

The respondent carried a business in jewellery. It obtained a policy known as "Jeweller Block Policy" from the appellant Insurance Company. A theft of 140 gm of jewellery worth Rs 63,000 occurred in his business premises. An FIR was lodged therefor. The respondent also lodged a claim with the appellant. The same having not been settled for a long time a complaint was filed before the State Consumer Forum by the respondent. The question before the Commission was whether the loss in question was covered by the insurance policy. The contention of the appellant was that the claim of the respondent was covered by the exclusion clause contained in the insurance policy. Commission found the claim not sustainable, inter alia, on the ground that the loss was not covered by the policy holding that the theft by customer if any has been put in exclusion clause of the policy. High Court allowed the appeal preferred by the respondent by not agreeing therewith. Hence this appeal.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

A short question which arises is whether exclusion clause 8 of the policy is applicable to the facts and circumstances of the present case. It is not in dispute that an insurance cover against theft was granted by the appellant. The insurance policy, thus, covered the risk of theft also. An insurer determines the extent of its risk. It floats the policy knowing fully well the risk it seeks to cover. Having regard to the determination of the risk only he fixes the quantum of premium. The insured while entering into a contract of insurance must precisely know the extent of his cover so that he may take out additional insurance if it is so required. (Paras 6 and 7)

However, there may be an express clause excluding the applicability of insurance cover. Wherever such exclusionary clause is contained in a policy, it would be for the insurer to show that the case falls within the purview thereof. In a case of ambiguity, it is trite, the contract of insurance shall be construed in favour of the insured. (Para 8)

Clause 8 of the contract of insurance would be attracted only where the offences specified therein are committed by any of the persons mentioned therein. For defeating the claim of the respondent, it was, thus, obligatory on the part of the appellant to establish that the conditions prescribed therein were satisfied. (Para 9)

The word "entrust" would imply giving responsibility to a person upon whom the owner has confidence. It envisages establishment of a relationship. When a customer enters into a jewellery shop, as of necessity, the owner or his agent must allow him to inspect the merchandise, the customer intends to purchase. For the said purpose, possession in the legal sense is not handed over. The owner or his agent does not lose complete control thereover. (Para 12)

For the purpose of arriving at a conclusion as to whether the exclusion clause is attracted or not, loss or damage must be occasioned, inter alia, by a customer in respect of the property entrusted to him. A customer contemplated thereunder must have to be one who would be a man of trust. If a customer is not a man of trust or the property had not been entrusted to him, the exclusion clause would not apply. The customer who committed theft of jewellery was an unknown person. It was so categorically stated in the first information report. There was, thus, no occasion for the respondent to entrust the jewellery to him. Transfer of possession of goods is a sine qua non for entrustment. The person must be handed over the possession of the property. (Paras 13 and 17). National Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Ishar Das Madan Lal, (2007) 4 SCC 105: (2007) 136 Comp Cas 320: (2007) 2 CPJ 5 (SC): (2007) 53 AIC 86 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-2007]

State of Gujarat v. Jaswantlal Nathalal, AIR 1968 SC 700: (1968) 2 SCR 408; Supdt. and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. S.K. Roy, (1974) 4 SCC 230: 1974 SCC (Cri) 399; Ram Narayan Popli v. CBI, (2003) 3 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 869; Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 Cri LJ 1116, relied on [9704] — Ss. 378 Ill. (a) and 379 — Theft — Conviction and sentence — Stealthily uprooting standing crops and removal thereof by accused from the field of deceased party firmly established on evidence — Held, act constituted theft punishable under S. 379 — However, in absence of evidence regarding value of the uprooted crops, maximum sentence provided under S. 379 need not be imposed

Whoever, intending to take dishonestly any movable property out of the possession of any person without that person's consent, moves the property in a manner to facilitate such taking will be committing theft as defined under Section 378 IPC.

A thing attached to the earth as soon as it is severed from the earth will sufficiently constitute the ingredient necessary to make the act fall under the said provision. Illustration (a) to Section 378 further clarifies the position beyond doubt that as soon as the severance is effected in order to take dishonestly such commodity out of the possession of any person without his consent, the commission of the offence of theft stood completed. In this case the oral evidence tendered by PWs, who witnessed the occurrence, firmly established the uprooting of some of the crops and removal of the same by A-1. Consequently, the accused (A-1) was rightly convicted under Section 379. However, in the absence of any substantive proof of the value of the same and the lapse of time, the maximum sentence envisaged under Section 379 need not be imposed and the interest of justice would be met if the sentence is reduced to one year's RI. (Para 10). Malhu Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2002) 5 SCC 724: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1190: AIR 2002 SC 2137: 2002 Cri LJ 2819.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2002]

[9705] — Ss. 378 Ill. (k) and 24 — Applicability of, when financier repossess goods under hire-purchase agreement — Held, Ill. (k) of S. 378 is not applicable where hirer in hire-purchase agreement defaults in making instalment payments and owner-financier then takes possession of the property (motor vehicle in this case) delivered to hirer under the agreement, as the vital element of "dishonest intention" is lacking

The plea that the appellants have committed theft is without any basis as the appellants have taken repossession of the vehicle in exercise of their right under the agreement. There may be instances where the owner of the goods may commit theft of his own goods as indicated in Illustration (k) of Section 378 IPC. But in the instant case, the owner repossessing the vehicle delivered to the hirer under the hire-purchase agreement will not amount to theft as the vital element of "dishonest intention" is lacking. The element of "dishonest intention" which is an essential element to constitute the offence of theft cannot be attributed to a person exercising his right under an agreement entered into between the parties as he may not have an intention of causing wrongful gain or to cause wrongful loss to the hirer. (Paras 12 and 13)

The hire-purchase agreement in law is an executory contract of sale and confers no right in rem on the hirer until the conditions for transfer of the property to him have been fulfilled. Therefore, the repossession of goods as per the term of the agreement may not amount to any criminal offence. (Para 17). Charanjit Singh Chadha v. Sudhir Mehra, (2001) 7 SCC 417: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1557: AIR 2001 SC 3721.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-2001]

R.M. Goode: Hire Purchase Law & Practice, 2nd Edn., p. 846, relied on

Sardar Trilok Singh v. Satya Deo Tripathi, (1979) 4 SCC 396: 1979 SCC (Cri) 987; K.A. Mathai v. Kora Bibbikutty, (1996) 7 SCC 212: 1996 SCC (Cri) 281, relied on

— S. 379 See also Ss. 107, 120-A, 120-B and 379

See also Ss. 120-B, 302, 34, 109, 379 and 201

See also S. 120-B r/w Ss. 218, 379, 467, 468, 471 and 419

See also Ss. 147, 148, 324, 447, 448, 427, 379, 307 and 302 r/w S. 149

See also under Ss. 299 to 304

See also Ss. 378 and 379

See also Ss. 378, 379 and 143

See also Ss. 378, 379 and 380

See also Ss. 378 Ill. (a) and 379

See also Ss. 396, 506, 341 and 379

See also Ss. 406/420/120-B and 379

See also Ss. 461, 379, 403, 342, 166 and 167

[9706] — S. 379 — Accused Government servants alleged to have participated in unauthorised cutting of crop in complainant's field — Police visiting the place at the time of occurrence and taking only one person to police station for enquiry but taking no further action — Private complaint lodged in court four days thereafter implicating several persons including the accused — Old enmity existing between complainant and accused — Implication of innocent persons cannot be ruled out in the circumstance — Hence, benefit of doubt given to the accused. Purna v. State of U.P., (1984) 2 SCC 393: 1984 SCC (Cri) 261: AIR 1984 SC 454: 1984 Cri LJ 187: 1984 ALJ 288.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-2-1983]

[9707] — S. 379 — Complaint under, against Tehsildar without sanction under S. 197 CrPC — Whether, on facts, maintainable — Applicability — Test for sanction for prosecution restated — District Collector, by an order accompanying the Revenue Collection Certificate, requiring the Tehsildar to recover a certain sum of lease money from S — Tehsildar registering the matter and getting a demand letter issued and served on S but S not making payment — Subse- quently, S appearing in the Tehsil Office with his scooter — Tehsildar seizing the scooter and getting the same auctioned — Such an act on the part of Tehsildar, held, was a bona fide act in purported exercise of the power under M.P. Land Revenue Code — Hence, in absence of necessary sanction under S. 197, CrPC, complaint under S. 379, Penal Code filed by S against the Tehsildar on account of seizure of the scooter, held, not maintainable — Further held, High Court erred in examining the legality of the order of attachment of the Collector at this stage and in holding otherwise on that ground — M.P. Land Revenue Code, 1959 (20 of 1959) — CrPC, 1973, S. 197

Before coming to a conclusion whether the provisions of Section 197 of CrPC will apply, the court must come to a conclusion that there is a reasonable connection between the act complained of and the discharge of official duty; the act must bear such relation to the duty that the accused could lay a reasonable claim that he did it in the course of the performance of his duty. Therefore, in the present case the conclusion is inescapable that the act of the Tehsildar in seizing the scooter of the respondent was in discharge of his official duty which he was required to do in purported exercise of the power under the M.P. Land Revenue Code on the basis of the order issued by the Collector for getting the lease money from the respondent and the said act cannot be said to be a pretended or fanciful claim on the part of the Tehsildar. The High Court committed error at that stage in examining the flaw or legality of the order of attachment issued by the Tehsildar. Therefore, the acts complained of by the respondent in his complaint under Section 379, IPC against the Tehsildar cannot be taken cognizance of by any court without prior sanction of the competent authority under Section 197 CrPC. Admittedly there was no such sanction of the competent authority. N.K. Ogle v. Sanwaldas, (1999) 3 SCC 284: 1999 SCC (Cri) 405: AIR 1999 SC 1437: 1999 Cri LJ 2105.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1999]

Matajog Dobey v. H.C. Bhari, AIR 1956 SC 44: (1955) 2 SCR 925: (1955) 28 ITR 941; Suresh Kumar Bhikamchand Jain v. Pandey Ajay Bhushan, (1998) 1 SCC 205: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1, followed

B. Saha v. M.S. Kochar, (1979) 4 SCC 177: 1979 SCC (Cri) 939; B.S. Sambhu v. T.S. Krishnaswamy, (1983) 1 SCC 11: 1983 SCC (Cri) 125; Pukhraj v. State of Rajasthan, (1973) 2 SCC 701: 1973 SCC (Cri) 944, distinguished [9708] — S. 379 — Dishonest abstraction of electricity — Held, is deemed to be theft within the meaning of the Penal Code and must be deemed for all purposes a theft including the purpose of imposing punishment — S. 39 must be read along with provision of IPC dealing with theft — On facts, in view of nature of the offence and long delay prosecution cannot be allowed to go on — Electricity Act, 1910, Ss. 39/44 r/w S. 379 IPC. Satya Narain Prasad v. Bhagwan Ramdas, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 629: 1996 SCC (Cri) 71.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-2-1994]

Avtar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1965) 1 SCR 103: AIR 1965 SC 666, explained

[9709] — S. 379 — Disposal of property by Magistrate — Appellant-company giving financial facility on hire-purchase basis to respondent for purchase of motor vehicle — On respondent committing default in the payment of purchase price, appellant taking possession of the vehicle as per terms of the agreement — Thereupon respondent filing complaint of theft against appellant — Trial Magistrate dropping the complaint but directing custody of the vehicle be returned the respondent on his executing an indemnity bond with surety — Appellant directed to have the question of title to vehicle determined by civil court — Order affirmed by Sessions Court and High Court — In appeal to Supreme Court held, the learned Magistrate was not right in passing the impugned order and thereby giving relief to a party which had invoked jurisdiction on false accusations — It was surprising that without making good the charge of theft the hirer, by using the State instrumentality, obtained possession of the vehicle — The approach of the courts below was totally unsustainable — Impugned order set aside and the vehicle directed to be restored to the possession of the appellant — CrPC, 1973, S. 452. Manipal Finance Corpn. Ltd. v. T. Bangarappa, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 507: 1994 SCC (Cri) 588.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-1993]

[9710] — S. 379 — Prosecution for theft — Allegation that accused was found in possession of stolen money — Accused acquitted and money found as belonging to the accused and not to the complainant — Order for payment of money to complainant could not be sustained. Pushkar Singh v. State of M.B., AIR 1953 SC 508: 1954 Cri LJ 153.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Fazl Ali, M.C. Mahajan and Vivian Bose, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-1951]

[9711] — S. 379 — Quashing of FIR — Reasoned order/Speaking order necessity — High Court allowing respondents' application for quashing FIR registered against them for alleged commission of theft by a practically unreasoned order — Impugned order set aside — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 1 and 5 to 7). Lakhwant Singh v. Jasbir Singh, (2008) 14 SCC 661: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 873: (2009) 1 ECrN 29 (SC): (2008) 70 AIC 48 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2008]

Jehan Singh v. Delhi Admn., (1974) 4 SCC 522: 1974 SCC (Cri) 558, considered and relied on

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272, relied on [9712] — S. 379 — Sentence — Accused flying away an Indian Air Force aircraft to Pakistan — Sentenced to 17 months SI — Accused already served a sentence of 11 months and 27 days and remained in jail as undertrial for about 11 months — Held, it is a fit case in which the accused need not be sent to jail again. K.N. Mehra v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1957 SC 369: 1957 SCR 623: 1957 Cri LJ 552, 556.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B. Jagannadhadas, Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1957]

[9713] — S. 379 — Theft — Allegation that appellant had stolen an attach, containing about Rs 55,000 from the possession of complainant — Conviction — Propriety — Said money and attach, recovered from the possession of the appellant — PW 9 identified the said attaché — Explanation offered by the appellant about the source of the said money found to be wholly unacceptable — Hence held, appellant's conviction under S. 379 IPC was proper (Paras 8 and 9). Gulzar v. State of M.P., (2007) 1 SCC 619: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 395: (2007) 50 AIC 123 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-1-2007]

[9714] — S. 379 — Theft — Mens rea and dishonest intention — Absence of — Bus purchased by A-2 under a hire-purchase agreement — Subsequently the bus sold to the complainant — Complainant defalcating in payment of instalment to the financier — Financier taking possession of the bus with the help of A-1 and A-2 — Held, offence of theft not made out. K.A. Mathai v. Kora Bibbikutty, (1996) 7 SCC 212: 1996 SCC (Cri) 281.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-1995]

[9715] — S. 379 — Theft — Possession — Recovery of 3.5 kg of non-ferrous metal from appellant's possession — Contention that recovery of the metal from tiffin carrier kept on the cycle of appellant, would not tantamount to recovery from possession of appellant, held, not acceptable — Conviction under S. 379 upheld. Chandreshwar Sharma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 9 SCC 245: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1500.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-2000]

[9716] — S. 379 — Theft — Recovery — Snatching of gold chain — Appellant found running, chased and apprehended but no chain recovered from him, instead an earring found from his possession — None of the PWs had seen the person who had snatched the chain — Held, evidence fell short of establishing guilt of appellant beyond doubt — Merely because for some reason the appellant was seen running or walking briskly it does not follow that he was the culprit although a strong suspicion may arise against him as in this case — Appellant entitled to be acquitted. Vindo Samuel v. Delhi Admn., 1992 Supp (3) SCC 23: 1992 SCC (Cri) 948: AIR 1992 SC 465.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M.M. Punchhi, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-1991]

[9717] — S. 379 — Theft of energy — Whether this provision extends the operation of S. 378 of IPC — Offence under the IPC or the Act — Electricity Act, 1910 — S. 39

Section 39 did not extend S. 378 in the sense of amending it or in any way altering the language used in it. Section 378, read by itself even after the enactment of S. 39, would not include a theft of electricity for electricity is not considered to be moveable property. The only way in which it can be said that S. 39 extended S. 378 is by stating that it made something which was not a theft under S. 378, a theft within the meaning of that section. It follows that if S. 39 did so, it created the offence itself and S. 378 did not do so. In this view of the matter it is not possible to say that the thing so made a theft and an offence, became one by virtue of S. 378.

Dishonest abstraction of electricity mentioned in S. 39 cannot be an offence under the IPC for under it alone it is not an offence; the dishonest abstraction is by S. 39 made a theft within the meaning of the Code, that is, an offence of the variety described in the Code as theft. As the offence is created by raising a fiction, the section which raises the fiction, namely S. 39 of the Act, must be said to create the offence. Since the abstraction is by S. 39 to be deemed to be an offence under the Code, the fiction must be followed to the end and the offence so created would entail the punishment mentioned in the Code for that offence. The punishment is not under the Code itself for under it abstraction of energy is not an offence at all. Avtar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1965 SC 666, 668, 66: (1965) 1 SCR 103: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 605.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.K. Sarkar, K.N. Wanchoo and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-8-1964]

[9718] — Ss. 379, 468, 471, 420 and 506 Pt. II — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Triable issues — Allegations relating to creation of a false agreement purporting to terminate original agreements and pilferage of records relating to a private limited company — Held on facts, issues raised in the complaint were not adjudicable solely by civil court or Company Law Board — High Court should not have quashed proceedings under S. 482 — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Para 13)

The appellant, who was the complainant, alleged in his complainant that there were two agreements between the respondents and a private limited company floated by the appellant, for development of land belonging to respondents. The respondents however forged another agreement by which the original agreements were terminated by the parties. The appellant further alleged that third accused had illegally taken away all records and accounts relating to private company floated by appellant, including two original agreements. However, the High Court concluded that there was no forgery of documents referred to in the complaint, and that there was no allegation that by using forged documents, the accused acquired gains. The High Court therefore quashed prosecution proceedings holding that appellant's grievance, if any, has to be got redressed through a civil court or Company Law Board.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court has wrongly come to conclusion that the matter in issue has to be decided by a civil court or Company Law Board. Some of the allegations referred to by High Court are not adjudicable by civil court or Company Law Board. The exercise of jurisdiction by the High Court in terms of Section 482 CrPC, cannot be maintained in this case. (Para 13). M. Viswanathan v. S.K. Tiles & Potteries (P) Ltd., (2008) 16 SCC 390: (2008) 72 AIC 68 (SC): (2009) 152 Comp Cas 335.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-2008]

Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283, relied on [9719] — S. 379 r/w S. 34 — Sentence — Conviction for harvesting of crops — Appellants poor and illiterate tribals and subjected to endless harassment by a spate of prosecutions by respondent — Two out of nine appellants given benefit of probation — Remaining appellants having earlier been given benefit of probation in another case not entitled to such benefit — However, their sentence of imprisonment reduced to period already undergone — Probation of Offenders Act, 1958, S. 4. Goda Dami v. Gangadhar Das, 1990 Supp SCC 142: 1990 SCC (Cri) 634.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-1987]

— Ss. 379/34 See also under Ss. 299 to 304

See Ss. 302/34, 307/34 and 379/34

— Ss. 379/120-B See also under Ss. 299 to 304

— Ss. 379/149 See also under Ss. 299 to 304

— S. 380 See also Ss. 4, 380 and 451

See also Ss. 71, 380 and 457

See also Ss. 149, 302/149, 148, 436/149, 380 and 201/149

See also under Ss. 299 to 304

See also Ss. 376, 457 and 380

See also Ss. 378, 379 and 380

See also Ss. 380, 201 and 120-B

See also Ss. 457 and 380

See also Ss. 457, 380, 411, 413 and 414

See also Ss. 457/34, 380/34, 10/457 and 380

See also Ss. 467, 302, 380 and 420

[9720] — S. 380 — Circumstances relied upon for conviction for the offences of murder and theft — Held, on facts, consistent only with the offence of theft — Conviction under S. 302, Indian Penal Code set aside. Hukam Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1977) 2 SCC 99: 1977 SCC (Cri) 250: AIR 1977 SC 1063: 1977 Cri LJ 639.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-2-1977]

[9721] — Ss. 380, 120-B, 302, 392, 201, 404, 414, 457 and 460/34 — Theft — Proof of — Matters to be considered — Implication of accused other than accused person from whom identifiable recovery made — Defence allegation that prosecution had not proved that there was any theft at all — Ornaments recovered from A-4 kept in a tiffin bearing name of deceased — Ornaments transferred from A-1, A-2 and A-3 to A-4 with sole objective of melting them — A-4 could not give any explanation of huge amount of ornaments melted and other things found in his possession — It was incumbent upon A-1, A-2 and A-3 to challenge finding against A-4 even if A-4 had not challenged his conviction — A katordan bearing name of deceased found by IO with other accused — There was no explanation as to how katordan came out of house of deceased — Huge amount of gold which was found with A-3 being 1347 gm, without any explanation — It does not stand to reason that police would have collected all these ornaments from house of deceased after murder and planted them with accused — Held, thus, plea that there was no theft or that prosecution had not proved any theft, unacceptable (Paras 21 to 24, 39 to 43, 47 and 48). Ramesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2011) 3 SCC 685.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-2011]

Chandmal v. State of Rajasthan, (1976) 1 SCC 621: 1976 SCC (Cri) 120; Mohd. Aman v. State of Rajasthan, (1997) 10 SCC 44: 1997 SCC (Cri) 777; Mahabir Sao v. State of Bihar, (1972) 1 SCC 505: 1972 SCC (Cri) 234; Inspector of Police v. Bala Prasanna, (2008) 11 SCC 645: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 959, distinguished on facts

[9722] — Ss. 380, 201 and 120-B — Process quashed — Petitioner a Metropolitan Magistrate issuing process under Ss. 380, 201 and 120-B IPC against PWD officials who had constructed, for courtroom of Metropolitan Magistrate, a judge's dais, which was not fit to be used as it was too high, almost reaching the ceiling fan, and later without consultation or authority had cut off a portion of it — Officials filing petition under S. 482 CrPC r/w Art. 227 of Constitution of India, seeking to have proceedings quashed — Held, High Court rightly quashed the criminal proceedings against the PWD officials, but erred in observing that petitioner Metropolitan Magistrate had been guilty of "gross abuse of process of court" of "defying all judicial norms" and that she had aimed to "pressurise" the officials into functioning as "desired by her" — These remarks were not necessary for the decision of the case — Adverse remarks expunged from order of High Court and also CR of petitioner — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 r/w Art. 227 of Constitution of India. K, A Judicial Officer, In re, (2001) 3 SCC 54: AIR 2001 SC 972: 2001 Cri LJ 1157: (2001) 1 KLT 707: (2001) 1 SLR 581.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti, J. [Date of decision: 8-2-2001]

— Ss. 380/34 See also Ss. 457/34, 380/34, 10/457 and 380

[9723] — Ss. 380/34, 460/34 and 302/34 — Circumstantial evidence — Theft and murder — Recovery of gold jewellery and other articles belonging to the deceased from the respective jhuggis of the accused-appellants at their instance — Doubt in respect of — PW 5, who was stated to have witnessed the recovery, did not enter any of the jhuggis and, therefore, had not seen the actual recovery — Further, difference in the timing of the recovery proceedings between the evidence of PW 5 and IO — Evidence of PW 19 indicating that the recovered goods were deposited in the malkhana even before the recovery proceedings started — Thus, alleged recovery, held on facts, doubtful — Conviction liable to be set aside — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 27 and 114 Ill. (a) — Recovery of gold jewellery and other articles belonging to the deceased from the houses of the accused persons — Doubt in respect of — PW 5, who was stated to have witnessed the recovery, did not enter any of the jhuggis and, therefore, had not seen the actual recovery — Further, difference in the timing of the recovery proceedings between the evidence of PW 5 and IO — Evidence of PW 19 indicating that the recovered goods were deposited in the malkhana even before the recovery proceedings started — Thus, alleged recovery, held on facts, doubtful (Paras 10 to 13). Kuldip Singh v. State of Delhi, (2003) 12 SCC 528: AIR 2004 SC 771: (2004) 109 DLT 190.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2003]

Limbaji v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 10 SCC 340: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1044; Gulab Chand v. State of M.P., (1995) 3 SCC 574: 1995 SCC (Cri) 552, distinguished on facts [9724] — Ss. 380/34, 460/34 and 302/34 — Circumstantial evidence — Theft and murder — Involvement of accused in crime — Inference in respect of — Accused alleged to be working as a servant in the house of deceased S at the relevant time — As per the prosecution, accused was re-employed by S after his services were terminated earlier — Evidence indicating re-employment of accused in factory of S and not in the house — Further, circumstance as to re-employment not put to accused during his examination under S. 313 CrPC — Hence held, said circumstance liable to be excluded from consideration (Para 9). Kuldip Singh v. State of Delhi, (2003) 12 SCC 528: AIR 2004 SC 771: (2004) 109 DLT 190.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2003]

[9725] — Ss. 380/34, 460/34 and 302/34 — Circumstantial evidence — Theft, trespass and murder — Fingerprints of accused found on household articles of deceased S — Accused, a domestic helper in the house of S — In such a case, held, presence of the said fingerprints was common and natural — Hence, could not be a circumstance to establish the guilt of the accused (Para 8). Kuldip Singh v. State of Delhi, (2003) 12 SCC 528: AIR 2004 SC 771: (2004) 109 DLT 190.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2003]

[9726] — Ss. 380/34, 460/34 and 302/34 — Circumstantial evidence — Theft, trespass and murder — Mere fact that the accused was once engaged by the deceased in her house as a domestic servant, held, would not be a circumstance indicat- ing involvement of the accused in crime as he was not the only person employed and terminated by the deceased just prior to her death — Deceased was in the habit of employing domestic servants for a few days at a time and then terminating their services (Para 9). Kuldip Singh v. State of Delhi, (2003) 12 SCC 528: AIR 2004 SC 771: (2004) 109 DLT 190.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2003]

— S. 381 See also Ss. 120-B, 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204

See also Ss. 451 and 381 r/w S. 120-B

See also Ss. 467, 468, 471, 491, 420, 381 and 204 r/w S. 120-B

[9727] — S. 381 — On facts, held, offence not established. Bansidhar Mohanty v. State of Orissa, AIR 1955 SC 585: 1955 Cri LJ 1300.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: M.C. Mahajan, C.J. and S.R. Das, N.H. Bhagwati and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1954]

[9728] — Ss. 381 and 385 — Confidentiality of documents under S. 54, IT Act, 1922 — Held, extends to documents produced by third parties and applies to requisition by criminal courts — IT Act, 1922, S. 54(1) — IT Act, 1961, S. 137(1) (Pre 1967) — CrPC, 1898, S. 94

The Commissioner of Income Tax filed a complaint in the Court of the Presidency Magistrate, alleging that Laxmichand Narayandas had committed offences under Ss. 381 and 385 IPC. Pending the trial, the assessee applied to the magistrate to summon the Income Tax authorities to produce certain letters alleged to have been written by the assessee's clerk, making baseless allegations against the assessee. The Commissioner pleaded secrecy under S. 54 of the Income Tax Act. The assessee argued that the prohibition applied "only to returns furnished, or accounts or documents produced by an assessee before an Income Tax authority and not to documents produced by third parties. In any view, the said prohibition does not override the power given to a criminal court under S. 94 CrPC."

Held :

(i) There is no distinction between documents filed by an assessee and by a third party. The prohibition under S. 54 applies to both.

(ii) The non obstante clause cannot restrict the embargo placed on the court under S. 54 of the Income Tax Act: the said clause only operates to make it clear that the said general ban prevails notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Indian Evidence Act. That apart, S. 54 of the Income Tax Act contains in effect an unconditional prohibition against a public servant producing any such document, and that prohibition does not exclude any criminal process from its operation. CIT v. Laxmichand Narayandas, AIR 1962 SC 1121: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 254: (1962) 44 ITR 548, 550.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, K. Subba Rao and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-1961]

— S. 382 See also Ss. 323, 382, 420, 465, 468, 471, 120-B, 506 and 34

See also Ss. 406, 420, 468, 471, 504, 506, 382 and 120-B

— S. 383 See also Ss. 378 and 383

See also Ss. 390, 378 and 383

[9729] — S. 383 — Extortion — Ingredients of — Held, ingredients that would constitute the offence are (1) the accused must put any person in fear of injury to that person or any other person (2) the putting of a person in such fear must be intentional (3) the accused must thereby induce the person so put in fear to deliver to any person any property, valuable security or anything signed or sealed which may be converted into a valuable security (4) such inducement must be done dishonestly (Para 6). Dhananjay v. State of Bihar, (2007) 14 SCC 768: (2007) 51 AIC 54 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1440: (2007) 2 KLJ 294 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-2-2007]

[9730] — Ss. 383 and 384 — Ingredients of extortion — On facts held, prima facie offence under S. 384 not made out

Per Ranganath Misra, J. (Bhagwati, C.J. concurring)

The main ingredients of the offence are:

(i) the accused must put any person in fear of injury to that person or any other person;

(ii) the putting of a person in such fear must be intentional;

(iii) the accused must thereby induce the person so put in fear to deliver to any person any property, valuable security or anything signed or sealed which may be converted into a valuable security; and (iv) such inducement must be done dishonestly.

Before a person can be said to put any person in fear of any injury to that person, it must appear that he has held out some threat to do or omit to do what he is legally bound to do in future. If all that a man does is to promise to do a thing which he is not legally bound to do and says that if money is not paid to him he would not do that thing, such act would not amount to an offence of extortion. In the present case there was no evidence that the managements of sugar cooperatives had been put in any fear and the contributions had been paid in response to threats. Merely because the respondent was Chief Minister at the relevant time and the sugar cooperatives had some of their grievances pending consideration before the Government and pressure was brought about to make the donations promising consideration of such grievances, possibly by way of reciprocity, the ingredients of the offence of extortion cannot be said to have been made out. Therefore, the framing of the charge for that offence was rightly refused by the trial court. R.S. Nayak v. A.R. Antulay, (1986) 2 SCC 716: 1986 SCC (Cri) 256: AIR 1986 SC 2045: 1986 Cri LJ 1922.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, C.J.[1] and Ranganath Misra[2], J. [Date of decision: 17-4-1986]

Habibul Razak v. King Emperor, AIR 1924 All 197: 25 Cri LJ 961: 21 ALJ 850, approved

[9731] — Ss. 383, 384, 503 and 506 — Accused charged and convicted under S. 506 for criminally intimidating 'X' by threatening to circulate and publish the indecent photographs of his daughter — Magistrate holding that the accused had threatened mainly to extort money from 'X' — Conviction under S. 506 is legal even though a conviction under S. 384 was also possible

The appellant threatened 'X' that he would circulate and publish the photographs of his daughter taken in the nude and demanded money by way of blackmail. The appellant was charged under S. 506. The Magistrate found that the appellant took indecent photographs of the girl by showing false love to her, and threatened 'X' in letters written to him, with publication of the photographs with intent to extort money from the latter. The appellant was convicted under S. 506 and sentenced to one year's RI. The High Court enhanced the sentence to 2 years' RI. It was contended that on the facts found the appellant could be convicted under Ss. 384/511 IPC for which the maximum punishment was 18 months.

Held :

It is perhaps correct that though the threat of publication of the photographs must have also caused alarm to X; but the real intention of the appellant was to cause alarm only as to make X pay "hush money" to him. It is not unoften that a particular act in some of its aspects comes within the definition of a particular offence, while in other aspects, or taken as a whole, it comes within another definition. There are obvious differences between the offence of extortion as defined in S. 383 and the offence of criminal intimidation as defined in S. 503. On the finding of the Magistrate which finding was affirmed by the High Court the appellant was clearly guilty of the offence of criminal intimidation. Conviction of appellant was therefore correct under S. 506. Romesh Chandra Arora v. State, AIR 1960 SC 154: (1960) 1 SCR 924: 1960 Cri LJ 177, 81.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.K. Das, A.K. Sarkar and M. Hidayatullah, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-1959]

— S. 384 See also Ss. 120-B, 384, 388, 342, 341, 193, 201, 218, 466 and 420

See also Ss. 120-B, 406, 420 and 384

See also Ss. 302, 364, 201 and 384

See also Ss. 323, 384 and 504 r/w S. 34

See also Ss. 365, 384, 342 r/w S. 120-B and S. 120-B

See also Ss. 383 and 384

See also Ss. 383, 384, 503 and 506

See also Ss. 420/34 and 427 and 384

See also Ss. 506 and 384

[9732] — S. 384 — Extortion of money — Police officer demanding and collecting money for return of false passport — Implied threat of prosecution against holder of false passport and of the withholding passport on that threat and a return thereof on payment of money — Held, a fear of injury had been made out whether the withholding and return of passport was in respect of the passport suspected to be a forgery or in respect of a genuine passport wrongfully withheld. Purshottam Jethanand v. State of Kutch, AIR 1954 SC 700: 1954 Cri LJ 1751.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N.H. Bhagwati, B. Jagannadhadas and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-1954]

[9733] — Ss. 384 & 34 and Ss. 302, 307, 120-B, 23 & 114 — Charge under latter set of sections but conviction under the former set — Permissibility — A-3 charged of murder by resorting to extortion by engaging A-4 to put the property owner in fear of injury unless the property owner delivered his valuable property to a third party by executing a release deed in favour of A-3 — Prosecution failing to prove the commission of major offence of murder but succeeding in proving the commission of minor offence under Ss. 384 and 34 IPC — In such circumstances, A-3, held, guilty under Ss. 384 and 34 — Sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment with a fine of Rs 5000 — CrPC, 1973, S. 222

In the present case, the prosecution has alleged that for completing the transaction of selling the property to L, A-3 procured the services of A-4 who is shown to have put P and his brothers in fear of injury with the object of dishonestly inducing them to deliver their valuable property to L by execution of releases deeds, which were for the immediate benefit of A-3. In other words A-3 was charged for the offence of murder by resorting to extortion. The offence of extortion is a lesser offence which, under the circumstances of the case, was so connected with the main transaction that no failure of justice can be caused if A-3 is convicted and sentenced for the said offence. The offence with which A-3 was charged consisted of several particulars, the combination of some of those particulars constitute a complete minor offence of extortion. The offence of extortion in the context of the facts of the case has all the ingredients connected with the major offence. Respondent 3 was charged for an offence consisting of several particulars which the prosecution failed to prove so far as the major offence is concerned but succeeded in showing the commission of the minor offence punishable under Section 384 read with Section 34 IPC as it is proved that A-3 intentionally put P and his brothers in fear of injury and availing the services of A-4 dishonestly induced in them fear to deliver their valuable property. A-3 though not as a conspirator but sharing common intention with A-4 committed the offence of extortion. He is therefore, guilty of the offence of extortion, punishable under Section 384 read with Section 34 IPC. He is sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for two years with fine of Rs 5000. (Paras 57 and 64). State of Maharashtra v. Bharat Chaganlal Raghani, (2001) 9 SCC 1: AIR 2002 SC 409.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-7-2001]

Lakhjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 173: 1994 SCC (Cri) 235, followed

See also Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 5 SCC 334

[9734] — Ss. 384, 365, 342 & 120-B — Extortion — Demand of money to release the kidnapped person — Conviction — Sustainability — Victim K was kidnapped while he was going in his car — Accused asking brother of K to pay Rs 1 crore for release of K — Evidence of witnesses (including K and his brother) making it clear that K was kidnapped and the kidnappers were paid ransom amount for his release — Details of kidnapping, the manner in which it was done and the extortion of money were all spoken of by witnesses — Confession made by accused A-12 implicating all the accused persons, was in perfect consonance with the evidence given by the witnesses — Said confession was voluntary, truthful and admissible in evidence — On such facts, conviction of accused-appellants in respect of the above offences, held, was justified — Hence, was not liable to be interfered with — However, their acquittal in relation to other charges and the acquittal of remaining accused persons in respect of all the charges, was proper — Therefore, State's appeal against the said acquittal, held, was liable to be dismissed — TADA Act, 1987, Ss. 3 and 5 (Paras 15, 14, 10, 16 and 17)

One S, A-1 to A-3, A-8, A-11, A-12 and A-14 in pursuance of their common object, kidnapped PW 7 while he was going in his Maruti car. The eyes of PW 7 were bandaged with cotton and he was taken to a room and confined there for two days. The accused contacted the brother of PW 7 on phone and demanded a sum of Rs 1 crore from him for release of PW 7. After the said money was paid and PW 7 was released, a first information report was lodged with the police by the driver of PW 7. Thereafter, the accused were arrested. A-12 made a confessional statement implicating the other accused persons. Fourteen accused were tried for the offences punishable under Sections 395, 365, 365-A, 212, 465, 471 read with Section 120-B IPC and also under Sections 3 and 5 of the TADA Act read with Section 120-B IPC. They were also charged under the Arms Act. Out of the said accused, A-1 to A-3, A-7, A-8, A-11, A-12 and A-14 were found guilty of offences punishable under Sections 120-B, 342, 365 and 384 IPC and were acquitted of other offences. The other accused A-4, A-5, A-6, A-9 and A-10 were not found guilty. Hence, the present appeals by the accused and the State.

The accused-appellants challenged their conviction whereas the State challenged the acquittal of the said accused in relation to the other charges. The State also challenged the complete exoneration of the remaining accused persons. The main contention raised by the accused-appellants was that the confessional statement of A-12 was not reliable and admissible as it was not voluntarily made. The accused submitted that A-12 was put under serious pressure and on the very next day he had retracted the confession and that by itself showed that the confession was not voluntary. It was also urged that the confession of a co-accused could not be the sole ground for conviction of the accused and it was only to be used as corroborative piece of evidence.

Dismissing all the appeals, the Supreme Court decided as above. Abdulvahab Abdulmajid Shaikh v. State of Gujarat, (2007) 4 SCC 257: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 276: (2007) 55 AIC 204 (SC): (2007) 3 Guj LR 1841.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and G.P. Mathur, J. [Date of decision: 24-4-2007]

[9735] — Ss. 384, 386, 506 Pt. II, 120 and 34 — Prayer for quashing complaint/FIR by complainant himself who alleged that he was pressurised to file said complaint — Complainant in police custody/police protection from 7-11-2005 to 9-11-2005 where alleged that he was forced to write the complaint against Arun Gulab Gawali gang on 8-11-2005 — His wife making an application before Magistrate for his release from police custody or his production before court on 9-11-2005 whereafter he was released — Again on 11-11-2005 she approaching State Human Rights Commission stating that her husband had been confined in police custody, tortured and was forcibly made to sign some papers — In such a fact situation, possibility that allegations made by complainant and his wife against police in their complaints/applications/writ petitions may be true, cannot be ruled out — Thus, it was a fit case, where in order to meet the ends of justice and to prevent miscarriage of criminal justice, the inherent powers of Court to quash FIR/complaint could have been exercised — Hence complaint quashed — CrPC, 1973, S. 482 (Paras 30 to 35). State of Maharashtra v. Arun Gulab Gawali, (2010) 9 SCC 701.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-2010]

State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Ajay Mitra v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 11: 2003 SCC (Cri) 703; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; Ganesh Narayan Hegde v. S. Bangarappa, (1995) 4 SCC 41: 1995 SCC (Cri) 634; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272; B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, (2003) 4 SCC 675: 2003 SCC (Cri) 848; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565; M.N. Damani v. S.K. Sinha, (2001) 5 SCC 156: 2001 SCC (Cri) 823, relied on [9736] — Ss. 384 and 506 — Offence under — Proof of — Complainant's evidence regarding — Corroborated by her subsequent conduct in narrating the incident to witnesses on the following day and recovery of incriminating documents at accused's instance from accused's house — Admissibility in evidence — Held on facts, sufficient to establish prosecution case — High Court erred in rejecting complainant's evidence merely on ground of delay in filing FIR — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 6 and 157 — CrPC, 1973, S. 154

The accused Headmaster of a school called the complainant, a lady teacher of the school, at his residence on the pretext of some official work on March 10. When the complainant reached the accused's house, he alone was there. He asked the complainant to sign on three blank papers, which in fact were meant for affidavits and threatened her that if she did not sign, he would spoil her modesty. Apprehending trouble she put her signatures on those papers whereupon the accused told her that he could malign and blackmail her by recording any kind of statement on those papers or she should act according to his wishes. The complainant refused and after reaching home she narrated the incident to her husband. On the following day she narrated the incident to three of her colleagues at the school. Thereafter, the accused used to threaten her that he would make use of those papers. On March 18, the accused sent for her to see him in his office and when she went there he was all alone and he actually caught hold of her by her arm and tried to outrage her modesty but the complainant after pushing him aside managed to escape. The complainant immediately returned home and reported the incident to her husband who along with complainant went to police station and filed an FIR on the very day. The investigating officer arrested the accused on the same day and during the course of interrogation that followed the accused made a disclosure statement regarding the three papers on which the complainant's signatures had been obtained as also some photographs of the members of the staff (including a cut-out of the complainant) and in pursuance of such statement he led the police and the Panchas to his house and he produced the three papers, and some photographs. These documents were seized under a Memo attested by Panch witnesses.

Held :

As regards the first incident relating to charges under Ss. 384 and 506 IPC, the two pieces of evidence viz. subsequent conduct on the part of the complainant in narrating the story to the three witnesses on the following day and actual recovery of the three papers bearing the signatures of the complainant thereon from the house of the accused lend the strongest support to the complainant's story and clinches the veracity of that incident as deposed to by her in her evidence. Assuming that the complainant's conduct of narrating the incident to her colleagues is not res gestae and hence inadmissible under S. 6 of the Evidence Act, the same when corroborated by the three witnesses is clearly admissible under S. 157 of that Act and therefore ignoring such crucial and relevant evidence has led the Court to give undue importance to the so-called delay in lodging the report with the police. In fact it could not be regarded as a case of any delayed report for, it was the second incident when the accused actually assaulted the complainant that the culminating point was reached and immediately the same evening she lodged the FIR. The so-called delay in lodging the report to the police cannot cast any doubt on the veracity of the story. The so-called doubt entertained by the Sessions Judge about the complainant's version was not a doubt of a reasonable mind. With the two strong pieces of corroborative evidence discussed above the acquittal of the accused in regard to charges under Ss. 384 and 506 must be regarded as perverse. Chander Kala v. Ram Kishan, (1985) 4 SCC 212: 1985 SCC (Cri) 491: AIR 1985 SC 1268: 1985 Cri LJ 1490.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar, D.A. Desai and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1985]

[9737] — Ss. 384 and 506 Pt. II — Conviction confirmed — A-1, in collusion with A-2 to A-5 alleged to have got complainant illegally confined in police station, snatched gold ornaments costing about Rs 25,000 from his wife, and got property worth Rs 25 lakhs transferred in his (A-1's) name by forcibly, under threat and coercion getting SPOA and POA executed by complainant in name of his father-in-law — Held, evidence led by complainant satisfactorily and convincingly proved charges against A-1 & A-2 beyond reasonable doubt — Three courts below concurrently held both accused guilty of crime and no reason to differ with view taken by them — Their conviction sustainable (Paras 21, 22 and 1). Karipi Rasheed Ahmed v. State of A.P., (2009) 17 SCC 515.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: L.S. Panta and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-2009]

— Ss. 384/149 See also Ss. 395/149 and 384/149

[9738] — Ss. 384/506 — Applicability — Deeds and acts attributed to public servant not being part of his official duties — Disentitlement to protection of S. 197 CrPC — Held, for applying bar of S. 197, each case has to be considered in its own fact situation in order to arrive at a finding as to whether protection of S. 197 could be given to the public servant — Herein, offences complained of cannot be said to be part of duties of respondent investigating officer while investigating an offence allegedly committed — It was no part of his duties to threaten appellant complainant or her husband to withdraw the complaint — Fact situation in the complaint herein was not such to bring the case within ambit of S. 197 — High Court, therefore, erred in quashing the complaint — CrPC, 1973, S. 197 (Paras 19, 21 and 22)

In the instant case, appellant's husband suffered grievous injury in a shoot-out for which a case was registered and police investigations started. Subsequently, appellant filed a complaint before CJM alleging therein that Respondent 2 (investigating officer) and the co-accused used to come to the house of the appellant on the pretext of conducting investigation in the aforesaid case and on one day they threatened her husband and wanted him to make a tutored statement and under threat even tried to obtain his signature on a blank paper. Therefore, cognizance was taken by the Magistrate and summons were directed to be issued under Sections 384/506 IPC.

Being aggrieved, Respondent 2 moved the High Court under Sections 397/401 read with Section 482 CrPC for quashing the same. Contention of Respondent 2 before the High Court was that the offence was allegedly committed during course of investigation of the case and, accordingly, such offence, if at all committed, was committed by him while discharging official duties which brought him within protective umbrella of Section 197 CrPC. Accordingly, the High Court quashed the proceedings and the cognizance taken on the basis thereof. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court decided as above. Choudhury Parveen Sultana v. State of W.B., (2009) 3 SCC 398: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 122: AIR 2009 SC 1404: (2009) 234 ELT 196: 2009 Cri LJ 1318: (2009) 74 AIC 1 (SC): (2009) 1 ECrN 845 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-2009]

Bhagwan Prasad Srivastava v. N.P. Mishra, (1970) 2 SCC 56: 1970 SCC (Cri) 292, followed

Sankaran Moitra v. Sadhna Das, (2006) 4 SCC 584: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 358; Pukhraj v. State of Rajasthan, (1973) 2 SCC 701: 1973 SCC (Cri) 944; Parkash Singh Badal v. State of Punjab, (2007) 1 SCC 1: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 193, relied on [9739] — Ss. 384/511 — Sentence — Protracted appeals — Appellant having served part of the sentence — Not sent back to jail. Ram Narain v. State of U.P., (1973) 2 SCC 86: 1973 SCC (Cri) 752: AIR 1973 SC 2200: (1973) 3 SCR 911: 1973 Cri LJ 1187.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.K. Mathew and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1973]

— S. 385 See also Ss. 182, 211, 193, 467, 471 and 385

See also Ss. 347, 161, 167, 385 and 511

See also Ss. 381 and 385

— S. 386 See also Ss. 120-B, 34, 109, 364 and 386

See also Ss. 347, 386 and 365

See also Ss. 363, 364, 365, 386 and 387

See also Ss. 364, 386 and 302

See also Ss. 374 and 386

See also Ss. 378 and 386

[9740] — S. 386 — Expression — "Imprisonment for a term of not less than ten years" in S. 167(2) proviso (a)(i) — Meaning — Held, covers offences punishable with imprisonment for a clear period of 10 years or more — Hence, offence under S. 386 IPC, being punishable with imprisonment for less than ten years, proviso (a)(i) to S. 167(2) CrPC would not apply to such offence — CrPC, 1973, S. 167(2) proviso (a)(i)

The appellant was arrested in connection with an offence punishable under Sections 386, 506 and 120-B IPC. He was produced before the Metropolitan Magistrate and was released on bail by the Magistrate on the ground that charge-sheet was not submitted within 60 days as provided under Section 167(2) CrPC. That order was challenged before the Sessions Court by filing revision. The revision was allowed. The Additional Sessions Judge held that for an offence under Section 386 IPC, period of sentence could be up to 10 years' RI. Hence, clause (i) of proviso (a) to Section 167(2) would be applicable. But the High Court set aside the order passed by the Additional Sessions Judge. Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

From the relevant part of Section 167 CrPC it is apparent that in cases where offence is punishable with imprisonment for 10 years or more, the accused could be detained up to a period of 90 days. In this context, the expression "not less than" would mean imprisonment should be 10 years or more and would cover only those offences for which punishment could be imprisonment for a clear period of 10 years or more. Under Section 386 punishment provided is imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to 10 years and also fine. That means, imprisonment can be for a clear period of 10 years or less. Hence, it could not be said that minimum sentence would be 10 years or more. Further, in context also if clause (i) of proviso (a) to Section 167(2) is considered, it would be applicable in case where investigation relates to an offence punishable (1) with death; (2) imprisonment for life; and (3) imprisonment for a term of not less than ten years. It would not cover the offence for which punishment could be imprisonment for less than 10 years. Under Section 386 IPC, imprisonment can vary from minimum to maximum of 10 years and it cannot be said that imprisonment prescribed is not less than 10 years. (Para 6). Rajeev Chaudhary v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 5 SCC 34: 2001 SCC (Cri) 819: AIR 2001 SC 2369: 2001 Cri LJ 2941.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-2001]

Rajeev Chaudhary v. State, (2000) 86 DLT 203, affirmed

[9741] — Ss. 386 and 364 — Kidnapping followed by ransom letters — Offence made out

As regards the charge against him under S. 364, Penal Code, for kidnapping, though there is no direct evidence, the various ransom letters categorically state that the missing boy is in the custody or control of the writer thereof. It is asserted therein that on payment of the ransom money, the boy will be restored at a particular time and place.

The modus operandi disclosed in the ransom letters was clearly by putting his father in fright of the boy being murdered. There was throughout the likelihood of the boy being murdered in case the ransom money was not paid for one reason or other. Ram Chandra v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 381: 1957 Cri LJ 559.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B. Jagannadhadas, Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-11-1956]

— S. 387 See also Ss. 302, 364, 201 and 387

See also Ss. 323, 34, 387, 498-A and 506

See also Ss. 363, 364, 365, 386 and 387

[9742] — Ss. 387 and 392 — TADA Act, 1987 — S. 3 — Extortion of ransom for purchasing weapons for terrorists — Money demanded on threat on life — Amount paid few days after the demand — Recovery of currency notes from the premises of accused appellant pursuant to disclosure statement made by him substantially corroborating testimony of PW — Held on facts, conviction and sentence under S. 387 IPC and S. 3 TADA, justified — But since the money was not paid then and there when the victim was induced on fear of death, conviction under S. 392 for robbery not proper and hence set aside. Gursharan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 10 SCC 190: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1202.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-1996]

— Ss. 387/511 See also Ss. 307/34 and 387/511

— S. 388 See also Ss. 120-B, 384, 388, 342, 341, 193, 201, 218, 466 and 420

— S. 389 See also Ss. 342, 389, 469, 471 and 120-B

— S. 390 See also Ss. 302, 310 and 390

See also Ss. 392 and 390

See also Ss. 395, 391 and 390

See also Ss. 396, 395, 391, 390 and 302

[9743] — S. 390 — Expression "for that end" in S. 390 — Meaning of — Held, clearly means that the hurt caused by offender must be with the object of facilitating the committing of theft or must be caused while the offender is committing theft or is carrying away or is attempting to carry away property obtained by theft (Para 12). Venu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 94: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 623: AIR 2008 SC 1199: 2008 Cri LJ 1634: (2008) 64 AIC 107 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-1-2008]

[9744] — S. 390 — Robbery — Involves element of extortion — Hence a person cannot be convicted both for extortion and robbery, which is a special aggravated form of the former. Gursharan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 10 SCC 190: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1202.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-1996]

[9745] — S. 390 — Slapping the victim after dispossessing him of property to silence him — Held, offence under S. 390 made out — Hurt caused had relation to and bearing on the theft caused. Harish Chandra v. State of U.P., (1976) 2 SCC 795: 1976 SCC (Cri) 300: AIR 1976 SC 1430: 1976 Cri LJ 1168.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-1976]

[9746] — Ss. 390, 378 and 383 — Robbery — Meaning of — Necessity of violence in the course of theft — Held, theft or extortion when caused with violence causing or causing fear of death, hurt or wrongful restraint is robbery — When there is no theft committed, then as a natural corollary, there cannot be robbery — Robbery is only an aggravated form of offence of theft or extortion — Aggravation is in the use of violence causing or causing fear of death, hurt or restraint — Violence must be in course of theft and not subsequently — Also, it is not necessary that violence should actually be committed but even attempt to commit it is enough (Para 10). Venu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 94: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 623: AIR 2008 SC 1199: 2008 Cri LJ 1634: (2008) 64 AIC 107 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-1-2008]

[9747] — Ss. 390 and 391 — Seizure of property in exercise of bona fide right over it, held, not covered. Sardar Trilok Singh v. Satya Deo Tripathi, (1979) 4 SCC 396: 1979 SCC (Cri) 987: AIR 1979 SC 850: 1979 ALJ 634: 1980 Cri LJ 822.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1979]

[9748] — Ss. 390 and 392 — Deterrent punishment under — When called for — Held, S. 392 itself provides that when robbery is committed on a highway and between sunset and sunrise, deterrent punishment is called for — In the instant case, evidence of victim, her husband and factum of recovery of vehicle used clearly established commission of offence by appellant-accused — Offence committed on a public road which undisputedly was a highway, between sunset and sunrise — Hence, on facts, deterrent punishment of ten years' RI imposed, merited no interference (Paras 9, 13, 14 and 16). Venu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 94: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 623: AIR 2008 SC 1199: 2008 Cri LJ 1634: (2008) 64 AIC 107 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-1-2008]

State of Karnataka v. Puttaraja, (2004) 1 SCC 475: 2004 SCC (Cri) 300, relied on [9749] — Ss. 390 and 395 — Causing fear by exploding cracker — Held, offence rightly made out where the accused while carrying away the stolen property exploded cracker to frighten the inmates who wanted to pursue them. Kusho Mahton v. State of Bihar, 1980 Supp SCC 344: 1981 SCC (Cri) 279: AIR 1980 SC 788: 1980 Cri LJ 313.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-2-1980]

— S. 391 See also Ss. 390 and 391

See also Ss. 395, 391 and 390

See also Ss. 396, 395, 391, 390 and 302

[9750] — S. 391 — Dacoity — Evidence regarding — Witness claiming to have heard that dacoity was committed in the house of the deceased — No value, held, could be attached to such a statement — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 60

So far as DW 3 is concerned, he claims to have heard that dacoity was committed in the house of M. Obviously no value can be attached to his statement. (Para 23). Ram Anup Singh v. State of Bihar, (2002) 6 SCC 686: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1466: AIR 2002 SC 3006.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah, B.P. Singh and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2002]

— S. 392 See also Ss. 34, 302 and 392

See also Ss. 148, 392 and 452

See also Ss. 148, 452, 392, 147 and 451

See also Ss. 149, 326/34, 324/34, 427/34, 450 and 392, 395 and 397

See also under Ss. 299 to 304

See also Ss. 332 and 392

See also Ss. 376, 302 and 392

See also Ss. 376 and 392

See also Ss. 380, 120-B, 302, 392, 201, 404, 414, 457 and 460/34

See also Ss. 380, 392, 397 and 414

See also Ss. 387 and 392

See also Ss. 394 and 392

See also Ss. 411 and 392

See also Ss. 449, 458, 459, 392, 397, 302 and 307

See also Ss. 299-304 — CULPABLE HOMICIDE AND MURDER, 'C. 21. Robbery/ Dacoity/ Theft', in Vol. 2

[9751] — S. 392 — Acquittal in one case whether ipso facto entitles acquittal in the second case — Held, the incidents being distinct and separate from each other, the acquittal of the accused of the charges arising out of one of the incidents does not automatically entitle them to be acquitted of the charges arising from the second incident where they have been proved beyond reasonable doubt — No interference called for — TADA Act, 1987, S. 3. Jagtar Singh v. State of Punjab, (2001) 10 SCC 695: AIR 2000 SC 3604.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-1999]

[9752] — S. 392 — Robbery — Circumstantial evidence — Articles of robbery viz. two gold rings and a wristwatch, worn by deceased, found to be in possession of the accused — Inference under S. 114(a) of Evidence Act drawn — This along with other corroborating circumstances, held on facts, lead to the only conclusion of commission of robbery by accused punishable under S. 392 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (a)

The following circumstances were found proved against the accused-appellant:

1. The deceased had left to attend to his work on 28-6-1995 at 7.00 in the morning putting on two rings and a watch.

2. The deceased took candles and bread from the shop of PW 8 and at about 9.00 p.m. he was sitting in front of the shop of PW 9. He left the place thereafter.

3. At about 9.30 p.m. PWs 10, 12 and 13 heard the deceased saying "take whatever you want, leave me alone". PW 12 and PW 13 are said to have recognized his voice. PW 10, the wife of PW 12 had no idea about the voice of the deceased.

4. On 29-6-1995 the accused offered the rings to PW 17 in repaying the loan but he refused to take it, ultimately he had pledged the rings with PW 19 and PW 24, which were recovered from them.

5. The dead body was recovered on 30-6-1995 but the rings and the watch were not found on the dead body.

6. On the arrest of the accused on 5-7-1995 a watch was recovered at his instance.

Partly allowing the accused's appeal,

Held :

The evidence of PWs 10, 12 and 13 that they had heard the voice of the deceased saying that "you may take whatever you like, but leave me alone", no doubt serves as a very strong link. This shows that the deceased must have been under some apprehension or threat thereof. It is though difficult to hold that PW 12 and PW 13 had heard the voice of the accused as the evidence on the point is shaky but there is no escape from the liability of possession of the property viz. the subject-matter of the robbery, with the appellant soon thereafter, which is a corroborating and clinching circumstance. The possession of the articles which had been duly identified by the witnesses as belonging to the deceased were found in his possession within less than 24 hours of the incident. It would lead to inference under Section 114(a) of the Evidence Act that the appellant had himself committed the robbery, an offence punishable under Section 392 IPC. Therefore, the conviction and sentence as awarded by the trial court and upheld by the High Court under Section 392 IPC are upheld. (Paras 7 and 9). George v. State of Kerala, (2002) 4 SCC 475: AIR 2002 SC 1647.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah, Brijesh Kumar and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-2002]

[9753] — S. 392 — Robbery — Evidence — Prosecution case that while PW 1 and his mother PW 2 were travelling with Rs 73,600 in cash, accused persons robbed Rs 40,000 from PW 2 when the PWs alighted to change bus — FIR lodged next day but delay properly explained — Pursuant to statements made by the accused persons Rs 39,170 recovered from their possession — Remaining amount of Rs 33,600 also attached from the house of the PWs — Trial court and High Court rejecting explanation regarding capacity of PW 2 to save such large amount during a period over 10 years, acquitting the accused — Held, approach of the courts below erroneous — Plea that the identity of the currency notes found must tally with the stolen notes before a conviction can be recorded must be rejected — Capacity to save the amount could not be doubted having regard to their cultivable lands and other sources of income — Further facts of recovery of money at the instance of the accused as also the subsequent find of the remaining sum in the house of PWs and absence of any convincing reasons for lodging false FIR against the accused, sufficiently corroborating the testimony of PWs 1 and 2 and the prosecution case that they were deprived of Rs 40,000 — Hence the accused must be convicted under S. 392 — Amounts recovered to be made over to PW 2. Suryamoorthi v. Govindaswamy, (1989) 3 SCC 24: 1989 SCC (Cri) 472: AIR 1989 SC 1410: 1989 Cri LJ 1451.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-1989]

[9754] — S. 392 — Robbery — On facts, proved by discovery of article stolen at the instance of the accused — Disregard of accused's confession, on facts, not to affect the conviction. Harish Chandra v. State of U.P., (1976) 2 SCC 795: 1976 SCC (Cri) 300: AIR 1976 SC 1430: 1976 Cri LJ 1168.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-1976]

[9755] — S. 392 — Robbery — Sentence — Mitigating circumstances — Offence committed more than 15 years before — Increase in burden of socio-economic responsibilities on the accused persons with passage of time, recovery of almost entire amount, time spent in prison before release on bail — Sentence of imprisonment converted to fine only — Fine directed to be paid commensurate with the gravity of offence committed by each accused. Suryamoorthi v. Govindaswamy, (1989) 3 SCC 221: 1989 SCC (Cri) 537: (1989) 2 Crimes 265.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-1989]

[9756] — S. 392 — Robbery with murder — Articles recovered pursuant to statement made by accused not during the first examination but later — Manner in which fingerprint of the accused taken also creating suspicion — Held, conviction cannot be sustained in the circumstances. Chandran v. State of Kerala, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 39: 1991 SCC (Cri) 245: AIR 1990 SC 2148: 1990 Cri LJ 2296.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-1990]

[9757] — Ss. 392 and 302 — Identification of articles — Robbery and murder — Stolen ornaments specifically identified by nephew of deceased (PW 30) — PW 30 claimed that of the recovered ornaments he had seen his maternal uncle wearing chain and two rings and his aunt wearing four bangles and four rings and earrings in her ears — Identification Magistrate had no interest against accused or in favour of prosecution — He was doing his duty — Hence, identification accepted — Recoveries from A-1 and A-2 of stolen ornaments including identified bangles and chain, held, fully proved — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9 (Paras 35 to 43). Ramesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2011) 3 SCC 685.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-2011]

[9758] — Ss. 392 and 302 — Murder weapon found stained with human blood — Blood group shown to be A — Clothes of deceased stained with his own blood which was of Group A — Held, this is a very weighty circumstance against A-3 and there is absolutely no explanation offered by A-3 of this highly incriminating circumstance — Hence held, prosecution inter alia had proved its case against A-3 (Para 30). Ramesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2011) 3 SCC 685.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-2011]

Santosh Kumar Satishbhushan Bariyar v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 6 SCC 498: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1150, followed

Sushil Murmu v. State of Jharkhand, (2004) 2 SCC 338: 2004 SCC (Cri) 529; Mulla v. State of U.P., (2010) 3 SCC 508: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1150, considered

[9759] — Ss. 392, 302/34 and 201 — Robbery and murder — Accused-appellants seen in the company of deceased during the relevant period at various places — Recovery of various articles used by the deceased, from the possession of the accused — No satisfactory explanation given in respect of said possession — Graffiti written by the accused and the deceased on a wall at the place of the incident — Specimen signatures of the accused similar to the said graffiti — Presence of the accused at the place of occurrence during the relevant time, held, proved — Guilt established on the basis of the said circumstances — Conviction and sentence upheld — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (a)

The deceased who was an employee of one H used to go to various places to collect the money due from the customers of the firm. On 27-7-1985, the deceased had collected about Rs 20,862.92p. During the night intervening 27-7-1985 and 28-7-1985, the deceased stayed with appellant K at his residence. In the morning of 28-7-1985 he came to the bus-stand accompanied by K. The case against the accused-appellants (K and G) was that they caused the death of the deceased and robbed him of the money possessed by him. The dead body of the deceased was found in a tank situated within the Jalore Fort area. An amount of Rs 10,000 and a handkerchief which belonged to the deceased were recovered from the residential house of G. K was arrested at Bombay and pursuant to the information furnished by him, a watch, a bush-shirt, a money bag, printed receipt books, pieces of a torn bank draft and a knife were recovered from him. The said articles were identified by the prosecution witnesses as articles belonging to the deceased. On site inspection, IO found that the names of the appellants and the deceased were written on the wall of the Rani Mahal of the Jalore Fort. Various photographs of this graffiti were taken and the signatures of the accused were also obtained for comparison. The appellants were identified in the identification parade. The trial court found the appellants guilty of the offences punishable under Section 302 read with Section 34 and Sections 392 and 201 IPC. The judgment was confirmed by the High Court and hence the present appeals by the accused.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

Appellant K had no satisfactory explanation as to how he came to be in possession of the articles in question. The fact of possession of these articles with the appellant only leads to the most-probable inference that he was responsible for the death of the deceased, especially when the appellant had no case that he had come to possess these articles for any other reason. (Para 5)

Another strong circumstance which was proved against the appellants was that they were found in the company of the deceased at various places immediately preceding the day of death of the deceased. The other circumstance, which would prove the presence of the appellants at the Jalore Fort during the crucial time is the graffiti found on the wall of the Rani Mahal of the Jalore Fort. PW 29 took photographs of these writings and the same were compared with the specimen signatures of the appellants. The specimen signatures of the appellants were similar to the graffiti allegedly written by the appellants. (Paras 6 and 7)

Thus, the recovery of various articles used by the deceased, from the possession of the appellants; the evidence of the witnesses who found the appellants in the company of the deceased during the relevant period; and the other circumstantial evidence clearly established the guilt of the accused. (Para 8). Kanti Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 10 SCC 113: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1760: AIR 2004 SC 2536: 2004 Cri LJ 2487.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

[9760] — Ss. 392, 380, 397 and 414 — Robbery and murder — Accused found with huge amount of ornaments and cash on their person — Minor contradictions — Explanations therefor available from facts/prosecution — Held, such contradictions of no consequence (Paras 25 to 27). Ramesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2011) 3 SCC 685.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-2011]

Chandmal v. State of Rajasthan, (1976) 1 SCC 621: 1976 SCC (Cri) 120; Mohd. Aman v. State of Rajasthan, (1997) 10 SCC 44: 1997 SCC (Cri) 777; Mahabir Sao v. State of Bihar, (1972) 1 SCC 505: 1972 SCC (Cri) 234; Inspector of Police v. Bala Prasanna, (2008) 11 SCC 645: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 959, distinguished on facts

[9761] — Ss. 392 and 390 — Punishment for robbery — Essential ingredients under — Held, essential ingredients for punishment under S. 392 are: (1) accused committed theft; (2) accused voluntarily caused or attempted to cause (i) death, hurt or wrongful restraint (ii) fear of instant death, hurt or wrongful restraint; (3) accused did either act for the end (i) to commit theft (ii) while committing theft (iii) in carrying away or in the attempt to carry away property obtained by theft (Para 8). Venu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 94: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 623: AIR 2008 SC 1199: 2008 Cri LJ 1634: (2008) 64 AIC 107 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-1-2008]

[9762] — Ss. 392, 394 and 397 — Snatching of Rs 62,000 alleged — Case of planting by police and false implication — When tenable — However, recovery of only Rs 15,000 from the bag carried by the accused — No explanation by the prosecution as to whereabouts of the remaining Rs 47,000 — Hence, contention by accused that it was implanted by the police for false implication — Held, in absence of any allegation of previous enmity between the complainant or the injured witness or the police and the accused, such contention unsustainable — Non-explanation of whereabouts of the balance amount would not vitiate the factum of recovery of Rs 15,000 from the possession of the accused along with other incriminating materials — More so, since the accused were apprehended along with the incriminating material while fleeing (Para 9). Surender Singh v. State of Haryana, (2006) 9 SCC 247: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 444.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-2006]

[9763] — Ss. 392 and 397 — Charge-sheet under Ss. 392 and 397 of IPC and S. 27 of Arms Act r/w S. 6 of TADA — Taxi driver informing the police of two ostensible passengers snatching from him a certain amount and his car by putting him in instant fear of death by placing a revolver on his neck — Nothing elicited in cross-examination to discredit him — His statement being corroborated by the report lodged by him with the police immediately after the incident — Identification of the accused by him also found unassailable as the informant had remained with them for several (four and a half) hours — His evidence further corroborated by the evidence of two policemen who had seized the amount, the car and the revolver from the accused within a few (9) hours of the incident — In such circumstances, the allegation that he was a procured witness, rejected — Conviction under above sections upheld — Arms Act, 1959, S. 27 — TADA Act, 1987, S. 6. Mohinder Singh v. State of Haryana, (1996) 11 SCC 369: 1997 SCC (Cri) 143.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-1996]

[9764] — Ss. 392 and 397 — Conviction under S. 397 altered to that under S. 392 and accordingly sentence of 7 years' RI reduced to that of 3 years' RI. Krishan Lal v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1982) 2 SCC 175 (1): 1982 SCC (Cri) 377(1): AIR 1981 SC 2008(1).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.C. Gupta and D.A. Desai, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1981]

[9765] — Ss. 392 and 397 — Knife blow given on the chest just below the nipple — S. 397 whether attracted — Accused persons entering the shop of the injured and on his refusal to hand over money when demanded inflicted one injury on his right arm with a knife — Another injury was caused on left side of chest just below the nipple by a knife — Whether ingredients of S. 397 made out — Held, the facts of the instant case show that S. 397 IPC was rightly applied — Any hurt which endangers life is a grievous hurt — It would be seen that one of the injuries was caused just below the nipple — The term "endangers life" is much stronger than the expression "dangerous to life" — Apart from that in S. 397 "attempt" to cause grievous hurt attracts its application — Question whether the accused attempted to cause death or grievous hurt would depend upon the factual scenario — On facts, knife-blow was given on the chest just below the nipple — Considering the place where injury was inflicted High Court rightly applied S. 397 IPC (Paras 10 to 12). Niranjan Singh v. State of M.P., (2007) 10 SCC 459: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 55: AIR 2007 SC 2434: (2007) 56 AIC 263 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-6-2007]

[9766] — Ss. 392 and 397 — Robbery — Conviction of gunman of SRTC for robbing cash from cashier of the same Corporation by causing serious injuries to the cashier and confining him in a room by bolting it from outside — Injuries found on the cashier, missing of cash and traces of robbery at the scene of occurrence establishing the occurrence of robbery — Testimony of the cashier about commission of the offence by the gunman of great importance and the same accepted by the courts below — Cashier's testimony corroborated by another PW whom the cashier had told about the robbery — No explanation also given by the gunman for his abscondence for two and a half months — Reasons given by courts below in convicting the gunman sound and not suffering from any infirmity — Hence no interference with the conviction called for — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 60. Harinder Singh v. State of Punjab, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 467: 1993 SCC (Cri) 267: AIR 1992 SC 1976.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-1992]

[9767] — Ss. 392 & 397 and 302 — Robbery and murder — Circumstantial evidence — Accused 1 to 4 alleged to have robbed the deceased of her jewellery and assaulted her with stones resulting in her death — No eyewitnesses to the occurrence and prosecution case resting solely on circumstantial evidence — Trial court as well as High Court holding that the evidence showed a complete unbroken chain of circumstances unerringly leading to an inescapable conclusion that Accused 1 to 4 had committed the crime — Circumstances alleged were: (i) Dead body of deceased was found in field with head injuries and her jewels robbed; (ii) Injuries found on her body clearly showing that she had died of homicidal violence and her jewellery snatched; (iii) All the accused were last seen near the field of the deceased (scene of occurrence) by PW 6 and one of the accused was also seen near the field by PW 2 and the accused were also identified in TI parade; (iv) Extra-judicial confession made by accused; and (v) On information furnished by the accused, the stones used in the murder and jewels robbed from the deceased were recovered, which were identified by PW 1 (son of the deceased) —

Discrepancy in evidence of PW 2 not found fatal to prosecution — Contention that jewels were not of such great value as to lead to murder rejected because it is not possible to say that unless the jewels are of a particular value, robbery and murder would not be committed — No apparent reason to falsely implicate accused — Held, though confessions made to police are to be excluded and though extra-judicial confession to others in its very nature is a weak piece of evidence, when examined with reference to the other proved circumstances, and the recoveries made on the information furnished by the accused, the guilt of the accused stood established — No infirmity in the reasoning or conclusions of the trial court or the High Court — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 8, 27 and 28 (Paras 2, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12). Krishnamoorthy v. State, (2007) 12 SCC 110: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 248: 2007 Cri LJ 1803: (2007) 52 AIC 83 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-2007]

[9768] — Ss. 392, 397 and 394 — Appellant armed with a pistol along with co-accused who was unarmed snatching the wrist watches and purse of the victims by pointing the pistol — Appellant firing from the pistol only when one of the victims hit him with an empty drum of milk — Victim receiving injuries on hand, thumb and finger — Held, in the circumstances of the case, conviction under Sections 394 and 397 not justified — Conviction under S. 392 maintained — Sentence reduced to the period of 5 years which the appellant had already undergone — Co-accused who did not prefer appeal due to poverty also entitled to the benefit of modified sentence. Ajit Singh v. State of Haryana, (1996) 3 SCC 335.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-1996]

[Ed.: If the offender uses any deadly weapon at the time of committing robbery Section 397 is attracted. In this case the victims were robbed at the point of pistol. In Phool Kumar case cited in para 4 it has been laid down that if the deadly weapon was within the vision of the victim so as to be capable of creating a terror in his mind, the offender must be deemed to have used that deadly weapon in the commission of the robbery.]

[9769] — Ss. 392, 397 and 452 r/w S. 34 — Non-holding of TI parade — Identification for the first time in court — When not fatal — Robbery case — One of the accused was already known to the inmates of the house as he had whitewashed their house — During the commission of offence, all the accused were present in house for quite some time — Accused whose identity was known was arrested first and others arrested on that basis — Complainant was associated even at that stage of investigation to identify the accused and ensure properly the arrest of the real accused — In view of the said facts, identification of the accused in the court without holding a TI parade earlier, held, not fatal — Arms Act, 1959, S. 25 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9 (Para 6). Ashfaq v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2004) 3 SCC 116: 2004 SCC (Cri) 687: AIR 2004 SC 1253: 2004 Cri LJ 936: (2004) 3 MPLJ 361: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 581.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-2003]

Ramanbhai Naranbhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2000) 1 SCC 358: 2000 SCC (Cri) 113, followed

— S. 392 r/w S. 397 See also under Ss. 299 to 304

[9770] — S. 392 r/w S. 397 — Robbery with attempt to cause death or grievous hurt — Appreciation of evidence — Accused alleged to have thrown deceased and PW 8 in canal after robbing money and tractor from them — PW 8 managed to swim to safety — Deceased catching hold of the grass grown on the bank of the canal but accused giving leg-blows on his face and again pushing him into the water, whereafter he never came out — Prosecution case resting on evidence of PW 8 who was an independent and impartial witness — Contention that the prosecution fabricated the evidence to falsely implicate the appellant rejected and that presence of PW 8 at scene of occurrence was doubtful also rejected because it was contrary to the very defence set up by the appellant in the sessions case — Further, contention that no specific overt act was attributed to appellant also rejected because his participation in alleged occurrence was substantially proved — Circumstantial evidence also clearly establishing guilt of appellant — In such circumstances, held, prosecution has established guilt of the appellant beyond all reasonable doubt for conviction under S. 392 r/w S. 397 IPC for having robbed money and tractor — Sentence of 7 years' RI upheld (Paras 3, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 15). Subhash v. State of Haryana, (2007) 12 SCC 63: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 213.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-2007]

[9771] — Ss. 392/34 or 324 — For application of S. 392 IPC prosecution must establish robbery during the course of which death or hurt or wrongful restraint was caused or attempted to be caused — Joint trial of appellant along with A-2 — Trial court disbelieving case of prosecution that appellant made a disclosure statement to police pursuant to which a bag containing a knife and cash was recovered — The court, however, convicting appellant under Ss. 392/34 holding that appellant was with A-2 while committing robbery during the course of which he caused injuries to PWs 2 and 3 and sentencing him to 7 years' RI — A-2 acquitted — Held, once the case of recovery of knife and cash rejected, there was no material to hold that ingredients of Ss. 392/34 were made out, especially in view of the fact that A-2 was acquitted — It was however, established beyond doubt, that the appellant had caused hurt to PWs 2 and 3 with the knife — This was supported by medical evidence — Hence conviction and sentence under S. 392/34 IPC set aside and conviction under S. 324 IPC and sentence of 3 years' RI substituted. Malkhan Singh v. State of Haryana, 1994 SCC (Cri) 1422.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-11-1992]

[9772] — Ss. 392/34, 397 and 302 — Murder and robbery, part of the same transaction — Two of the four accused entering the deceased's house and one of them, armed with a dagger, committing murder of the deceased in the process of robbery and his companion committing robbery while the other two accused staying outside the house without knowing possession of deadly weapon by the accused who had entered the house — Pursuant to disclosure statements made by the accused persons, the stolen goods of the deceased as well as the dagger used in the crime and bloodstained shirt of accused recovered the very next day from the places indicated by them — No explanation offered in regard thereto — Drawing presumption under S. 114 Ill. (a) of Evidence Act, held, accused, who killed the deceased in the process of commission of robbery was rightly convicted under Ss. 392/34, 397 and 302 but the co-accused persons were rightly convicted under Ss. 392/34 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (a)

Besides Section 27, the courts can draw presumptions under Section 114, Illustration (a) and Section 106 of the Evidence Act. The presumption permitted to be drawn under Section 114 Illustration (a) of the Evidence Act has to be read along with the "important time factor". If the ornaments in possession of the deceased are found in possession of a person soon after the murder, a presumption of guilt may be permitted. (Para 28)

In the instant case also, the disclosure statements were made by the accused persons on the next day of the commission of the offence and the property of the deceased was recovered at their instance from the places where they had kept such properties, on the same day. The trial court was justified in holding that the circumstances together complete the chain of circumstances to prove the guilt of the accused persons insofar as the offence of robbery was concerned and that the disclosure statements of the accused persons and huge recoveries from them at their instance on the very next day of the incident, by itself was a sufficient circumstance which clearly goes to show that the accused persons had joined hands to commit the offence of robbery. The murder and robbery in the instant case were part of the same transaction and the accused from whom the recoveries were made, consequent upon their disclosure statements, did not offer any explanation regarding their possession of the stolen properties. Drawing a presumption under Section 114 of the Evidence Act it can safely be held that the two accused persons were at least guilty of the offence of robbery punishable under Section 392 IPC on the assumption that they were not armed with any deadly weapon and not aware of the other accused being armed with dagger. On the basis of the evidence led in the case and keeping in view the whole conspectus of the case the trial court rightly concluded that the accused, who was armed with dagger, in the process of committing robbery used a deadly weapon, namely, dagger and killed the deceased while the other three accused persons participated in the commission of crime of robbery and actually removed huge articles including jewellery from the house of the deceased. (Paras 29 and 32). Sanjay v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 3 SCC 190: 2001 SCC (Cri) 449: AIR 2001 SC 979: 2001 Cri LJ 1231.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-2-2001]

Gulab Chand v. State of M.P., (1995) 3 SCC 574: 1995 SCC (Cri) 552; Mukund v. State of M.P., (1997) 10 SCC 130: 1997 SCC (Cri) 799; Ronny v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 3 SCC 625: 1998 SCC (Cri) 859, relied on

— Ss. 392/120-B See also under Ss. 299 to 304

[9773] — Ss. 392/120-B and 120-B — Robbery in daytime — Appellant and three others entering the house of PW 3 when she was alone — They dragging her inside a room, tying her hands and forcibly inserting a lungi in her mouth — Thereafter, breaking open the lock of almirah and taking away cash amounting to Rs 1.5 to 2 lakhs, silver coins and other articles — Appellant removing golden bangles from hands of PW 3 — Meanwhile PW 6 (husband of PW 3), who had gone outside, came back — On hearing the shouts of PW 3, he broke open the door — Three accused including appellant managed to escape by jumping on the road from the balcony — One accused apprehended by PW 6 with the help of constable PW 5 — Testimony of PWs 3, 5, and 6 fully establishing the participation of appellant in crime — Conviction upheld

The testimony of PWs 3, 6 and 5 conclusively establishes the commission of the offence in question. The commission of robbery has not at all been challenged from the side of the accused. PW 3 and PW 6 are the inmates of the house where the offence was committed and their presence on the spot is most natural and there is no reason to doubt the same. PW 5 (Head Constable) has also given a very plausible explanation for his presence near the house and his reaching the spot after hearing the shouts is also most natural in the circumstances of the case. Both PW 3 and PW 6 have made a categoric statement that PW 5 came inside the house and was also instrumental in apprehending accused R. All these three witnesses have clearly stated that the appellant was one of the robbers who took part in the commission of the crime and thereafter jumped from the balcony of the first floor on the ground and succeeded in running away. PW 3 has assigned a very specific role of removing her golden bangles to the appellant. She saw him from a very close distance. The testimony of these witnesses fully establishes the participation of the appellant in the crime in question. Neither has the appellant led any evidence nor has he succeeded in bringing out anything in the cross-examination of the aforesaid prosecution witnesses which may cast even a slightest doubt regarding his participation and taking an active role in the crime in question. Thus, the prosecution has succeeded in establishing the case against the appellant beyond any shadow of doubt and the learned Designated Court rightly convicted and sentenced him. (Paras 6 and 14). Munna v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2003) 10 SCC 599: AIR 2003 SC 3805.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-2003]

— Ss. 392/149 See also under Ss. 299 to 304

[9774] — Ss. 392/397 — Identification of accused — According to testimony of complainant, he and other witnesses had admittedly seen the accused going into jail before the TI parade — Further, though four PWs identified the accused in TI parade but they could not identify the accused in court — Another PW remained silent on identification in TI parade but identified the accused for the first time in court — Moreover, weapon and empty cartridge were recovered but no attempt was made by obtaining FSL report to match the cartridge with the recovery weapon — Under these circumstances, conviction of the accused persons held cannot be maintained — TADA Act, 1987, S. 3(2)(ii) — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9 (Para 7). Lalli v. State of Rajasthan, (2003) 12 SCC 666.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-2003]

— S. 393 See also Ss. 458 and 393

[9775] — Ss. 393 and 452 — Appellant along with his two associates entering the house of the complainant at night and one of his associates threatening the complainant that if he did not hand over all his possessions his whole family would be done to death — Held, intention to commit offence under S. 3 TADA not established — In the circumstances, appellant only liable to be convicted under Ss. 452 and 393 IPC and not under S. 3 TADA — TADA Act, 1987, S. 3. Gurmej Singh v. State of Punjab, 1995 Supp (2) SCC 365.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-1994]

[9776] — Ss. 393 and 452 — Sentence — Mitigating circumstances — Appellant not armed with any weapon — He remaining at a little distance and running away when people assembled — No overt act attributed to him — Demand of valuables from the complainant made by his associate and grappling with the complainant also took place with his associate only — Fact that the appellant belonged to the Home Guards whose duty is to protect the citizens may be a worthy consideration but, in the facts and circumstances of the case, it did not justify imposition of maximum sentence prescribed for offence under S. 393 IPC — Sentence reduced to the period already undergone (about 2 years and nine months). Gurmej Singh v. State of Punjab, 1995 Supp (2) SCC 365.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-1994]

— S. 394 See also Ss. 34/302 and 394
See also Ss. 120-B, 302, 307 and 394
See also S. 120-B, Ss. 302/34, 394 and 412
See also under Ss. 299 to 304
See also Ss. 392, 394 and 397
See also Ss. 392, 397 and 394
See also Ss. 396 and 394
See also Ss. 411, 394 and 302

[9777] — S. 394 — Applicability — Constructive/vicarious liability under — Classes of person who can become liable under — Classified and explained — Nature of liability of the different classes of persons — Persons who become liable under S. 394 despite not actually causing hurt

Section 394 describes punishment for voluntarily causing hurt in committing or attempting to commit robbery. The offence under Section 394 is a more serious offence than one under Section 392. Section 394 postulates and contemplates the causing of harm during commission of robbery or in attempting to commit robbery when such causing of hurt is hardly necessary to facilitate the commission of robbery. Section 394 applies to cases where during the course of robbery voluntary hurt is caused. Section 394 classifies two distinct class of persons. Firstly, those who actually cause hurt and secondly, those who do not actually cause hurt but are "jointly concerned" in the commission of the offence of robbery. The second class of persons may not be concerned in the causing of hurt, but they become liable independently of the knowledge of its likelihood or a reasonable belief in its probability. (Para 10). Aslam v. State of Rajasthan, (2008) 9 SCC 227: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 764.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-2008]

[9778] — S. 394 — In view of infirmities in the prosecution evidence, conviction not justified

In view of facts that the appellants belong to the neighbouring village at a distance of less than a mile, that the witnesses who came to identify the appellants had seen the accused from behind while escaping, that a witness had known one of the accused from before yet he did not name him in the FIR and went to identify him, that the identification of the two of the appellants took placed after a gap of four days after their arrest, without explaining the cause for the delay, the conviction of the appellants under S. 394, IPC, cannot be sustained. Bali Ahir v. State of Bihar, 1984 Supp SCC 625: 1983 SCC (Cri) 312: AIR 1983 SC 289.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and R.B. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1983]

[9779] — S. 394 — Sentence to be imposed under — Adequacy of — Trial court awarding sentence of five years' RI — High Court, while upholding conviction reducing sentence to period already undergone of 358 days — Sustainability — Held, said sentence is wholly inadequate looking to nature of the offence — High Court has not assigned any satisfactory reason for reducing sentence to less than one year — Matter remanded for decision afresh. State of M.P. v. Anil, (2009) 17 SCC 350: AIR 2006 SC 622: (2005) 36 AIC 359 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2005]

[9780] — Ss. 394 and 302 r/w S. 34 — Conviction and sentence under, as recorded by trial court — Confirmed having regard to reliable testimony of eyewitnesses as corroborated by testimony of independent witnesses, dying declaration and circumstantial evidence including strong motive of the accused persons and their abscondence after the crime. State of U.P. v. Chet Ram, (1989) 2 SCC 425: 1989 SCC (Cri) 388: AIR 1989 SC 1543: 1989 Cri LJ 1785.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-3-1989]

[9781] — Ss. 394, 307 and 411 — Dismissal of appeal against acquittal — Non-indication of the basis for upholding trial court's decision — Impermissibility — In the instant case, respondent-accused of snatching money forcibly — High Court dismissing appeal by appellant State based on a telegram sent by relative of deceased accused which purportedly showed that date of arrest reported by police was post-dated — Various other factors throwing light on the controversy not considered in proper perspective — Effect of evidence of the two victims and recovery of part of forcibly snatched amount from accused, completely lost sight of — Contrary to what trial court and High Court noted, seized recovery notes clearly showed stamp of the bank from where money was withdrawn — Relevance of this factor not considered — Hence, impugned order of High Court set aside and matter remitted to it for consideration in accordance with law — CrPC, 1973, S. 378 (Paras 2, 3 and 9 to 12). State of U.P. v. Ajai Kumar, (2008) 3 SCC 351: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 369: AIR 2008 SC 1269: (2008) 64 AIC 224 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1937: (2008) 3 All LJ 512.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-2-2008]

State of Rajasthan v. Sohan Lal, (2004) 5 SCC 573, relied on [9782] — Ss. 394 and 392 — Robbery and voluntarily causing hurt in committing robbery — Nature, relative scope and ingredients of — Sustainability of conviction — Punishment warranted — Held, offence of causing hurt is more serious than robbery — 10 years' imprisonment is the minimum punishment under S. 394 — No substance found in appellant-accused's plea that the victim, PW 11, might have had the opportunity of seeing accused persons earlier and therefore TI parade was vitiated — On facts found that TI parade was conducted in presence of ACJM — Articles of robbery were also identified by the victim in presence of a Magistrate — No infirmity found in trial — Punishment imposed on appellant was minimum — Held, there was no ground for the Supreme Court to interfere — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 9 (Paras 10 to 14). Aslam v. State of Rajasthan, (2008) 9 SCC 227: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 764.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-2008]

[9783] — Ss. 394, 395, 397 and 411 — Train robbery — Usually in such offences held, accused persons are not known to the witnesses and prosecution case mostly depends upon the evidence of identification of the accused by the witnesses and recovery of the looted articles at the instance of the accused — Where witnesses had ample opportunity to see the accused persons at the time of robbery and they correctly identified the accused in TI parade, which was not shown to be suffering from any irregularity and prosecution established recovery of the looted articles, namely, currency notes from the possession of the accused and those notes had been duly identified, held, conviction based on the evidence of identification corroborated by evidence of recovery of the looted articles was justified — Mere delay in holding TI parade, in the circumstances of the case was inconsequential

An offence in the nature of dacoity committed in train is committed more often than not, by persons who are unknown to the victims. The perpetrators of such crime are usually persons who are motivated by sheer greed to commit such offences. In cases where the offence is usually committed by unknown persons with a criminal and professional background, it is only in very rare cases that they are known to the victim. In most cases of such nature the accused is an unknown person and the only evidence which may connect him with the crime is the evidence of identification in a test identification parade, and in some cases evidence of recovery of the articles which are the subject-matter of robbery. Cases of robbery, therefore, mostly depend on such evidence. Moreover, the arrest of the culprits in such cases is often delayed on account of the inherent difficulties which the prosecution naturally faces in such cases. The fact that the accused is not named in the first information report in a case of this nature is, therefore, not of much significance. The prosecution can prove its case on the basis of recovery of the articles which are the subject-matter of the offence and identification of the culprits in a test identification parade. (Para 26). Lal Singh v. State of U.P., (2003) 12 SCC 554: AIR 2004 SC 299: 2004 Cri LJ 378.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2003]

[9784] — Ss. 394 and 397 — Applicability — Charge framed under S. 394 r/w S. 397 — Conviction under S. 397 only — No mention of S. 394 — Prejudice caused, if any — On facts, trial court by placing reliance on evidence of eyewitnesses and TI parade, convicted respondent under S. 397 and sentenced him to 7 years' RI — In appeal, High Court concluded that accused was shown to the witnesses — Also, that S. 397 is not a substantive offence and accused could not have been convicted under S. 397 only but under S. 394 r/w S. 397 — As the conviction was recorded under S. 397 and use of weapons was not fully established, respondent was acquitted — Sustainability — Before Supreme Court, the appellant State, inter alia, contended that S. 397 does not contain the definition of substantive offence and only regulates the punishment — That trial court had itself noted that charge was framed under S. 394 r/w S. 397 — Mere omission of S. 394 did not cause any prejudice — Held, since High Court's reasonings were perverse, impugned judgment set aside — There was no prejudice involved — Hence, respondent convicted for offence punishable under S. 394 for which he was originally charged — However, RI reduced from 7 to 5 years (Paras 10 and 11). State of U.P. v. Ilyas, (2009) 1 SCC 365: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 500: AIR 2009 SC 1145: (2009) 2 All LJ 127: (2009) 2 ECrN 31 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-11-2008]

[9785] — Ss. 394 and 397 — Robbery — Circumstantial evidence — Discovery of knife and gloves pursuant to the statement made by the accused — Accused denying he made the statement — Mahazar showing that the said articles were found lying in the open in a paddy field — Held, mere recovery of a knife and gloves in the presence of the accused cannot be regarded as sufficient for connecting the accused with the commission of crime — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 27. Varghese v. State of Kerala, 1998 SCC (Cri) 890.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-1998]

[9786] — Ss. 394, 404 and 218 — Police Head Constable charged for having kept valuable articles recovered by a Mallah from a dead body — Trial Court and High Court convicting accused-appellant for offence under Ss. 394, 404 and 218, IPC — Appellant denying having taken anything but handing over the articles only after search party comes to his outpost — Appellant contending that he received articles on getting information about recovery with intention to deposit and sent the information to police station through a constable — Appellant's witnesses presenting guided statements — General Diary or duty register of the outpost having no mention of the facts — Genuineness of the diary doubtful — If accused really intended to deposit the articles it would be natural for him to record the same in the General Diary — Held — Appellant had no intention to deposit the articles —

Conviction and sentences upheld. Sathi Prasad v. State of U.P., (1972) 3 SCC 613: 1972 SCC (Cri) 659: AIR 1973 SC 448: 1973 Cri LJ 344.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.N. Grover, A.N. Ray and D.G. Palekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-3-1972]

[9787] — S. 394 r/w S. 25, Arms Act — Dacoity — Appellants refusing to participate in the identification parade alleging that they were known to the witnesses — This does not detract the value of the evidence of the eyewitnesses who had ample opportunity to identify the two assailants who participated in the occurrence — Their evidence corroborated from recoveries conviction upheld but in the circumstances of the case sentence reduced to four years' R.I. Sunil v. State of Haryana, AIR 1994 SC 1536: 1994 Cri LJ 1381.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-1993]

[9788] — S. 394 r/w S. 397 — Conviction — When co-accused acquitted on the same evidence, held, there is no justification to sustain conviction of accused-appellant. Puttan v. State of U.P., 1992 Supp (2) SCC 749: 1992 SCC (Cri) 833: AIR 1992 SC 1032: 1992 Cri LJ 1122: 1992 ALJ 371: (1992) 1 Crimes 876.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Kuldip Singh, R.M. Sahai and R.C. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1992]

— Ss. 394/34 See also under Ss. 299 to 304

[9789] — Ss. 394/34 and 302/34 — Presumption of commission of offence of robbery or murder or both can be extended under the main part of S. 114, if it is part of the same transaction — It would be safer to so extend the presumption if there are additional incriminating circumstances reinforcing the same — In the instant case medical evidence showing that the ornaments worn by deceased were forcibly removed from the person of the deceased by inflicting injuries in the process — Other evidence showing that the accused persons came in possession of the ornaments soon after the incident whereafter they divided the booty among themselves, that on the very next day one of the accused sold one of the articles (an earring) and the remaining articles were concealed by the accused persons and that the stolen articles were recovered by police within a reasonable time on the basis of confession made by the accused — No credible explanation given by accused — On facts, held, presumption can be stretched to commission of offence of robbery by the accused — But the presumption cannot be further stretched to commission of murder also by them when there was reasonable scope for two possibilities and court is not in a position to know actual details of the occurrence — In such a situation court should adopt a cautious approach — Hence accused liable to be convicted under S. 394 r/w S. 34 IPC but not under S. 302 IPC on the basis of extended presumption under S. 114 — CrPC, 1973, S. 313 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (a)

The deceased had gone to sleep in his field as usual. But in the morning of 30-5-1984 he was found lying dead with injuries on the ear, chest etc. and the golden earrings and silver lingakar, which he used to wear, were found missing from his person. A big stone was found lying at the spot of occurrence. PW 3, a person residing close to the field of the deceased mentioned to PW 2, the deceased's son and others that he had seen A-1, A-2 and A-3 going towards the field of the deceased at about 3 a.m. when he woke up for drawing water. A-1 and A-2 were arrested on 1-6-1984. On 7-6-1984 A-1 gave information in the presence of panchas, PW 9 and one S (not examined) that he would point out a shop in which he had sold a golden earring. A-1 then took the investigating officer and the panchas to the jewellery shop of PW 5, who at the instance of A-1, handed over the earring and the same was seized. PW 6, a cycle shop owner, whose assistance was sought by A-1 to dispose of the earring, corroborated the evidence of PW 5 that the sale transaction had taken place on 30-5-1984 at 1.30 p.m. PW 6 had also deposed that after about 7 days of the incident he was called at police station and on being enquired about the person to whom the earring was sold, he had told the police that it was the shop of PW 5 in which the earring was sold and that the police had taken him and PW 5 and got confirmed the sale transaction. Again on 15-6-1984, A-1 furnished information regarding the place at which silver lingakar was kept. The investigating officer along with the same panchas went to the spot which was by the side of a road. The lingakar covered in a piece of cloth was found concealed beneath the stones under a tree and the same was seized. On the same day A-2 gave information that two golden earrings were kept buried under a mango tree situated in the fields of a nearby village and on that basis those earrings were recovered and seized. A-3, who was arrested on 11-6-1984 gave information on 20-6-1984 in the presence of the same panchas that he had kept one golden earring buried under a mango tree situated in a field and on that basis the article was recovered. The seized articles were identified by PW 2 as those belonging to his deceased father. There was no direct evidence as regards the involvement of the accused persons in the murder and robbery of the deceased. However, the following circumstances were relied upon by the prosecution to establish the case of murder and robbery against the accused:

(i) A-1 to A-3 were seen going together towards the field of the deceased in the night of the occurrence; (ii) the deceased was wearing golden earrings and silver ring on his person and the same were found missing and his earlobes were found injured which indicated that in the process of removal of earrings such injuries were caused; (iii) A-1 pointed out the shop of PW 5 to whom he had sold one golden earring belonging to the deceased and recovery of the same in consequence of the said information; (iv) recovery of silver lingakar in consequence of the information given by the said accused; (v) recovery of two golden earrings on 15-6-1984 in consequence of the information by A-2; and (vi) recovery of one more earring in consequence of the information given by A-3 on 20-6-1984.

All the three accused-appellants faced the trial for offences punishable under Section 302 r/w Section 34 and Section 392 r/w Section 34 IPC. The Sessions Court acquitted the accused of the charges under Sections 302 and 392 but found them guilty under Section 411 IPC and sentenced each of them to rigorous imprisonment for two years. On appeal by the State as well as by the accused, the High Court found the accused guilty of offences punishable under Section 302 r/w Section 34 and Section 392 r/w Section 34 by pressing into service the presumption under Section 114 Illustration (a) of the Evidence Act and sentenced them to life imprisonment for offence of murder and 5 years' RI for the offence of robbery with the direction that both the sentences should run concurrently.

Partly allowing the appeals,

Held :

With regard to the first circumstance, the Sessions Judge held that it will not lead the prosecution anywhere, especially in view of the fact that, as stated by PW 3, there was a public lane behind his house which was used by the villagers. This is a reasonably possible view that could be taken. The High Court was not justified in giving undue weight to the first circumstance. (Para II[7])

The fact that within a short time after the murder of the deceased, the appellants came into possession of the ornaments removed from the person of the deceased and the first accused offered one of the stolen articles for sale on that very day and the further fact that the other articles were found secreted to the knowledge of the appellants coupled with non-accountal of the possession of the articles and the failure to give even a plausible explanation vis-à-vis the incriminating circumstances would go to show that they were not merely the receivers of stolen articles from another source but they themselves removed them from the person of the deceased. Thus, the presumption to be drawn under Illustration (a) to Section 114 should not be confined to their involvement in the offence of receiving the stolen property under Section 411 but on the facts of the case, it can safely go beyond that. (Para Vb[17])

Presumption envisaged by Illustration (a) to Section 114 has been stretched in decided cases to make a similar presumption as the basis for conviction for graver offences of robbery and murder, if they are part of the same transaction. Strictly speaking, such presumption does not come within the sweep of Illustration (a), though in some cases Illustration (a) has been referred to while upholding the conviction for robbery and murder. Extending the presumption beyond the parameters of Illustration (a) could only be under the main part of the section. The illustration only provides an analogy in such a case. (Para VIa[18])

As far as the factual matrix goes, only Gulab Chand case, (1995) 3 SCC 574: 1995 SCC (Cri) 552 stands apart. The recovery of the articles of the victim soon after the crime at the instance of the accused and the incredible explanation given by the accused for possession of the articles were held to be sufficient to raise the presumption of having committed robbery and murder, if they were otherwise part of the same transaction. Gulab Chand case, (1995) 3 SCC 574: 1995 SCC (Cri) 552 was cited with approval in Mukund v. State of M.P., (1997) 10 SCC 130: 1997 SCC (Cri) 799 and was also referred to in Ronny v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 3 SCC 625: 1998 SCC (Cri) 859 and Sanjay v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 3 SCC 190: 2001 SCC (Cri) 449. But in all the three cases decided subsequent to Gulab Chand case there were additional circumstances which shed light on the involvement of the accused. Whether the approach of the Court and ratio of the decision in Gulab Chand case is in consonance with the three-Judge Bench decision in Sanwat Khan case, AIR 1956 SC 54: 1956 Cri LJ 150 is, at least a debatable issue. When this decision was brought to the notice of Their Lordships who decided Gulab Chand case it was merely observed that "the said decision is not applicable in the facts and circumstances of the present case". There was no further elaboration. In this state of law, the safer course would be to give due weight to the dicta laid down and the ultimate conclusion reached by the larger Bench in Sanwat Khan case. (Para VIa[23])

In the present case according to the medical officer who conducted post-mortem over the dead body of the deceased, two external injuries were such which could have been caused if the earrings were forcibly snatched and the other two external injuries were such which could have been caused by a hard and blunt object like a stone. He clarified that internal injuries could be caused by the stone which was found lying at the place of occurrence, if it is forcibly hit on the chest. Further, he deposed that the external injuries and internal injuries were sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. He denied the suggestion that the deceased could not have been hit with a stone. In the light of the medical evidence, there are three points which are to be prominently kept in view. Firstly, there was a lacerated wound on the posterior aspect of the left ear and another such wound on the right ear lobule which according to the doctor could have been caused in the process of forcibly snatching the earrings worn by the victim. Secondly, the internal injuries which were the immediate cause of death would have been caused by a hard and blunt object. According to the prosecution the deceased was hit by a heavy stone found at the spot and seized under a panchnama. Thirdly, the injuries in question were ante-mortem. In this state of evidence, it is clear beyond reasonable doubt that the person or persons who removed the ornaments worn by the deceased themselves inflicted the wounds in the process of removing them. There was evidently a hush-hush operation to run away with the booty without allowing much time to pass. The fact that the ornaments on the person of the deceased came into the hands of the accused soon after the crime and they failed to give any explanation for the circumstances appearing against them justifies the presumption that they themselves removed these articles from the person of the deceased. Causing injuries to the deceased in the process of removal of earrings is inextricably interlinked with the commission of theft which is an ingredient of robbery. It would be far-fetched to think, as the trial Judge has expressed that someone else might have caused injuries and the appellant would have stolen the articles thereafter. The fact that the booty was distributed between the three accused and that they had secreted the robbed articles would clearly reveal that the three accused shared the common intention to commit robbery. Hence, it must be held that by having resort to the presumption under Section 114, an inference can be safely drawn that the appellants committed robbery in furtherance of a common intention. No other reasonable hypothesis consistent with the innocence of the accused is possible. (Para VIb[27])

Whether the presumption could be further stretched to find the appellants guilty of the gravest offence of murder is what remains to be considered. It is in this arena, there are divergent views of the Supreme Court. However, there is no need to dilate further on this aspect as in the peculiar circumstances of the case, it would be unsafe to hold the accused guilty of murder, assuming that murder and robbery had taken place as a part of the same transaction. According to the prosecution case, which is supported by the medical evidence, the deceased was hit by a heavy stone. It is not the case of the prosecution that the appellants carried any weapon with them or that the injuries were inflicted with that weapon. There is every possibility that one of the accused picked up the stone at that moment and decided to hit the deceased in order to silence or immobilise the victim. If the idea was to murder him and take away the ornaments from his person, there was really no need of forcibly snatching the earrings before putting an end to the victim. It seems that there was no premeditated plan to kill the deceased. True, common intention could spring up any moment and all the three accused might have decided to kill him instantaneously, for whatever reason it be. While that possibility cannot be ruled out, the possibility of one of the accused suddenly getting the idea of killing the deceased and in furtherance thereof picking up the stone lying at the spot and hitting the deceased cannot also be ruled out. Thus there are two possibilities. When there is reasonable scope for two possibilities and the court is not in a position to know the actual details of the occurrence it is not safe to extend the presumption under Section 114 so as to find the appellants guilty of the offence of murder with the aid of Section 34 IPC. While drawing the presumption under Section 114 on the basis of recent possession of belongings of the victim with the accused, the court must adopt a cautious approach and have an assurance from all angles that the accused not merely committed theft or robbery but also killed the victim. (Para VIc[28])

In the result, conviction of the accused under Section 302 IPC is set aside. The accused are guilty of the offence punishable under Section 394 read with Section 34 IPC and accordingly the accused are convicted under Section 394 and sentenced to undergo further imprisonment for a period of three months. (Para VII[29]). Limbaji v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 10 SCC 340: AIR 2002 SC 491.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-2001]

Sanwat Khan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1956 SC 54: 1956 Cri LJ 150; Shivappa v. State of Mysore, (1970) 1 SCC 487: 1970 SCC (Cri) 215; State of Maharashtra v. Suresh, (2000) 1 SCC 471: 2000 SCC (Cri) 263, relied on

Gulab Chand v. State of M.P., (1995) 3 SCC 574: 1995 SCC (Cri) 552, doubted

UT, Goa v. Beaventura D'Souza, 1993 Supp (3) SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 999; Surjit Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1994 SC 110; Ronny v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 3 SCC 625: 1998 SCC (Cri) 859; Mukund v. State of M.P., (1997) 10 SCC 130: 1997 SCC (Cri) 799; Sanjay v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 3 SCC 190: 2001 SCC (Cri) 449; Earabhadrappa v. State of Karnataka, (1983) 2 SCC 330: 1983 SCC (Cri) 447, considered

— Ss. 394/397 See also under Ss. 299 to 304

— S. 395 See also Ss. 147, 148, 323, 324, 149, 427 and 395

See also Ss. 147, 149, 302, 323, 395 and 396

See also Ss. 148, 302, 323, 324, 395 and 396

See also Ss. 149, 326/34, 324/34, 427/34, 450 and 392, 395 and 397

See also Ss. 149 and 395

See also Ss. 302, 395, 396 and 397

See also Ss. 302/149, 395, 364 and 201

See also Ss. 390 and 395

See also Ss. 394, 395, 397 and 411

See also Ss. 396 and 395

See also Ss. 396, 395, 391, 390 and 302

See also Ss. 396, 395 and 397

See also Ss. 397 and 395

See also Ss. 412 and 395

[9790] — S. 395 — Accused well known to the victims of dacoity — Absence of precaution to conceal his identity — Effect of

Where the accused was well known to the victim of dacoity and his family members and he has been identified by partisan witnesses and their evidence is corroborated by other unimpeachable evidence viz., as regards the arrest of the accused soon after the incident, their attempt to flee from the village at an unusual hour, their resistance against their arrest, the scuffle consequent upon that, and the injuries sustained therein by the accused and others, however improbable it might appear at first sight for the accused to have participated in the incident, it is difficult to get over the evidence of his having been identified and named by the victim of dacoity and other witnesses almost immediately after the incident. The only explanation about the highly desperate act on the part of the appellant is his antipathy towards the victim of dacoity getting the better of him, which made him abandon any caution which he would have otherwise taken while participating in such an incident. Siya Ram Rai v. State of Bihar, (1973) 3 SCC 241: 1973 SCC (Cri) 236: AIR 1973 SC 51: 1973 Cri LJ 155.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, S.N. Dwivedi and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-9-1972]

[9791] — S. 395 — Appreciation of evidence — Conviction upheld despite minor discrepancies

Where one witness says that the appellant was carrying a weapon like a hockey stick and another witness says that the appellant was armed with a pistol, such a contradiction can have little value because it is common experience that in the confusion of the moment witnesses are prone to make such errors specially seized by sudden fear. Besides, those who are determined to be lawless do not always stick to their weapons.

Where about 20 persons were travelling by the bus and though almost all of them were looted but the first information report contained the names of some of them only, the fact that the person who successfully identified the miscreants was not included in the first information report cannot justify the inference that he was not travelling by the bus. Bharat Singh v. State of U.P., (1973) 3 SCC 896: 1973 SCC (Cri) 574: AIR 1972 SC 2478: 1972 Cri LJ 1705.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, S.N. Dwivedi and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1972]

[9792] — S. 395 — Appreciation of evidence — Six accused prosecuted for dacoity — All the six named in the FIR and known to the witnesses — Three belonging to the village of the occurrence and three to neighbouring village — All the witnesses inimical to all the six accused

High Court acquitted three accused belonging to the village of the occurrence on the ground that it was not probable that they would commit dacoity in their own village without taking any precaution to conceal their identity. The conviction of the remaining three accused was maintained and they were not given the benefit of these deficiencies.

Held :

There are no sufficient reasons for differentiating the case of the appellant from that of the other accused who were acquitted by the High Court. Ram Shankar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 441: 1956 Cri LJ 822.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.R. Das[2], N.H. Bhagwati and B.P. Sinha[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-1955]

[9793] — S. 395 — Bank dacoity — FIR promptly lodged — Accused persons arrested red-handed near the place of dacoity while escaping in a car — Non-mention of the car number in FIR only a minor infirmity — Part of the loot as well as weapons used in the dacoity recovered — Testimony of Bank employees reliable, they being independent witnesses — On facts, held, offence under S. 395 made out. State of Rajasthan v. Sukhpal Singh, (1983) 1 SCC 393: 1983 SCC (Cri) 213: AIR 1984 SC 207.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and V.D. Tulzapurkar, J. [Date of decision: 16-12-1982]

[9794] — S. 395 — Concurrent running of sentences — Plea for — Conviction under S. 395 IPC — One accused-appellant convicted in 4 different cases while other accused-appellant convicted in 5 different cases — RI for 7 years ordered by Assistant Sessions Judge against the appellants in each case to run one after the other — Supreme Court not desiring to give benefit of all sentences to run concurrently — Adopting via media consistent with the administration of criminal justice, total period of 14 years' imprisonment to each appellant in respect of all the convictions passed against the appellants, held, was sufficient to meet the ends of justice — CrPC, 1973, S. 427. Ammavasai v. Inspector of Police, Valliyanur, (2000) 9 SCC 749: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1477: AIR 2000 SC 3544.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2000]

[9795] — S. 395 — Conviction based on identification by five witnesses — Delay in conducting the identification parade, held, made the identification doubtful — Conviction improper. Soni v. State of U.P., (1982) 3 SCC 368(1): 1983 SCC (Cri) 49(1).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1981]

[9796] — S. 395 — Conviction of less than five — All named nine persons charged but only four convicted by trial court — Remaining three except the appellant acquitted by High Court — Held, appellant's alone conviction under S. 395 cannot stand. Ram Lakhan v. State of U.P., (1983) 2 SCC 65: 1983 SCC (Cri) 339: AIR 1983 SC 352(1): 1983 Cri LJ 691(1): 1983 ALJ 283.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-2-1983]

[9797] — S. 395 — Conviction of less than five persons — Six accused placed on trial for committing dacoity — Not mentioned that some others participated in the dacoity with them — Three accused acquitted — Conviction of remaining 3 accused under S. 395, held, illegal

The charge framed against the six accused placed on trial for dacoity did not indicate that those six persons along with other unknown persons had committed dacoity. The charge was that the six persons placed on trial were the persons who had committed dacoity. The High Court acquitted three of the six accused. Only three persons are thus left as the persons concerned with the trial.

Held :

The High Court having come to the conclusion that three out of the six convicted persons were not guilty, should have gone into the question whether there was satisfactory evidence to show that the three remaining appellants before it could be convicted under S. 395, IPC, on the charge as framed. In any event, the three remaining accused persons could be convicted of the lesser offence of robbery under S. 392, IPC, if there was evidence to show that they had committed acts of theft and used violence while committing the theft.

In such a situation their individual acts in connection with the alleged occurrence had to be considered. Ram Shankar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 441: 1956 Cri LJ 822, 827.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.R. Das^{2}, N.H. Bhagwati and B.P. Sinha^{1}, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-1955]

[9798] — S. 395 — Conviction of less than five persons when sustainable — More than five persons committing robbery — Conviction of all not possible for lack of identification — Conviction of three persons upheld as participation by more than five not disputed

Where the charge against the convicted persons was that apart from the named seven or eight persons there were five or six others who had taken part in the commission of a dacoity, it cannot be said that the offence was committed by less than five persons. Saktu v. State of U.P., (1973) 1 SCC 202: 1973 SCC (Cri) 307: AIR 1973 SC 760: 1973 Cri LJ 599.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.M. Shelat, Y.V. Chandrachud and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-1972]

AIR 1956 SC 441: 1956 Cri LJ 822 distinguished
For the principle involved here See also S. 149

[9799] — S. 395 — Conviction under, set aside. Tulsi Ram v. State of M.P., 1987 Supp SCC 464: 1988 SCC (Cri) 104.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-2-1987]

Antar Singh v. State of M.P., (1979) 1 SCC 79: 1979 SCC (Cri) 147: AIR 1979 SC 1188, followed [9800] — S. 395 — Dacoity — Appreciation of evidence — Prosecution case believed to be concocted and testimony of recovery of looted articles from the accused alleged to have committed the dacoity disbelieved — On the same testimony, held, recovery of gun from one of the accused should not have been believed — Ownership of the gun not having been established, such accused cannot alone be convicted. Nanhey v. State of U.P., (1977) 2 SCC 74: 1977 SCC (Cri) 241: AIR 1977 SC 783: 1977 Cri LJ 583.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and A.C. Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-1976]

[9801] — S. 395 — Dacoity — Attempt to commit robbery — More than five persons attempting to commit robbery — No robbery committed and the robbers taking to their heels on a hue and cry being raised — Held, accused were guilty of the offence of dacoity under the section

Where an attempt to commit robbery was made by five or more than five persons though in fact no robbery was committed as the robbers took to their heels without collecting any booty when they found that villagers had collected, the offence of dacoity was committed and the dacoits were guilty under S. 395, IPC. Shyam Behari v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 320: 1957 Cri LJ 416, 418, 419.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das, C.J. and N.H. Bhagwati, Syed Jafer Imam, S.K. Das and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1956]

[9802] — S. 395 — Dacoity — Conviction based on evidence of related injured witnesses — Plea of false implication, held, cannot be inferred merely because of the relationship between the witnesses and the victim — If such plea is raised, court's approach should be cautious and it should determine whether evidence of such witness is credible or not — On facts held, testimony of the related witnesses, who were injured in the incident, was trustworthy and conviction could be based thereon

Merely because the eyewitnesses are family members their evidence cannot per se be discarded. When there is allegation of interestedness, the same has to be established. Mere statement that being relatives of the deceased they are likely to falsely implicate the accused cannot be a ground to discard the evidence which is otherwise cogent and credible. Relationship is not a factor to affect the credibility of a witness. It is more often than not that a relation would not conceal the actual culprit and make allegations against an innocent person. Foundation has to be laid if plea of false implication is made. In such cases, the court has to adopt a careful approach and analyse evidence to find out whether it is cogent and credible. (Para 13)

In this case, two injured eyewitnesses were related to the victims. But credibility of their evidence was not in doubt. Hence the appellant-accused were rightly convicted on the basis of such evidence. Arjun Mahato v. State of Bihar, (2008) 15 SCC 604: AIR 2008 SC 3270: (2008) 69 AIC 39 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 4313.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2008]

Dalip Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1953 SC 364; Babulal Bhagwan Khandare v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 10 SCC 404: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1553; Salim Sahab v. State of M.P., (2007) 1 SCC 699: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 425, relied on [9803] — S. 395 — Dacoity — Omission to file list of articles alleged to have been looted and taken away by dacoits — Complainant also not stating nature of such articles — Nothing recovered from accused persons — Held, charge of dacoity not sustainable — Conviction set aside. Suresh v. State of U.P., 1990 Supp SCC 138: 1990 SCC (Cri) 643.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1987]

[9804] — S. 395 — Dacoity — Seizure of some stolen articles from possession of the appellant and some recovered in pursuant to his statement — Appellant identified by three witnesses in test identification parade — Conclusion drawn by the courts below found to be based on proper appreciation of evidence — In the circumstances of the case concurrent findings of fact merit no disturbance — Conviction upheld. Ramanand Ramnath v. State of M.P., (1996) 8 SCC 514.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-1996]

[9805] — S. 395 — Dacoity — Sentence — Reduction of, on sympathetic grounds, not called for

The High Court altered the conviction of the appellant-accused from Section 396 to Section 395 IPC and from sentence of life imprisonment to sentence of seven years' RI. Before the Supreme Court, in appeal, it was submitted that most of the appellants have suffered sentence of nearly 4½ years and considering the long passage of time, the sentence should be suitably reduced. In the case of one of the appellants, it was submitted that though he has suffered custody for about one year, considering the unclear role attributed to him by the prosecution his case deserves sympathetic consideration. Witnesses were related to the deceased and their evidence should not be accepted particularly when two of them were disbelieved and the role of an accused which was so eloquently stated by the witnesses has been discarded.

Rejecting the submission,

Held :

In the instant case the credibility of at least two witnesses, who were related to the victims and had sustained injuries in the incident, was not in doubt. It is a serious case of dacoity, any leniency in sentence would not only be undesirable but also would be improper. The passage of time cannot wash away the gravity of offence. (Para 15). Arjun Mahato v. State of Bihar, (2008) 15 SCC 604: AIR 2008 SC 3270: (2008) 69 AIC 39 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 4313.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2008]

